THOUSANDS CHEER FLYERS UPON ARRIVAL IN BOSTON

Presidential Salute Given Aviators at End of 23,000 Mile Flight; Air Chief is in Escort

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—Six army airmen entered today upon the last stage of their journey around the world by airplane when they arrived in Boston, their first objective on the Atlantic Coast of the United States. Three big cruiser planes, completing a 125-mile jump from Mere Point, Maine, where they were forced down by fog yesterday, dropped to their moorings in Boston Harbor five months to a day after the flyers hopped northward from Seattle in April.

In these months Lieut. Lowell Smith, commander of the flight, with Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold in the flagplane Chicago and Lieut. Erik Nelson, with his mechanician, Lieut. John Harding, Jr., in the plane New Orleans, have flown 23,000 miles. The flight, taking them from America's West Coast around the world, through the tropics and the Far North to the American East Coast, was regarded by army officials as having virtually attained today its object, the circumnavigation of the globe by air—for the first time.

REMAINDER EASY

There remains only the transcontinental journey, no longer accounted a remarkable feat in aviation.

Those five months, too, have seen mishaps. Of the four planes that hopped off only two reached Boston. The original flagplane was wrecked in a crash against a mountain in Alaska in a fog. Her crew escaped.

Another plane, the Boston, was wrecked when engine trouble forced it down in the Atlantic between Scotland and Iceland. Lieut. Leigh Wade, pilot, and Lieut. A. M. Ogden, mechanician, resumed the flight in the Boston II from Pictou, N. S.

Today a great throng at the Boston airport and a delegation of high ranking army, naval and civil officers rendered tribute to the arriving airmen. The flyers were greeted with the national salute of twenty-one guns, customarily accorded only to Presidents and to the rulers of foreign powers. Harbor and city joined in a pandemonium of shrieking whistles, ringing bells and roaring sirens as the planes, escorted by twelve land machines, circled the harbor. The aviators after alighting were taken to the reception barge.

Then the great crowd of 75,000 at the airport fell silent and stood uncovered as a band played the national anthem, and later "Home, Sweet Home."

The flyers were met far up the

Chekiang Troops Push Ahead and Assert Victory on Entire Battle Line

Americans Are Menaced by Bullets; Powers Add to Strength in Harbor

[Copyright, 1924, by the Chicago Tribune]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 6.—After being compelled to fall back two miles due to the superior numbers of the Kiangsu troops under Gen. Chi Hsien Yuan yesterday the Chekiang troops of Gen. Lu Yung Hsiang rallied today and smashed their way six miles into Kiangsu territory. Gen. Lu says he has won overwhelming victory all along the line, with the capture of two complete companies of Kiangsu troops and four officers, including a battalion commander and a captain.

The Chekiang drive today was led by Gen. Chwang Tso Ping, and at the cessation of the fighting tonight the Chekiang lines were advanced to within two miles of Anting, on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway. At the town of Liuho

Cloudburst Near Banning Wipes Out Bailiss Ranch; Pipe Lines Torn Up

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 6.—A cloudburst and windstorm, descending in the vicinity of the Ed Bailiss Ranch, five miles south of Cabazon, early this morning, completely wiped out the ranch and caused property damage which is expected to run into thousands of dollars.

The storm struck about 5 a.m. this morning. The wind, lashing with terrific fury, swept away every building on the ranch, including the house, barns, windmill and several thousand feet of lumber which was to have been used in the construction of a new house.

The buildings were converted into kindling wood by the storm. They were swept several hundred feet from their locations and rolled over and over again until completely demolished.

So great was the fury of the wind that several thousand feet of pipe line on the Bailiss and adjoining ranches was torn from the ground and twisted entirely out of shape.

Fortunately all members of the Bailiss family were away from home when the cloudburst and windstorm descended on the ranch and there was no injury or loss of life.

The storm covered an area of about four square miles, it was stated. At Banning, the nearest town to the west, a heavy wind and dust storm was reported.

LEAGUE AWAITS GERMANY

Berlin Expected to Withhold Note Denying War Responsibility; Premiers Leave Geneva

BY HENRY WALES
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GENEVA, Sept. 6.—Before leaving Geneva tonight Prime Minister MacDonald and Premier Herriot decided they would place before the League of Nations Assembly a resolution to amend the covenant of the League to abrogate a rule requiring unanimous decisions by the League council.

This move is in preparation for Germany's admission to the League as a precaution to prevent Germany, when it becomes a member and gets a voice in decisions, from blocking any action by its opposition.

Since a vote on such resolution will have to be referred by the delegations back to their governments, action is not expected at this meeting of the Assembly, but the Premiers envisage calling a special session of the Assembly in November, thus giving the most far-away governments a chance to instruct their delegates and also give time for a report on disarmament.

If by that time Germany has carried out its obligations under the Dawes plan it will probably be admitted to the League at the November session. The entire proposal, however, is understood to be contingent on Germany's withholding its note relative to responsibility for the war.

Great Britain and France also reached "an accord to seek an accord" on the triple-headed problem of arbitration, security and disarmament.

An innocuous resolution proposed by Prime Minister MacDon-

DEMPSEY IS FACED WITH BALM FIGHT

Estelle Taylor's Husband Plans Action for Decree and Alienation Damages

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Kenneth Malcolm Peacock, who seemed forgotten by his wife, Estelle Taylor, the film actress, to whom Jack Dempsey both affirmed and denied his engagement, is contemplating a divorce action against his beautiful wife and also a civil suit for damages against the heavyweight champion of the world.

Peacock, a slender, rather nice looking man of 35, was located today in Philadelphia, where he is employed as a clerk in a wholesale furniture store.

He admitted he had been hiding from reporters who have been looking for him since the report of the Taylor-Dempsey engagement was spread abroad.

Miss Taylor and Peacock were married in 1911 at Wilmington, Del. A copy of their marriage certificate reveals the cruel fact that Estelle is older than her would-be bridegroom.

Estelle gave her age as eighteen at the time she married Peacock. That would make her thirty-one at present. Dempsey is only twenty-nine.

The ZR-3 returned to its hangar at 5:45 p.m.

CALGARY (Alta.) Sept. 6.—King of the Fairies, a Shorthorn bull owned by the Prince of Wales, has been awarded the gold medal offered by the British Breeding Association of London for the best bull shown in Western Canada by a Canadian exhibitor.

The award was made at the annual Regina stock show.

TO INVESTIGATE FINANCING

Complaints Lead to State Inquiry into Affairs of Long Beach Dock and Terminal Company

Because of numerous complaints made by investors, it was announced yesterday at the office of State Corporation Commissioner Daugherty that an inquiry will be made immediately into certain phases of the affairs of the Long Beach Dock and Terminal Company and allied companies.

Details of the matters to be investigated were not made known but it is believed that they have to do with the promotion methods employed to finance the big harbor development projects for which the original company was formed and to directly involve the sale of stock in the various companies. In addition to the Long Beach Dock and Terminal Company, the original concern, there have been formed, the Long Beach Warehouse Corporation; the Long Beach export and Import Company and the United States Federal Bond and Mortgage Company.

The companies were recently incorporated under the laws of Delaware and headquarters are in the Pacific Southwest Bank Building in Long Beach. Paul Burwell Rabe, formerly of Chicago, is the trustee for the organization and in charge of the financing of the ventures.

"We will welcome any impartial, legitimate investigation," was Mr. Rabe's only comment on the situation last night. This statement was made public following a conference with his attorney, Clare Woolwine.

It is said that a considerable amount of pre-organization stock has been sold in Long Beach, Los Angeles and elsewhere. An intensive selling campaign by telephone has been made at the beach city. Men of prominence in the shipping and financial world both on the Pacific Coast and in the East have been named, it is claimed in the complaints as being behind the Long Beach Harbor projects.

The original project, as conceived by a number of prominent and substantial men of Long Beach called for extensive development of Long Beach Harbor facilities. A total of $3500 was expended for surveys, maps, prospecti, etc. Subsequently were incorporated the Long Beach Dock and Terminal Company, the Long Beach Warehouse Corporation, and the Long Beach Export and Import Company, each with a capital of $2,000,000 divided into 80,000 shares, all common, fully paid and non-assessible stock of $25 par value, under the Delaware State laws. It has been set forth that 140 acres of ground abutting No. 1 channel and the turning basin in Long Beach Harbor were purchased from the Union Pacific.

In literature headed "Syndicate Underwriting Preorganization Subscription Agreement" the following statements of the purposes of the companies appear:

"The object of these development companies is to enter the general international commerce business connected with warehousing, manufacturing and trading, and to build as the first unit, docks and terminals of the most modern type, accommodating as many as 1500 freight cars at one time, two warehouses, each 800 feet by 150 feet, six stories, with manufacturing, treating, branding and fabricating equipment similar

COOLIDGE BRANDS FOES OF COURTS PERIL TO NATION

Denounces Effort to Shift Power of Supreme Bench in Address Before Lafayette Statue

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BALTIMORE, Sept. 6.—Dedicating a monument to Lafayette, "a true son of world freedom," here today, President Coolidge warned against a "deliberate and determined attempt to break down the guarantees of our fundamental laws," and called on the American people to decide now "whether America will allow itself to be degraded into a Communistic and Socialistic state."

The President mentioned no name in the movement he saw to switch the power of the Supreme Court to Congress, but declared such action must be stopped "before it is begun."

"The time for Americans to range themselves firmly, squarely and uncompromisingly behind American ideals is now," he declared. "Those who want to continue to enjoy the high estate of American citizenship will resist all attempts to encroach upon their liberty by encroaching upon the power of the courts."

STIRS ENTHUSIASM

The message, delivered from the base of a monument to George Washington and facing the equestrian statue of Lafayette, was received with enthusiasm by the Lafayette-Marne day celebrators who also gave a warm reception to Mr. Coolidge's plea for abolishment of war hatreds and for service in the foreign relations of this country.

Recalling that Lafayette had "fought to establish American independence," the President declared this country had "kept clear from political entanglements with other countries," but had dedicated itself "to peace through honorable and disinterested relations with the other peoples of the earth."

Before delivering his address, Mr. Coolidge placed a wreath on the monument to Lafayette as it was unveiled, standing for a short time at attention with his military and naval aides at the base of the edifice. He listened also to messages on the day from heads of the French government and army delivered by M. Andre de Boulaye, Charge d'Affaires of the French Embassy and to a welcome from Gov. Ritchie and from Mayor Jackson of this city.

DEFENDS COURTS

The President devoted most of his address to a vigorous defense of the courts, which he described as under attack.

In his discussion of foreign affairs, Mr. Coolidge said "to be independent to my mind, does not mean to be isolated . . . There is no real independence save only as we secure it through the law of service."

While avoiding entanglements he pointed out that the United States had pursued that policy in contribution to foreign charity; in counsel at the arbitration tables in Latin America; in adjustment of war problems in Europe; in the Washington armament conference; and in the settlement of the reparations problem.

"The effect these will have in averting war and promoting peace," he added, "cannot possibly be over estimated. They appear to me properly to mark the end of the old order, and the beginning of a new era. We hope they are the end of aggressive war and the beginning of permanent peace."

Referring to the European situation, the President declared, "If we want France and the other Allies paid we can best work towards that end by assisting in the restoration of the German people, now shorn of militarism, to their full place in the family of peaceful mankind."

GREAT CONTRIBUTION

Speaking of the Supreme Court, as well as of the entire system of independent judiciary, Mr. Coolidge said its establishment through the Constitution was one of the

CROPS BUMP BOB'S HOPE

La Follette Slips in Farm Belt

Prosperity in Wheat and Corn Areas Blow to Badger's Chances

Spoils Plan to Capitalize Discontent in Middle and Far West

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Bumper crops in the Middle West and Far West are bumping La Follette into the discard, according to reports on economic conditions on the corn and wheat belts received by the War Finance Corporation from its correspondents.

The distress on the farms following the agricultural deflation is fading away, according to these reports, to the chagrin of La Follette and Wheeler, who expected to capitalize discontent wherever it might exist and breeze into office on the backs of the disgruntled and sore at heart. Farmers, it appears, are beginning to receive higher prices for their products, have ceased borrowing and are paying their debts and to cap the climax are about to harvest record-breaking crops. They are not feeling so radical as a result.

Thus nature is taking its course, to the great satisfaction of the Republicans and the discomfiture of the La Follette radicals. President Coolidge, however, is not disposed to leave the improvement of the lot of the husbandman entirely to nature. He is going to appoint a commission to determine whether nature can be improved upon by laws creating conditions which may enable the farmer to realize more from his produce.

LOWDEN AT WHITE HOUSE

To aid the President in creating this commission former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, came to Washington today to be the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House. Mr. Lowden will be chairman of the commission if he will accept the place, but in any event he will advise the President on the personnel of the body for which the name of about thirty agricultural experts have been suggested.

Mr. Lowden is a recognized authority on agriculture. He was chairman of the President's committee of inquiry into conditions into the wheat growing section of the Northwest which led to the creation of the agricultural credit corporation.

The improvement in conditions west of the Mississippi are reflected by reports to the War Finance Corporation from correspondents from which the following paragraps are quoted:

"Conditions are very much im-

SEES LA FOLLETTE SLIDING

Senator Smoot Says It's Coolidge for President, or Possibly Bryan, if Deadlock Develops

Collapse of Senator La Follette's chances of election and increased momentum for the candidacy of President Coolidge are seen by Senator Reed Smoot of Utah as the result of the stabilizing of world business conditions through the acceptance of the Dawes plan.

This, together with the revival of Middle West agricultural activities with the advancing prices of grain spell victory for Coolidge, according to the Senator, who is visiting his daughter in Long Beach.

"The La Follette movement is an appeal to discontent," Senator Smoot pointed out. "La Follette undertook to convince the farmers that the only way to raise the prices of their products is by legislation. Now the farmers find this is not true and that the La Follette appeal is a false one. But if the McNary-Haugen bill had been passed by Congress and the President had signed it and this increase in grain prices had followed, nothing on earth could convince the farmers that legislation is not all that is needed to increase the price of grain."

ALTERNATIVE TOLD

Senator Smoot declared that the alternative to the success of President Coolidge's campaign is an Electoral College deadlock which probably would result in the election by the Senate of Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate.

"All there is to this election," the Senator continued, "is the choice between Coolidge and Charles W. Bryan, and I guess I know which of these two the American people would rather have for President."

The election of Bryan might be brought about, he said, in the event of the failure of one of the Presidential candidates to receive a majority of the electoral votes and the inability of the House of Representatives to exercise its Constitutional function of choosing the President because of the fact that no one party controls a majority of the State delegations in the House.

Senator Smoot declared that every day there is less chance of the failure to return President the fighting continued all day and Chekiang asserts a victory was won there also. But late reports tell of the arrival of heavy reinforcements to the Kiangsu troops and a renewal of the battle tonight in this important sector, which really is a vital point for protection against an invasion of Shanghai.

A gang of thirty spies from the Kiangsu side in motor cars and well armed with revolvers and hand grenades made a dash into the arsenal here tonight and attempted a surprise capture. The guards, taken unawares, rallied, however, and after a hard fight overpowered the gang and late reports state that all were executed immediately. The arsenal is located adjacent to the headquarters of the chief commander of the Chekiang troops and the arsenal attack has resulted in the strengthening of martial law in the entire Shanghai district.

Another gang of spies this morning blew up a bridge on the Shanghai-Hangchow Railroad, about three miles from the French concession, cutting off traffic between Hangchow and the battle front, but engineers were able to make temporary repairs so that trains are running as usual tonight.

The deadly earnestness of the fighting is shown tonight in the figures supplied by the Chinese Red Cross. More than 450 wounded from the Chekiang side alone are being cared for in Shanghai hospitals and although there are no reports on this side of the losses on the Kiangsu troops it is believed they are greater, owing to the fact that the Kiangsu army is the aggressor.

Three Americans in Shanghai, Milton Purdy of Minneapolis, judge of the United States District Court; Maj. Chauncey Holcomb, former District Attorney here, whose home is in Delaware, and Capt. Whitney I. Eisler, agent of the United States Shipping Board, were caught in rifle and artillery fire this afternoon on a country road outside of Shanghai, and although bullets flew about their car, they managed to get through without accident.

The position of Russian refugees in connection with the war here was settled today by an announcement from the Chekiang headquarters that Russians now are being employed for labor behind the Chekiang lines. According to an account published this afternoon, Chekiang officials state that no Russians will serve in the actual fighting lines, but all who volunteer will be accepted for heavy labor behind the lines, such as forwarding munitions.

The employment of Russians has started talk here of a revival of an ever-victorious army similar to that organized in China by Gen. Frederick Ward of Boston, during the Taiping rebellion a half-century ago, at which time the American general with a small force of foreign recruits, and supported by Chinese troops, nearly overthrew the empire and captured Peking. But the movement collapsed when Gen. Ward was killed in a battle near Shanghai.

The powers continue to strengthen their naval forces here, the force now consisting of twenty-two men-of-war, with America still in the lead with about a dozen fighting ships and more than 800 marines ready to land. The Japanese naval force also has been augmented, and now consists of half a dozen gunboats and light cruisers. It was stated last night that the Japanese are ready to land 800 marines, and can bring in any size force necessary in fifteen hours. Up to date only British and French marines have been landed.

It was announced tonight that the Chekiang headquarters had decided to defer to the foreign wishes and remove the battery of guns which was placed earlier in the week adjacent to the cable leading. The powers objected to the presence of the guns there, due to the possibility of the cables being wrecked.

PROTECTION ASKED

The powers also have notified the Chinese contestants that no naval engagements will be permitted inside Shanghai Harbor, owing to the danger to foreign life and property in the city and to the large trans-Pacific liners consisting of American President ships, which call here almost daily.

The foreign chambers of commerce met today and passed a resolution calling upon the powers to lend adequate protection to all wharves, warehouses and foreign owned factories in outlying districts of the city which are now under native control. Practically all the Chinese schools in the city have refused to open, and only a few of the large missionary institutions are opening with limited students. Business is at a standstill and the native bankers are threatening a moratorium.

agent whose success was chronicled in many a diplomatic coup. But principally she has been famed as the wife of Prince Nicholas Orloff of Russia, as an intimate and protege of the Czarina, as the heroine of thrilling exploits and sensational melodrama in the parlous days of Kerenskian revolution and the later advent of the internationale.

In her little white-washed cabin in a dusty eucalyptus grove at Laguna Beach she now avers herself wearied by the gossip, to have discarded the past and to be now content to work out her destiny and that of her little outdoor woodland theater in which she and a company of amateurs whom she has discovered, enlisted and trained, have been portraying nightly her conceptions of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The "Princess" and her retinue of glamor, gossip, intrigue and mystery came to Los Angeles many months ago. Soon she was elaborately publicized. She was seen, always surrounded by admirers, in various circles and in more varied places. And always grew the tale of her romantic past; growing into a veritable maze of drama, comedy, pathos and tragedy.

"In this the "Princess" seems to have perhaps unconsciously, assisted. She spoke of famous personages to her intimates; she told little personal ancedotes of them, and in these anecdotes she was always present. She did not deny the things she now says are untrue; she met them with silence and little, piquant shrugs. Always a wonderful actress, she made wherever she might be a stage and played herself the stellar role; to her always the spotlight.

There were skeptics, however, who did some "checking up." Little by little the glamor was pierced by shafts of disbelief. Her project for the sale of Russian war posters in a local studio building failed; the City Prosecutor questioned her regarding these activities. Douglas came into her life and brought further doubt; for Douglas always was obvious in his inaccuracies.

DOUGLAS EXPOSED

Came the expose of Douglas. City Prosecutor Friedlander, Deputy Prosecutors Reames and Folsom and Chief Investigator Poland heard much of "Princess" Margarita in this story. As president of the Los Angeles Opera Club they found that Douglas had enlisted the aid of the "princess" as one of the club trustees; that he had named her as hostess or guest of honor on the majority of the club programs. They found her listed as one of the directors and promoters of the Music-Arts Corporation, a scheme to make phonographs. They found her identified with a project to build a master academy of arts and sciences in Hollywood.

As the case progressed the princess was interviewed. Her friends and acquainances were asked to tell what they knew. From a score of points in the United States came telegraphic information; government archives yielded more, and, finally, from continental Europe and from cities in Mexico, came missing links.

HER STATEMENT

With this in hand Mme. Orlova was again interviewed here. And she declared:

That she is not the Princess Orlova of Russia and that she has no claim of any kind to princely rank;

That she has been investigated previously by the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia because of her varied war-time activities;

That the stories told of her major activities in European diplomacy were untrue;

That her participation in royal revels and in court circles was really that of what she describes as a "public character"—in court parlance, an actress or artist or dancer who is invited to appear before, but who is not considered a part of official life.

That the story of her achievements with which Los Angeles society has been regaled was greatly exaggerated and distorted into something it was not.

She added that she was not responsible for these yarns.

HER REAL STORY

From the date of her birth in San Francisco, Margaret Barry has lived a life of thrills. In the massive collection of data now in the City Prosecutor's office she is eary noted as a press agent for Hackenschmidt, the wrestler. In that file are the names of Lord Kitchener of England; the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaevitch of Russia, uncle of the Czar and commander-in-chief of all the imperial armies; Ivan Narodny, hero of the Russian revolution of 1905 and now one of the world's best-known playwrights; Alexander Kerensky, leader of the revolution which dethroned the Czar.

Her first marriage was to J. H. B. Fitspatrick, theatrical manager. She went with him to Paris; there a son was born. Later there was a divorce at Reno.

In New York City she is seen writing and producing plays under the name of Florence Russell. She meets there Charles Andrews Carver, champion strong man of Yale and a descendant of the Puritan Governor of Massachusetts, of whom more later.

She next appears in Europe as the beautiful protege of Lord Kitchener.

NOVELIST'S TRIBUTE

Ivan Narodyn was in Europe then. Investigators found him at his studio at 147 East Nineteenth street, New York City, some ten days ago. And Narodny said of "Princess" Orlova:

"The most adventurous woman in the world, with a passion for excitement and the thrill of accomplishing great deeds in a miraculous fashion. She is almost mentally unbalanced in the unusual love of power and thrills which she possesses.

"I have planned for many years to write a novel with her as the central character.

"I met her through an introduction from the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, who, with Lord Kitchener of England, was numbered among her many suitors. Like other American women who go to Europe she endeavored and succeeded in being the beloved of titled and prominent foreigners."

And of the ante-revolution days:

"The princess decided the Bolsheviki might provide her with excitement so she entered as far as she was permitted into their intrigue and endeavors. And when the United States decided to send Elihu Root to Russia she fought against his being selected, and this incident, coupled with her being suspected of being a German spy during the World War did not make her popular later at Washington."

IN RUSSIA

A glimpse of Petrograd when the Czar still ruled and the cannon fodder moved in waves toward Berlin. The Winter Palace, hospital for soldiers wounded at the front. A trim, white figure moving softly down the aisles of cots—Barry.

A little later a performance under the patronage of H. I. H. Elisavietta Mavrikovna, aunt of the Czar, that funds might be raised to help the soldiers' families. And Barry in dramatic portrayal and a respite from her nursing.

And later still, with dramatic gestures, she gave her jewels that starving peasants might succeed. A school of Russian science in Constantinople owes much to her aid.

Orloff? Kerensky, former Premier, aging and broken, sat in a suite in Berlin two weeks ago. "Barry I do not know," he said. "But Orloff—yes. There are two Prince Orloffs. One died in Siberia—fighting for Kolchak. The other, I think, is with the Grand Duke Nicholas."

"Orloff, my husband," the Princess said when she was first interviewed, "fought with Kolchak in Siberia. His last known address was the Russian Asiatic Bank in Shanghai. He left Harbin in company with a band of Cossacks more than two years ago. I haven't seen him since."

Back in the days before the advent of Rasputin, red monk of Russia, Prince Orloff was the favorite of the Czarina. In Paris circles one of the most cherished legends is his unfailing loyalty to his empress during many years, and even after Rasputin had come between them. This Orloff went to Siberia to fight for Kolchak. The records chronicle his death in battle there.

MEXICO OR RUSSIA?

"The Orloff name she gained in Mexico!" said John B. Coulton, author of "Drifting" and former employer of Barry. And of her: "A charming woman, possessing great personality and love of intrigue—but born to be a stormy petrel in this whirl of life!"

"The Orloff in Mexico was a brother of my husband!" says the Princess.

April in 1917 sees the chronicling of the return of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Andrews Carver from Russia. Carver had been sent there by the State Department. Barry is now Mrs. Carver.

She fosters a project to bring to this country hundreds of desolate and destitute war orphans. A benefit performance is given in the Plaza Hotel, at which the social elite is present. Lady Duff Gordon becomes an intimate friend; she meets Harry Payne Whitney and a score of others. Prominent Russians of all walks of life gather around her.

She opens a studio; according to her own account she conceives and attempts to carry out a plan to restore the Russian throne to Grand Duke Nicholas. She tells thrilling stories of dictaphones and secret service men and diplomatic escapades. Of intrigue after intrigue and scheme after scheme. They culminated when on March 20, 1920, she was prevented from boarding a Sweden-bound ship. She was going, she says, to Esthonia, to arrange gigantic supply contracts. All of her papers, all of her identification, disappeared then, she avers.

And, in straightened circumstances, she played a part in Coulton's "Drifting," then on Broadway. She made good. Carver appears to have left her life.

The next two years finds her in Mexico, where she was received in the best society. Next to San Francisco. Then to Los Angeles. Then to Laguna Beach. And she says:

"I came to Laguna Beach out of the past to give my best efforts, not as a woman but as an artist; an artistry gained through long experience in the theater. My ability in this respect I believe to have been fully demonstrated, not only here, but in the world at large.

"I have been called by my friends and some who professed to be admirers, the Princess Orlova. I have no such title. My last husband, a brave and gallant gentleman, held no princely rank.

"I am not an agent, diplomatic or otherwise, of any nation. I do not desire to be.

"It is true that I have lived in Petrograd, in Paris, and in other cities of Europe. It is true that I made the acquaintance and perhaps quasi-friendship of many prominent and titled people. It is also true that I made enemies.

"All that, however, is in the past. All that I ask in the future is a chance to earn my own living by my own ability and to have granted me the same kindness, the same chivalry, the same friendly and helping hand that Americans give one another in their daily life.

"I am not seeking social recognition nor social leadership. I am not seeking anything that is not mine by right of toil.

"I want simply to be given the opportunity to work out my destiny—to be left alone."

LOWER TAXES FOR TULARE

Announced Rate Far Less Than Last Year

Failure to Pay for Shirt is Costly

Prospects Brighter for Gin at Porterville

VISALIA, Sept. 6.—Expectations were surpassed when the Supervisors cut 30 cents off last year's tax levy, officially setting the 1924-25 rate for Tulare county at $2.65 for outside property and $2.15 for inside property as compared with $2.95 and $2.35 last year.

This new rate really represents a cut of 51 cents from last year's budget, but 21 cents was added to take up the State highway bond retirements due now for the first time, making the net reduction 30 cents. Only a 20-cent cut had been anticipated and the additional 10-cent reduction was enthusiastically received.

The new rates will raise about $1,700,000 during the next tax year as against $2,021,638.97 raised last year. In this economical step the board is supported by all departments of the county government.

DISMISS OFFICERS

VISALIA, Sept. 6.—With exception of George Hudson, county prohibition enforcement officer, all salaried officers and operatives in Tulare county have been dismissed temporarily, according to Dist.-Atty. Fred C. Scott, but this does not mean that the 'lid is off.' On the contrary, the work will only be carried on in a different manner.

Need for conservation of county funds is assigned as the reason for this drastic cut. The District Attorney states that enforcement will be continued, only in a different fashion.

BECAUSE OF A SHIRT

VISALIA, Sept. 6.—Antonio Ruvialcaba of Visalia is in the County Jail charged with assault with a deadly weapon upon Alvardo Martinez—all because he did not pay for the latter's ripped shirt, even though he did pay for all hospital and doctor's charges resulting from an asserted assault.

The two men are said to have engaged in an altercation in Visalia about two weks ago, in which Ruvialcaba is said to have stabbed Martinez. Their troubles were believed to have been adjusted when Ruvialcaba agreed to pay all expenses.

In paying hospital and physicians' bills he overlooked the damage to Martinez's pet shirt—which was brilliant of hue and almost new. Therefore, he now considers the matter behind bars of the County Jail.

JURIST CONVALESCES

VISALIA, Sept. 6.—Superior Judge W. B. Wallace of Visalia, senior jurist of this county and well known in the valley, is confined in the Kaweah Hospital here. Judge Wallace is recovering from effects of a minor operation, in which Dr. Maupin of Fresno assisted. It is expected the judge will make a very rapid recovery. He was recently brought from his summer home in the mountains as result of a sudden illness.

NEW COTTON GIN

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 6.—Prospects of Porterville having a cotton gin in the near future continue to be interesting. N. D. Turner, cotton expert of Los Angeles, who, a few days since, conferred with Chamber of Commerce officials, and L. M. Patterson, who is also interested in the project, is expected to return here from the north any day. In the meantime a more complete survey of the adjacent acreage is being made. A further conference will be held with local business men and growers on Turner's return.

Financial backing for the plan has been assured by local banks, provided cotton growers of the section promise to gin sufficient cotton to justify construction of a ginning plant.

Planting of cotton has led new production in Tulare county this season and prospects continue most pleasing.

KILLS BIG BUCK

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 6.—Lester Guthrie of White River district, secretary of the Tulare County Cattlemen's Association, has returned from the hills in proud possession of his first deer of the season. Guthrie experienced more than the usual thrill incident to opening of the season in bagging this buck. While waiting for his game, the buck suddenly appeared on the skyline on the cliff above him. Shooting twice he hit the animal through the shoulder and again through the heart before it could move out of range. As the second shot reverberated over the mountain the animal fell over the cliff at the hunter's feet.

SELL SECURITIES

LINDSAY, Sept. 6.—The Central Counties Gas Company, operating in Visalia, Exeter, Porterville, Tulare and Lindsay, has been granted authority by the Railroad Commission to sell $80,000 worth of its five-year 7 per cent convertible debenture bonds. This request was made of the commission a short time ago.

In a neat pile on the top of the safe in the office, officials of the California Spring Company at 1746 South Los Angeles street, found a nickel and three pennies yesterday morning. RAID ATTACK STORY QUIZ ENDS TODAY

Contreras to Investigate at Sierra Madre; Sees No Flaw in Agents' Report

With a trip to Sierra Madre tomorrow, George Contreras, head of the dry forces at the District Attorney's office, will conclude the investigation of charges that Joseph Grippi, Italian, was handled with unnecessary roughness by two District Attorney's investigators during a dry raid Friday.

Contreras declared yesterday he has questioned Investigators Lane and McGuire and finds no flaw in their story of being attacked by several people in Grippi's home. The additional charge that the investigators threatened a Sierra Madre official was answered by Lane and McGuire by a denial, Contreras declared. He said the officer refused to help his men, according to their story, and they merely asked to see his badge.

FALSE ARREST CHARGED

Charging them with being responsible for her false arrest on a bad-check charge, Mrs. Genevieve Anderson of Long Beach yesterday filed suit for $25,000 damages against W. L. Enochs, Sol P. Beyer also was declared to have accused Schiller of stealing an automobile. Schiller declared all the asserted remarks complained of were false.

FEDERAL PARKS FREE OF FIRES

Official Reports Loss from Forest Flames Slight

Director Mather and Judge Finney of Capital Here

Latter Says Colorado Lower Than for Thirty Years

Judge Edward C. Finney, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Stephen T Mather, director of the National Park Service, arrived here yesterday on separate tours of inspection and registered at the Van Nuys Hotel.

Secretary Finney, who comes direct from the Grand Canyon Park, said that he found the Colorado River lower than at any time in the last thirty years. Director Mather said that the national parks have been fortunate in such a dry summer to suffer so little from forest fires.

"Our appropriation," he said, "for fighting fires is only $25,000 and I think this year so far we have spent less than $2000. The number of fires in the national forest reserves, however," he added, "has had a serious effect on the amount of business done by the national parks as summer resorts.

"Many persons do not distinguish between the two and as a result Yosemite, for instance, now is almost ready to shut down for the winter, although the autumn hardly has begun."

From Los Angeles Secretary Finney will go first to the Sequoia National Park and thence to San Francisco on Land Office business, returning to Washington via Nevada, Utah and Colorado, where he has reclamation work to inspect. A veteran for thirty years in the department, this is his eighth tour of the West. The last was three years ago.

Director Mather is just winding up an annual swing around the circle which this year has taken him to thirteen national parks. After a short stay in this city, he will view the Indian dances at Gallup, N. M., and then return direct to Washington.

LAFAYETTE CLUB PARADES

Triple Celebration for His Birthday and Two Battles of Marne; Notables at Exercises

Combining in its celebration and meaning, the anniversary of three great events, the birthday of Lafayette, and the first and second battles of the Marne, yesterday the Lafayette Club of Los Angeles held an impressive program at Lafayette Park.

The program commenced with a parade of troops from Westlake Park to the grand stand where Lucien Brunswig, president of the club, and other notables were waiting to receive them.

Mr. Brunswig in his talk lauded Lafayette and sketched his life briefly telling of his contribution to the peace of America. He dwelt especially on the extreme youth of the illustrious Frenchman at the time when he aided the colonists in their fight for freedom. Lafayette, said Mr. Brunswig, left his home and family to help another country, just as so many of the Americans did in 1918, when during the World War, they aided France in the notable second Battle of the Marne, Chateau Thierry. It is the anniversary of that day, September 14, which is to be celebrated by Defense Day throughout the country.

Other speakers of the afternoon were E. W. Britt, Dr. R. F. Von KleinSmid, Louis Sentous, Jr., Jess Stephens and Capt. Paul Perigord. Capt. Perigord, in his blue French uniform, marched in the parade, forming a bright spot of color among the brown of the American troops.

Impressive in its nature, and reminiscent of the World War was the loosing of twelve army pigeons from Ross Field, just at the close of the program. The pigeons flew back to their home, preceding Lieut. C. R. Kane, and Sergt. Berna who brought them. Three of the pigeons, the President Wilson, the Mocker and Spike, are hero pigeons decorated for valor during the war.

ASSASSIN'S SISTER ASKS FOR DECREE

Kin of Czolgas Files Suit for Divorce; Mate Seeking Balm from Brother

Mrs. Celia Koness, who, according to her attorney, George L. Greer, is a sister of Alexander Czolgas, the assassin of President McKinley, yesterday filed suit for divorce from Alexander Koness.

A suit by Koness against John Czolgas, his wife's brother, for $100,000 for alleged alienation of Mrs. Koness's affections, now is pending.

In her suit for divorce Mrs. Koness set forth that her husband had remarked to others that he never would have wed her had he known he was marrying to a family of murderers, and that he found himself a relative by marriage of the man who shot McKinley. These references, she declared, caused her mental anguish. She also mentioned the filing of the alienation suit also as an act of cruelty.

In the heart-balm action Koness asserted he had lived happily with his wife until Czolgas interfered and persuaded her to leave him. Czolgas, in an answer, denied the charges.

SAVED FROM APPENDICITIS OPERATION

With Coso Volcanic Iron Water After Being Ordered to Hospital, Says R. G. Alley, Well-Known Automobile Salesman

For years I suffered with Sour Stomach, Gas and Inactive Liver. The food I liked best caused most trouble. My condition grew worse and I began to suffer from periodical attacks of appendicitis. Olive oil and other vegetable laxatives failed to bring relief. The date was set for my operation at the hospital. In the meantime a friend recommended Coso Iron Water and gave me a trial bottle. The following morning all pain, soreness and the congested feeling seemed greatly improved. I used only two cases of this Water with the result that my digestion is today perfect and I never use a laxative. It has been more than 8 months since I completed the Coso Treatment and I have never had a return symptom of intestinal trouble or appendicitis. I trust that the benefits that I have received may prove an inspiration to others who suffer in the same way.

DAVIS PROMISES FARMER RELIEF

Candidate Opens Campaign for Winning West

Lower Rail Rates, Tax and Tariff Reform Pledged

Co-operative Market Plan Stressed as Remedy

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

OMAHA, Sept. 6.—A readjustment and lowering of rail and water freight rates; tariff and tax reform, and government aid in stimulating the co-operative marketing movement and in establishing an export marketing commission constituted the cardinal points in a farm-relief program presented here tonight by John W. Davis in the first address in his campaign for the winning of the West.

In offering this platform before an audience in the City Auditorium the Democratic Presidential nominee vigorously assailed the Republican party for what he characterized as the discrimination against the farmer in favor of the manufacturer and for its failure to co-operate fully in the restoration of economic conditions abroad so as to furnish a market for American farm products.

In this connection Mr. Davis expressed his resentment at "the belated attempts" of the administration to capitalize the possibilities in the Dawes reparations settlement "as a political asset." He declared that if Americans had in fact "by their unofficial presence" aided in this settlement, it laid "a crushing burden of blame and responsibility on the shoulders of those who for five long years prevented any form of American participation" in solving the reparations problem.

Taking up the Republican proposal as outlined by Charles G. Dawes, the Vice-Presidential candidate, that the entire farm relief problem be submitted to "an impartial, nonpartisan, competent commission, under economic guidance," Mr. Davis asserted that there already has been sufficient investigation and charged that in proposing a new one, the administration was "seeking to evade a decision on matters of principle."

"The Democratic party," Mr. Davis said, "has a definite program by means of which we hope to restore to the farmer the economic equality of which he has been unjustly deprived. We undertake:

"To adopt an international policy of such co-operation by direct official instead of indirect and evasive unofficial means, as will re-establish the farmers' export market by restoring the industrial balance in Europe and the normal flow of international trade with the settlement of Europe's economic problems.

"To adjust the tariff so that the farmer and other classes can buy again in a competitive market.

"To reduce taxation, both direct and indirect, and by strict economy to lighten the burdens of government.

"To readjust and lower rail and water rates which will make our markets, both for the buyer and the seller, national and international instead of regional and local.

"To bring about the early completion of internal waterway systems for transportation and to develop our water powers for cheaper fertilizer for use on our farms.

"To stimulate by every proper governmental activity and progress of the marketing movement and the establishment of an export marketing corporation, or commission in order that the exportable surplus may not establish the price of the whole crop.

"To obtain for the farmer credits suitable for his needs.

"This is our platform and our program; and if elected, I purpose with the aid of a Democratic Congress to put it into effect.

"This program is made up of both administration and legislation. I am not sure that of these, honest and effective administration is not the more important. No law, however, beneficial in its purposes, can accomplish good results if it is badly administered. It is quite as important to the farmers of the United States existing agencies should be administered to their interest as it is that new laws should be passed for their aid and benefit."

BUMPER CROPS HIT LA FOLLETTE

proved in this section (Iowa.) Farmers are not borrowing and are reaping an abundant harvest. Iowa never had such a large crop of small grain in the history of the State. Clover and hay and root products are strong. Everything is very satisfactory. The corn is somewhat backward but we are hoping for weather to carry it through.

IOWA CRISIS PASSED

"Iowa is past its financial difficulty and the farmers are not borrowing.

"The Iowa indebtedness to the Federal reserve has decreased from $100,000,000 to $16,000,000, which indicates that country banks are not borrowing largely."

"The optimistic reports concerning our crop production have in no way been overexaggerated. From Minnesota clear out to Montana we have a really remarkable crop, probably the best we have ever raised, and in many sections double production of last year. North Dakota west of the Red River Valley is in the best shape of its history. South Dakota is also in good shape and Minnesota has a bully crop. Unless all signs fail we will make a record crop production this year. Fortunately, too, the sections hardest hit last year and the year before (such as the central and western sections of the Dakotas) are in the best shape this year.

"This favorable crop situation has cheered up all classes of our people, including the farmers. Coupled with improvement in prices, this situation has done much to restore confidence in the future. Radicalism does not thrive when this sort of an atmosphere prevails. The Republican cause has been materially strengthened because of the recent turn of events.

"There is a general impression that northwestern farmers will get out of the hole pretty well this year.

"There is no question but what conditions in the Southwest are improved tremendously, especially so in Kansas, Oklahoma, and parts of Colorado. The proceeds of the wheat crop in Kansas should take care of most of the doubtful assets held by the country banks and the good corn and feed crop coming on should stabilize the price of steers.

"The economic situation of southwestern farmers is being very greatly improved. Kansas, Oklahoma and North Dakota are this year the three outstanding States in the United States in crop production as compared to ten-year averages. Kansas will be first in wheat with the third largest crop on record. Oklahoma will be third in all wheat with the third largest crop on record. Oklahoma will be second in cotton with the second largest crop on record unless the present drouth reduces the yield more than I believe to be possible. Corn, kaffirs, broom corn and other row crops promise relatively heavy yields, while oats and barley have already returned an unusually high yield per acre. It is the first year in the history of Oklahoma when both small grains and row crops have all been uniformly good.

LIFT MORTGAGES

"The prices for which these products are and will be sold will return more net money to southwestern farmers than in any year since 1919. The result will be that practically all farmers will clear their current and crop mortgage debts. Most of them will have reasonable sums for deposit and for trade over and above debts. Some of them will have practically the whole season's crop money to save or spend.

"As far as Montana is concerned things are most decidedly encouraging. We will have the largest crop of grain that has ever been raised and present prices are satisfactory. Prices for pracically all of our commodities are good.

"If conditions do not change there will be a very good liquidation in the State this fall.

"The outlook in Oregon is most encouraging. There is a light demand in the agricultural districts for the usual loans and crops are moving out at good prices. Small fruits did well this year on the Pacific Slope and have brought good prices. The pear crop in the Willamette Valley and Western Oregon alone will be over a million dollars.

"In the wheat districts—many sections have a normal crop. In others it is a partial failure. There will be about a 60 per cent normal crop in the Northwest, but with the present good prices the situation will be greatly helped.

"Banking circles report that frozen credits are being removed where conditions were quite bad two years ago. Depression struck bottom some time ago and things are now on the upgrade. The future promises well provided more co-operative marketing associations are formed.

"The work of the War Finance Corporation has been very helpful in the West and is so recognized."

BOSTON THRONG CHEERS FLYERS

Maine coast by Maj.-Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Air Service, and assistant Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, with twelve planes.

With the world flyers in advance in a triangle, the escort made the trip in a huge spearhead formation, somewhat higher than the 'round-the-world planes. At the tip of the spearhead was Gen. Patrick.

They reached Boston just before 2 o'clock, daylight time, and alighted ten minutes later, taxiing easily to the buoys where they were moored while antiaircraft guns boomed their salute.

For five miles the shores were lined with spectators. A launch put out to meet the planes and the aviators were brought to the official barge where high officials of the Army and Navy, city and State were drawn up in line to receive them. Striding quickly up the gangplank came Lieut. Smith, commander of the flight, with Gen. Patrick at his side and behind him the companions of his flight.

As Lieut. Smith took his first step toward the receiving line, a man handed him a portable radio mouthpiece, with the words: "Your mother is listening in at Los Angeles."

"Hello, folks." Lieut. Smith said in a low voice. "It's good to be with you again."

A military band struck up the Star Spangled Banner and the flyers stood at a stiff salute.

Then came their formal introduction to those in the receiving line.

"It gives me the greatest pleasure," Gen. Patrick said, "to introduce to you the men who made the first flight around the world."

The cheers broke out again.

CAMERAS GREET FLYERS

The flyers stepped ashore and amid the clicking of cameras recorded their names in the visitors' book at the airport. Then they swung back in an automobile to the barge, talked for a moment with a score of newspaper men and were taken across the harbor to automobiles which conveyed them to their hotel.

An airport flyer who talked with the airmen before they left for South Boston, said that their physical condition was splendid, and that they needed only rest. He quoted Lieut. Smith as saying:

"We're darned glad to get home. The feeling that comes out once in a lifetime came to us when we moored for the last time in Boston Harbor. We knew we were going to fly with wheels from now on and no more pontoons."

CLUBS LAY PLANS FOR FLYERS' RECEPTION

Plans for a mammoth banquet-reception in honor of the 'round-the-world flyers after their arrival at the home base in Santa Monica were put under way yesterday by the various service clubs of this city. The clubs, which will participate in the reception will be the Kiwanis, Rotary, Optimists, Exchange and Lions' organizations.

MOTHER'S VOICE HEARD BY LIEUT. SMITH

Lieut. Lowell Smith, commander of the American Army globe-encircling expedition, declared in a long-distance telephone conversation last night with Mayor Edwin J. Brown of Seattle, according to Associated Press dispatches, that he had heard his mother's voice Thursday night when she broadcast a message to him from The Times KHJ radio station.

Mrs. Jasper Smith, mother of the flight commander, greeted the flyers when they arrived near Portland, Me., and told them how proud she was of their splendid accomplishment and how glad to be the mother of a son whose name would go down in history as one of the intrepid pioneers of the nation.

Mrs. Roberts Chase Harding of Washington, D. C., followed with a message to her son, Lieut. Jack Harding. She has been visiting relatives in Los Angeles and waiting for the return of the expedition.

Both Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Harding sent their greetings to their sons and their four companions, Lieuts. Wade, Nelson, Arnold and Ogden.

NO ARRIVAL DATE SET

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 6.—Exactly five months after Mayor Brown bade Lieut. Lowell Smith bon voyage in Seattle, Mayor Brown congratulated the flyer by long-distance telephone on the arrival of the squadron at Boston, Mass., today.

"We want you all to know we appreciate your wonderful work," said Mayor Brown, in his telephone conversation.

"Thank you," answered Lieut. Smith, "we certainly will be glad to get back."

COOLIDGE MAY RULE CONGRESS

President to Get Control if Personality Wins

Less Insurgency is Predicted for Next Session

Party Leaders Feel Radical Wane Brought About

BY ARTHUR W. CRAWFORD
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Calvin Coolidge, if elected as the next President, may find himself with a better grip on Congress than any other executive has had in recent years.

Belief that maybe the situation is taking root as the effect of emphasizing the Coolidge personality as an issue is being felt. Election of Mr. Coolidge would carry with it a strong indorsement of his personality and policies and hold Republican Senators and Representatives in line for administration measures to a greater extent than has been possible during the past session of Congress.

Republicans nominally have had majorities during the present Congress, but insurgency has developed to such an extent that the radical group has held the balance of power in both branches.

SEE INSURGENCY WANE

Significant developments in various States lead Republican leaders to believe there will be less insurgency than heretofore among those who are re-elected on the Republican ticket and who do not espouse the La Follette-Wheeler cause. Noteworthy in this respect is the fact that of seven Republican Senators who usually have followed the leadership of Senator La Follette in the past session only two have come out openly in support of the La Follette Presidential candidacy. The others either have straddled the issue or have indorsed President Coolidge. If Senators choose to cast their lot with the President in a campaign in which his personality figures prominently Republican leaders figure that their votes can be counted on fairly consistently for legislation favored by the administration.

In analyzing reasons why insurgency may be less likely than during the Harding administration or thus far in the Coolidge administration it is pointed out that the late President Harding was elected not so much on his own personality as through a wave of dissatisfaction with the Democratic regime. Senators and Representatives elected with President Harding considered themselves free to interpret the Republican platform as they chose and to rebel against recommendations of the Executive when they felt like it. The 7,000,000 majority of the Republican ticket, so many Republican legislators belived, was not a flat indorsement of President Harding so much as a protest against the Democrats and a call to the Republican party to see what it could do.

When Calvin Coolidge succeeded to the Presidency on the death of President Harding, Republican members of Congress continued to feel they were under no direct instructions from the voters to follow where the Executive might lead.

SITUATION CHANGES

Now the situation has changed. President Coolidge, the party leaders were quick to perceive, has kept himself free from scandal and has inspired confidence among the rank and file of the people at a time when some members of his cabinet inherited from his predecessor were under fire. So it has been a case of putting his personality forward.

In that state of affairs the election of Mr. Coolidge, it is recognized, is bound to give him greater personal strength and power over Congress than would have been possible under any other circumstances.

A few weeks ago the Republicans believed they would gain a working majority in the House if President Coolidge is elected but they thought there was little hope of being able to dislodge the radical Republican group from the balance of power in the Senate.

Originally it seemed necessary for the Republicans to gain six or seven seats in the Senate in order to have a working majority of forty-nine. Since that time, however, Senator Howell, Republican, Nebraska, who has been counted as one of the La Follette radical group and who, acting with La Follette, was one of the Republicans to vote for Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, as chairman of the Senate committee on interstate commerce, has indorsed President Coolidge strongly. Senator Howell has been made a member of the advisory committee to the Republican National Committee.

Senator Norbeck, Republican, South Dakota, who most of the time has voted with La Follette and who supported Senator Johnson, Republican, California, for the Presidency in the preconvention campaign, also has come out for Coolidge. Senator Norbeck, like Senator Howell, has been placed on the Republican advisory committee. There would seem reason to believe that Senators Howell and Norbeck, after indorsing President Coolidge and having a hand in his campaign for election, will be disposed to accept his leadership in matters of legislation.

Senator Couzens, Michigan, Republican, also counted with the La Follette radicals on many issues in the recent session of Congress, likewise has announced his intention to support President Coolidge.

NEED SMALLER GAIN

If Senators Howell, Norbeck and Couzens can be counted on to vote with the regular Republicans on organization matters and on many administration issues it means that gains of three or four seats will be sufficient to give the Republicans a working majority of forty-nine. If Gov. W. H. McMaster of South Dakota, who is the Republican nominee for Senator, supports Coolidge as he is expected to do, notwithstanding radical leanings, his election will make only three Republican gains necessary. Otherwise four seats must be gained as Senator Sterling, Republican, South Dakota, whom Gov. McMaster defeated in the primary, is a conservative.

FOES OF COURTS ARE DENOUNCED

great contributions which America made to the science of government.

"That tribunal," he continued, in speaking specifically of the Supreme Court, "has been made as independent and impartial as human nature could devise. This action was taken with the sole purpose of protecting the freedom of the individual, of guarding his earnings, his home, his life.

"It is frequently charged that this tribunal is tyrannical. If the Constitution of the United States be tyranny; if the rule that no one shall be convicted of crime save by a jury of his peers; that no orders of nobility shall be created; that slavery shall not be permitted to exist in any State or Territory; that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; if these and many other provisions made by the people be tyranny, then the Supreme Court when it makes decisions in accordance with these principles of our fundamental law is tyrannical. Otherwise it is exercising the power of government for the preservation of liberty.

"Somewhere must be lodged the power to declare the Constitution. If it be taken away from the court, it must go either to the executive or the legislative branch of the government. No one, so far as I know, has thought that it should go to the executive. All those who advocate changes propose, I believe, that it should be transferred in whole, or in part, to the Congress. I have a very high regard for legislative assemblies . . . But the legislature is not judicial. Along with what are admitted to be the merits of the question also what is supposed to be the popular demand and the greatest partisan advantage weigh very heavily in making legislative decisions.

POLITICS PLAY PART

"It is well known that when the House of Representatives sits as a judicial body, to determine contested elections, it has a tendency to decide in a partisan way. It is to be remembered also that under recent political practice, there is a strong tendency for legislators to be very much influenced by the Executive. Whether we like this practice or not, there is no use denying that it exists. With a dominant executive and a subservient legislature, the opportunity would be very inviting to aggrandizement and very dangerous to liberty. That way leads toward imperialism.

"Some people do not seem to understand fully the purpose of our constitutional restraints. They are not for protecting the majority either in or out of Congress.

"They can protect themselves with their votes. We have adopted a written Constitution in order that the minority, even down to the most insignificant individual, might have their rights protected. So long as our Constitution remains in force, no majority, no matter how large, can deprive the individual of the right of life, liberty or property, or prohibit the free exercise of religion or the freedom of speech or of the press. If the authority now vested in the Supreme Court were transferred to the Congress any majority, no matter what their motive, could vote away any of these most precious rights. Majorities are notoriously irresponsible.

MARGIN IS CLOSE

"The same reasoning that applies to the individual person applies to the individual State. A very broad twilight zone exists in which it is very difficult to distinguish where State right ends and Federal right begins. Deprived of the privilege of its day in court, each State would be compelled to submit to the exactions of the Congress or resort to resistance by force. On the other hand, the Legislatures of States and sometimes the people through the initiative and referendum, may pass laws which are very injurious to the minority residents of that State, by attempting to take away the privileges which they hold under the Federal Constitution. Except for the courts, such a minority would have no reply for wrong done them. Their ultimate refuge is the Supreme Court of the United States.

"At a time when all the world is seeking for the adjudication of differences between nations, not by war, but by reason, the suggestion that we should limit the jurisdiction of our domestic courts is reactionary in the highest degree. It would cast aside the progress of generations to begin again the contest for supremacy between executive and legislative. Whichever side has won in that struggle, the people have always lost.

"Our Constitution has raised certain barriers against too hasty changes. I believe that such provision is wise. I doubt if there has been any change that has ever really been desired by the people, which they have not been able to secure. Stability of government is a very important asset. If amendment be made easy, both revolution and reaction, as well as orderly progress, also becomes easy. The nation has lost little, but has gained much, through the necessity of due deliberation. The pressing need of the present day is not to change our constitutional right, but to observe our constitutional rights.

BARS CONFISCATION

"A deliberate and determined effort is being made to break down the guarantees of our fundamental law. It has for its purpose the confiscation of property and the destruction of liberty. At the present time, the chief obstacle, besides the people, to this effort, is the Supreme Court of the United States. In this contest there is but one place for a real American to stand. That is on the side of ordered liberty under constitutional government. This is not the struggle of the rich and powerful. They will be able to survive. It is the struggle of the common run of people, unless we can maintain our institutions of liberty unimpaired, they will see their savings swept away, their homes devastated, and their children perish from want and hunger.

"The Constitution of the United States has for its almost sole purpose the protection of the freedom of the people. We must combat every attempt to break it down or to make it easy under the pretended guise of legal procedure, to throw open the way to reaction or revolution. To adopt any other course is to put in jeopardy the sacred right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness."

Again discussing foreign affairs, Mr. Coolidge concluded:

"American citizens, with the full sympathy of our government, have been attempting, with apparent success, to restore stricken Europe. We have acted in the name of world peace and of humanity. Always the obstacles to be encountered have been distrust, suspicion and hatred. The great effort has been to allay and remove these sentiments. I believe that America can assist the world in this direction by her example. We have never forgotten the service done us by Lafayette but we have long ago ceased to bear an enmity toward Great Britain by reason of two wars that were fought out between us.

MILITARISM FALLS

"We want Europe to compose its difficulties and liquidate its hatreds. Would it not be well if we set the example and liquidated some of our own? The war is over. The militarism of Central Europe, which menaced the security of the world, has been overthrown. In its place have sprung up peaceful republics. Already we have assisted in refinancing Austria. We are about to assist in refinancing Germany. We believe that such action will be helpful to France, but we can give further and perhaps even more valuable assistance both to ourselves and to Europe by bringing to an end our own hatreds. The best way for us, who wish all our inhabitants to be single-minded in their Americanism is for us to bestow upon each group of our inhabitants that confidence and fellowship which is due to all Americans. If we want to get the hyphen out of our country, we can best begin by taking it out of our own minds. If we want France and the other Allies paid, we can best work toward that end by assisting in the restoration of the German people, now shorn of militarism, to their full place in the family of peaceful mankind.

"I want to see America set the example to the world, both in our domestic and foreign relations, of magnanimity.

"We cannot make over the people of Europe. We must help them as they are, if we are to help them at all. I believe that we should help, not at the sacrifice of our independence, not for the support of imperialism, but to restore to those great peoples a peaceful civilization. In that course, lies the best guarantee of freedom. In that course lies the greatest honor which we can bestow upon the memory of Lafayette."

LA FOLLETTE IS HELD SLIPPING

Coolidge to the White House. He ridiculed La Follette's hope of being chosen President by the House of Representatives, showing that twenty-three of the House delegations are controlled by Republicans, twenty by Democrats, and five delegations evenly divided between the parties. The Senator cannot see even a remote chance of a majority in the House uniting on La Follette, but admitted the possibility of Democrats and the insurgent Republicans electing Bryan in the Senate if the people fail to elect a President themselves.

"The greatest thing that has happened in the world since the signing of the world peace treaty is the putting into effect of the Dawes plan," said Senator Smoot. "Europe could not have gone along much further under existing chaotic conditions. It would have broken down, but now the value of European money will increase, property will be safe once more. All of this goes to stabilize conditions throughout the world. When that is brought about America can take care of herself and get her share without the shadow of doubt. I am an optimist from now on as to the world affairs and I always have been one as to the United States. When I am not an optimist concerning America I do not think it will be worth while living in this world."

NOT DEMOCRAT YEAR

Senator Smoot described Mr. Davis, Democratic Presidential nominee as an able man but added, "this is not a Democratic year." He said that President Coolidge's strength with the people will grow; that Coolidge popularity is not sectional but national.

"Straw votes mean nothing," said the Senator. "Business men have plenty to do without sending in their names for a poll. I never did that in my life. The mass of the American people are sound and safe and believe in Americanism. I don't think they approve LaFollette's attitude during the war. The administration got no assistance from him. All you have to do to understand his position is to read his speeches, and now Senator LaFollette is asking the people to elect him President. I don't think their memory is that short."

Senator and Mrs. Smoot are spending a brief vacation in Long Beach with their daughter, Mrs. Carlyle Nibley of 2635 East First street. In about a week Mrs. Smoot will go to Washington and the Senator will return to Salt Lake City. His health has not been very good, but he said he has improved greatly in the California sunshine.

STATE DELEGATES TO CONGRESS SELECTED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 6. — Official participation by the State of California in the twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Mining Congress to take place in this city the week of September 29 is assured with the naming of delegates by Gov. Richardson. It comprises more than a score of representative men from various parts of the State. Other States also will be represented by official delegations, according to word reaching the Department of Mines and Mining of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce.

The work is being done by George A. Simpson of Los Angeles, who was awarded the contract, his bid being 23 8-10 cents per square foot. There are 435,000 square feet of concrete to be laid and the entire contract will cost $103,356.18.

ROWELL SEES COOLIDGE WIN

California Not "Doubtful," Says ex-Bull Mooser

Asserts Forces of Davis in State Lack Vitality

Third Party Defeat in Iowa is Predicted

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—All indications point to a victory for President Coolidge in November, according to Chester H. Rowell, former Bull Mooser and newspaper publisher of California, who is in Washington. California is not a "doubtful State," but will go for Coolidge, in the opinion of this political observer. He believes the strength of La Follette is overrated and points out that the "progressive" label used by the Wisconsin Senator is a misnomer.

"Davis forces in California have no vitality," Mr. Rowell declared. "All Davis can expect in that State is the automatic Democratic vote. The La Follette movement in California is making every effort to get the vote of labor and the discontented farmer, but I do not think the Wisconsin Senator will make much progress. California is definitely for Coolidge. The third party movement will not be a success in California.

"California is not a doubtful State. It will go for Coolidge with a whoop. The mathematics of the political situation as it now prevails again may make California the real pivotal State. In California and in the West Coolidge must get a big vote but I expect the President to get large majorities in the West.

"The election laws or customs in Iowa are against La Follette. Because of the various angles in Iowa, the third party will not carry that State. I believe Coolidge will be successful there. The third party claims are entirely too extravagant. In the East they will draw the Davis vote, which will make more certain the election of Coolidge.

"The word, progressive, as used by La Follette, is a misnomer. The majority of the real progressives are not La Follette supporters. The real progressive movement is not for Socialism. La Follette will gather in the most radical element of the progressive wing, if any, but that element is merely a fringe of the progressives. That fringe is not included in the real progressive class. This class was not in the Roosevelt progressive movement.

"I personally have checked the list of the third party leaders and find few, if any, real progressives."

WOOLWINE SURE HE'LL WIN FIGHT

Confident California Will Restore His Health

Marked Improvement Noted Already by Physicians

Former Official Renews Interest in Politics

With that indomitable fighting spirit which has characterized his public career, Thomas Lee Woolwine, stormy petrel of State and county politics for many years, is now fighting his latest, but not his last fight, he declares, and it is generally conceded that he is going to win.

"Take me back to California, to that certain favorite spot in the foothills I like so well, and I know I shall recover," said the former District Attorney of Los Angeles county during a trying period in Paris, when his life hovered in the balance.

"I'll be up and around pretty soon," he said yesterday while he lay comfortably in his retreat, with the balmy California air sweeping through his room.

He is not alone in this opinion, for yesterday the three physicians attending him held a conference and he has improved so much during the few days he has been in California that it was decided Dr. L. Jube, specialist in blood transfusions, who accompanied him and his party here from Paris, might return to France. Dr. Jube will leave today, it was announced.

COLOR IS RETURNING

For the first time in two months Mr. Woolwine sat up on Friday afternoon, a day after reaching his favorite retreat. Yesterday he was also able to sit up and his physicians, and Mrs. Woolwine, who has been constantly at his side and fighting with him, noticed that already color has returned to his cheeks, and he has much more vitality. It was also remarked that the blood count for Mr. Woolwine, which reached a low ebb just before the last blood transfusion in New York, had materially increased as he approached California. Since reaching here it has increased still more.

Dr. Donald J. Frick was called in yesterday to be associated with Dr. Louis Weber, Mr. Woolwine's physician for several years.

The decision in Paris to return to Los Angeles was reached in a manner typical of Mr. Woolwine. It was doubtful if he would be able to make the trip. The relapse in New York is believed to have been caused by the exceptionally stormy weather encountered during the overseas trip.

IMPROVEMENT MARKED

Since leaving New York, Mr. Woolwine's condition has daily improved. While he will not be able to see even his most intimate friends for some time, it was learned yesterday that he will "be up and about pretty soon." The nurse, a native of Holland, who accompanied the Woolwine party from Paris, will remain in Los Angeles to attend Mr. Woolwine.

Physicians in Paris, who attended Mr. Woolwine, were astonished at the former District-Attorney's wonderful vitality.

"He has gone through so much," they said, "and yet he fights on, and he will win if he keeps up the fight."

"I'll recover if I get back to California," insisted Mr. Woolwine.

"Mr. Woolwine's condition is much better," said Mrs. Woolwine yesterday. "We noticed the change shortly after leaving New York, and he has improved wonderfully since we arrived here. Of course, what he needs is rest and quiet."

Mr. Woolwine keepsin touch with local affairs and showed considerable interest in recent political events. His career as a public official has been one of the most spectacular of any official in that sort of office in this or many other States. He was known in the East as well as in the West. He was twice a candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket. He was first elected District-Attorney in 1915 and was twice re-elected. He had served two years and five months of his last term when his physician ordered him to take a rest. This resulted in his resignation and the appointment of Mr. Keyes.

Members of the District-Attorney's office yesterday sent Mr. Woolwine a large box of flowers together with a note from Chief Deputy Fitts, who forwarded the token because of Mr. Keyes's absence from the city.

Mr. Woolwine confidently expects to be "up and about" soon. He has already ordered a new car in anticipation of trips through the foothills, and it is believed by those who have been with him during his illness that he will be as successful in this latest fight he is making as he has been in others.

LEAGUE AWAITS GERMAN ACTION

ald and seconded by Premier Herriot, relegating the problems they failed to settle to the first and second committees of the Assembly of the League of Nations, was adopted unanimously by the fifty odd nations represented here.

After passing the buck to the underlings the two Premiers left Geneva tonight.

This morning Mr. MacDonald and Premier Herriot sent separate communications to their respective Ambassadors in Berlin urging Chancellor Marx to withhold the announced German note scheduled to be delivered to the Allies on Monday which protested that the Reich alone was not responsible for the war.

CHANCELLOR WARNED

The Chancellor was warned that the reopening at this time of this question, which was embodied in the Versailles Treaty, would seriously interfere with the carrying out of the Dawes plan and with the floating of 1,800,000,000 gold marks ($200,000,000) loan and also would prevent favorable consideration by the League of Germany's admission and further would complicate the security and disarmament problems.

Reports reached Geneva tonight via Berlin and Berne that the German government had decided to withdraw the note, for the present at least.

Foreign Minister Benes of Czecho-Slovakia has three detectives constantly on guard night and day outside his suite of rooms in the Hotel National here. He is the only League delegate requiring police protection, neither Prime Minister MacDonald nor Premier Herriot having asked for detectives from the Swiss government. Two Swiss detectives and one Czech detective are kept on duty as M. Benes is believed to fear an attack on his life.

MacDONALD VICTORY

Tonight's fifty-fifty settlement of the security and disarmament questions really amounts to a diplomatic victory for Great Britain as Mr. MacDonald succeeded in shelving the League committee on a mutual assistance pact which France favors and is sending the whole problem to a committee for another explanation.

The Japanese government this morning notified the League secretariat that it could not adopt the mutual assistance pact. This left France alone of the great powers in favor of it.

Tonight's resolution contained no mention of sanctions or military activities against any aggressor and leaves the entire problem exactly where the League committee started discussing it. It is expected that the Assembly committees will not be able to reach a solution before the adjournment of the Assembly and will pass the problems along to a subcommittee, which will stall along until after the American elections in November in the hope of the United States being represented at an international disarmament conference which will follow the submitting of their report.

LOOK TO AMERICA

All chances of this conference being held in Washington are definitely killed, as this resolution provides that it be held under the auspices of the League of Nations at Geneva. Both Mr. MacDonald and Premier Herriot profess to believe that the United States will participate.

Neither Germany nor Russia are expected to protest against the League holding a conference, as overtures will be made both to Berlin and Moscow to join the League.

Reports reaching here today that Chancellor Marx had told Hans Von Keltenborn, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, at Berlin that Washington has urged to Germany not to apply for admission to the League this year for campaign purposes of the Republican party caused a big sensation in American and League circles here today. The Republican administration was accused of "international blackmail" by American pro-Leaguers here.

Father of Loeb Confined to Bed by Heart Attack

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Albert H. Loeb, father of the boy in the Cook County Jail, who, with Nathan Leopold, Jr., is awaiting Judge Caverly's sentence for the murder of Bobby Franks, has suffered a new heart attack, and is confined to his bed, it was learned today. His condition now precludes any possibility of his coming to Chicago to be near his son, Dick, when sentence is pronounced, for he would be unable to make the trip, had it been his intention to come.

The strain of the days of waiting for the verdict that may send his son to the gallows is said to be the real reason for the new attack.

PENAL ISLANDS FOR CRIMINALS

Mexico City Federal District Governor Cleans Up

Midnight Assaulters Sent to Place of Horror

Maria Isles Nightmare of Mexican Outlaws

BY JACK STARR-HUNT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—A hundred of Mexico's most dangerous criminals, nearly every one having a lengthy list of convictions against his name, have been deported to the Maria Islands, Mexico's famous penal settlement in the Pacific Ocean.

For more than a year past certain classes of crimes in Mexico have been increasing at an alarming rate, the main class being assaults and robberies with violence at night. These were committed with amazing audacity and the average law-abiding citizen became loath to be out after dark in any but the most central streets for fear of being held up by one of the numerous groups of ruffians, who were seldom apprehended.

These gangs were never satisfied with despoiling their victim of everything on him, but invariably used the knife, and should the victim turn out a poor catch for them, then his maltreatment was, as a rule, the more severe.

MAN FOR THE JOB

Society called aloud for protection, and when Ramon Ross, one of Mexico's representatives at the conferences held in Mexico City last year, which resulted in the recognition of the republic by the United States, got his reward in the form of the governorship of the Mexico City Federal district, he at once proclaimed his intention of clearing the city of these pestilent night hawks.

The Governor was as good as his word, and the city police, although they are and have always been inadequate in numbers to efficiently guard the metropolis at night, co-operated loyally, and people ventured out at night with less dread of being knifed at any dark corner. The result was that the city's great prison, or "penitenciaria," soon became uncomfortably full of dangerous criminals.

Mexican prisoners enjoy considerable immunities not extended to prisoners in other countries. They may be visited by friends on almost any excuse, their wives have fixed days each week for visits, and are allowed to bring the prisoners cigarettes, food and practically every kind of luxury.

TO DEPORT WORST

As it became impossible to overcrowd the city prisons to any further extent, Gov. Ross decided to pick out a hundred of the worst cases, remove them from their atmosphere of comparative luxury and ship them to the penal settlement, where they would realize they were really prisoners and not merely guests of the state.

The removal of such a batch was a dangerous proposition, for friends of prisoners in Mexico are always ready to go to extremes in order to bring about the escape of a delinquent. It was therefore decided that the removal of those selected should be affected at night, and secrecy was enjoined upon all connected with the operation.

A few nights ago, on the stroke of midnight, the order rang forth for the chosen hundred to be lined up in the prison quadrangle. Dazed by sleep, those criminals—cowards every one of them at heart—shuffled into line, many of them asking if they were to be shot en masse.

One of the guards facetiously replied that they were going to a summer residence, and when this remark spread through the ranks even the hardest of the bunch paled visibly in the moonlight, for they then appreciated that it would be a real imprisonment they were going to suffer, and would probably not see Mexico City for a long time, if, indeed, ever again.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

Under a strong guard they were marched in silence to the railway station, embarked in closed wagons, heavily escorted by troops of the line with loaded Mausers, and shipped for the port of Manzanillo, on the Pacific Coast. Their train only pulled up at points where the prisoners had to be fed and watered. On arrival at the sea coast a steamer was awaiting them to carry them to their island prison, some hundred miles away in the Pacific Ocean.

The scene outside the city prison on the day following the departure of the hundred chosen ones was indescribable, nearly every one of them having some faithful female creature attached to him and left desolate by what they termed injustice in the highest degree.

The Maria Islands are three in number, and located due west of the Mexican State of Nayarit. Their names are Maria Madre, Maria Magdalena and Maria Cleofas, there being a little one, more northerly, named San Juanito. They are Mexico's only penal settlement, located in one of the hottest sections, and convicts once get there generally stay their full term. The climate is insufferably hot, prisoners being kept at coffee production as their main occupation. The islands are the dread of the Mexican criminal, who believes firmly that the voyage means his last sight of his country. In many cases these lonely isles have proved the truth of that fear.

Such a step as that now successfully effected by Ramon Ross has long been needed, and the dread of a similar fate will in all probability have the effect of cleaning up Mexico City from night assaults to an extent never hoped for by the law-abiding public.

BRIBERY IS LAID TO EVITTS

Bellflower Man, Missing in Mystery, Found in Cell in Pasadena, is Accused in Complaint

A complaint charging bribery was filed yesterday against E. B. Evitts, Bellflower night watchman whose disappearance several days ago caused his townsfolk to believe he had been murdered. He was found in the Pasadena Jail, where he was being held incomunicado following his arrest on the bribery charge.

Evitts is charged with accepting a $1200 bribe to "fix" a case in which he is said to have shown much interest, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Hill. The case dates back to September 15, 1923, when Meyers Burton of Bellflower was arrested on a charge of having committed a statutory offense.

"FIXING" PLAN CHARGED

"This is the case which led to the arrest of three men," Dep. Dist.-Atty. Hill explained yesterday. "One of the men, Harvey Ludolph was convicted. The case is still pending against Burton and the third man."

According to information obtained by the District Attorney's investigators, Burton approached Evitt and asked him "to straighten out the case." Evitts, according to the investigators, agreed to act as the agent between Burton and the girl's father, Joseph U. Long. Evitts then is said to have returned to Burton and told him that for $1200 the case could be dismissed and all of the State's witnesses would be induced to leave California.

Burton is said to have suspected Evitts's sincerity, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Hill and retained former Police Judge Carl Hawkins as his attorney.

Hawkins placed the matter before the District Attorney and arrangements were made to carry on the deal between Burton and Evitts. A meeting between the two men was planned for the night of the 4th inst. At this meeting, according to Detectives Irving and Eaton of the District Attorney's office, Burton gave $1200 in marked currency to Evitts and the latter's arrest took place immediately.

TAKEN TO PASADENA

Evitts was taken to Pasadena and held incomunicado. Burton's trial was to have started in Superior Judge Avery's court on the following morning, the 5th inst. The trial was continued to October 22.

Evitts, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Hill, made a statement to him which virtually was a confession. He is said to have made admissions concerning his participation in the $1200 deal and assumed all responsibility for the meetings with Burton. Long, the girl's father, had never had any knowledge of the deal, the officers declare. The complaint charging bribery was completed yesterday by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Hill and was signed by Burton.

When Evitts failed to appear at his home on the night of the 4th inst., his wife spread the alarm that he was missing and that she feared he had been murdered. The townsfolk of Bellflower organized a posse throughout the night scoured the surrounding country for his body. The "body," very much alive, was found in the Pasadena jail last Friday.

RUDOLPH TO RETURN FOR WORK SOON

Actor Due on November 1, Says Production Manager Looking for Studio

Rudolph Valentino is coming home again, according to George Ulman, production manager of Ritz pictures, who is in the city looking for a studio for Valentino's next picture, "The Flame of Destiny." The choice has now been narrowed down to the United studios, Pickford-Fairbanks and Selig's. All of these three embody certain of the requirements necessary for the picture, according to Mr. Ulman, but as yet he has not been able to decide.

To those fans who are accustomed to see Nita Naldi as the hated vamp, "The Flame of Destiny" will be a great shock, according to reports, for in this picture the sinuous Nita will play opposite Rudolph Valentino as the heroine. She will portray a young Moorish girl, with whom the King falls in love, and rumor has it that she will for the first time in her motion-picture career figure in the final close-up as the chosen one, rather than the rejected vamp.

HELD AFTER LIQUOR RAID

Jack Andel, 1356 North Wilton Place, was arrested yesterday morning by a raiding party of Hollywood police officers under Sergt. L. S. C. Nelson on a charge of violating the Wright Act. They found six gallons of liquor in his home, they asserted.

DAIRYMAN IS HELD IN EXTORTION

Accused of Demanding $1000 of Competitor Under Threat of Death

Fred Le Young, dairy owner of San Gabriel, was arrested yesterday by deputy sheriffs as the principal in an extortion plot designed to force $1000 from F. M. Hinton, owner of another dairy near that of Le Young's.

It is charged by the deputies that Le Young wrote a note threatening Hinton with death unless the latter placed $1000 in bills in a tobacco can and flung this into Santa Anita Wash.

The death note was wrapped around a small stone and flung into the front yard of Hinton's home, where the latter found it.

It read: "Would you give $1000 for your life? If so, bring it to the P. E. company bridge, put it in a tobacco can, throw it over bridge on north side in middle of river Friday night between 1 and 3 and say nothing to officer or you won't live over next night."

The threatened man communicated with the Sheriff's office. A large squad of deputies were "staked" out about each side of the wash. At 2 a.m. yesterday morning, they said, Le Young appeared on the scene and Hinton, following instruction, threw a can in which he had put some paper into the water. Le Young, the deputies said, did not pick this up. He followed Hinton home and returned about 5 a.m. Then he picked up the can, the officers said, and they immediately arrested him.

CLUB HEARS PHONE FIGHT ARGUMENTS

City Group, Addressed by Both Factions; Each Hits at Other's Contention

With members of the Los Angeles City Club as an audience, representatives of the Southern California Telephone Company and of the general citizens' telephone committee yesterday presented the opposing arguments that have arisen over the telephone company's application for permission to install the metered service plan in the outlying districts of the city.

E. F. Zacher, commercial engineer of the telephone company, outlined the proposals now before the Railroad Commission, stating that the telephone system has doubled in size in seven years, and by the end of the present year, the company will have spent more than $60,000,000 in construction work made necessary by the growth.

Answering a question from the audience, Zacher said that the construction work is made possible now only because new capital has been obtained from the Bell system. He estimated that continuance of the present rates will result in an operating loss this year of $1,152,000 without paying interest in borrowed money. He said that the company has never been able to pay a dividend.

Louis B. Mayer, representing the citizens' committee, referred to the request for permission to raise rates as a "contemplated gouge" and produced figures which he said showed that the charts exhibited by the telephone company representatives were "misleading and unfair."

NEW FIRE IS STARTED IN SAN GABRIEL

Flames Are Extinguished Before Much Headway is Gained in Canyon

A new brush fire starting from an unknown cause broke out early yesterday morning in San Gabriel Canyon about a mile below the point where the brush fire was started last Sunday.

According to United States District Forest Supervisor Charlton, the fire was brought under control and put out before it gained appreciable headway.

The big brush fire that raged in the canyon for four days and nights was reported by Charlton as being all out yesterday. The crew of fire fighters was being gradually withdrawn, a sufficient number of men being left to patrol the burned area to guard against a possible new outbreak from smoldering embers.

MARGETT'S RUGS AND CARPETS EXCLUSIVELY

The Adventures of a Rug Merchant

by Edw. J. Margett

A WHITE-FACED man, angry and trembling, walked into my office one day, a little over four years ago, and delivered this speech—"Margett," he said, "if you do not immediately quit cutting prices on the rugs manufactured by Alexander Smith & Sons when you sell to the stores in San Francisco we will put you out of the wholesale business. There's an agreed price," he went on to explain, "and every jobber and distributor must maintain this price."

"How would you go about it to put me out of business?" I inquired.

"We will cut the price on the line," he replied, "and, at a loss to ourselves for a year, take away all your business."

I gave the matter a few moments' study and then made him this answer "I have only myself, one stenographer and a delivery truck. You have a big establishment. If you can stand it to sell for a year without a penny of profit I guess I can stand it too. I am a newcomer here in the wholesale rug business and to win my trade I must cut prices—I could not compete with concerns like your own if I did not."

SO my angry caller left. But he did not carry out his threat. He did worse. I found out what his tactics were the next time I called upon my chief customer. This was the buyer of rugs for one of San Francisco's big department stores. "Margett," the rug buyer began, "we want your stuff but can't you deliver it in some truck that hasn't got your name on it? We don't want Blank & Co. to know that we are buying from you because they have served notice on us that they will not supply their rugs to anyone who buys anything from Margett. They say you are a price-cutter and a trade-disturber and that they will shut off our supply if we buy a dollar's worth of you."

This was a poser. This was something I had not anticipated. "What shall I do now?" I pondered. "If they can't get me in one way they seem determined to do it in another and, at the moment, it looks as if they might succeed."

I declined the buyer's orders for anonymous delivery and went home to sleep over it. That night the answer came and it was absurdly simple. "I will merely go into the retail business," I resolved. "They have forced me into it." And the humor of the situation made me laugh. "I have heard of plenty of men being forced out of business," I thought, "but never before have I heard of one being forced into business."

SO I went into the retail rug and carpet business. I opened in a little store on Ellis Street—25 feet front. The retail business flourished. I moved into a larger store—60 feet wide, on Powell Street, second floor. Then I opened a store in Los Angeles. Then one in Oakland. Now I have made my third move in San Francisco—this time into a store on Market Street, second floor, 100 feet wide and containing 17,000 square feet of floor space.

This, in brief, is the story of the adventures that led me into the retail rug and carpet business. It has all happened in the course of four years. I began as a wholesale dealer only, selling to the furniture stores and department stores. Opposition to my price-cutting tactics forced me to sell my goods direct to the public and established me in the retail business. Now I feel that I am set and ready. I have well-equipped stores in California's three best cities, and a volume of business that makes mine, I believe, the largest exclusive rug and carpet business on the Coast.

ALL this has been done by price-cutting. No one can prevent me from cutting prices when I sell at retail, although even here there is intense opposition on the part of manufacturers and pressure brought to prevent me from handling certain lines. But that is a separate story and I hope you will be willing to read it when it is told in a subsequent advertisement soon. Suffice for today to add that my policy is definitely one of supplying rugs and carpets below the prices quoted in the furniture and department stores.

You can come to one of my stores any day in the year and buy almost any kind of a rug cheaper than you can buy it during the special sales of my competitors. How I am able to do this and further proof of the fact that I am doing it will be: you may buy at any of my stores very much cheaper. I quote the prices on three groups of rugs that you may buy at any of my stores very much cheaper, I am confident, than at most other stores.

OWENS WOMEN URGE PEACE

Feminine Delegation at Bishop Implores Early Settlement of Water Dispute by Commission

BY VAUGHN JONES

"Times" Staff Correspondent

BISHOP, Sept. 6.—The women of Owens Valley, work-worn mothers and widows, professional and club women, entered the water controversy in dramatic fashion today.

A feminine delegation, representing virtually every woman in the valley, called on the Los Angeles Water Commission this morning and pleaded that the settlement between the valley ranchers and the city over water be expedited. They asked that the city take their lot into consideration and that an early date be set at which definite proposals for settlement of the situation be submitted.

PLEA IS DRAMATIC

They asked this, they said, on behalf of the women who had seen their husbands and sons lose courage and hope, who had suffered and who had seen their homes swallowed up by the encroachment of the desert. The appearance of the women was the most dramatic development of the inspection trip made by the commission.

Commissioner Baker, in replying to the women, issued a statement that the city must adopt a definite and constructive policy in regard to the Owens Valley situation. Justice will be done, he said.

Undoubtedly mistakes were made in the construction of the aqueduct; mistakes are natural in any undertaking of such proportions.

The commission, before its departure for Los Angeles yesterday afternoon, made a fifty-mile inspection trip, visiting four irrigation ditches.

he said, but they can and will be adjusted.

W. W. Watterson, spokesman for the ranchers and banker of Bishop, expressed his entire satisfaction with the tour of the commission as the Commissioners prepared to depart for Los Angeles. It gave the ranchers their first opportunity to get their case before the proper authorities, he said, and to the general public as a whole. Better feeling has been created, he said, and the effect of the trip will not be lost.

FARMERS GET HEARING

The most important thing accomplished, he said, was that the ranchers and farmers in the valley were given an opportunity to express their feelings and to explain their position and situation. The residents of Owens Valley have no intention of holding up the city. If the community must be destroyed, he said, the ranchers and farmers are willing to have some one else put a price on it.

PAINTINGS DECLARED NOT ALIKE

Judge Holds 'Dawn' is Not Infringment of Copyright on Parrish 'Daybreak'

"Daybreak," a painting by Maxfield Parrish, and "Dawn," a painting about to be placed on the market by the Pacific Moulding and Frame Company and others of Los Angeles, are so "totally different" that the public would not be deceived so as to confuse them, Federal Judge James held yesterday in denying an application of Reinthal & Newman of New York, for a temporary injunction against the publishers of "Dawn."

The New York firm last week brought action against the Pacific Moulding and Frame Company, R. J. Traub and others, charging infringement of the coypright on the Maxfield Parrish picture, asserted to be the most popular of that artist's paintings. It was alleged "Dawn" had been painted in such close imitation of "Daybreak" as to deceive the ordinary purchaser. The plaintiffs averred they would be damaged to the extent of $400,000 if the defendants were permitted to place "Dawn" on the market.

Affidavits made by Los Angeles art critics and dealers were submitted for the defense by Attorney Joseph L. Lewinson to show that "Dawn" does not resemble "Daybreak." It was shown by the affidavits also that prints such as those in controversy are advertised by publishers to dealers rather than to the general public and that not more than 3 per cent of them are sold by title. It was shown likewise that the name of the artist does not show on most of the pictures as they are sold after being framed.

Judge James held that actual sales of "Dawn" would be necessary before there could be a showing as to the damages asserted by the plaintiffs.

Germany smoked 11,000,000,000 more cigarettes last year than it did ten years before.

CITY HALL GHOST HAS LONG WALK

Checks Given 2090 in Line as Employees Get Money for Admission Day Fiesta

"The ghost walked" yesterday at the City Hall. In other words, it was pay day for 15,320 city employees, and from 8 a.m. until closing time at noon, 2090 municipal workers—men and women—received their pay checks at the City Auditor's office. From early morning until noon, two long lines of employees extended from the pay window inside the City Hall through the corridor down the City Hall steps and to the sidewalk.

City employees are paid twice monthly, and usually most of them receive their checks or "demands," as they are called, at the point where they work, but as Tuesday is Admission Day, more than 2090 of them called at the City Hall yesterday for their money as their checks would not reach them until after the holiday. Deputy City Auditors Thomas Hanafan and Arnold Meehan rapidly handed out the checks even until after closing time until there were no more employees waiting for their money, disbursing nearly $200,000 during the morning.

The total pay roll of the city is now in excess of $1,377,869 a month for all departments, except the schools, which is handled independently by the Board of Education. The annual pay roll for the fiscal year, which started on July 1, will be, as fixed by the budget, $13,242,000, but this is being increased by additional appropriations given the departments. Most of the men who received their pay checks at the City Hall yesterday were laborers and other employees of the City Engineer's department.

ASKS ANNEXATION

Holabird Addition Files Petition in Plea for Election

The City Council has received a petition from residents of Holabird Addition near the city of Vernon asking that a special election be called for the purpose of voting on the question of annexation to Los Angeles. The petition may be sent back to the district for recirculation so that it can include participation by the district in any interest or sinking fund charges on the $16,000,000 power bonds. The Power Bureau has agreed to pay these charges from revenues, but the law requires that annexation petitions must include all bond issues authorized by the voters.

SENATOR OUT TO BEAT HUNT

Mulford Winsor Announces Support for Osborn in Arizona Race for Governorship

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Sept. 6.—Mulford Winsor, State Senator from Yuma county and president of the last Senate, has announced himself not only for the nomination of Sidney P. Osborn for the Governorship, but as opposed to the continued political aspirations of Gov. Hunt.

Winsor used to be a very close political and personal associate of the Governor's, for whom he even was private secretary for a term, before appointment at Hunt's hands to be a member of the State Land Commission. But it's all off now.

SAYS ETHICS VIOLATED

In a letter addressed to A. S. Mills, a prominent local Democrat, Mr. Winsor praises Osborn, an Arizonan by birth, as "honest, courageous and energetic and well-endowed." But most of the communication concern's the Senator's former chief, whom he calls presumptuous in seeking a fifth term, in defiance of Democratic ethics, this considered "a positive step toward monarchy and absolutism," leading toward creation of "a political machine, with its corruption and corrupting influence."

The Governor is declared to dictate the most petty appointments, "a policy in which political adherence is the test of qualification . . . vesting in the titular heads of institutions neither authority nor discretion nor the possibility of maintaining discipline." The Governor's course is said to know "neither chivalry, generosity nor sportsmanship—not even common fairness."

ACCUSED AS DEMAGOGUE

Hunt's reason for wanting a fifth term, "to save the State" in defeating the Colorado River compact, is called "pure demagoguery, on a par with his appeal of two years ago that he was running 'to save the Constitution.'" It is pointed out that it will be up to the Legislature to save the State, that, "Whatever view one may have of the compact, Gov. Hunt's capitalization of it under the false pretense that his candidacy is essential to its defeat is humiliating to his real friends."

Reference at length is made to the Governor's professed "neutrality" on the compact at the time of the last Legislature, to his advocacy of the Diamond Canyon power enterprise and, latterly, to the high-line canal scheme, one that would have to destroy the Diamond Creek dam site were it ever successful.

SURVEYS CITED

Upon the Governor is placed the burden of directing an eighteen-day State survey "of this fabulous $1,000,000,000 undertaking," with present advocacy of "throwing away the people's money on a further survey of the high-line canal," after ignoring reports of the trusted La Rue and many other engineers "that the proposed high-line canal was wholly infeasible and unworthy of serious consideration."

The Governor's course is called "wavering, wiggling, wobbly, uninformed and indeterminate," with respect to the entire question of the Colorado River. He is termed "an unstable savior," with "an inordinate hunger and thirst for perpetual official place and power," who even has used the hoof-and-mouth epidemic "as a poor hook upon which to hang a fifth-term candidacy." Winsor caustically adds: "There will doubtless be hoof-and-mouth epidemics when the Governor is no more—then, I presume, the deluge."

DIVORCEE IS HELD AFTER AUTO CHASE

Rich Woman and Chauffeur Charged With Intoxication, Speeding, et Cetera

Mrs. Ida May Zimmerman, wealthy divorcee, and her chauffeur, Ralph Morales, were arrested yesterday by Constable Way of Whittier on five charges ranging from Wright Act violation to breaking glass on the highway and speeding.

Their bail was set at $500 each by Justice Swayne of Whittier and their hearing set for tomorrow.

It is charged that Mrs. Zimmerman and her chauffeur were speeding through Whittier early yesterday morning when they collided with another machine driven by an oil worker, wrecking the second car. They sped on, it is charged, and Constable Way, who happened to be passing the spot at the time, gave chase.

The officer stated that while he was pursuing the heavy sedan in which Mrs. Zimmerman was riding five bottles were flung from the machine onto the pavement, where they broke. Constable Way finally overtook the Zimmerman machine and placed the woman and her chauffeur under arrest on charges of failing to stop and render aid after an accident, breaking glass on the highway, driving while intoxicated, speeding and violation of the Wright Act.

Mrs. Zimmerman was divorced from her husband, Dr. A. Zimmerman, about a year ago and received $500,000 in the property settlement.

DROWNING FAKE TRIO CONVICTED

Court Permits Wiley and Wife to File Petition for Probation; Hughes Freed

John Wiley, Belle Wiley, his wife, and W. N. George yesterday were found guilty by a jury of a conspiracy to defraud an insurance company. H. J. Hughes, accused with them of staging a fake drowning in order to collect insurance, was acquitted of any part in the fraud.

During the trial before Judge Hardy, both the Wileys and Hughes took the witness stand in their own defense and laid the blame for the affair on George, agent for the company with whom Wiley's life was insured. George was the one, they said, who made the proposal of the scheme and who worked out the details of the fake drowning at Catalina when Wiley was to be apparently lost over the side of a speed boat.

Taking some stock in their testimony, the jury, when they found the Wileys guilty, recommended that leniency be shown them. Accordingly they were allowed to file an application for probation which will be heard on the 15th inst. No recommendation was made in George's case but in order to give all defendants the same chance Judge Hardy allowed him to enter a request for probation.

Deputy District-Attorney Jordan prosecuted the case against the four. They were arrested by Investigators Reimer, Ramsey and King of the District-Attorney's office on informaion given by Capt. Joseph McAfee, owner of the speed boat, who was offered a share of the money if he would aid in carrying out the plan.

MAN TAKEN IN STILL SEIZURE IS MISSING

FORMER DRY OFFICIAL HAD BEEN FREED ON HIS PROMISE TO APPEAR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Sept. 6.—Phil L. Lacy is wanted by United States Marshal George Mauk, but appears to have vanished. He was taken in a raid by city police and, it is said, was found to have been operating, at his home, the most elaborate distilling plant ever seen here, with plumbing connections that turned all waste into the city sewer.

Importance attaches to his case through the fact that, a few years ago, he was a member of the staff of the Arizona prohibition director, then suspended by former Director Cassidy, although asserted to have been sustained by very influential friends. After his arrest, according to the police, he was turned over to a Prohibition Service official, who released him on promise that he would appear for arraignment. But he departed.

THIS WEEK'S LAUGH REEL IS TRIUMPH

Film Jokes to be Shown at California Theater Are Among Best Yet Offered

"Local Laugh" contributors of Southern California have scored another triumph of humor in the seventeenth edition of the "Local Laughs" reel appearing this week at the California Theater, Los Angeles. That Times readers and film-goers know what's what in the way of fun is apparent by the hearty laughter that greets each showing of The Times comedy film.

Fifteen cash prizes await the local talent, humorists who submit the best jokes each week. The selected jokes appear on the film together with the names and addresses of contributors. Five dollars is given as first prize; $3 and $2 as second and third prizes, respectively. Twelve other awards of $1 each round out the weekly contribution.

Contributors are asked to keep their jokes within thirty words, as none longer can be used on the screen. Any number of jokes may be sent in at one time, and as often as desired.

Jokes may be written on coupons, one of which appears in The Times each day, or they may be written on other paper. Care should be taken to place name and address on each separate sheet. Write on one side of paper only.

The guards were Patrolmen George Daniels and Frank Conkey and Deputy City Clerk Joseph Hopper. The bonds were in five boxes, weighing a total of 800 pounds, and were in denominations of $1000 each. The City Treasurer will arrive in New York next Wednesday.

ARE WE SOON TO BECOME A RACE OF BALDHEADED MEN?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN

Hair and Scalp Specialist Who Has Been Associated With the May Co. the Past Ten Years Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that only about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies, and when it is nearly gone, and the roots are dead, he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

Prof. Austin says the use of dandruff cures, mange cures and hair tonics without proper advice is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with your HAIR, and then tells you what to do for the trouble.

"Why don't some tire manufacturer actually wager his tire will outrun any other?"

That's the famous C-T-C guarantee run a C-T-C opposite any other tire—a new tire free if the C-T-C fails to run the farthest

MOST motorists know that claims don't mean much until backed up by the manufacturer's good faith. So we say—make this test: On one wheel of your car place a new C-T-C Tire. At the same time place on the opposite wheel any other tire of the same size. Then run them that way. The C-T-C will outrun the other tire. If it fails—we will give you a new one free.

That's a fair enough offer, isn't it?

We can make this guarantee because the C-T-C Tire is a tougher, sturdier tire—made for long mileage—able to withstand rough usage. It is proving its superiority in the every-day driving of thousands of Pacific Coast motorists.

In 1923 a group of engineers from the largest tire plants in the East established on the Pacific Coast a factory to produce a tire representing their combined life-time experience. That tire is C-T-C! From the start drivers have "had good luck" with it!

C-T-C's are made of materials passing the highest tests for quality—constructed by hand—cured on air. Their heavy super non-skid tread adds wear—and safety! C-T-C's never have been and never will be cheapened to meet a price!

The sooner you put C-T-C's on your car the sooner will you get long mileage, and safer, more comfortable driving! Drive up today and let us show you C-T-C's. We'll issue a numbered certificate by which you can make the famous C-T-C tire-against-tire test. Ask us about it!

COUNTRY'S EYES ON MAINE POLLS

State Election Looked to as Nation's Barometer

Klan Issue Gives Democrats Cause for Hope

Both Sides Confident After Bitter Campaign

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

AUGUSTA (Me.) Sept. 6.—The early State election in Maine, closely watched throughout the country in years when a President is chosen as indicative of the temper of voters, will be held on Monday after a most unusual as well as most aggressively fought campaign which ended tonight with predictions by both Democrats and Republicans that their candidates would win.

Confronted with the Republican prognostication of victory, the Democratic leaders said "wait and see." They appear to be waiting the verdict at the polls on Monday with an unusual degree of confidence that their candidate for Governor, at least, will be elected.

The Democrats have concentrated all their fighting strength in an attempt to bring about the election of their candidate for Governor, William W. Pattangall. He was active in the fight at the Democratic National Convention for an anti-Ku Klux Klan plank in the platform. He has made his fight for the Governorship exclusively on the Klan issue accusing his Republican rival, State Senator Ralph O. Brewster, of being the candidate of the Klan and contending that should Senator Brewster win control, the State government would pass into the hands of that fraternity which openly supported him for the nomination in the Republican primaries.

While the Republican predictions of victory may have been inspired by past performances in Presidential years and better party organizations, the Democratic hope is based on the effectiveness of the Klan issue. The party leaders and candidates profess to have been encouraged greatly by the victory of "Ma" Ferguson in Texas.

Mrs. Hortense Ward, one of the managers in the campaign for Mrs. Ferguson's nomination has been campaigning for Mr. Pattangall during the closing week of the campaign. Her views regarding the outcome, after comparing conditions here and in the Lone Star State conform with those expressed by the Democratic party leaders.

Local leaders express the belief that party lines will be obliterated in the election on Monday. They assert that interest will center in the Klan issue and that when the votes have been counted it will prove to have been a potential factor for uniting behind the Democratic candidate for Governor, not only voters of all classes proscribed by the Klan but a host of others who are opposed to religious and racial intolerance.

CLOSE PRIMARY RACE

In the Republican primaries where it was the dominant issue it brought unparalleled dissension and created a cleavage which judging from talks with many Republicans of prominence, has not wholly disappeared. The result in the primaries was so close that it required a recount of a portion of the vote to determine that the candidate favored by the Klan had carried off the victory.

While trained impartial observers voice the opinion that Maine will run true to form and record a Republican victory on Monday in the fight for the Governorship, the Republicans during the last week of the campaign have been battling with their backs to the wall. It has been an uphill fight from the beginning and the party leaders here make little effort to conceal the fact, even in the midst of their predictions of victory.

They have fought their campaign on State and national issues, adopting as their slogan in the Governorship fight, "A vote for Brewster is a vote for Coolidge and Dawes." With the Democrats visibly crowding them, the Republican National Committee has sent a dozen prominent speakers, both men and women, into the State to aid in the election of the Republican candidates. Senator Oscar W. Underwood, whose utterances have been confined almost entirely to the Klan issue, is the only outside speaker of first prominence whose assistance the Democrats have sought.

With the exception of a half-way denunciation of the Klan by Gen. Charles G. Dawes, the Republican candidate for Vice-President, in a speech delivered in this city and a letter from the gubernatorial nominee, denying that he was under any pledge or obligation to the Klan, the Republicans have made no mention in the course of their general campaign of the Klan issue.

A Governor, a United States Senator and four representatives in Congress will be voted for in the election on Monday. Presidential electors will be chosen when the other States vote for President in November. With the exception of Senator Brewster, all the Republican candidates are up for reelection. Senator Brewster appears to be the only candidate regarding whose fate the Republican leaders feel uneasy.

LIST OF CANDIDATES

The following are the candidates whose names will appear on the ballot: For Governor: Ralph O. Brewster, Republican; William R. Pattangall, Democrat; United States Senator: Bert M. Fernald, Republican; Fulton J. Redman, Democrat. Representatives: Carroll Beedy, Wallace H. White, John Nelson and Ira G. Hersey, Republicans, and William W. Ingraham, W. G. McIntyre, Leon O. Teddetts and Clinton C. Stevens, Democrats.

In his final election forecast, George L. Emery, chairman of the Republican State Committee, expressed belief all Republican candidates for major offices would be elected. He spoke with some degree of reservation regarding the gubernatorial candidate, admitting Senator Brewster would run behind his ticket, that the Democrats had put up a fight of unprecedented vigor and aggressiveness for Mr. Pattangall, and that a silent vote of unusual proportions had so handicapped the Republican workers engaged in making the canvass that a forecast including figures was out of the question.

City Greets Its Representative

Capt. Fredericks

Congressman Welcomed at Train by Republican Leaders

FREDERICKS SEES VICTORY

Tells Delegation at Station Here That Sentiment for Coolidge is Overwhelming

"What Roosevelt and Johnson couldn't do when they were at the height of their popularity, a sick man from Wisconsin and a lawyer from Montana can't even start to do," Congressman Fredericks declared last night to the large crowd of friends that welcomed him upon his arrival in Los Angeles.

When Congressman Fredericks alighted from the train, he found himself in the center of a cheering crowd of members of the Chamber of Commerce, the Republican Central Committee and the Tenth Congressional District Republican Committee. He came to Los Angeles directly from Washington, D. C., where he made a brief visit after returning from his European trip.

Before the cheering died down, Joe Crail, chairman of the Tenth Congressional District Republican Committee, began a speech which was loudly cheered. He welcomed the Congressman back to Los Angeles and promised victory at the coming election. R. W. Pridham, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Charles H. Treat, chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, extended the welcome of their organizations. California will make her mark in the election for Coolidge, Dawes and Fredericks, Treat declared.

NO FEAR OF RESULTS

When the cheering that followed the welcoming speeches died down, Congressman Fredericks replied. His face was wreathed in smiles as he alighted from the train and he was jostled about the station platform as members of the welcoming delegations struggled to get near enough to shake his hand.

After telling how glad he was to return to Los Angeles, Congressman Fredericks said that the Republican party need have no fear of the results of the coming election.

"I haven't been in California for some time," he declared, "but I have been most everywhere else and in every place I have found an overwhelming sentiment for the cool, calm, safe, sane, deliberate and positive state of affairs represented by Calvin Coolidge. He has surrounded himself with such men as Curtis Wilbur, Hughes, Hoover, Mellon and Dawes, men of stability and of the type the country has realized she needs. California, of course, feels the same way."

SPECIAL WELCOME

Beside directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Republican county and Congressional district organizations, a special committee, comprising the following, mingled with the friends of Congressman Fredericks who were gathered at the train to see him arrive:

Watt L. Moreland, H. W. Louis, George Pepperdine, F. L. S. Harmon, Howard E. Miller, E. G. Hart, W. H. Pierce, Ford A. Carpenter, Carl Thorpe, A. B. Boswell, F. S. Coates, H. Bigelow, N. C. PRINCE TOLD TO "MOVE ON"

Policeman at Steeplechase Fails to Recognize Distinguished Spectator; Suede Shoes are Rage

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Entering Belmont Park unheralded this afternoon and avoiding the crowd, the Prince of Wales succeeded so well in achieving the status of a private person as to get a rough order from a park policeman to move on.

Arriving after the first race, the Prince crossed the track and took a position near the last jump of the steeplechase course. There was so little fuss in his vicinity that Policeman Timothy Brogan and another park policeman came running after him.

"Hey, hey, you there," shouted Brogan. "Get out of that. Get back out of there. You can't go there."

The Prince turned to Joseph E. Widener, who was near him.

"Must I get out?" he asked.

"I think they'll let you stay here," said Widener.

Enlightenment soon came to Brogan, and he backed off, muttering apologies.

The Prince remained in his position about one foot from the steeplechase track. Through his field glasses he watched with intense excitement while the Corinthian steeplechase started.

The Prince again wore the same gray check suit, giving another destructive blow to the myth of his endless wardrobe. He wore also the same gray hat turned up on one side and down on another. There were signs today that he had set one fashion. He has been wearing brown suede shoes. It was asserted today that there was not a male walking shoe of this unfinished leather in the United States before the Prince set foot here, but today brown suede shoes were visible on many a foot. Fashionable boot makers are said to have been rushed with orders to produce this kind of footwear at lightning speed.

The Prince missed the fox hunt of the Meadow Brook Country Club this morning because he preferred sleep.

He was sleeping late because he had not turned in until 4:30 a.m. He rose later in the morning, had a swim at the Burden pool and then drove over to the Grace Field, where he called for a pony and rode about the field, practicing alone.

While the Prince was amusing himself at polo there was excitement at the Burden estate. A wiry, weather-beaten man with a drooping helmet, a stringy beard, a colored handkerchief around his neck and a large bundle on his back, had presented himself at the gates on the estate and asked to see the Prince. He wanted to see him personally. He said that all he wanted was the Prince's autograph.

The man was Joseph F. Mikulec, the most famous autograph collector in the world.

"But the Prince can't be bothered by autograph collectors," he was told.

"But I am different," said Mikulec. "You can see I am not an ordinary autograph collector."

"But the Prince never gives autographs."

"Yes, he does."

"Why do you say that, my man?"

"Because he gave me one already several years ago."

"Then you should be satisfied."

Mikulec sighed and started to walk to the station.

"But I'll get him yet," he said as he started. "I'll get him yet."

The Prince was the guest of Clarence H. Mackay tonight at a dinner and dance at Harbor Hill, Mr. Mackay's country home at Roslyn, L. I.

LUIS FIRPO IS GRANTED FREEDOM

Bull of the Pampas Gets Out of Jail on Bail; to Meet Wills Thursday

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Argentine boxer, Luis Angel Firpo, though in the clutches of the law on the ground that he exceeded the legal limits of the United States in giving rein to his romantic affections, is free to fight Harry Wills, the American negro, at Boyle's Thirty Acres next Thursday night. He is loose on $1000 bail furnished out of a glowing roll of $25,000 in Liberty bonds displayed before Immigration Commissioner Henry H. Curran by a representative of Tex Rickard, boxing promoter.

Firpo was summoned to appear through his counsel, Hyman Bushel, after the Department of Labor at Washington had granted the request of Commissioner Curran for authority to issue a warrant on the charge that Firpo had invited the Senorita Blanca Picart to visit this country at his expense a year ago without including the statement, "object, matrimony" in the invitation. Also that he lied on his recent arival when he said his acquaintance with the young woman was merely casual.

Hyman Bushel asked for two weeks' delay in consideration of the suffering of other clients who are in the tombs on various charges waiting for him to get them out. Commissioner Curran sharply and sternly refused any such "undue delay" and peremptorily fixed the next hearing for the 15th inst., four days after the fight date.

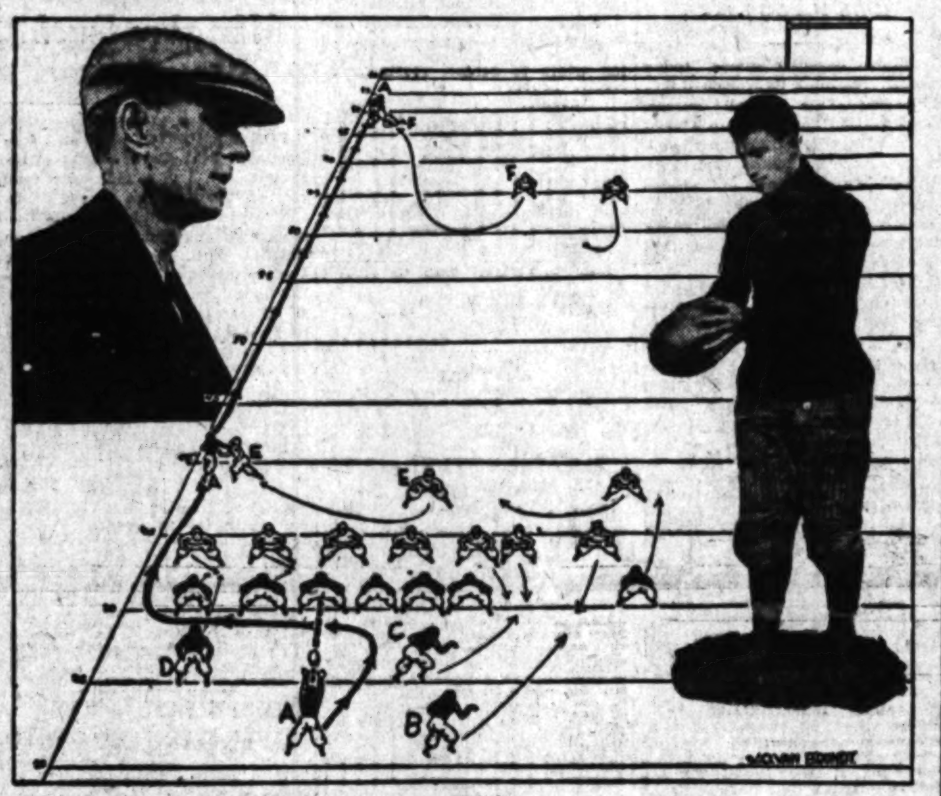
Mr. Murphy said he was going to prosecute the case in the Police Court but he failed to put in an appearance. Instead of coming to court Murphy had a busy few minutes at the Imperial Hotel. There he stepped up to Lorenz and floored him with a right hook to the eye. Essick, seeing his secretary fall, leaped into action and in turn floored Murphy with a resounding whack to the jaw.

This afternoon Murphy, who starred in yesterday's game, was on the bench but Lorenz was absent from the ball park. Just what the relation is between the fight and the police incident no one seems to know.



How One Mind Dominated Twenty-one Friends and Foes

The man in a cap, at the left, is Gil Dobie, Cornell coach. The player inset on the right of the diagram is Walter Eckersall (copyright, Paul Thompson) described by this coach as "the greatest quarterback that ever ran back a kick" and hero of the play that Dobie tells of. How Eckersall did it is shown by the diagram, drawn especially by George Byrnes of the Colgate football department. Key to the play: A (Eckersall) received the ball and feigned a kick into Wisconsin territory; B (Right Half Walker) and C (Fullback Bezdek) charged in to block the Wisconsin efforts to break through. D (Left Half Detray) shifted over to back up the left side. Black line shows path taken by Eckersall in his surprise dash around left end, past E (Wisconsin's right halfback,) whom he stiff-armed, and to the Wisconsin 30-yard line, where he was downed by F (Quarterback Meisener.) This same formation was repeated by Eckersall in the four big Chicago advances of the game: first as just described; secondly under exactly similar conditions in the second half when he made a 40-yard run; thirdly, a little later, when he varied the strategy by playing close back of center and, after feigning a pass to Bezdek, ran [illegible] yards around end and placed the ball in a position for a kick; and lastly, when he kicked goal after fooling the Badgers into thinking he had called the punt formation for the purpose of cloaking an end run.

GIL DOBIE GIVES PALM TO ECKERSALL IN DISCUSSING SUPREME GRID STRATEGIES

This is the second of a series of articles describing great football strategies told by the leading coaches of the country in interviews with J. P. Glass and George Byrnes. Succeeding numbers will include stories by Stagg, Andy Smith, Heisman, Fisher, Folwell, Glenn Warner, Yost and others.

Chapter II

As told by Gilmore Dobie, Head Coach, Cornell

Many years ago I saw a crucial Western Conference game. Two elevens battled to a finish in a slippery morass of mud. One of these teams outclassed the other in the sheer ruthlessness of its power; but that other possessed, among the eleven brains that manipulated the separate cogs of its machinery, one brain touched by the magic gold of pure genius. This mind not only dominated the ten that worked with it, but also the eleven ranging themselves desperately against it—minds which ached with desire to destroy, to annihilate, groping futilely for means of so doing.

Nowadays you hear a lot about psychology. In those days, outside of college classrooms, it was not such a fluent subject of discussion. Not so many experts had discovered the pecuniary advantages of correspondence courses in the science. But if any honest-to-goodness psychologist could have dropped in on the Chicago-Wisconsin football game at Madison, Wis., October 22, 1905, he would have witnessed a practical demonstration of it that would have left him humble.

For Walter Eckersall, the greatest quarterback that ever ran back a kick, was pitting his quick-thinking, analytical brain against the bulk and strength of the most powerful aggregation in the conference that year, and the result was a lesson in psychology that never has been beaten.

Alonzo A. Stagg, Maroon coach, had taken to Madison a team as well coached as it was possible for it to be. It was equipped with the finest ensemble of plays the "Old Fox" could devise. But the condition of the rain-swept field favored the huskier Badgers and it is probable that without Eckersall to execute his strategies they would have failed.

I wish that some one could write the story of that game as it should be written—not as it looked from the stands, but as it really developed in the shoulder-to-shoulder impacts of the sruggle. It would be the greatest gridiron epic ever set down, outrivalling fiction with its chronicle of audacious, brilliant achievement. Others may think differently, but I hold that the tactics used against Wisconsin by Eckersall that drenched October afternoon were the finest in the history of the game. There never was anything like it before; very likely there will never be anything like it again.

A PLOT LIKE A TALE'S

I sat in the stands, a scout for the Minnesota eleven. A student of the game myself, the struggle had developed far past its initial stages before I caught the drift of the campaign which the ingenious lieutenant of the crafty Stagg was launching against the Badgers. Then I perceived his intent and sat back to witness the advancing stages of a plot as artistically and as infallibly developed as any conception in the pages of Edgar Allan Poe.

Before the game Wisconsin had been the favorite. Its chances were considered to have been bettered by the pouring rain, which made a quagmire of the field, a new one. Surely the speed of Eckersall, the great running quarterback, would be lost in the mud and Chicago would be deprived of its greatest asset.

But when a great genius like the Maroon star is concerned you always must reckon with some hidden reserve which he has ready to tap for an especially needed occasion. Practically everyone that braved the weeping skies believed that his efficiency would be crippled. And yet—well, Eckersall was Eckersall!

Nor had the game been under way two minutes before he proved this all-important fact. Tucking the ball under his arm, in one dazzlingly supreme strategy he stood the Wisconsin eleven on its heads and dashed down the field for a fifty-yard run.

Would anybody save Eckersall have attempted the play which produced that run? Judge for yourself.

Here was the situation: Chicago had the ball on its own thirty-yard line, but so far toward the

RICHARDS DOWNS JOHNSTON

Youthful Olympic Champ Defeats California Star in East-West Tennis Matches

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

FOREST HILLS (N. Y.) Sept. 6.—Despite the heroic work of Vincent Richards, who scored a brilliant victory over William M. Johnston, the East could gain no better than an even break today in its annual intersectional tennis battle with the West. The question of supremacy, held by the East in 1923, was left undecided when the rival teams evenly divided four singles and two doubles encounters.

Richards's triumph over Johnston, 6-0, 6-4, thrilled a gallery of 5000 that braved weather more suitable for football than tennis. The young Olympic champion, displaying the same dashing form that forced William T. Tilden to five sets in the national championships last week, swept Johnston off his feet with a furious, spectacular net attack. It was the first time that Richards had conquered the former national champion, but it was an impressive victory and may be the determining factor in their rivalry for the position of runner-up in the 1924 national ranking to Tilden.

Richards shared in the other outstanding victory of the afternoon when paired with his Olympic doubles championship partner, Francis T. Hunter, he vanquished the national champions, Robert and Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4. Hunter scored the East's third triumph when he overcame Robert Kinsey in the singles, 11-2, 6-2.

MEHLHORN WESTERN CHAMPION

Wins Open Title With Big Margin; Chick Evans Has Best Amateur Score

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—William E. Mehlhorn of St. Louis today shook off a hoodoo which has pursued him in the western open championship and won the classic title with a total of 293 at the Calumet County Club. He led his nearest competitor, Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, former Michigan and Canadian open champion, by eight shots, making a colorless finish as the other leaders in the first two days' play fell off in the third round, leaving Bill with a lead of four shots over Al Watrous and Eddie Held, the St. Louis amateur, at the end of fifty-four holes of play.

The new champion, who succeeds Jock Hutchison, played good golf over a course of championship caliber, as is indicated by the run of the scores. Mehlhorn himself named 292 as the total necessary to win, but he was the only player to cut under the 300 mark.

He had only two sixes in his card, those coming on the first day. In the seventy-two holes of play he had twelve birdies and sixteen holes over par.

Chick Evans, who led the amateurs with 302, might have finished second, but for a bit of bad judgment at the third hole in the morning. He put his second in the mud at the edge of the creek and was in a quandary if he could drop back and lose a shot. Some one told him a player had been disqualified for doing this and so he tried to play from the mud and put his ball into the creek. He took five to reach the green and three putts gave him a big eight. There was nothing to prevent him from playing a provisional ball also and then getting a ruling from the committee, but this he failed to do and it cost him second place.

DECIDE CITY TITLES TODAY

All Champions Win Way to Final Round of Play

Godshall, Ferrandini Meet in Singles Battle

Miss Williams in Try for Mrs. Henry's Crown

After a day of few upsets but lots of tough matches, play in the Los Angeles city tennis tournament has reached the final rounds and the city net titles will be decided today on the courts of the Los Angeles Tennis Club at Melrose and Cole. All playing-through title holders have survived and seem to have reasonably good chances of retaining their 1923 championships. Harold Godshall, Mrs. W. M. Henry and Miss Marion Williams, in fact, each have a chance to win three titles with very little reason to think that anybody will emerge a triple winner, as Godshall did last year.

Godshall this time must beat his partner Tom Ferrandini, who has been getting better and better in the most approved Coue style and it a rather husky favorite to remove the coronet from Godshall's blond head and place it upon his own. Godshall defeated Ralph Sindorf 7-5, 1-6, 6-3 after Sindorf had led at 5-2 in the first set. Ferrandini beat Jim Davies 6-4, 6-4, Jim being a little off and Ferrandini playing well.

Mrs. W. M. Henry, defending title holder, will meet Miss Marion Williams, Southern California champion, in the finals for the women's titles, both players having already advanced to the finals with very little effort. It is the first meeting between the two in several seasons. They also meet in the finals of the women's doubles, and at the mixed doubles. Miss Williams and Mrs. Royce play Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Sullivan, while Miss Williams and Godshall play Mrs. Henry and Davies.

Godshall and Ferrandini, 1923 champs, worked their way into the final round of the men's doubles and will meet the winner of the match between Sinderf and Warren, last year's runners-up, and Davies and Reinke, a new combination. Godshall and Ferrandini have won in straight sets, while all the other teams have been running into a lot of grief.

In the junior singles Thomas will meet the winner of the match between Craig and Doig, while in the boys' singles young Mr. Bancroft of San Diego, will tangle with Dworking, who upset the beans by beating Ted Easton. Following is the schedule of play for today.

10 a.m.—Court 1, Reinke and Davies vs. Sinderf and Warren. Court 2, Craig vs. J. Doig.
11 a.m.—Court 1, finals women's doubles.
12 m.—Court 2, Bancroft vs. Dworking.
2 p.m.—Court 1, Mrs. Henry vs. Miss Marion Williams. Court 2, finals junior doubles. Court 3, Miss [illegible] vs. Miss [illegible].
3 p.m.—Court 1, Godshall vs. Ferrandini. Court 3, Thomas vs. winner Craig vs. Doig.
4:30 p.m.—Court 1, finals men's doubles.
5 p.m.—Court 1, finals mixed doubles.

Joe Schlocker and Jordan in Star Ring Tilt

Joe Schlocker of Los Angeles, and Johnnie Jordan, the classy Oakland lightweight, have been selected by Matchmaker Doc Bill Moffett to hold down the main event spot on the Wilmington Athletic Club program next Wednesday night.

It was Schlocker, who, at the last event was awarded a decision over Sailor Ashmore, and he really needs no introduction to the thousands of boxing fans in this section. Moffett has selected as his opponent, however, a hard foe, in the person of Johnnie Jordan.

The semifinal will make the fans dizzy with excitement, as there we have Billie Young of Los Angeles, and Willie O'Brien of Hollywood, at 135 pounds. Young has fought in main events at San Pedro, always draws big crowds, and has battled Larry Murphy, Jimmie Hackley, Sammy Santos, Johnnie Adams and others.

In the special event Sailor George Etsel of San Pedro, and Joe Oakes of Redondo, at 118 pounds, will show the fans what boxing really is. Etsel, it will be remembered was in the sensational bout with Pico Ramies recently at the Wilmington Athletic Club, and while the decision went to Pico Ramies, many present stated that they thought Etsel won it, or easily should have been awarded a draw with Ramies. Other bouts follow:

Billy Afoa of San Pedro vs. Leo Morrissey of Long Beach, at 148 pounds.

Eddie Brown of Long Beach vs. Cave Man Carlson of Hollywood, 145 pounds.

Georgie Lopez of Compton vs. Young Bellamy of San Pedro at 118 pounds.

FASTEST HUMAN SHOWS HEELS TO AL LECONEY

California Flyer Beats His Recent Conqueror in Both Events by Sensational Leg Work

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WEST ORANGE (N. J.) Sept. 6.—Charles Paddock of Los Angeles today reinforced his claim to the title of "fastest human" by equaling the world's records for the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes in winning the two events at the National Senior A.A.U. championships under direction of the Newark Athletic Club.

The coast flier nosed Loren Murchison and Al Leconey at the tape in the century in 9 3-5, equaling the record held jointly by himself and others.

A stiff wind backed the efforts of the sprinters. In the 220-yard dash, however, there was no wind and Paddock left Murchison four yards behind with an amazing burst in the last thirty yards. His time, 20 4-5 seconds, equaled the mark held exclusively by himself.

Illinois A.C. won the team honors with 43 points when Tom Lieb and Gus Pope took first and second places in the discus, the final event. New York A.C. was second with 32, Newark A. C., third with 31 and Boston A.A., fourth with 20.

Only five of the fifteen national champions who competed today were successful in defending their honors. They were Tom Lieb in the discus throw, Fred Tootell in the hammer; De Hart Hubbard in the broad jump, E. F. Meyers in the pole vault and Mat McGrath in the fifty-six-pound weight. In other field events Ralph Hills took Orville Wanzer's shotput title, H. Martin won the hop, step and jump, which was not defended by Hubbard. John Leyden captured the javelin throw, not defended by H. Hoffman, and Fred Juday furnished a real upset by winning over LeRoy Brown, the champion and Dick Landon, former titleholder.

ICE SKATING LOOP FOR SCHOOL ATHLETES

With the start of the school season the Los Angeles Ice Skating Association, 1557 North Western avenue, is making a drive to get the support of high school and university students for their proposed ice rink.

The association intends to establish, if possible, hockey leagues for both the high schools and the colleges.

The plans and specifications for the association's building have been placed before the city officials for their official approval. The building will be 140 by 220 feet. The approval of these plans leaves only the assurance of patronage before Los Angeles has an ice rink.

National Race Promises a Pulsating Finish

First Three Enter the Last Quarter Lapped

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Hanging to its thread-like lead in the face of the fast pace set by the onrushing Pirates and Dodgers, New York still heads the National League parade by the narrow margin of five points. Pittsburg is in second place, one point ahead of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Giants won and lost against the Phillies, while Brooklyn, after stretching its winning streak to fifteen straight games, dropped the second game of a double-header to Boston, and as a consequence was lapped by the Pirates, who won twice from the Cardinals.

The teams stand:

Team—	W.	L.	P.c.	Games to play.
New York	81	53	.605	20
Pittsburg	78	52	.600	24
Brooklyn	82	55	.599	17

Tomorrow New York invades Brooklyn for a single game at Ebbets Field. On Monday Brooklyn will repay this visit to the Polo Grounds.

ABOUT SAME

The American League battle remains virtually the same, New York, Washington and Detroit all winning today. The standing in the American League:

Team—	W.	L.	P.c.	Games to play.
Washington	78	55	.587	21
New York	76	57	.571	21
Detroit	74	62	.544	18

It is impossible to figure Detroit out of the running now, owing to the importance of six games in which Tigers meet their closest rivals at Navin Field in Detroit.

SPLIT EVEN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—Philadelphia split even with the Giants today, winning the first game, 8 to 7, in ten innings and losing the second, 16 to 14. In the second a triple play engineered by Frisch in the ninth inning put a sudden halt to a threatening rally. Scores:

GRAB BOTH

PITTSBURG, Sept. 6.—The Pirates took both ends of a double-header from St. Louis today, 5 to 2 and 12 to 5, in the closing games of the series. The first game was a duel between Yde and Stuart, but the second game saw six pitchers in action. Meadows was retired in the middle of the third inning and Pfeffer, who succeeded him, held the Cardinals runless for the balance of the game. Haines, who opened the game for St. Louis, was taken out in the first inning, but his withdrawal didn't stop the Pirates' batting streak. Cuyler hit a home run in the first game and Maranville hit another in the second. Scores:

MULCAHY BLANKS ANGELS

Young Salt Lake Hurler Pitches Bees to 4-to-0 Victory; Dumovich Rapped Off Mound

BY ROBERT E. RAY

Young Phil Mulcahy, Bill Lane's pet pitcher whom he picked up from the Oakland sandlots, was in rare form yesterday and shut out the Angels, 4 to 0, with six scattered hits. Nick Dumovich started for the locals, but lasted only two innings, the Bees driving him to cover by scoring all their four runs in the second frame.

"Buck" Ramsey, who took Dumovich's place at the start of the third, twirled wonderful ball during the remaining seven innings, holding the Bees to five safeties and striking out seven men. Mulcahy also fanned seven batters.

Yesterday's defeat shoved the Angels back to sixth place as the Beavers beat out Vernon once more. The series now stands, three to two in favor of the Krugmen with the outcome of today's double bill to decide it.

NOT MUCH TO SAY

There isn't a whole lot to tell about the game for the Bees did all the damage in the second inning and after that it was just a good pitching duel between Mulcahy and Ramsey. Cedric Durst kept up his hefty hitting, driving out a triple and a single in four times at bat and bringing his total hits for the five games with Salt Lake up to twelve. Ray Grimes and Wally Hood, the Seraphs' two sluggers, were not able to do much to Mulcahy's offerings. Hood got one hit, but Grimes failed to connect for a bingle, striking out his last two times at bat.

Both Mulcahy and Dumovich retired their opponents runless in the opening frame, but Nick ran into all kinds of trouble in the second. Leslie, the first Bee to face Nick, was an easy out, but Lefty O'Doul started Dumovich's downfall by slamming a triple to left field. Clark Pittenger duplicated, the only difference being that his hit went to right center and scored O'Doul. Pearce walked. Cook singled over short, scoring Pittenger. Mulcahy fanned. Pearce stole third just before Frederick walked to fill the bases. Howard Lindimore, manager protem of the Bees during Duffy Lewis's illness, slashed a single to right and Pearce and Cook pattered over the plate. Frederick wandered too far off third and was nailed for the final out, Twombly to Dumovich to McAuley to Krug.

That decided the ball game. Salt Lake had chances to score in the sixth and seventh, but something or other went wrong and the Bees had to be satisfied with their four runs. In the sixth O'Doul singled to right and was sacrificed to second by Pittenger. Pearce bounced a single through the infield to center and O'Doul scored, but Umpire Reardon called O'Doul back to second as the ball had touched "Beans" on its outbound flight, thus hindering McAuley's chance to grab the ball. However, Pearce was given his hit. Cook then hit to Krug, who tagged O'Doul near third. Pearce stole third and Cook second, but Ramsey fanned Mulcahy to escape the danger.

Frederick singled to start the Salt Lake seventh and waited on first while Lindimore and Coumbe were put out, but went to third when Leslie doubled to left. O'Doul had a chance to swell the Bee run total, but perished before Ramsey's elusive offerings on three strikes.

HAD FEW CHANCES

The Seraphs had but few chances to pick up a run or two off Mulcahy. In the first Durst tripled to left center after two were out, but died on the far corner when Grimes lifted a lazy fly to Frederick. A walk to Grimes and Hood's single to left put Angels on first and second with one out in the fourth, but Jenkins failed to connect with the hit-and-run signal on and Grimes was caught going to third. Joe later fanned to end the inning. Ramsey's double with one out in the third was also wasted when Whaley flied to Frederick and Twombly fouled to Cook. Los Angeles had men on first and second with one out in both the sixth and seventh frames, but Mulcahy was always equal to the emergency and pulled out unscathed on both occasions.

Tom Hughes and George Payne are Krug's choices to pitch in today's double-header, while Singleton and Kallio are due to work for the Mormons. Score:

LOSE AT LAST

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—Brooklyn's winning streak, which reached fifteen straight with the defeat of Boston, 1 to 0, in the first game this afternoon, was broken in the second game of today's double-header. Brooklyn's successive victories comprised two games from St. Louis, three from New York, six from Philadelphia and four from Boston.

Between games the Winthrop Lodge of Elks, with the help of President Christy Mathewson of the Braves, unveiled a bronze memorial tablet to the memory of Norman Doxie ("Tony") Boeckel, Boston third baseman, who died last winter as a result of an automobile accident. Scores:

SEMIPROS TO MINGLE TODAY

Irvine and United Parcels in One Feature Game

Pasadena Eagles to Connect With Jewelers

Compton Fireman in Contest With Venice Nine

Semipro baseball games today strongly resemble California-U.S.C. or Harvard-Yale football games. Harry Nelson has lined up a card which brings together more proportionally even teams than ever before. Three games of championship caliber are due to start this afternoon and fifteen other struggles will take place on local diamonds.

There is little choice between the three feature games. The sterling United Parcel Service nine takes on Irvine on the latter's field in one of the best. The championship Pasadena Eagles team meets the Christie Jewelry outfit at Tournament Park and Montebello plays the third and deciding game with Ficketts at Montebello. Irvine and the Parcel Service will undoubtedly stage a clash worth going a long way to see. Irvine was in the semifinals of the Greater Association play-off and lost two straight to Sam Cox's Eagles. The fact that they were champions of Orange county show how good they are despite their defeat. Nevertheless, the Parcel team should beat them. Having taken the measure of a team like Carlsbad, the Deliverers are strong enough to do anything.

With the series and the subsequent right to meet Pasadena lying in the third Montebello-Ficketts clash, something thrilling will surely be seen. Having come into the semifinal bracket with but one defeat, Montebello has a slight edge over Ficketts. With Lefty Cruze absent from the line-up last week, Ficketts ruined Montebello. Whether they can do that with Cruze on the mound is another thing.

After coming from behind to win their last game the Compton Firemen are all confidence when they meet Venice on their own field today. However, Venice is a speedy, hard-hitting club that has ruined more than one game that looked like a win. Another classy struggle is carded for Sawtelle. The home team takes on Crown City. If ever two teams were evenly matched it is these two. The game is anybody's until the last out is made. George's Orioles have a tough collision facing them in the shape of the Garden Grove aggregation. The Orioles are tough boys to draw a decision over and should cop the fight. The schedule:

United Parcels at Irvine.
Christie Jewelry Co. vs. Eagles at Tournament Park.
Ficketts at Montebello.
Tacoma Brew vs. Manchester Heights.
Venice at Compton.
Fremont W.O.W. at Bellflower.
George's Orioles at Garden Grove.
Sperry Flour at Pico Town.
Palomar vs. Mesa Heights at Sixtieth and West Boulevard, 12 noon.
Howitzer Co. at Watts.
L. A. Three Stars vs. L. A. Klan at Exposition No. 2.
Crown City at Sawtelle.
Barth & Sons vs. Fraternal Brotherhood at Loyola College.
Lacey's Stars at Monterey Park.
P. O. Clerks vs. William's Cubs at Ross Snyder No. 1.
Salt Lake Playground vs. L. A. Chinese at Salt Lake.

Belcher and some of last year's linemen, in addition to Chief McGilbra, the Indian half, will put a lot of fight into the Baptists.

Harry Trotter turned out a freshmen team that won the conference championship last year, and Grizzly fans think this indicates a big varsity year this fall at the local University of California. Jimmy Cline, former Bear star, will handle the Grizzlies again and will have such old-timers as Capt. Cecil Hollingsworth, Tillie Parasi, Loran Peake, Art Jones and others to pick from. Haralson, a good ground-gainer, is practically the only man lost through graduation. If that frosh outfit returns watch out for the Grizzlies.

MARY BROWNE IS DEFEATED

through the green. She was 5 down after playing the morning round. An approximated medal score of 91 would be giving her the best of it, for she picked up at five holes. Mrs. Hurd's medal was 81 and in an eighteen-hole match she would have won 6 and 5.

By the time they had played nine holes in the afternoon, Mrs. Hurd's advantage was seven holes. Each went to the turn in 46, the coincidence of medal scores being due to one seven by Mrs. Hurd, when she hooked into an unplayable lie, the only time she took over six all day. A fifteen-foot putt for a par three at the twenty-eighth hole gave Miss Browne hope, but it was abandoned at the twenty-ninth. Mrs. Hurd got a par five here and become dormie, while Miss Browne having the longer drive flubbed her second and put her third into a brook guarding the green. The concluding hole was a half in fives.

WHITTIER BALL NINE CRASHES LONG BEACH

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WHITTIER, Sept. 6.—In the second game of a five-game series to decide the championship of the Inter-County Baseball League, the Whittier All-Stars defeated the Long Beach Acorns here last night by the close score of 2 to 1.

Long Beach won the first game 13 to 8, on her own field Tuesday evening. So thus far it is even.

The visitors' only score came in the fifth frame with none on when McNeil rapped one out into the gloaming of the right field. This same McNeil and also Stratton for Whittier got two hits out of three times at the platter.

The fielding of First Baseman Homeier, who caught four Long Beach players off first base by his quick work, was an outstanding feature of the game; he also made a sensational catch of Clayton's foul against the bleachers. The score:

DOG SHOW FEATURE AT VENTURA FAIR

With hundreds of fine dogs entered, the Dog Show will be the big feature of the Ventura county fair, according to a report received from Ventura yesterday. All sorts of fancy dogs are entered and the annual event is expected to be the best ever produced. Roger Edwards, Miss Sara Blanchard and Mrs. Elisha Converse are president, vice-president and secretary, respectively. The Bench Show Committee is composed of Mrs. Converse, Mrs. Browne and Miss Blanchard.

Nationally famous experts are on the judges' stand. H. Yates judges Shepherd dogs, T. M. Tryon, Boston terriers, and Charles Gilbert, all other breeds. Yates was the first president of the Shepherd Dog Club of America and is now vice-president of that organization. The other judges are dog fanciers and are well-known throughout the county.

OILMEN TO STAGE GOLF TOURNAMENT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TULSA (Okla.) Sept. 6.—Interest of golf players throughout the oil country is being centered in the coming Petroleum Industry Interstate Golf Tournament, which will take place in Tulsa, Okla., October 6, 7 and 8, during the second annual International Petroleum Exposition and Congress.

The following were the results of the Lyceum boxing bouts last night: Battling Chink defeated Battling Dias in the main event; in the semi-wind-up, Al Thomas and Roy Edwards battled to a draw; in the special, Joe Garcia and Harry Foley, a draw; Art Lincoln lost to Paul Hardy; Jack Adams knocked out Young McBride and Larry Reese lost to Danny McCoy.

GOLFERS SET FOR BIG WEEK

State Championship Tourney Opens Tomorrow

Tufts Picks South's Team for Today's Match

Northern Players Presenting Strong Line-up

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DEL MONTE, Sept. 6.—Interest among the golfers here for the State amateur championship, starting Monday, centers tonight on the outcome of tomorrow's annual north and south team match. Despite the absence of Hunter, Wright, Von Elm and Seaver, the south will have a strong team with Dr. Paul Hunter, Tarrant, Armstrong, MacBeth, Hurley, Le Bionde, Godchaux, Arniel, Hageman and Palmer playing.

Opposing these Southern California mashie masters will be Johnny McHugh, State champion; Neville, Dr. Walter, George Ritchie, Sam Conlan, Frank Kales, Ed Twiggs, Lauren Upson, Bud Edwards and Francis Murphy.

The two beautiful courses are in fine condition and despite alibis offered for the Pebble Beach greens by Larry Toole because of the depredations of a Japanese worm which has infested the fine new German bent putting surfaces, no apologies are necessary.

All reservations at the Del Monte Hotel were filled early this week and several hundred have been turned away daily since then. Besides the hundreds of niblick wielders here to participate in the tourney, there is a large colony of feminine stars on hand for the women's event, to say nothing of families and friends of golfers who will follow the matches.

More than 1500 players and enthusiasts are housed here and at Monterey and for the next ten days all will do nothing but play, eat, talk and sleep golf.

Rudy Wilhelm turned in a 74 over the Pebble Beach course while Earl Neitzel, with a 74, led on the Del Monte course.

Edward Eddy of San Francisco finished 1 up today and won in match play against par. Five golfers tied for second, finishing all square. They were D. Richmond, E. Neitzel, Asa Keyes, J. S. Kemp and E. C. Comes. Hay Champman, veteran golf scribe, was three up on part for the first nine holes and had an 84.

Harlow Hurley and Frank Godchaux were among the Los Angeles contingent which arrived today.

Norman MacBeth of Wilshire has been playing beautiful golf and at Pebble Beach his week had a 71 with a 33 on the first nine, four strokes below par.

Johnny McHugh is also going great guns and had five birdies on the first nine at the Beach.

Ed Tufts is on the job helping with preparations for the tourney, which promises to see the largest field of players tee off Monday morning in the first half of the thirty-six holes qualifying round that has ever played for the championship. Close to 500 golfers are expected to play, with more than 200 entering the match play against par today.

Roy Montgomery of Long Beach joined the hole-in-one club today, negotiating the 135-yard seventeenth at Pebble Beach.

Sam Mandell Meets Hoppe at Hollywood

Hollywood fans will be alluding to Sammy Mandell as the classiest lightweight ever to appear in the Legion ring after his battle with Dick Hoppe in his California debut Friday. At least, that is the general opinion along "Cauliflower Alley," most of the pugs having a wholesome respect for the Illinois flash, who has been booked for three fights in the Movie City arena.

Mandell is the closest thing to Packey McFarland that has been developed in the boxing game since the pride of the Chicago stockyards was in his prime. He is one of the best boys of his poundage today and it is freely predicted that he is the one boxer who has the chance of wearing the lightweight crown now held by Benny Leonard.

In the year and a half that Hoppe has boxed at Hollywood he has dropped just one decision, and that to Frankie Burns in the lightweight tournament.

The semi-wind-up is going to be the thriller of the night if the main event does not show something very unusual. Tom Kennedy has matched Frankie Osner with Felix Villamore, a Filipino tornado. This bout is going to be one of the bantamweight elimination trials.

Joe Medina, a boy who never has failed to please a Hollywood crowd, is battling Jack Griff in the special bout. Those who know Medina realize that Griff has anything but a soft evening cut out for him.

Other bouts:

Mannie Kaplan vs. Dude Martines, 160 pounds.

Frankie Novey vs. Billy Stratton, 115 pounds.

Soldier Brown vs. Joe Burns, 138 pounds.

Sid Boniface vs. Young McNulty, 118 pounds.

TWO BUCKS BAGGED BY DR. ANDERSON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, Sept. 5.—Bringing with him two deer which he bagged in the Sierras, near Mineral King, east of here, Dr. A. R. Anderson was the first local hunter to return since the season opened. One of his bucks weighed 185 pounds dressed. The quartet he was with bagged eight. At Camp Nelson five visitors got a buck each on the opening day: J. F. Robinson of Porterville, (who got the largest, a fine four-pointer,) Newt. Leggitt of Porterville, J. W. White of Tulare, Paul Chambers of Lindsay and Frank Braun, county horticultural commissioner, Visalia. Water is scarce this year and the Nelson basin holds deer in large numbers.

Arthur C. ("Dazzy") Vance, the Brooklyn Robins star, is a right-handed pitcher.

TWIN MAIN GO AT VERNON

Sage and Colima Will go to Again Next Tuesday Night; Adams to Face Salvadore on Same Bill

Four battlers who expect to box before the thousands in the double main event at the Vernon Coliseum Tuesday night have promised Promoter Jack Doyle that they will not throw any low right hands to foul their way out and disappoint a huge audience. That happened last week at two clubs, first at Vernon and then at Hollywood, and if it keeps up the boys will have to box in hoop skirts or something like that.

Bob Sage and Bert Colima are going right back into the Vernon ring after Colima lost on a foul to Sage last Tuesday night. Bert was guilty of a terribly low right hand and 7000 people knew right away that he deserved to lose.

RETURN BOUT

It was thought only fair to send them back as it was hard to tell as far as they had gone which man was going to win. Some thought Colima was in front and others imagined that Sage was winning. But they had only gone two minutes and thirty seconds when the low punch went over and the result surely was in doubt at that time.

The other two headliners Tuesday will be Johnny Adams, who won the Coast lightweight championship tourney staged by the American Legion Post in Hollywood, and Phil Salvadore, Dick Donald's veteran four-round lightweight.

Adams looks like a winner because of his impressive knockout of Johnny Trambitas, the fancy Portland lightweight, but Salvadore, while not winning much of late, is dangerous and is about due to turn in a good fight. When Phil is good he is good enough for any of them in four rounds.

BIG ADVANCE SALE

The advance sale in Vernon is heavy and Jack Doyle predicts a packed house. Matchmaker Hayden Wadhams has Colima and Sage boxing sixth and Adams and Salvadore last on the card. Stockyards Jack Rose will meet Johnny Reno at 135 pounds in the special bout.

The other matches are:

Johnny Grella and Billy Afoe, 145 pounds.

Louis Martin and Young Bellamy, 115 pounds.

Eddie Spurley and Benny Palmer, 122 pounds.

Bob Bridges and Joe Firpo, 128 pounds.

COAST CHAMPION

Here's Johnny Adams, holder of the Pacific Coast lightweight championship, who will cast his newly acquired title into the Vernon ring next Tuesday night. Phil Salvadore, Dick Donald's charge, will attempt to wrest the coveted crown from Adams.

GIVES UP ATTEMPT TO SWIM CHANNEL

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BOULOGNE (France) Sept. 6.—Lillian Harrison, Anglo-Argentine swimmer, failed today in her attempt to swim the English Channel, begun from the French side at Cap Gris-Nez at 11:50 o'clock last night. Miss Harrison gave up after reaching midchannel, having remained in the water eight hours.

STRATEGIES OF GIRD DISCUSSED

left side of the field as it faced the Wisconsin goal line that not more than four or five feet separated the Maroon left end and the Badger right end from the side line. It was third and last down with four yards to go, for Chicago, in two rushes, had advanced the ball but a single yard. Mark this point, for it is vital. With the Wisconsin line holding impregnably, another rush was extremely remote. A run around right end was possible, but improbable, as the entire Badger team could be employed to stop it. Unlikeliest of all was a run around left end, prohibited as it was by that restricted lane between the ends and the line. No, any fool could see that Chicago's sole hope lay in a kick.

CALLS FOR PUNT FORMATION

This was the way that Wisconsin figured, and it was the way that Eckersall figured that it figured. And, to remove any lingering doubt in the Badger psychology, he called for a punt formation. Also, to concentrate attention on the right of the Chicago line, Meigs, left guard, was moved to the other side of Center Gale, swelling the number of Maroon linemen on that side to four and reducing the number on the left to two. Hugo Bezdek, Maroon fullback—later to become one of the greatest of football coaches and also a big league baseball manager—stationed himself at the right of center, behind Meigs. Walker, right half, got in back of Bezdek. Detray, left half, just opposite Walker, was on a line to the rear of Hill, left tackle, who edged a little to the right to close the gap left by the transfer of Meigs.

Standing like a little, listless old man as he waited for the snapback, Eckersall seemed the personification of defeated hopelessness, robbed of all desire for offensive action and contented merely to fend off immediate danger. Nor, as the ball settled into his hands, did he seem to change.

He raised his right leg as though to kick. That was a maneuver intended to deceive and unsettle the Wisconsin team as a whole, but particularly the line. Simultaneously Bezdek and Walker charged up to their own right end to give the appearance of an end run from punt formation and to forestall the quickly launched efforts of Wisconsin to break through. Detray ran forward to brace up the depleted left side of the line.

But Eckersall did not kick. Instead, shedding his seeming dejection, he sprang into rapid, vivid action. Timing his movements beautifully, he ran in behind center and, crouching low, turned to his left. Then—doing that which had been regarded as impossible—he circled through the narrow opening between the left end and the side line.

California expects the turf in its new stadium to be fit for this fall's football matches. The grass was planted four months ago and was watered daily and mowed three times a week during the summer.

Paddock Signs for Hundred in New York Meet

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Charles Paddock, world's greatest sprinter, has sent in his entry for the 100-yard dash and the quarter-mile run at the annual games of the Irish-American A. C. in Gaelic Park, West Forty-seventh street and California avenue, Sunday, September 14.

When the entry of Paddock was announced work was started to perfect the track for a new world's record, although he will meet some of the fastest men in the West. Paddock, when in shape, is thought unbeatable in the 100-yard dash.

The entry list is expected to reach 500 for the thirteen events on the program. These include runs at 100, 440, 880 yards and one mile; running high jump, running broad jump, running hop, step and jump, pole vault, for height, three standing jumps, sixteen-pound hammer throw, sixteen-pound shotput, fifty-six pound weight from seven-foot circle and throwing the discus. The entries will close Monday.

"Pop" Warner will start football practice at Stanford University September 15.

HUSKIES LOOK FOR BIG YEAR

Washington Has Aspirations for Football Title; Other Teams Weak

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 6.—With the football season all but here there is only one really bright prospect in the northern end of the Pacific Coast Conference. That, of course, is the University of Washington, runner-up in the conference last year. The Huskies have never had a better outlook and in the last few years their prospects at no time have been so good. Last year's veterans are coming back en masse and there will be a lot of new material from the 1923 freshmen.

Coach Bagshaw has just the chance he has been waiting for. He has built up his system at Washington and he now has plenty of veterans thoroughly coached in it. Last year he had trouble in developing a satisfactory field general and that is a problem that is giving Bagshaw no end of worry. If he can find just the right man to run the team on the playing field the Huskies are going to give any of them a tussle.

But after pointing with pride to Washington the football follower in the Pacific Northwest has little else to get excited about. Oregon, the Oregon Aggies and Washington State are giving no thought to a possible championship this season. For them it will be a year of development, the working out of new systems of play, with the hope that they can make a showing they need not be ashamed of and build toward real football glory next year or the year after.

Belvedere Nine and Shell Oil Squads Tangle

Leading by a scant margin in the second half of the schedule in the independent baseball league, Bill Feistner's powerful Shell Oil Company nine, victors in the initial round of play and beaten but once during the past eight weeks, hook up with Jay Nofziger's Belvedere Gardens crew in one of the feature contests in Southern California this afternoon. The game will be played on the Shell field in the Signal Hill district.

The other argument in the independent loop program will be played on the Gilmore Oil Company field, where the Palms-Culver City machine will hook up with Ned Smith's Gilmore aggregation.

Larry Arnold's battling Sawtelle outfit and the Hammond Lumber Company crew have an off day, for they played their game a week ago.

Three additional golf courses being constructed in Chicago will bring the western metropolis's total to 115.

PROMOTER ACCUSED OF FILM FRAUD

James Calnay Arrested on Charge He Obtained Cash for Fake Production

James Calnay, former associate of Mrs. Angela Kauffman in a motion-picture venture, was arrested yesterday at San Diego on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. San Diego authorities arrested Calnay at the request of Detective Lieutenants Reed and Williams.

The suspect was declared by the detectives to have posed as a motion-picture producer of large means and to have defrauded several persons of sums ranging from $100 to $500 after promising that he would star them in his productions.

The complaint against Calnay is signed by James L. Trinity, who says he was defrauded of $100. He told police that he gave Calnay $100 after the latter had told him he would be starred in a forthcoming production. Calnay, he said, sent him on location at San Diego, but he was never able to find the producing company.

Calnay was arrested here about a year ago after he was said to have attacked and beaten Mrs. Kauffman, who was known as "the angel of the County Jail."

SUIT MUST GO ON

Court Denies Motion to Dismiss San Pedro Postoffice Case

Federal Judge McCormick yesterday denied a motion to dismiss the replevin suit brought by Arthur S. Koyer against the United States and C. P. Wright, postmaster at San Pedro. The court ordered that a restraining order granted last week be continued in effect, and granted the defendants twenty days within which to answer.

Mr. Koyer seeks to obtain possession of fixtures in the San Pedro postoffice. He avers they should have been turned over to him when the government's lease on the postoffice building expired. The building remains in use as it was sold by Mr. Koyer before expiration of the lease. The restraining order preventing removal of the fixtures was granted on the grounds that the public interest is paramount and takes precedence over rights the plaintiff may have in the postoffice fixtures.

M. Herriot, Premier of France, rises early in the morning and never retires until after midnight.

Beautiful Lawns and Flower beds are always a source of pride to the owner. But the "dressed up" garden is planted with shrubs as well. Fall time is Shrub Planting time. Shrubbery and trees planted during the fall months receive the full benefit of Winter rains and start growth very early in the Spring.

The Berry bearing varieties listed here are especially interesting in Winter, when their brightly colored berries are most attractive. The evergreen foliage is also an attractive feature of these varieties.

OUR CITY GOVERNMENT

This is the fifth of a series of articles to appear in The Times on the subject of the Los Angeles city government. Their purpose is to acquaint the taxpayers with the actual machinery of the municipal corporation—how it ought to work and how it actually does work.

The sixth article of the series will be devoted to The Tax Dollar—how it is spent.

No. 1—OFFICERS, BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS

The city primaries will be held next May. The municipal election will be held in June and on July 1 the officials who were elected will take office. They will administer the city government under the provisions of the new City Charter approved on May 6, last, and under which the Mayor, City Attorney and Controller (formerly designated as the City Auditor) will hold office for four years (present term two years) while the terms of office of the Councilmen remain at two years. Under the new charter, the salary of the Mayor is increased from $6000 to $10,000 a year, that of the City Attorney is increased from $7200 to $10,000 a year, the Controller's (Auditor's) salary is increased from $5000 to $7200 a year, and the salary of a Councilman is raised from $2400 to $4800 a year.

As a whole, the new charter makes no radical changes in the structure or organization of the city government, although the duties, powers and responsibilities of the City Attorney and Controller are strengthened. The number of citizen boards and commissions and departments remains the same as at present, though slightly reorganized and increased from three to five in membership. In some cases the head of a department is designated as its general manager in order to center responsibility.

The excellent chart prepared by City Efficiency Director Knox shows the organization of the city government as it will be under the new charter, and shows that, as set forth in the text of the charter, the Mayor is the chief executive of the city government. The charter declares that the Mayor shall "exercise a constant supervision over the acts and conduct of all officers and employees" and shall "secure co-operation between the various departments and offices of the city"—in other words, efficiency and teamwork.

MAYOR'S POWERS

The powers of the Mayor under the new charter have not been greatly increased from those he has now, as the Mayor has always had ample authority to be a real general manager and chief executive of the city government, had he chosen to exercise it. No recent Mayor has done so, but has contented himself with "getting by," making speeches at picnics and conventions, and attending to such matters as officially thrust upon them by the resignations of commissioners and the passage of ordinances by the Council which required the Mayor's signature. As to whether or not any department was functioning efficiently, recent Mayors have not borrowed trouble by inquiring into these bothersome matters, but have left the boards and commissions alone to fight out their troubles. They have been chief executives in name only, and as a result, the cost of the city government has grown more rapidly than the increased business of these departments justified. The number of city employees has increased at the rate of about 2000 a year, until there are now 15,000 men and women on the city pay rolls which will this year total $10,000,000 of the [illegible],000,000 to be spent for the maintenance of the city government.

The new charter has provided, through the new bureau of budget and efficiency, a method which the freeholders who drafted the charter hoped will compel the Mayor to take an interest in the city departments by placing in the Mayor's hands, instead of the Council's, as at present, control of the expenditures of the various city departments. There has never been any law or charter restriction that would have prevented the Mayor from taking an interest in the rather important matter (to the taxpayers) of keeping down expenses and seeing to it that a dollar's worth of service is given for each dollar paid in by the taxpayers. The Council has, however, prepared the annual budget and doled out additional appropriations, and all Mayors in recent years have perfunctorily signed the budget.

BUDGET MAYOR'S

Under the new charter, the Mayor will appoint a director of the budget and to the Mayor, and not to the Council, will first come the departmental requests for budget funds and additional appropriations, and then these must be approved by the Mayor, with the advice of the budget director, before the Council can act upon them. The budget becomes under the new charter as Mayor's budget instead of Council budget. Here the Mayor and his budget director have the same opportunity that Gen. Dawes had as first director of the United States budget, with the backing of President Harding as Chief Executive to effect savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in the city government's expenses, just as Gen. Dawes saved billions for the Federal government. Through his control of the purse strings of the city government, the next Mayor of Los Angeles will be able, if he is big enough and strong enough in executive ability, character and vision, to say "No" when the City Engineer, for example, asks an appropriation for additional men when the facts gathered by the bureau of budget and efficiency show that the City Engineer has enough men to do the work, if he will put them to work. Through the bureau and by working closely with the new Controller, the next Mayor, if he is the right man, will be able to prevent a condition such as now exists, where the City Engineer's department is

Riverside Fair to Open October 7 with Displays of California Products Except Live Stock

Plans that have been under way for many months are rapidly nearing completion for the Southern California Fair which opens its twelfth season at Riverside, October 7, next, to continue for the balance of the

A new departure in fairs is noted, due to the fact that there will be no live-stock exhibits for the first time since the fair started. The fair will be wholly an agricultural exposition. Here are some of the features: An industrial date show, cotton show, mineral exhibit, Indian vocational exhibit, Indian games, contests, auto truck and tractor show, poultry exhibit, horse racing, dozens of agricultural exhibits and many amusement features.

FIRST COTTON SHOW

The cotton show is to be held for the first time. Growers and associations in Southern California and Arizona will participate with displays from growing cotton to a miniature cotton gin in operation. The United States Department of Agriculture will maintain an exhibit. This display is in charge of M. L. Schoenthal, secretary of the Riverside Chamber of Commerce.

The date show is in its second year and so great has been the demand for space that it will be twice as large as last year. The show will be in a separate building with an imposing Egyptian front.

Thursday, October 9, has been designated as Indian Day, when hundreds of Indians will participate in games, contests and drills. An Indian vocational exhibit with rug weavers, lace makers and other artisans will occupy one big tent. This will be directed by F. M. Conser of the Sherman Indian Institute.

The need of an educational exhibit of minerals of the Southwest is answered by the fair officials who have for the first time made arrangements for a big mineral display with specimens collected from every section of the southwestern mining country.

COUNTIES TO EXHIBIT

Agricultural displays will be made by Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Orange, Fresno, Imperial and Riverside counties. In addition, every section of Riverside county will have individual exhibits in competition for the $18,000 awards. Purses for the races aggregate $7000, making $25,000 offered in purses and awards.

The motor car, truck and tractor show will be the largest in the fair's history. All space has been sold in this department.

Another new feature is the dried fruits and nut show.

Amusements of various kinds have been provided.

Assisting in promoting the exposition are J. T. Garner, president; W. W. Van Pelt, secretary; S. F. Kennedy, manager; J. E. Killian, O. K. Kelsey, J. E. Wherrell, M. L. Schoenthal, Frank A. Tetley, Charles Rouse, C. R. Helmer, J. F. Backstrand and many others.

TEACHER TO COME HERE FROM NAPA

School Organizer is Given Important Place on Staff of University

Prof. O. R. Hull, who won praise for his work as superintendent of public schools of Napa, will come to the University of Southern California as assistant professor in education for the opening of the fall semester registration the 15th inst.

O.R.Hull.

Prof. Hull served the last four years as superintendent in Napa, during which time he placed the schools of that city on a par with the best in the State and as a result of his work a school building survey was made by the State University, the first of its kind attempted by that institution. This resulted in a definite building and organization program. Two bond issues financed the building program and last year the school children of Napa were housed in new and modern school buildings costing $750,000 in addition to two buildings retained from old school plants of the city.

In addition to the building program, Prof. Hull brought more teachers into the Napa school service, making smaller classes possible with more individual work, and proper grading and classification.

Prof. Hull is chairman of the advisory committee of the school of education, University of California, appointed to that position by the board of regents. He is a member of Sigma Xi honor society in Science; Phi Delta Kappa, in education; National Educational Association and the California State Teachers Association. He is a graduate of the University of California.

Drill Reveals Gold Was Dug in San Gabriel

Unrecorded operations of old-time placer miners in San Gabriel Canyon have been revealed, according to Chief Engineer Reagan of the county flood control work, by the finding of a steel drill twenty-six feet underground at the site of the proposed San Gabriel dam. The old drill, which lay on top of bedrock, was cut neatly in two by the diamond drill used by the engineers and a piece of it removed with the core taken from the hole.

This indicates, Mr. Reagan sa' that the placer miners must have cleared the place down to bedrock at one time.

LOS ANGELES PUT TO TEST IN DEFENSE DAY OUTCOME

Parades to Show City's Ability in Crisis

The extent to which Los Angeles is prepared to meet the emergency of war will be measured at the Coliseum next Friday—National Defense Test Day. Under the National Defense Act of 1920 the Organized Reserve Army in this city was placed at 14,000 civilians, 4000 specialists and 10,000 men of the line. It is to determine how many of these civilians are ready to respond in case of war and how well they are fitted for service that the Defense Test Day was inaugurated by the War Department for observance throughout the nation.

Arrangements for observance of the day are virtually complete. Two great parades have been organized for Friday afternoon, when Secretary of the Navy Wilbur will be the city's guest.

IN TWO DIVISIONS

The first parade into the Coliseum will be that of the patriotic societies and veterans' organizations of Los Angeles. Lieut.-Col. Leroy Foster Smith will act as marshal of this parade. The various organizations participating in this parade have been requested by Col. Smith to have all their members from 18 to 35 years of age present in the line of march.

As soon as the patriotic parade reaches the Coliseum and its participants are seated, the great defense test parade will march in from another entrance. This will

Warning Given by Washington Now Heeded

BY LIEUT.-COL. JOHN R. KELLY
(Assistant Chief of Staff for Military Intelligence, Ninth Corps Area)

A little over a century and a quarter ago, Washington, in his first annual message to Congress, said:

"To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

This country, although it has found Washington's advice good and his principles sound on most national questions, has never seen fit to test the truth of this statement by giving it a trial. We have, however, succeeded in proving that to be unprepared for war is one of the least effectual means of preserving peace, for it has always been our policy to remain unprepared, and this has not prevented us from engaging, during the past century, from 1812 to 1917, in five major wars, a number equaled only by Turkey, Austria, France and Russia, and exceeded only by Serbia, with a record of six.

During this same period Switzerland, surrounded by powerful, aggressive neighbors, has engaged in but one war. It is certain that Switzerland's well-known policy of preparedness has kept her out of at least two others and who knows how many more? She, at least, has

PILGRIMAGE PLAY NEARS END OF RUN

Will Close Next Sunday After Season of Success in Nature's Theater

California's Pilgrimage Play Life of Christ, tomorrow night will enter its last week of the 1924 season, in its now famous natural amphitheater in the hills of Hollywood. Announcement has been made by the sponsors of the production that the season will definitely close the 13th inst. Only six more performances remain.

This season is the fifth of the Pilgrimage Play, which has become accepted as a Southern California institution. The year thus far has been marked by sustained attendance and steadily increasing public interest.

As yet no figures are available as to the number of persons who have witnessed the play this year or how this season compares with previous years, but thousands of Los Angeles people have seen the play.

The initial season's presentation of the Pilgrimage Play enjoyed a six weeks' run, this being extended to a season of eight weeks the second year. The third year the patronage increased to such an extent that the production ran eleven weeks. Last year, owing to the fact that the season began a fortnight later the play was presented but eight weeks. This year, while the season was originally planned to run only eight weeks, it has been prolonged to ten weeks.

ONTARIO NIGHT AT PILGRIMAGE PAGEANT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Sept. 6.—The evening of Thursday, the 11th inst., will be "Ontario Night" at the Pilgrimage Play in Hollywood, it was learned here today. Stages will transport all local people who care to go directly to the amphitheater and will be waiting to return them to this city at the close of the pageant play.

The plan is being sponsored by the Ontario Ministerial Union, under the leadership of the Rev. W. Earle Smith, president of the organization.

BOSS OF UNCLE SAM'S SEA WARRIORS COMING 'HOME'

Secretary Wilbur Due Thursday in Los Angeles, Scene of Start on Road to Naval Chief

BY OTIS M. WILES

The boss of a $3,000,000,000 business is coming to Los Angeles next Thursday. He is not a "boss" in the sense in which the word is so often misused. He is the man to whom President Coolidge has intrusted the nation's most formidable business of defense—the United States Navy—and this man, the coming visitor to Los Angeles, is Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy.

The official visit of Secretary Wilbur to Southern California is to be regarded as a great occasion. Other Secretaries and other dignitaries even greater in rank have visited the city from time to time, but none reached so close to the heart of Los Angeles as the Secretary of the Navy will upon his arrival here.

ONE OF CITY'S OWN

He is one of Los Angeles' own sons. Here, he spent those days of his youth when he first encountered the stepping stones that have led him to success. Here he taught at college and in Sunday school, studied and practiced law and ascended to the Superior Bench. Here he received his appointment to a higher court and started upon the highway of success that led him to the office of Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court, where President Coolidge found him and extended to him a seat at the Cabinet table. And he is coming home next Thursday.

Secretary Wilbur's visit will not be merely to call upon the home folks. He is coming on an official tour of Pacific Coast naval bases and will remain in Southern California for seven days. Four of these days will be spent in Los Angeles.

The secretary departed from Washington on his inspection tour August 21, last. Since then he has inspected the Great Lakes Training Station at Chicago; Bremerton Navy Yards, in Washington; the battle fleet during a cruise to San Francisco; Mare Island, Goat Island and the Alameda Ammunition Depot in the San Francisco Bay district.

TO VISIT BAKERSFIELD

Leaving San Francisco next Tuesday evening, Secretary Wilbur will stop over in Bakersfield on the following day, Wednesday, the 10th inst., to inspect the naval oil reserves. He will arrive in Los Angeles by automobile on the same evening or at 7:40 o'clock the following morning on the Southern Pacific, his schedule being subject to momentary change.

The tentative program for the secretary's extended visit in Los Angeles has not yet been completed, but on Friday he probably will go to Catalina for a day's rest. Saturday he will make a thorough inspection of the Navy's possessions and activities at Los Angeles Harbor. Sunday will be spent in Los Angeles and on Monday and Tuesday he will inspect the various naval properties at San Diego. Returning to Los Angeles on Wednesday, the 17th inst., Secretary Wilbur will head eastward, en route to Denver, at 10:50 a.m.

Secretary Wilbur's visit to "the old home town" comes after he has been a member of President Coolidge's Cabinet for six months. He was urged to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby and accepted the post on March 13, last. At that time he was Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court and immediately after taking over his new duties on March 24 he began to apply his great legal learning acquired from many years in the practice of law, his experience upon the judicial bench and his personal knowledge of the Navy, based upon his four-year course at the Naval Academy, to the task of reorganizing the Naval Department upon an efficient basis.

BIDES HIS TIME

Policies and building programs were not announced by the secretary right away.

"I will hear the evidence and testimony first before making any decisions," he stated in his first interview.

He was now the head of a national organization that consisted of $1,500,000,000 invested in ships, shore stations valued at $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 in naval stores.

What has been done for the Navy during Secretary Wilbur's six months in the Cabinet is best revealed in a review of official reports from various branches of the Naval Department and the revivified interest concerning naval matters as shown by Congress since the new secretary began to plead for the Navy's life.

First hand, Secretary Wilbur announced, relative to the future policy of naval oil reserves, that "no leases or contracts will be made by the Navy Department without the personal approval of the Secretary of the Navy."

On April 14 the House Naval

CONSTITUTION WEEK PLANNED

Schools, Churches and Clubs Will Take Part

Sermons Are to be Preached on First Amendment

Speakers Will Dwell on Features in Document

Schools, churches, luncheon clubs and civic organizations throughout the country will devote six days of next week, from the 14th to the 20th inst., inclusive, to observance of Constitution Week, devoted to quickening the knowledge of American citizens in and renewing their loyalty to the United States Constitution.

On Sunday the 14th, sermons will be heard on the First Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing religious liberty in these words:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment or religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition government for a redress of grievances."

The text suggested is from Proverbs 22:28, "Remove not the ancient landmark which thy fathers have set."

THEORY OF CONSTITUTION

For the second day, speakers are asked to dwell on the theory of the Constitution, which contemplated, not a pure democracy, but a representative government, divided into three distinct departments, the powers of which are specifically limited by the terms of the Constitution itself—namely, the legislative, the executive and the judicial departments.

Watchwords of the Constitution—a government of laws and not of men, liberty under the law, and equal opportunity to all citizens—are the themes set aside for Tuesday. Behind them lie the thought that a self-governing republic, such as the American Union, is successful only in proportion as the people are instrumental in obtaining adequate and just laws and their uniting to support and enforce them.

Speakers assigned to Wednesday are asked to review the growth of the Constitution, showing how, in the Bill of Rights and subsequent amendments, it was shaped to assure the individual of protection against his servants in the Legislatures or in Congress, by dismissal at election or by impeachment; against his executive officers, whom he may similarly remove; against his judges, whom he may remove for lack of "good behavior," thus proving that his government is not his master, but his protection against the mastery of delegates or servants selected by himself.

SERVICES OF MARSHALL

Thursday is devoted to a review of the services performed by John Marshall, the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, in enunciating the principles of the Constitution in a series of decisions which are milestones of American history.

Friday is reserved for consideration of the dangers of radicalism and organized minorities, or government by bloc, to free institutions.

Finally, citizens are exhorted to consider the application to their own case of the cynic's maxim that "what is everybody's business is nobody's business."

Constitution Week was initiated by the American Bar Association. Co-operating with it are Rotary clubs and similar organizations, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution, Parent-Teachers' associations, Women's Federated Clubs, the Masonic Service Association of the United States, the Knights of Columbus, the Boy Scouts and others.

WILBUR DUE IN CITY THURSDAY

Committee approved a bill providing for the construction of eight 10,000-ton light cruisers at a cost of $11,000,000 each and six gunboats to cost $700,000 each. The bill would also provide for the conversion from coal burners to oil burners of the battleships Florida, Arkansas, Utah and Wyoming at a cost of $18,360,000. Another item in the bill called for the expenditure of $1,000,000 for a naval base at Sand Point, Wash., and a Navy pier at San Diego.

BECOMES REALITY

The passage of the bill for the cruisers and other enormous expenditures became a reality after a conference between Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary Wilbur and after Wilbur's repeated request that it be passed.

Before the passage of the bill Secretary Wilbur transmitted a lengthy report to the House Naval Committee, in which he emphasized the necessity for the improvements embodied therein, and pointed out how the United States is slipping behind in its naval construction. None of the present type submarines, he informed the committee, was capable of participating in the fleet maneuvers at battle speed and he urged the construction of certain non-combatant auxiliaries. Shortly before that time he announced his stand for an American Navy, "not only equal to any other navy, but a dominating one along the lines not restricted by mutual agreement." The completion of the Pearl Harbor project in the Hawaiian Islands was another subject upon which he laid stress.

On June 5, after passage by the House, the bill was passed by the Senate and the United States Navy was ordered brought up to its standard.

Nor has Southern California's coast been neglected during the office of the present Secretary of the Navy. Since Wilbur took his office instructions have been issued for the establishing of the office of inspector of naval petroleum reserves in California. A similar office was also authorized for the district of Wyoming, Colorado and Utah, at Casper, Wyo.

AIDS LOCAL HARBOR

On May 2, Secretary Wilbur asked Congress to pass a measure creating a hydrographic station at Los Angeles as an aid to shipping interests and masters of ships. The creation of naval air base at Los Angeles Harbor, the planes to operate with the battle fleet, also was authorized and will be in operation before next month.

San Diego's naval improvements include, beside the Navy pier, the authorization of additional buildings, to cost $750,000, to the Navy Hospital, and the return of the Fourth Marines to the Marine Training station.

Shortly after Secretary Wilbur arrived at his new desk in Washington, plans were launched to send the United States fleet upon a cruise around the world. This plan is still being considered, though it has been definitely announced that upon completion of the battle maneuvers in Pacific waters off the Hawaiian Islands the fleet will visit Australia next year.

The Secretary was quick to recognize the importance of naval aviation as a national defense and and took steps to acquaint himself with the problems centering around its development. The lack of aircraft carriers in the American Navy as compared with the British Navy was apparent. He went into the phase of aeronautical progress with great detail and thoroughness. He appreciated the fact that from the standpoint of aviation the Navy was not a well-rounded and well-equipped organization for national defense.

His first official act was the authorization for a large demonstration of naval air activities, which was held at Lakehurst, N. J., and attracted more than 100,000 spectators. He made a tour of the East coast, stopping at the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, where he made a thorough investigation of the airship situation. He visited the Naval air station at Hampton Roads. To familiarize himself with aviation needs and possibilities, he made part of the tour in an airplane.

Since then, work on the new aircraft carriers, the Lexington and Saratoga, is being pushed with vigor. A new type of airplane for long-distance scouting and with three distinct functions in one craft has been tested successfully and is in production. The plane is used as a bombing plane and a torpedo plane and since its acceptance by the Navy it has established five new world's records for speed, distance and duration.

Within the past few months an improved type of catapult for launching planes from battleships has been tested successfully and is being fitted on one of the first-line battleships. And for the Navy-built Shenandoah, now operating with the fleet, a specially constructed device for its mooring has been installed upon a surface vessel.

The Navy at the present time also is developing a special type of amphibian plane capable of landing and taking off either on water or land. It will be used for observation of battleship gunfire. Within the next month or two the Navy will receive a reparations airship, the ZR-3, from Germany and will operate it to demonstrate the commercial practicability of this type of aircraft.

Among the acts of importance in the Marine Corps accomplished during the term of Secretary Wilbur were the return of the Fourth Regiment of Marines to San Diego from Santo Domingo, the location of an expeditionary battalion at Guantanamo, the increasing of the Marine detachments at sea and the increase of the complement for aviation duty;

Disapproval of the proposal to reduce the enlisted personnel of the Marine Corps because of the withdrawal from Santo Domingo, based upon the opinion that no branch of the national defense should be further weakened at this time; weakened further at this time;

Provision of personnel and material and organization for administration of the Adjusted Compensation Act;

APPROPRIATION BILL

Final passage and approval of the appropriation bill providing sufficient funds for the support of the Marine Corps at an average strength of 1002 officers and 19,500 men and providing for the construction of the depot of supplies at San Francisco.

The accomplishments of the Bureau of Ordnance since the appointment of Secretary Wilbur include:

The installation of a more satisfactory fire control system, at an expenditure of $625,000, on the Lexington and Saratoga;

The awarding of contracts for the completion of 57,300 cartridge tanks;

The settlement of cancelled contracts and the settlement of ordnance contracts held up by the Comptroller General.

Greater strides in other departments in the concerted plan to advance the efficiency of the Navy also have been made and have been detailed in reports from the various heads of the Navy Department.

OUR CITY GOVERNMENT

two years' behind in its work of preparing street improvement ordinances, and where it recently admitted that it had overdrawn its accounts $104,000.

The City Council recently discovered that the city's income from taxes will be $2,000,000 greater this year than had been anticipated and in five minutes they had set aside $1,000,000 of this for the City Engineer for repairing the streets and placed the other $1,000,000 in the general fund for city governmental expenditures. Thus in a few minutes the cost of the city government this year jumped from $70,000 a day to $76,369 a day, or from $18,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year. The Mayor took no interest in this important matter, but under the new charter the disposal of this $2,000,000 would have been directed by the Mayor and not the Council. Then, too, the Mayor could now, and can under the new charter, make certain, through conferences with and reports from the efficiency department, Board of Public Works and the City Engineer that the $1,000,000 set aside for street-repair work will be used for repairing holes in the streets. It may be taken for granted that the Mayor will take no interest in the matter, as it has not been officially called to his attention.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND

And yet the average taxpayer looks to the Mayor to see that he gets service for his money. All day long will be found in the City Hall uninformed property owners and taxpayers inquiring for the office of the Mayor, where they will go tell their troubles and try to find out why their street is not paved, or not cleaned, or why the storm waters gather in their streets. When nothing happens, the property owners return to the City Hall and tackle the Council, and then their petitions start the rounds of the departments until it gets back to the Council and is then referred to a committee. There it will hang fire before some kind of a report is made and then back the matter will come to the Council, which may or may not do anything about it. It was to prevent just this sort of inefficiency that both the present and the new charter provide that the Mayor shall be the city chief executive, the general manager, who is hired to get things done. The responsibility for making the most of his job and his opportunities for efficient service for his employers, the taxpayers, is then up to the Mayor, and under the present and the new charter he can be as successful in keeping down expenses and increasing efficiency as he wants to be. No general manager of any business is a czar, but he must work with the heads of departments and with his board of directors, which in the case of the city government is the City Council. Most recent Mayors have ignored the City Council or quarreled with it. The result has been that the Council has taken unto itself much executive work which rightfully belonged to the Mayor and which, under the new charter, the Mayor has an opportunity to regain through his control of the funds allotted to the departments and through a continuation of his present power of appointing members of boards and commissions. True, he must, as at present, secure confirmation by the Council, of the appointments of commissioners, but no Council working in harmony and co-operation with a Mayor who will respect the Council's rights as well as defend his own, will hamper a Mayor whose appointments are obviously dictated by a sincere desire to place on commissions high-grade men and women who desire to do their part to make the city government efficient and economical.

POLICE PLAN SAFETY TIPS TO CHILDREN

Sergt. McCaleb is Picked to Talk in Schools; List of "Don'ts" Ready

Don't speak to strangers.

Don't ride in a stranger's automobile.

Don't take candy from strangers.

Along with their readin' and writin' and gymnastics, the school children of Los Angeles are to be given a course in Safety First and Crime Prevention this year, and these are some of the "don'ts" they will hear. They are not to be taught from a textbook, nor by one of their attractive lady teachers, but a real, live, experienced policeman will lecture them on the evils of running across streets, the danger of skipping rope in the middle of the public highways, and the dire possibilities of not heeding the fire bell.

Sergt. J. A. McCaleb of 4607 South Park avenue, a member of the Los Angeles police force for fourteen years, has been appointed by Director Heath to carry this message of safety to the grammar grades, junior high schools, and into the high schools of this city.

Genial, jovial and gentle, McCaleb has also a keen insight into the proper appeal to impress the kiddies and older children with the need for their co-operation in taking care of Los Angeles traffic, of preventing as many accidents as possible, of safeguarding themselves against possible abductors with their tempting candies or motor rides. He will instill into them a sense of discipline in keeping within bounds, in acting quickly and obediently in case of fire alarm, and keeping themselves healthy by bathing and drinking water specified for their personal use.

With Capt. J. J. Mart of the Juvenile Department, 156 North Spring street, Sergt. McCaleb has been mapping out a program that will cover the entire school district. He has been gathering literature and material, and has even expressed himself as willing to take a course in "elocution" if necessary to get across his message.

District's Organization Meeting to be Held in South Pasadena

Arrangements have been completed for the first district organization meeting of Republican women in preparation for the Coolidge-Dawes campaign in Los Angeles county, according to an announcement yesterday by officials of the Republican Study Club. FISH ASKS TO DIVORCE RICH WIFE

Actor Says Her Business of Vacuum Cleaning Not Conducive to Home Life

Mrs. Minnie Fish was a whale in the vacuum cleaner business, according to the testimony of her husband, Charles Howard Fish, screen actor, in the hearing of his suit for divorce before Judge Hollzer. Fish is known on the screen as Howard Truesdell.

She makes $50,000 a year out of her vacuum cleaner business, Fish declared; but she lost her husband by it, according to the testimony.

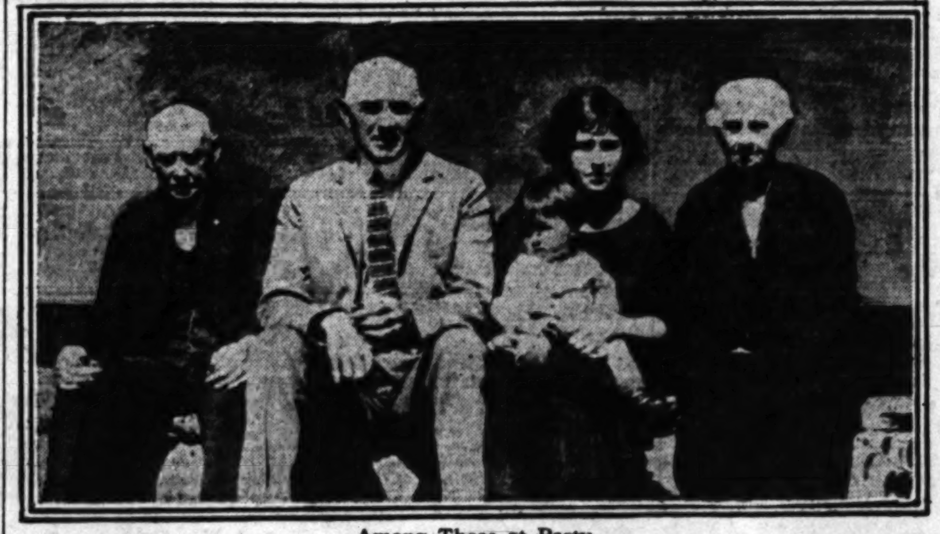
The cares of her manufacturing enterprise made domestic life impossible; Mrs. Fish nagged and interfered with his work and worried him so that his health was affected, Fish declared.

While she was travelling in Europe, she wrote him a letter containing the following message:

"Marriage in our case avails neither of us anything and each may find congenial companions, at least, if that bond can be severed."

CELEBRATE FIFTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

Aged Couple, Wedded in 1866, Give Dinner to Family



Among Those at Party

CELEBRATING their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. David Austin Mulvane gave a dinner last night at their home, 532 North Oxford street, at which all the members of their family living in Southern California were present.

Those gathered at the table were Austin Brown Mulvane, with his four daughters, Miss Virginia and Mary, Mrs. Roland Reno, and her small son, Roland, all of San Bernardino; Mrs. John A. McDonagh, with her husband, from Ocean Park, and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Torrey, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mulvane.

David Austin Mulvane served four years in the Civil War as a member of Company B, Eightieth Ohio, Fifteenth Army Corps. He enlisted October 6, 1861, and was discharged August 13, 1865. The following year he married Miss Gertrude C. Brown and later the family lived at Enterprise, Kan., where Mrs. W. J. Ehrsam, a daughter, still resides. Three children were born of the marriage and there are nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, all of whom are living.

The Mulvanes came to Los Angeles in 1908. He was the manager of the Consolidated Pacific Cement and Plaster Company until 1919, when it was absorbed by another organization, at which time he retired. He will be 81 years of age Christmas Day.

DEFENSE DAY TEST OF CITY

PARADES WILL SHOW READINESS FOR CRISIS

be led by a detachment of artillery troops from Fort MacArthur and detachments from the Arcadia balloon field, National Guard and naval forces. Then will come the reserve army of civilians. Col. Dwight M. Green, commander of the Three Hundred Sixty-fourth Infantry, Organized Reserves, will marshal this procession.

SKELETON OF ARMY

The civilian defense army in the local district is composed of business and professional men and workers, many of whom have been commissioned in the Organized Reserves. They represent the skeleton organization which is to be the nucleus of the volunteer army in time of war. The primary purpose of the day is to permit these civilian officers to demonstrate the results of their work in building up these volunteer organizations and to give men of military age an opportunity to show their patriotism by marching in the parade.

Commanding officers of units in the Organized Reserves, with which the civilian volunteers will be asked to march for Denfense Day, include the following:

Headquarters, One Hundred and Eighty-second Infantry Brigade, Lieut.-Col. Joseph W. Sutphen, 814 Merchants National Bank Building.

Three Hundred and Sixty-third Regiment Infantry, Col. Dan Morgan Smith, 1570 Crescent Boulevard, Hollywood.

Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Regiment Infantry, Col. Dwight M. Green, 700 Marsh-Strong Building.

Three Hundred and Sixteenth Engineers Regiment, Maj. William S. Post, 840 Crenshaw Boulevard.

Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Field Artillery, Lieut.-Col. Thomas E. Jennings, 140 West Queen, Inglewood.

Three Hundred and Sixteenth Medical Regiment, Lieut.-Col. Harry X. Cline, 1130 Brockman Building.

Ninety-first Division Train headquarters, Maj. Edward S. Dobbin, Long Beach.

NONDIVISIONAL UNITS

Three Hundred and Forty-ninth Regiment Engineers, Col. H. C. Mower, 512 North Wilson avenue, Alhambra.

Three Hundred and Ninth Military Police Battalion, Maj. Harry A. Comeau, 925 West Thirty-sixth street.

The Coast Artillery Corps reserves headquarters are at 629 Detwiler Building, to which all inquiries may be directed.

Pat's Ancient Joke

Pat is so fond of expressing his views on subjects of national importance that if he cannot get a listener it does not upset him at all, he just talks to himself.

He was a gardener, and his employer, at last, got very fed up with the man's constant mutterings, and one day said to him:

"Pat, doesn't it ever occur to you that your constant mutterings and talking to yourself are a great annoyance to other people? Why do you talk to yourself?"

"Shure, sir," replied the Irishman, "I have two reasons for that?"

"What are your reasons?"

"One of them," replied Pat, "is that I like to talk to a sensible man, and the other that I like to hear a sensible man talk."—[Exchange.

TO PHOTOGRAPH CARIBOU

Jack Hornby, hermit and explorer, left Edmonton, Alta., recently for the barren lands in company with Capt. Critchell-Bullock and H. A. Glenn for the purpose of taking photographs of the caribous' migration across the barrens. The party expects to spend the winter in the Far North. Hornby has received permission from the Canadian government to bring out a pair of wild muskox. He does not know whether he can do this, but he is going to try, and if he succeeds he will endeavor to ascertain what can be done in the way of domesticating these animals.—[Indianapolis News.

WASHINGTON WARNING ON WAR NOW HEEDED

proved that Washington was right.

We failed to learn the lesson of preparedness in 1812, in 1846, in 1861 and in 1898; and our last example of unreadiness in 1917, when our deficiencies in preparedness were so mercilessly exposed, is still fresh in our minds; 1917 showed us to be not only unprepared to fight but also even unprepared to begin preparation. The million men assumed to be ready to spring to arms overnight were confronted with the difficulty of not knowing where to leap and having no arms to which to spring.

Although the possibility of our being drawn into the World War had been recognized for many months, there were no plans to meet the situation. Our officials knew not which way to turn; confusion reigned supreme and in spite of our strenuous efforts and unlimited money, with the entire resources of the country strained to the breaking point, it was a year and more before our first divisions were ready to fight and, at the battle of St. Mihiel, seventeen months after our entry into the war, Gen. Pershing had to depend largely on French artillery and planes and upon British bombing squadrons to make up the deficiencies which still existed in the American Army.

LESSON IS LEARNED

With the lessons of the World War still fresh in mind, Congress on June 4, 1920, placed on our statute books, as a part of the law of the land, the National Defense Act and created the Army of the United States, which consists of the Regular Army, the National Guard and Organized Reserves, the first two forming our first echelon of defense and the latter our second line on which our great dependence must rest in case we become involved in a war of any magnitude. The act provides that it shall be the duty of the War Department to prepare plans for national defense and for the mobilization of the nation and its material resources in an emergency.

Under this provision the War Department has prepared plans and, with the approval of the President, has designated the 12th inst., the sixth anniversary of the battle of St. Mihiel, as Defense Test Day, the primary purpose of which is to enable our people to visualize the initial processes necessary to muster our forces for national defense. It is to be a day given to patriotic gatherings by citizens of each community during which everyone will learn his place and task in the defense of the country should our security be threatened. It will be a demonstration of our military organization and plans, and of our dependence upon the great body of citizen soldiers, supported by the patriotism of every community throughout the land.

NEW SCHEME USED

In the World War, after enormous expenditures and serious loss of time, masses of untrained individuals were concentrated in a few centers distant from home ties and associations where they were segregated and trained under the greatest difficulties. Profiting by these experiences the plan today contemplates skeleton units, partially trained in advance, which can be concentrated locally when necessary. In an emergency the change from peace strength to war footing must be rapid and, to be effective, must be without confusion, and the transition is dependent upon the perfection of the plans and their comprehension by the general public.

Units of the Regular establishment and the National Guard, which constitute our first line of defense, must be ready to take the field without delay and their actual preparation should consist only in recruiting them to full strength and arming, equipping and completing the training of additional personnel needed for this purpose.

Behind the first line we have the great body of reserves which must constitute the bulk of our armies. The units in this force have been allocated to sections of the country according to population. Reserve officers have been assigned to local units and the defense test will be a trial of their knowledge of the duties which will automatically devolve upon them, to recruit, shelter, supply, equip, train and otherwise care for their respective organizations.

The War Department has not reached final conclusions as to how some of the questions, which are bound to arise are going to be solved and it is believed that the results of the defense test will be of great benefit in the preparation of future plans.

Never before in the history of this country have our citizens been asked to give serious though to the problems confronting this nation in the event of an emergency until war was actually at our doors. In the past, these problems have had to be solved under the pressure of necessity and expediency when mistakes were paid for in blood and treasure.

Although there is not a war cloud in sight, all patriotic citizens will be asked on the 12th inst. to play the same parts which they would be called upon to play in time of national peril, and it is hoped that the demonstration will bring home to the American people the fact that it is necessary to have some preliminary organization, in order to avoid the dangers of confusion and delay, if war comes.

It is hoped that the whole question of national defense and the necessity for preparedness will be brought to the attention of the American people and that all will come to realize the truth of Washington's century-old message, "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

Rather Overdone

Mr. M., who was dining out, had done lavish justice to the good things set before him. By way of a grateful apology he remarked with a beaming smile directed toward the hostess: "I've always heard, Mrs. Blank, that the highest compliment one can pay the housekeeper is to eat heartily. You observe that I have been exceedingly polite."

"Thank you, Mr. M.," smiled back the hostess. "Indeed, I think that you have carried politeness to the point of flattery."—[Boston Transcript.

A Friendly Tip

"Is Mrs. Gabbie at home?" asked the caller.

"Be good luck, ma'am, she's not," replied the Irish maid; "but if ye're wise ye'll lave yer card an' skeedaddle out o' here, for she's likely to be back most any minute now."—[Boston Transcript

BEYOND HUMAN NATURE

A Massachusetts court rules that a pedestrian is not obliged to jump out of the way of an automobile. Maybe—but it takes a lot of faith, hope and stubbornness not to.

CHANGED FRONTS

Mussolini clings as tightly to his silk tile as Charlie Bryan does to his skull cap. Even at the Italian beaches, where citizens wander in sport attire, the new chieftain is never seen save under the shining majesty of a glossy pot-hat. Some of his compatriots believe that he takes it to bed with him. It may be said that it imparts dignity and grace that might otherwise be lacking.

BRAGGING

Recently, in the business section, clerks, bellboys, messenger boys, waiters and taxicab drivers were asked what they would do if they suddenly came into possession of $1,000,000. Many were to be commended as to their disposition of such a large sum of money, but one messenger boy had no philanthropic intentions. Right off the bat he answered: "Gee! Why, if I had 1,000,000 bucks I would buy the finest yacht afloat, stack her from bow to stern with the finest wine of California and then I'd join the Mormons."

THE AFFAIRS OF ANATOLE

Anatole France tells of some of his troubles. In one of his stories he wrote: "Far off in the distance Vesuvius was smoking." Then trouble began, for seismologists proved that Vesuvius was not smoking at the time referred to. "I sat down and thought and thought," says the great Frenchman, "and finally changed it to 'Vesuvius was laughing.' Everyone was very well satisfied."

The atrocities of Tiberius also troubled him. He spoke of the atrocities to his chambermaid, who replied: "I'd say, sir, it may be true. But also I'd say it may all be thought up by reporters."

Since that day Anatole France has been sifting history.

STILL THE SAME

It is of interest to learn—in case you are not old enough to remember about it—that a good many years ago a man by the name of William Jennings Bryan advised that what ailed us was too low prices for everything and that high prices would cure us. He rode for the Presidency on that notion and he laid his defeat to the money power, but the common sense of the common people had something to do with it. This same Mr. Bryan is now largely engaged in hurling reproach and discredit at our problematical ancestors, the monkeys, and he is considerably exercised over the high cost of living. Can this be the same Mr. Bryan? If it is the same Mr. Bryan, can it be equaled in all the annals of open-faced flubdub? No monkey was ever accused of changing his mind like that on any paramount issue.

PESSIMISM VERSUS OPTIMISM

To many at the present time the word optimism is like the proverbial red rag to the bull. But why it should be is hard to tell. There is a great difference between an idealist and a visionary. Perhaps all visionaries are idealists, but every idealist is not a visionary. An idealist may be very practical at times. Of course, an optimism that keeps our heads in the clouds to the utter disregard of the direction our feet are taking is not only foolish, but dangerous. We need sweepers for our crossings, certainly. But when these sweepers labor so energetically that their work results in nothing but dust clouds of problems to blind us we believe that there is need of an occasional reminder of the blue of the sky, the warmth of the sun and the singing of the birds in the treetops. To look always at the hole instead of the doughnut is not only foolish, but very unsatisfying to one's appetite.

PANGS OF IRELAND

The rulers of the Irish Free State are likely to make Ireland unpopular with a lot of the Irish. They are trying to induce the exclusive use of the ancient Gaelic tongue as the language of the island. Efforts have been made to compel the printing of newspapers, time tables, announcements and official documents in Gaelic. The somber business of the courts must also be transacted in the tongue of the pioneers. This is embarrassing to a lot of perfectly good Irishmen. They have been born and brought up on the English language and really know no other. William Butler Yeats, the poet, declared in a speech in the Irish Senate that he had tried hard to learn Gaelic and flunked. He had labored faithfully to acquire the original tongue of his native land, but had failed. When a Dublin bard cannot learn Gaelic it is time to pass it up. There is no more call for the Irish of today enforcing their Gaelic speech than there would be for an American Congress endeavoring to compel Wall street to do its business in the phrase of the red-skinned Algonquins who browsed over Manhattan Island before Columbus was ever heard of. The sentimental patriots who would inflict Gaelic as the daily speech of their people are but emphasizing their incapacity for self-government. If Boston can live and thrive under the English language Kilkenny should be able to pull through.

A PITIFUL FRAUD

Savage and smarting under the dismal failure of Gompers's $500,000 campaign to unionize Los Angeles, the misleaders of union labor have undertaken a new campaign of mendacity and venomous malice against this city.

This attack is based upon faked and forged "quotations" from the Los Angeles Times. By circulating these lies, they are trying to advertise Los Angeles throughout the country as a ruined city.

With a brazen shamelessness that Dunlap, the badge bandit, would shrink from, the laborite papers are printing imaginary and false "extracts" from The Times in which this newspaper is represented as warning every one to stay away from this city; as confessing that we are in a desperate situation and that every one coming here comes to a city of peril. Other papers in communities jealous of the success and progress of Los Angeles are gleefully reprinting the ridiculous forgery.

The objective of this attack is plain. Having failed to fasten the label of industrial serfdom on Los Angeles, the laborite bosses are trying to erect a barrier of poisoned propaganda with which to scare travelers, settlers and tourists away. Having failed to rule, they are trying to ruin.

The well-financed, highly-organized campaign of the American Federation of Labor to bring Los Angeles under the yoke of unionism failed, as have all its previous efforts to the same end, not so much because of the sturdy resistance of our business and industrial interests, unfaltering as that has been, but because of the determination of the workers themselves to maintain their freedom. Many of these workers have come to Los Angeles from union-bossed communities to escape the tyranny of the walking delegate and they have no desire to contribute to such a condition here. Well paid, with plenty of work, with the right to earn as much as they can and to sell their labor as they choose, the army of free workmen who are its beneficiaries are the strongest defenders of the open shop in Los Angeles.

With the failure of the unionizing attack, the word went out to blacken the name of Los Angeles by propaganda. For some time it has been evident that this new campaign was in progress; that it was nation-wide; that it had some organized, centralized impulse.

Clippings that have come from union-labor papers in Florida and elsewhere reveal the source and the fountain head of this poison plot.

The forged editorial in question appeared first in the Tampa Observer, printed in Tampa, Fla., with the following introduction:

"BOOM IN LOS ANGELES IN FEARFUL COLLAPSE

"BUSINESS CONDITIONS THERE WORST IN HISTORY AND WILL CAUSE TENS OF THOUSANDS TO AVOID CALIFORNIA—FLORIDA WILL GET ARMIES OF TOURISTS WHO USUALLY GO TO THAT STATE EVERY WINTER—BUT FLORIDA DOES NOT NEED THE TENS OF THOUSANDS OF UTTERLY JOBLESS AND BROKE IN CALIFORNIA

"The conditions in California are alarming. In Los Angeles many thousands are out of employment. Building operations have ceased. Business is crushed, and the black eye given will drive thousands to Florida this winter, who would otherwise have gone to California.

"California itself is making effort to stop the senseless stream of arrivals.

"The following editorial from the Los Angeles Times, the greatest newspaper of the West, tells a horrible story and yet while the conditions may bring thousands to Florida we need, it may bring other thousands not needed. Here is what The Times says:"

And what The Times is quoted as saying is a screed attacking Los Angeles that forms a part of the propaganda that hirelings of the labor-union bosses have been sending through the country in an attempt to bolster up their collapsed closed-shop campaign in this city. When they found that, emanating from known labor-union sources, it carried no weight, they used the name of The Times to give it credence, as other criminals write the name of some person or firm of established financial integrity at the bottom of a forged check.

They picked out a Florida paper because they felt that Florida would have the keenest interest in doing damage to California. They picked out The Times for obvious reasons. They felt that its loyalty to the interests of Southern California were known far and wide. Consequently a "confession" in The Times that Los Angeles is ruined and a warning in The Times to people to stay away would have a multiplied force and effect. They earnestly hoped that this would damage The Times as their dynamite had failed to do.

The Times never said editorially, never printed anywhere in its news columns that: "'Never in the history of Los Angeles have there been so many unemployed persons here as there are at present. There is no way to determine the exact number, but there is no doubt that there are many thousands. So serious has the situation become that it actually is a menace to the community. Several causes are responsible for existing conditions, the principal one being the sudden and unexpected collapse of building activities in all subdivisions and to a considerable extent, throughout the entire city. So far as we know, this was brought about by the shutting down of the credit formerly extended to builders. The cessation of building, coupled with bad business conditions, brought on by the live-stock disease, has caused a widespread business depression in this section. It is useless to attempt to conceal the matter; it is known by everybody in Los Angeles and to thousands of persons who are leaving here every day."

The Times never said editorially, never printed anywhere in its news columns that: "'On top of the unemployment caused by a let-up in building and the depression caused by a let-up in other lines and the mouth disease, there has come another element of depression which is even more disastrous in its effect upon the community. That is the never-ending attempt to bring people to Los Angeles despite the unfavorable conditions now existing. It is sure to result in harm to the city for yars to come, as practically every person who comes here, lured by false advertising, is certain to be disappointed, as rents are outrageouslyhigh and employment cannot be had. True, in all probability present conditions are only temporary, but that is all the more reason why the indecent deception practiced upon strangers should cease. We believe it would be beneficial to Los Angeles were the City Council, by official action, to acquaint the public at large with the fact that, at the present time, it is useless for persons to come to this city in the hope of securing employment."

The Times never said editorially, never printed anywhere in its news columns that: "'Unless something be done, and that speedily, to check the senseless stream of arrivals, practically every line of retail business will be impaired for the reason that men and women who are steadily employed will curtail their purchases, in the belief that they, too, may soon be unemployed. Were this fear to become general, it would result in incalculable harm. The way to remove this menace is to remove the cause. The cause is the large number of unemployed, daily growing larger. Somebody in authority should stop the false propaganda being spread throughout the nation relative to 'opportunities' in Los Angeles. The truth should be told. Tens of thousands of men and women now here are unable to secure even one day's employment. More are continuously on the way. They will add to the existing distress. Warn them to stay away until Los Angeles again gets upon its industrial feet. It is impossible to continue as at present. We are not treating ourselves right, and we are not treating the thousands of strangers right who are within our gates, nor those who are coming, unless warned to stay away."

The Times never said editorially, never printed anywhere in its news columns that: "'The retail merchants of Los Angeles are as vitally interested as are the wage-earners in restoring normal conditions in this city. They have influence in quarters where labor is ignored. By checking the flow of humanity to Los Angeles, they will be helping themselves as well as the entire community.

"'Every labor paper in the United States and Canada and every news agency which disseminates labor news is requested to broadcast the facts contained in this article. The truth always helps.'"

Sentence by sentence, paragraph by paragraph, this pretended editorial from The Times is a malicious forgery. It shows to what depths of palpable trickery and slander the unionite wreckers will go in their effort to bring down the city which has defied and resisted their efforts to dominate it; incidentally the lengths they will go in an attempt to injure the newspaper which for more than thirty years has stood for industrial freedom and the right of men to labor and to sell their labor as freemen.

Heavy, Heavy Hangs Over His Head

THE CITYWARD TIDE

While as a whole the population of the United States showed an increase of 14.9 per cent in the decade preceding 1920, the census year, the urban rate of increase was 25.7 per cent. This fact has greatly worried our agrarian economists. It has given them an excuse to sound a strong pessimistic note. If one would believe some of them, going to the city means going to the devil.

Try as they will, however, the economists cannot stem the cityward tide, though they point insistently to the roads that lead away from town and temptations to the peaceful haunts of Nature. Give the average modern city dweller an isolated farm and, though it may be the fulfillment of his long-cherished dream of quiet rural life, "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," in four cases out of five, particularly if there be grown sons and daughters to consider, he will be treading the city pavements again within a year or two and going home of an evening to his little apartment or bungalow. Why? Because he soon gets his fill of country delights and his family gets its fill even sooner than he. They all sigh for the city and they return to it on the first opportunity.

Three hundred New York office employees of a big oil refining company were invited by the head of the concern to remove to Lawrenceville, Ill., a small town in the lower Wabash Valley, where they were offered "homes of their own" on liberal terms. They all accepted the invitation with more or less enthusiasm, as they had been cooped up in small flats and apartments in and about the metropolis and here was a chance to expand under the open sky, "out where a man's a man" and that sort of thing. They went to Lawrenceville, with their families and their furniture, and settled down under their own rooftrees.

At first they had a lot of fun, chiefly at the expense of their "hick" neighbors. But soon their dream of happiness amid rural surroundings faded. They grew tired of "hog and hominy" and they had no relish for movie films they had seen on Broadway three years before. One by one they left the model "homes of their own" and loaded families and furniture aboard eastbound trains, until now it is reported that over half of them have deserted Main street and are again to be found within a happy distance of the Great White Way.

The Canadian government, thinking to reward its ex-soldiers after their return from the World War, offered each of them a farm if he would go and live upon and cultivate it. Nearly all the city men who accepted the offer returned to the bright lights within two years and most of them are there today. The benevolent plan did not work. The young men complained that they found country life too lonely, that young women would not marry them and go and live on the farm, and so they abandoned their holdings.

From a poetic as well as an economic point of view this does not read right. There should be some way of making life out on the land more attractive to young people. Luther Burbank says it can be done, but he doesn't tell how. The radio, telephone and automobile are helping, but the lure of the bright lights seems irresistible. Still the pendulum always may be counted to swing backward as well as forward. Perhaps the next census will show a populative gain for the rural districts. But most of those born in the cities are happier when they remain there.

RIPPLING RHYMES

THE HANDOUT

I say, "All right," to any wight who asks me for a shilling; this sum, no doubt, will buy him kraut, as he goes sadly drilling; when I am broke some friendly folk will stake me thus, God willing. I might be wise and moralize to pilgrims darkly faring, when they draw near with sigh and tear and ask me for a herring; I might rebuke the human fluke, but my small wad I'm sharing. No man can say how soon he may be training with the busted; the bank may fail to which his kale he has unwisely trusted; his pools of oil may sour and spoil and leave his soul disgusted. I've seen the pluto lose all his loot between the dawn and gloaming, I've seen him strive to find a five, his cast-off garments combing; I've seen the great knocked out by fate and set to bootless roaming. I know not when my iron men may vanish down a crater, for fakers wait before my gate to get me soon or later; promoters come, with fife and drum, and pipe dreams great and greater. And if some morn I find I'm shorn of all my hard-earned smackers, and feel the need, as on I speed, of chunks of cheese and crackers, may I not meet in lane or street the sternly moral clackers. May some fat guy hand me a pie as I hand pies to drifters, as I give cakes to dusty jakes and foaming Volstead snifters; may I not find the preachy kind, the tightwad, cold uplifters.

The Lancer

NO DOUBT I should stop at this point and weep bitter tears over the cruel fate of His Highness, the Prince of Wales. Everybody stares at him; and his vacation is all mussed up; and it's terrible.

I know that I should weep; but the great salt tears will not come. This is because I know that the only thing that would worry this nice little Prince more than being stared at—is not being stared at.

Sometimes I am inclined to think that they almost believe it themselves—these celebrities with their gestures of annoyance at the adoration of the crowds. But it is only a gesture; they would simply wither up and die without it. Yes, sir; they just love this stuff down to the innermost recesses of their souls.

Some of them are even frank about it. Mary Pickford is. And Mary really has her crowds. Mary has crowds that make the Prince of Wales's fiercest congestion look like a deserted village.

Several times Mary has narrowly escaped being killed in the crush. Once—I believe this was in Chicago—the mob suddenly discovered Mary in a booth at a charity bazaar. They made a rush for her. The woman who got there first was crushed up against the rail by those who came rushing behind her. Before Mary's horrified eyes the woman's back was bent back over the rail; and she died right there.

But, although sometimes she is scared to death, Mary is perfectly frank in saying that she loves these mob scenes and would be desolated without them.

Viola Dana, who also has her crowds, is still more frank. "I always make a gesture as though I were annoyed to death," says Viola. "But if they didn't pay any attention to me I would run down the street after them yelling, 'Hey, wait! I'm little Viola Dana. A couple 'a thousand of you folks come right back here and annoy me with your stares.'"

Down in the bottom of his heart the Prince loves it, too. I'll bet that his letters home to his pa and ma are gurgling with the joy of being annoyed by the crowds.

He doesn't give a very convincing picture of a hounded celebrity in a frenzy seeking solitude—when he leaves his box at the races and goes down with the crowd to the paddock.

Well, I dare say that is all part of the prince business; being chased by crowds of reporters and saying, "Pshaw, if they'd only leave me alone;" and not meaning it.

But I can't see His Royal Highness as a very pitiful picture any way you look at it. In my opinion, he has a pretty soft job and gets a lot of money for a very little work.

Royal Scandals

SINCE the story appeared in The Times about Gaby Deslys and King Manuel—how their romance was an affair of state arranged by diplomats—two other such instances have been brought to my attention.

Pola Negri tells me that it is one of the open diplomatic secrets of Europe that a similar romance was arranged for the late Czar of Russia in his younger days, with an opera singer. To the dismay of the diplomats, the young Czar really fell in love with her—which complicated matters considerably.

Also an old theatrical man who knew all about it tells me that the world-famous romance between Cleo de Merode and King Leopold of Belgium never had the slightest foundation in fact. It was a clever press-agent story that went down into diplomatic history as the truth.

Cleo needed the publicity; and the gay old King was too indifferent to his reputation to care what anybody said about him. As a matter of fact, the lovely Cleo is said to have been about the only one with whom he had never had an affair.

His experiences comprehended most of the rest of the female population of Europe.

The Reporter's Funeral

I WENT to an old reporter's funeral the other day.

He had been a man of brilliant and cultured mind—wasted in the least appreciated of all professions.

I thought of all the reputations he had helped to make. Of all the lawyers—most of them men of little, cheap, tawdry, commonplace minds—whom he had puffed up to places of prominence and clienteles of profit.

Not one of them was there to honor his passing.

It's a grand old world.

Public Opinion! Huh!

I ALWAYS make grand speeches—on the way home in my automobile after the meeting is over.

At the time I am actually speaking the piece I never can think what I ought to say. So I have to say it here in the Lancer—afterward.

This is what I wish I had said at a meeting where they were discussing religious persecution—from the standpoint of those who feel that they have endured an age-old persecution:

My philosophy of life is this: that no one can persecute you except your own conscience.

It doesn't matter in the least what people say. Especially those filled with religious prejudice.

Generally speaking, the man who, in this day and age, can descend to religious hatreds is incapable of opinions. His bad feeling and his hatred is more desirable than his good will. His good will would be a degradation.

I have had personal experience with stupid persecution.

During the early part of the war most of the government's secret service money was spent in hiring a lot of half-witted morons to chase me around and open my mail. I was usually the last one to read my mail. I am not revengeful; but I can't help the ven that it bored them as mu does me.

The reason for this flatt tention was this: that I ha a newspaper correspond the German army. And honest admiration for the cy of that army. Just a our army officers.

I could have ended all th and cry, I dare say, at My record and my consci clear. The Americanism family went back nearly and a half before the Rev ary War. I had upheld t ditions on this German trip and elsewhere. Coming had been fortunate enough back important military tion, which I delivered to th places in Washington.

But I had too much cont these flag-waving, tempor triots—most of whom are ronizing bootleggers and about their income taxe what they thought.

And so I am amazed th of culture and education sho low themselves to shriek religious prejudice of a lot ping bigots.

Says Everybody Does Not Know of Southland

Tells Los Angeles to Keep Up Its Advertising

... the world, and particularly New England, requires yet a considerable education regarding Southern California, according to ... E. Hodgkins, formerly of the field force of the All Year Club of Southern California, and now in Malden, Mass., just outside of Boston. Mr. Hodgkins returned to New England several months ago because of business connections. In a letter to C. G. Mil... executive secretary of the All Year Club, Mr. Hodgkins shows that New England collectively knows little of Southern California.

He writes, "Perhaps some of the subscribers to the All Year Club may still think that Los Angeles is known to all the world. Very likely they kid themselves into the belief that every one in the East, mind you—the East is—is so impressed with Los Angeles and Southern California, that such an organization as the All Year Club has now no important work to do. Flying Project Advantages Charted

Altitude Graph of Two Routes

Diagram shows advantages in lower altitude that proposed air-mail line between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City has over line to San Francisco now in use. Diagram prepared by department of meteorology and aeronautics of Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

ASKS DIRECT AIR MAIL HERE

Chamber of Commerce Seeks Aerial Postal Line Between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles

Data showing the advantages of a direct air-mail line between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City have been prepared by the department of meteorology and aeronautics of the Chamber of Commerce. This will be brought to the attention of the Second Assistant Postmaster-General in charge of air mail to show the practicability of the direct line when it is possible to establish it.

On June 30, last, the chamber took up with the postoffice officials the advantages to be gained by rescinding regulations for the transport of air mail to and from all California points only via San Francisco, suggesting that Los Angeles mail by the air route could be better served directly to Salt Lake. This was eventually acceded to and a considerable saving made thereby.

Since the beginning of the air mail an average of 1000 letters has been sent out from Los Angeles every day and 1000 letters have been received by air mail at Los Angeles daily. That this excellent showing could be greatly increased if better service could be given is confidently believed. The present service, while very much better than given at first, is twenty-one hours slower eastbound and nearly thirteen hours slower westbound, than San Francisco time.

Eastbound mail deposited at the Arcade Station so as to catch the Union Pacific at 10:30 a.m., reaches Salt Lake in time for the eastbound air-mail plane leaving there at 3:30 p.m. This is the plane that left San Francisco at 6 a.m. (the day before.) Total time Los Angeles to New York, 55 hours, 45 minutes. In other words, mail leaving Los Angeles on Monday morning will reach New York Wednesday afternoon.

Westbound mail goes directly to San Francisco, arriving there about 6 p.m., and is transferred to the train leaving for Los Angeles at 8 p.m., reaching Los Angeles at 9:45 a.m., the next day. Total time New York to Los Angeles, 48 hours and 30 minutes. Mail deposited for the air route Monday morning reaches Los Angeles Wednesday morning.

In order that the Postoffice Department may be fully advised as to the practicability of the Salt Lake-Los Angeles route, a profile of distance and altitude forms part of this report.

The overcoming of gravity in air travel is as important as in any other kind of transportation, so that low altitudes are always sought in projecting air lines.

Maximum altitude, San Francisco-Salt Lake route, approximately 8000 feet.

Maximum altitude, Los Angeles-Salt Lake route, approximately 6000 feet.

The distance between San Francisco and Salt Lake or Los Angeles and Salt Lake are about the same, approximately 680 miles.

The Los Angeles-Salt Lake route has the decided advantage in winter, owing to the southern route being far south of the average storm track; flying weather conditions are less favorable over the San Francisco-Salt Lake route.

Comparative visibility and wind velocity, which are important factors in flight, are for 1920, as follows:

	Percentage of cloudiness		Wind velocity (miles per hour)
	8 a.m.	5 p.m.
San Francisco	4.9	4.8	10.2
Los Angeles	4.1	3.4	6.8

CALIFORNIANS BUY ISLAND

Trio on Trip to British Columbia Purchase Site for Summer Resort Near Vancouver

R. H. Schwarskopf, Arcadia; Edwin Skedden, Monrovia, and A. F. Winter, Santa Fe Springs, recently returned from a two weeks' trip to British Columbia, which they pronounced one of the pleasantest outings they ever enjoyed. The trio purchased Qualmus Island, fifty miles northwest of Vancouver, and expect to return there next June for a more extended stay.

The Californians' new insular domain has an area of 240 acres and is described by the enthusiastic purchasers as a veritable fairyland of huge evergreen trees, mossy rocks, feathery ferns, pure spring water and splendid hunting and fishing.

A comfortable clubhouse is to be erected on Qualmus Island next spring and twenty cabin sites rented to acquaintances of the owners.

Paul Louis Lambert, former owner of the island, guide, trapper, miner and soldier of fortune, is a unique and interesting character who acted as guide for the Californians during their brief stay in the Northland.

OUTING REJUVENATES

Schwarskopf left home, the typical tired business man on the verge of a breakdown, but since returning he seems years younger, with a vastly greater capacity to enjoy life and attend to professional duties.

"When we boarded a boat at Los Angeles Harbor," he relates, "we bade good-by to business and for seventeen never-to-be-forgotten days we were like three boys just out of school, ready to enjoy their vacation to the limit. It wasn't long until we had 'most everybody on the vessel laughing either with or at us. Until then we never realized we could laugh so hard, a rib-loosening exercise we kept up almost continually until we returned home.

"Those wonderful days on Qualmus Island! Did we eat? Did we sleep? I'll say we did! Such refreshing slumber and all-consuming appetites we never before experienced. In that latitude the summer days are so long and the nights so short it seemed we scarcely had gone to sleep on our fragrant fern beds until we were routed out for breakfast.

"Our remarkable guide appeared to have concealed somewhere about his person a sort of Aladdin's lamp, which produced nearly anything we asked for. Almost everything in the line of hunting and fishing, scenery, sports and curious, interesting things seemed to be at Lambert's beck and call, ready to materialize when desired. For a test we mentioned wild goats, those hardy little animals usually found only in the highest, most inaccessible mountains—and he showed us scores of them right on our own island!

"As for fishing, here is a picture of my first salmon, an eighteen-pounder. I'll venture only one other fish story, which easily can be verified; canners send out boats regularly to pick up surplus fish caught by natives and tourists, who otherwise would be embarrassed with an overabundance of piscatorial riches.

"All kinds of deer, elk, moose, bear and other game animals are found within a few hours by boat. Southern visitors are surprised to find that veritable wilderness, practically untouched by the hand of man, begins a few miles north of Vancouver, a city larger than Long Beach and Pasadena put together. On our island there are millions of feet of the finest saw timber—gigantic firs and pines—fringed with a great variety of other beautiful trees. A splendid, never-failing spring on Qualmus Island made it a favorable Indian camping ground before the white men came.

"British Columbians are fine folks, but—oh, so slow! An energetic Californian feels an almost irresistable impulse to set off a few sticks of dynamite under one of them, just to make him move quickly.

PRICES SURPRISE

"When it comes to putting prices on their goods and services those people are away behind the times. What do you suppose we paid for a twenty-five-foot launch, with the services of a captain-engineer and sleeping quarters for four men? Twenty-five dollars a day would have been reasonable, but $3 was all we were asked. Can you beat it?

"A good many Canadians came down here to spend the winter, but much larger numbers would make the trip if more Southern Californian boosters went up there every summer and told the inhabitants what we had to offer in the way of climate, entertainment and investment opportunities. Many British Columbians have good-sized fish and lumber fortunes salted away. This large amount of capital is available for good investments."

Fed Up

She was reading aloud to her husband: "Towards the end of the ride they came to a ford and—"

"Oh, skip that!" he interjected. "I'm getting tired of those automobile jokes."—[Boston Transcript.

Compelled to be Cruel

Mrs. A. W. writes that she found her youngest boy pulling the puppy's tail and remonstrated with him for being so cruel. "Well, I just had to do it," was Jackie's reply. "You know Bobby and me and Muriel own Scraggs between us an' I only put in a dollar to buy him. Bobby an' Muriel say that only the tail is mine 'cause they own all the rest of him, an' I gotter do something with my part of the dog, ain't I? An' what can you do with a dog's tail 'cept pull it? I gotter be cruel till Bobby and Muriel let me have equal shares in Scraggs."—[Boston Transcript.

A Grave Subject

A young Scotchman fell in love with a charming girl, but could not screw up courage to ask her to be his wife. One day a brilliant idea occurred to him. He took her to the local churchyard and pausing before a large tombstone said: "Jean, ma grandfaither is buried here, my faither is buried here, an' ma mither is buried here—in fact, a' ma folk lie here. Wud ye no like tae lie here tae?" The lady said she "wud!" So they were married.—[Exchange.

Listening to It

"You're married aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, what do you do when your wife says she has nothing more to say?"

"I place myself in a comfortable position in the easiest chair in the house, and prepare to spend an hour listening to her say it."—[Weekly Edinburgh Scotsman.

CITY SCULPTORS PLAN EXHIBITION

Work to be Shown in Salon at Biltmore

Artist to Make Wiggins Bust to be Chosen

Exhibit to Run One Week is Open to Public

If Los Angeles were to burn tomorrow, what would be left for the world to regret?

The human suffering, answers Marius De Brabant, and the economic loss, but of vanished beauty, nothing. No Vesuvius could make of Los Angeles another Pompeii; the ashes would hold nothing worth digging up.

That thought of his lies behind a competitive exhibition to be held Monday night, the 15th inst., in the Biltmore salon by the sculptors of Los Angeles. At a conference last week he brought the sculptors together and they worked out the details.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, it seems, is to honor its veteran secretary, Frank Wiggins with a portrait bust. Of course, the first thought was to give the commission to an eastern sculptor. De Brabant, as a member of the art committee, said no.

"We have in Los Angeles," he said, "several sculptors of international reputation. Why not offer them the encouragement of local recognition?" So he summoned the whole tribe in conclave.

SCULPTORS PRODDED

"What," he asked, "is the matter with you sculptors? Here," he said, "at the Biltmore, we have a salon. Its purpose is to make a market for works of art wrought by the artists of Southern California, to broaden the acquaintance of the public with their work, and to offer them an opportunity to dispose of their output at commissions only sufficient to pay the costs of keeping the salon alive. But not since the salon was founded have I seen a single piece of sculpture exhibited here."

"We thought," answered the sculptors, "that it was a salon for painters only."

Mutual explanations followed, and the upshot of three hours' discussion was the exhibit now announced. Each sculptor who wishes to compete for the Chamber of Commerce commission will show two examples of his work and one trial piece, indicating how he thinks the Wiggins bust should be treated. The exhibit will be on display one week for the benefit of the general public and later a committee selected by the Allied Architects will name what they consider to be the most meritorious design.

COLONY LARGER

Among the better known sculptors of the Los Angeles art colony are: A. Phimester Proctor, David Edstrom, Carlo Romanelli, Cartaino Scarpitta, F. Tolles Chamberlain, Harold Swartz, Mrs. Julia Bracken Wendt, Miss Ella Buchanan, Miss Maud Daggett, Humberto Pedretti, Casper Gruenfeld, Grace W. Parkinson and Mrs. Laura Steere. Most of these and many others attended the Biltmore conference, and all, it is hoped, will be exhibitors.

"In all Los Angeles," said De Brabant, picking up the thread of his thought again, "we have four statues—one of Gen. Otis, one of Stephen White, a soldiers' monument and a monument to the veterans of the World War. In a city of more than 1,000,000 souls, only four attempts to give the people anything to feed the appetite of the man in the street for beauty. Think of Athens, think of Rome!

"Name the public buildings; which of them would be remembered as a loss to civilization, were it destroyed?

"Name the parks, the churches, the public squares, the fountains, the civic monuments of any sort. Can better be said for them?

"Where in the whole city is there anything that speaks with unquestionable authority for the beauty of the past that is California's? What have we, for instance, to help the stranger visualize the figure of Fra Junipero Serra? His memory is no more than a distant echo, smothered in the dust of the bustling present.

LOOK TO FUTURE

"Meanwhile we grow, and with every year it becomes more difficult and more costly to make provision for the future against needs that surely will rise to assail us, in the presence of our descendants, for our heedless haste. Quite definitely it is time that we made a beginning toward beautifying the city.

"There are more delightful private dwellings, I suppose, in Southern California than perhaps in any other countryside of the world, equal in area. Is it not extraordinary, then, that we should be so deficient in a civic sense of beauty?

"Something has been done with many of the newer public schools; on the whole, they are the most sightly, I dare say, in the country, but they stand alone among public buildings. Yet civic beauty is a tangible asset, no less than climate and landscape. Consider the tourist revenue of a city like Paris.

"In some manner not yet formulated, we must start taking serious thought of our deficiencies and how to supply them. So far as I know, there is no constituted agency of the city government charged with this duty. If I am wrong, the more reason for that agency to make itself heard and felt.

"Something should be reserved for the enjoyment and education of the people every time that an intersection of streets creates a place or square. At first that something may amount to no more than the reservation of a small plot of land, planted and kept green. Later will come statues and monuments. Cities grow slowly. But a beginning must be made and made now."

Trap for Earwigs

Why is an earwig and who ever conceived such a preposterous name for it? It is a garden insect which almost exclusively devotes its energies to English gardens, but somewhat recently they have found their way into this country. An English paper says: One of the best and simplest traps for these insects is to lay about several pieces of the hollow stems of plants, each six inches or so long. The stem of a sunflower does well. The insects creep into these hollow stems and can be shaken into a bowl of water each morning.—[Exchange.

"Officer, catch that man running there. He tried to kiss me!"

"S'll right, miss. There'll be another along in a minute."—[New York Mercury.

SAN DIEGO ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY
"The Coming West Point of the West."
Located on the Bay and Ocean at Pacific Beach, a delightful suburb of the Sunny San Diego!
A Military School of Highest Grade, Which is Rendering Distinctive Service to the Boys and Young Men of the State and Nation.

The University of California has each year designated the Academy as a "Division A" school, the highest scholastic rating a preparatory school can enjoy.

Within five years after its founding, the Academy secured the War Department's rating of "M" or "Essentially Military" school—a real military school as compared with "S.M.," or a semi-military organization.

Although there are schools charging from two hundred to six hundred dollars more per year than the Academy charges, there is positively no school in the West that offers more thorough academic instruction, better military training and discipline, and certainly none that exceeds it in a real heart interest in the needs of young life.

It has been found necessary since the fall enrollment, to enlarge some of our present buildings, and to build several new bungalows. A limited number may still be accepted for enrollment. Wire for reservations—

ALIEN BORN ARE ASSETS TO CITY

Play Important Part in Life of Community

Majority Are Engaged in Industrial Pursuits

Publish Sixteen Foreign Language Newspapers

The foreign-born population of Los Angeles and their newspapers play an important part in the life of the community, according to facts brought out in a survey conducted by Joseph B. Polonsky and Ellis Ranen, local representatives of foreign-language newspapers.

Sixteen foreign-language newspapers, six dailies and ten weeklies, are published in Los Angeles. They reach approximately 350,000 persons, the report stated.

MANY LANGUAGES SPOKEN

Twenty different languages are spoken in Los Angeles by the foreign-born, divided as follows: Armenian, 6600; Austrian, 3033; Belgian, Czecho-Slovakian, 1800; Danish, 3200; French, 16,300; German, 34,728; Greek, 3200; Hungarian, 5900; Italian, 34,370; Jugo-Slavia, 4600; Mexican, 43,-890; Norwegian, 2300; Polish, 3200; Portuguese, 500; Russian, 8750; Spanish, 1065; Swedish, 6200, and Swiss, 3000.

In classifying the foreign-born who live here it was found that contrary to the general opinion, the majority of them are engaged in industrial pursuits and business and that only 19 per cent are unskilled laborers. Nearly 3000 retail establishments are owned by foreign born, the majority of whose customers are their own race, the survey shows.

FACTOR IN SOCIETIES

Foreign societies, it is stated, were found to be playing an important part in educating the unassimilated population.

The foreign language newspapers are divided as follows: French, two weeklies; German, two weeklies; Greek, one weekly; Hungarian, one weekly; Italian two weeklies; Jewish, two daily and one weekly; Japanese, two daily; Slavonian, one weekly; Spanish, two daily; Swedish, one weekly.

Mr. Polonsky formerly was with the Committee on Public Information and Mr. Ranen formerly was with the American Red Cross. Both have had several years' experience in Americanization work.

Tirso River Dam

The dam on the Tirso River in Sardinia, officially opened April 28, creates an artificial lake with a capacity of 450,000,000 cubic meters of water, which will give an estimated annual output of 50,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric power and irrigate 75,000 acres of land. The cheap power created by this dam will permit local electrolytic treatment of zinc ores, which have been exported hitherto, and will favor the development of other industries in the region. This is the first of several similar projects in Sardinia to increase the agricultural and industrial developments of the island.

REPORTS ON ORIENT TRADE

Envoy Sent from Here Writes What is Needed to Establish Larger Business Dealings

A report on the foreign trade situation in Japan, China and the Orient generally has been received by Clarence H. Matson, manager of the Foreign Trade Department of the Chamber of Commerce, from Christopher M. Gordon, trade envoy recently sent to the Orient by the chamber.

In addition to a comprehensive outline of general conditions affecting trade with the Orient, Mr. Gordon gives the following as what he believes to be needful for the development of Los Angeles trade with Japan, China and the Far East:

A direct fast passenger and freight steamship line between Los Angeles and the Orient having Los Angles as the home port.

BETTER BANKING

Banking facilities to meet the requirements of our commercial and industrial enterprises abroad.

Better cable and wireless service.

A fuller acquaintance with and a deeper interest in the opportunities for profitable trade both ways between the Orient and Los Angeles.

Advertising in Asiatic trade centers of Los Angeles as a seaport and as an important manufacturing and distributing point.

More frequent and friendly intercourse with the East and as soon as possible a business men's excursion thereto under the auspices of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

JAPANESE ALERT

Mr. Gordon finds the Japanese an alert, progressive and industrious people and one with which Los Angeles would find it profitable to do business. The importance of Japan to Los Angeles, he says, is in the extensive market it presents for raw materials and for many of our manufactured products.

"Governed under a modern constitution," the report stated," absolutism for Nippon is gone, democracy is in the ascendent, religious freedom is established, free speech and a free press work for their benefit. Education has attained high standards and industrial and commercial ambitions have been given a free rein."

"The Dickens"

Many persons who do not care to swear at a time of misfortune or impatience relieve themselves by exclaiming "The Dickens," and if they stop to think of it at all they think the remark has some application to the writer, but the expression was made use of by Shakespeare who wrote a couple of centuries before Dickens was born. He makes use of the expression in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," where he puts the following words in the mouth of one of his characters: "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is."

The Sex and Secrets

A girl's idea of disloyalty is to keep a secret from a friend.

There is hardly anything more useful to a woman than a telephone when she has a secret to keep.

The preoccupied look on a girl's face when you are telling her a secret is caused by her trying to decide to whom she will tell it first.—[Boston Transcript.

BRAHMS QUARTET RETURNS

Like Fairy Godmother It Comes Again to KHJ, to Charm Radioland With High-Class Music

BY CLAIRE FORBES CRANE

One of the fairy godmothers we though had deserted us, suddenly [illegible] up again last night bringing a gift which made us forget our [illegible]. The godmother was the Wiley B. Allen Company, which [illegible] the Brahms Quartet, composed of Joseph Jean Gilbert, [illegible]; Marguerite Bitter, pianist; Ruthhellen Miller, soprano and [illegible] J. Steiner, 'cellist.

The quartet is a combination of the highest type of artists and offers variety and breadth of scope in program making. Last night the program opened with "Scene Religieuse" by Massenet. This sufficed to show the vast unseen audience that the musicians understood the [illegible] of perfection of ensemble, [illegible] of subduing the art of the individual for the good of the whole.

BRILLIANT FLUTIST

The entire program was a tribute to the fact that the Brahms Quartet considered Radioland sufficiently well versed in the classics to [illegible] the best one might offer. The brilliancy of Mr. Gilbert's flute playing has become a [illegible] among the lovers of his instrument. Last night he gave Doppler's "Souvenir Du Rigi" which is a flute solo with cello and piano accompaniment. It brought spontaneous applause.

Ruthhellen Miller possesses a voice of unusual quality and has [illegible] personal charm, which is essential in the art of broadcasting. Last night she showed [illegible] ability to interpret any type of song from the exalted sweetness of Shumann's "Thou Art Like a Flower" to the sparkle and fountain-like effervesence of Arditi's Concert Waltz.

Ferenz Steiner, the 'cellist of the quartet is master of technical perfection. The warmth of Popper's "Chant du Soir" was ably portrayed by Mr. Steiner and his musicianship was beyond question.

EXQUISITE PLAYING

The instrumental part of the Brahms Quartet gave many exquisite trio numbers ranging from the suave grace of a Handel's "Sarabande" to the cloying sweetness of Saint-Saens's "Serenade." Marguerite Bitter is to be congratulated both for her clean cut reading of the Liszt D Flat Etude and her splendid ensemble and accompaniments. By all means there should be more concerts by the Brahms Quartet.

On the noon hour, P. M. Bachold, instructor of stringed instruments, presented the Zamboanga Trio of whom he is the leader. This trio is composed of versatile Filipinos, than whom there is none finer for popular music. Yesterday they ranged from the "Rigoletto Quartet" to the "Maple Leaf Rag" and seemed equally at home in both.

Gertrude Greiss, pianist, made her first appearance over the microphone playing Grieg's "Butterfly;" Chopin's "Nocturne" and "Rustle of Spring," by Sinding.

PERFECT DELIVERY

Saturday Children's Hour, last night, meant the sunny, happy, cheery voice of Helene Pirie, screen juvenile. Little Helene has one of the most perfect deliveries in reading that KHJ broadcasts. Yesterday she gave four clever numbers, including an intriguing verse entitled, "Music Mad." Velma Devine entertained her young brothers and sisters with a group of recitations which gave everyone a chance for a hearty laugh. The latter part of the hour was arranged by Frederick Erret, pianist, who had with him Ted Weingand, xylophone and pianist; Claude Weingand, ukulele, and Hazel Ellis, pianist. The Weingand brothers are great favorites with us in the studio. Last night they appeared more full of pep and clever ways than ever before. Surely we will not forget in a hurry "Beside a Western Water Tank." It is a masterpiece of humor. Beside solos, Frederick Erret and Hazel Ellis gave Morrison's "The Merry Trumpeter" for four hands.

Prof. Walter Sylvester Hertzog again presided over the studio with the spirit of American history.

IRELAND SLOW TO ADOPT RADIO IDEA

Although the Dail radio broadcasting committee recommended that a government broadcasting station be established in the Irish Free State, no definite action has been taken, due, principally, to the fact that the operation of a broadcaster in the Free State involves a deficit of £5000 a year. Vice-Consul Collins reports from Dublin. After the Dail rejected the proposal of the postmaster-general for the establishment of a private broadcasting company, it appointed a broadcasting committee to investigate wireless development in Ireland. Results caused a committee to recommend government operation, but that is as far as developments have progressed.

The Postoffice Department has issued only 1560 receiving set licenses, as there does not seem to be a strong popular demand for the erection of a home station. The listeners of the Free State are apparently pleased with the programs of the British Broadcasting Company.

Tells Romance of Agriculture in Farm Land

In an appeal for life on the farm as a mode of living as well as a source of income, H. M. Butterfield, supervisor of correspondence courses, college of agriculture, University of California, told KGO listeners Monday evening, the 1st inst., some of the romances in the history of the prune, the almond, the dewberry, the lemon and Kanred wheat from Russia.

"Let the romance of agricultural life get into your souls," said Butterfield, "and you will find a smile at the end of every day."

A real love of agricultural work and attention to small things have meant much to the human race, in the belief of Butterfield. "In the Middle West," he continued, "there is one State alone with over 1,500,000 acres planted to Kanred wheat. This wheat came from the Don country of Russia, and is well-known for its hardness, for its high yield and for its ability to resist rust. Only by a miracle did a few grains of it, bearing simply a label No. 6018, in an experimental laboratory station, escape the rubbish heap. Because he loved his work, the professor in charge of the laboratory took the few grains and planted them. The value to the human race of this small act is beyond comprehension."

AVIATOR IS SPOKEN TO IN FLIGHT

Two-Way Conversation as Flyer Circles in Dark Proves Successful

For the first time in history two-way night-time radiophone conversation was accomplished when broadcasting station WHN of New York was in constant communication with an Army plane that flew from Mitchell Field, Long Island, over New York City at 9:45 p.m.

Arrangements had been made for the erection of a temporary receiving station at Palisades Amusement Park to pick up speech from the plane as it flew over the park, and at the same time, by means of land wires to the broadcasting station, rebroadcast the voices "from the clouds" to hundreds of thousands of listeners.

An enormous crowd was at hand at the park to watch and listen to the event. All eyes were cast upward, searching the sky for signs of the daring aviator and when he finally was sighted, a thunderous roar that must have been heard through the 1000 feet separating the plane from the crowd was given, to greet Lieut. Brandt and Lieut. Connell, who were piloting the plane on its eventful trip.

It was 9:45 p.m. when the plane was first heard, a minute or two after taking off from the field. The voice gradually became louder as the plane neared the city and the army of listeners had the thrill of hearing a plane in flight, with the realistic roar and hum, as Lieut. Brandt described the flight and greeted the city.

Everyone was hearing very clearly both sides of this epochal communication, yet it was impossible for anyone to sight the plane. Statue of Liberty searchlights endeavored to locate it, but were unsuccessful. Lieut. Rash, from Mitchell Field, was at hand at Palisades Amusement Park and kept in touch with the operator aboard the plane. Lieut. Rash is directing the radio tests from the moving plane to the ground for the United States Army Air Service.

Realizing the thousands of people gathered at the park were anxiously awaiting a glimpse of the plane, Lieut. Rash directed Lieut. Brandt to drop down to 1000 feet and fly over the park. From his mile-high perch in the clouds, Lieut. Brandt drooped down and the whirr of the propeller could plainly be heard, but with an overcast sky and the bright lights of the park it was still impossible to locate the plane. It was uncanny, as many present expressed it, to listen to voices from the sky directly overhead and yet be unable to see the talking plane.

Lieut. Rash then requested the plane to flash a light that it might be located, and to fly lower, that the crowds might look him over. Suddenly a swiftly moving light appeared in the sky and in short and long flashes the plane signalled that all was heard. Coming down further, Lieut. Brandt and his plane were in full view of the throng, that roared a greeting and gave three cheers for Commanding Officer W. N. Hensley, Jr., who had made possible the stunt.

Messrs. Will C. Caffray and Francis M. Coker were interested visitors at KHJ Wednesday night. With many others they enjoyed the excellent program given through the courtesy of the Platt Music Company.

HOOVER FAVORS CHAIN OF RADIO

Secretary Would Connect All Sections

East Half of Nation Well Served Now

Question to be Discussed at Conference

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Secretary Hoover believes it is important, so that all may keep posted on national affairs, that the whole country be connected by radio and wires. The connecting of broadcasters into chains is apt to be the most important question raised at the conference on the 30th inst.

Discussing the radio sessions over which he will preside, Secretary Hoover said that the big question was the interconnection of broadcasting stations in every city with better organization. Through the co-operation of the broadcasters with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, he said the eastern half of the nation was well served when events of importance were broadcast, but added that some parts of the country were not yet reached and that therefore the citizens might be said not to participate in national affairs. "It is important to have the whole country connected for events of general import," he declared. "Real public service," he explained, "lies within the power of local broadcasters in all States."

At present the situation falls considerably short of Secretary Hoover's ideal, due, as he pointed out, to lack of complete co-operation between the transmitting stations and the companies controlling the telephone and telegraph wires, and the necessary expense involved. Today several high-powered broadcasting stations are spanning the country, with listeners in many cities, but this does not meet the rigid requirements set up by Mr. Hoover, who has long been held the friend of the radio public. He wants an efficient station in every town so as to insure the owners of crystal sets at least a "silent part" in country-wide activities. Every local station must be efficient, and capable of being linked into a national net for the dissemination of important communications and the diffusion of official pronouncements, before this exponent of the radio communication is satisfied.

HIGH AIMS IN CALL

A glance in his proclamation for the Third National Radio Conference will show, from the very subjects to be discussed, that his aims for this country's communication system are indeed high. Among the subjects to be studied and analyzed by representatives of all the phases of the radio art are: classification of stations and wave lengths, interconnection, elimination of smaller and inefficient stations, reduction of interference, and relations between the government and commercial stations.

About thirty official representatives from the several interests including the industry, operators, amateurs, broadcasters, listeners, government and the marine services will be announced as soon as their organizations present the names to the Secretary. This body will constitute the active committee. In all probability the committee will be organized into several subcommittees for better handling specific questions. Mr. Hoover aims to have the committee representative of every active part of the radio art and industry; from engineers to the lay listeners, all will have a voice. The public manifesting interest will also be admitted to the general sessions, it is stated. Although the list of invitations sent to organizations has not been made public, it is understood that such organizations as the following are included: The Radio Corporation, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, marine radio operating companies, American Radio Relay League, the electrical and radio engineering associations, and the broadcasting organizations. Each radio district supervisor has been requested to call a meeting of the broadcasters in his section for the selection of a local representative, and the radio magazines, at a recent meeting in New York were to select their delegate.

PARLEY ONLY COURSE

The most astounding thing is that the suggestions of the past two conferences and the resultant regulations of the department were practically all accepted voluntarily by the radio world at large. In the absence of adequate legislation on radio and the growing congestion of the ether, there was nothing for the commerce head, under whose direction the regulation of matters radio falls, to do but place his problems before another representative conference, asking for further recommendations, which are likely to operate more efficiently, perhaps, than inflexible laws and regulations laid down by an unsympathetic and poorly informed Congress.

Co-operating with the Department of Commerce the Inter-Department Radio Advisory Committee met on August 28 and outlined recommendations to be studied by special subcommittees of governmental experts for submission as advice to the government representatives designated on the Radio Conference Committee.

Their recommendations formed three main groups, covering a revision of wave length allocation, broadcasting and reduction of interference. Under broadcasting the necessity of revising the class requirements and the elimination of class C stations was noted. The encouragement of high-grade programs is sought through interconnection of stations by wire and radio. The subject of maximum power for broadcasters in populous centers will be investigated, and it may be suggested that these stations be transferred elsewhere. This subject is akin to another which aims to limit the number of stations in a certain locality as part of the zoning plan. The extent to which time division should be required is another problem under consideration. Representatives of War, Navy, Commerce, Agricultural departments and Shipping Board will serve in these investigations.

AMATEURS OF FINLAND ARE ACTIVE

Much Interest in Radio Evinced; Government is Liberal in Rules

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TURKU (Finland) Sept. 6.—There is a growing interest among radio amateurs of this country in private radio telegraph communication with operators in Denmark, Holland, Luxemberg and France. Leo Lindell, who is the owner of the local amateur stations 1NA and 2NA, has been heard in all of these places with unusual success. He is one of the directors of a Finnish amateur radio relay association, which is actively engaged in promoting the idea of international code communication.

For a small country, Finland has taken a most friendly interest in the welfare of its amateurs and the governments has allotted them a maximum transmitting wave length of 300 meters and a power range of from five to twenty watts, depending on the proximity of the amateurs to the high power government transmitting stations. The use of the maximum amount of power is limited to the continuous wave sets.

Under the guidance of the Amateur Relay Association, which is patterned somewhat on the organization of the American Radio Relay League of the United States and Canada, territorial radio divisions have been assigned throughout the country and traffic routes suggested to facilitate the handling of private amateur radiograms.

With about 150 amteur sending stations on the air at present and a number of others under construction for the fall season, it is anticipated that amateur radio activities in Finland will compare favorably with those in the larger companies in Europe, some of which have been much more slow to appreciate the advantages of having a body of trained radio men among their citizens. Finland is determined to develop the transmitting art to its utmost.

ONE VOICE SPEAKS TO MILLIONS

Whole Nation May Hear Defense Day Speakers Through Hook-up

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—At least seventeen broadcasting stations, and perhaps a few more, will be hooked up into a national net at 9:15 p.m., standard eastern time, on Defense Day, the 12th inst., for the transmission of speeches by Secretary of War Weeks, Gen. Pershing and Gen. J. J. Carty, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Practically the entire nation will be able to listen in.

A little over a year ago, Gen. Carty conducted what was termed the national roll call of telephone centers and broadcasters, which included the greatest number of radio and telephone stations ever linked into a national net. The plans for the 12th inst. will probably surpass this achievement, and, of course, are official, carried out with the definite purpose of a communication defense test. The national broadcasts are made possible through the co-operation of two Bell stations and fifteen independent broadcasters hooked up with the Bell system by long-distance wires, placed at the disposal of the War Department for the evening.

The stations to broadcast include those used during the political conventions and the notification ceremonies, together with WOAW, Omaha; WFAA, Dallas, and KGO, Oakland, the last three bringing in the Western States and the Pacific Coast, never coupled with the East in regular broadcasts before. Five newspapers are co-operating with the telephone company in this national event.

The stations officially announced as co-operating by the War Department are: WNAC, Boston; WJAR, Providence; WEAF, New York; WGY, Schenectady; WGR, Buffalo; KDKA, Pittsburg; WOO, Philadelphia; WSB, Atlanta; WCAP, Washington; WLW, Cincinnati; WGN, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; WDAF, Kansas City; WLAG, Minneapolis; WOAW, Omaha; WFAA, Dallas, and KGO, Oakland.

JOY FLASHES FROM KHJ

This Week's Program to Be Happy Union of Music, Mirth, Frolic and Philosophy

Having regaled Radioland for the past week with programs that overcame the rising temperature and any inclination on the part of Old Man Static to interfere, KHJ now turns its attention to the next seven days and the result augurs well for its listeners.

An excellent series of programs have been arranged beginning with the Paul G. Hoffman concert tonight. Those who have followed closely the programs presented through the courtesy of this public-peirited organization know well the splendid character of the entertainment which awaits them. The assembly of artists is headed by Claire Forbes Crane, pianist, and includes Jose Arias, guitar; Paul Adams, tenor; Elsie Manion, violinist, and Gladys Blackwell Pickering, soprano.

Monday night is silent, but at noon KHJ will present Arthur Raymond Hill, character songster, assisted by Irene Martin at the piano. The other half of the program will be filled by the Rendezvous Hawaiian Trio, appearing through the courtesy of the Rendesvous Cellar Cafe.

SURPRISES FOR KIDDIES

The Piggly Wiggly Girls, that trio of talented young musicians, will adorn the Tuesday noon hour. To delight the children, Queen Titania and her Sandman will make their weekly visit to this earth, and the surprises which usually attend their appearance are to be expected. Little Billy Jane Webb, the 12-year-old yodeler, will also be with the lads and lassies. In the evening the studio will resound with the harmonies and melodies of the Naval Reserve Band, to be gently but intellectually broken by Dr. Thomas Lutman, who will deliver one of his characteristically vigorous speeches.

The Oaks Tavern Orchestra will open the festivities of Wednesday with their special brand of syncopation. Fred C. McNabb of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Company will appear in the same hour to solve any problems you may have relative to your gardens. Dickie Winslow, the juvenile reporter, and Baby Muriel MacCormac will be present for the children's hour. The evening marks not only the weekly appearance of Dr. Mars Baumgardt, the radio astronomer, but the artistic concert which is presented every Wednesday night by Platt Music Company under the skillful direction of Mr. Lester.

AND MORE JAZZ

Thursday noon will welcome Jimmie West and his Westerners, well-known exponents of jazz. That small dynamo of youthful spirits, Dickie Brandon, will entertain the younger element of Radioland. The fore part of Thursday evening will be given over to a program arranged by Thorlief Olsen through the courtesy of the Continental National Bank. Upon conclusion of this program, the Filipino String Orchestra, appearing through the courtesy of the Blue Bird Cafeteria, will render their excellent music.

A varied program has been arranged for Friday noon. Sir Richard Headrick will take his usual place before the microphone during the children's hour. And, of course, all through the week Prof. Walter Sylvester Hertzog will continue to add to your store of knowledge concerning America's past. The evening program will be presented by the Radio Corporation of Southern California.

The old favorite, Uncle Remus, will grace the noon hour on Saturday. Another popular entertainer of Radioland will occupy listeners' attention from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. This is Charlie Wellman, the effervescent tenor, who will be assisted by the queen of pianistic jazz, Helene Smith. In the evening the Wiley B. Allen Company will hold sway with an ensemble of well-known artists. The week will be brought to a close by George Hood, reader.

ESPERANTO BECOMES LANGUAGE OF RADIO

Esperanto, the auxiliary language, is becoming the universal radio language, according to reports from the Esperanto Association of North America.

From Budapest comes a letter stating that the Hungarian News has adopted Esperanto for international communication, following the decision of the national radio conference there. The American Radio Relay League has also indorsed the use of this language for foreign correspondence and many American stations are broadcasting lectures and courses in this universal tongue.

A recent letter from the radio department of the Manitoba telegraph system announces that Station CKY is about to institute talks and instruction in Esperanto. In Europe an international radio association has indorsed Esperanto as its official language.

KHJ was glad to receive a call from Mr. A. S. Lindstrom of San Francisco on Friday the 5th inst. During his stay in the city Mr. Lindstrom made two addresses, one before the Radio Jobbers' Association of Southern California and the other before the Radio Manufacturers' Agents' Association of Southern California.

PARLEY ON RADIO TOPIC IS CALLED

Annual Conference Set for September 30; All Interests Invited

Announcement is made by Secretary Hoover of the calling of the third national radio conference for the better voluntary regulation of radio. The conference will be held at Washington, beginning the 30th inst.

Two such conferences have already been held, one in February, 1922, and one in March, 1923, both of which were generally attended by the persons and organizations interested. The result has been a lessoning friction and misunderstanding through the voluntary cooperation of the industry, the public and the Department of Commerce, especially in the reduction of interference and the improvement of service.

The growth of radio, and particularly the multiplication of broadcasting stations and the consequent congestion of the air, has made necessary a consideration of many subjects, and perhaps a revision of some present methods. Some of the matters which will be discussed and considered at the conference are:

Revision of the present frequency or wave-length allocations, to reduce interference.

Use of high frequencies or short waves.

Classification of broadcasting stations; possible discontinuance of Class C stations.

Interconnection of broadcasting stations.

Limitation of power; division of time; zoning of broadcasting stations.

Means for distinguishing the identity of amateur calls from foreign countries.

Interference by electrical devices other than radio transmitting stations.

Relations between government and commercial services.

Such other topics as may be proposed by the conference.

To facilitate the work of the conference the various groups in the radio field will be asked to name representatives, who will constitute the formal advisory committee of the conference. As at present planned, the groups to be represented will be as follows: Listeners, marine service, broadcasting (one from each inspection district;) engineering, transoceanic communication, wire interconnections, manufacturers, amateurs, point-to-point communication, government departments.

The committee so constituted will hold public hearings. All persons or organizations having any suggestions to make or views to express upon any features of radio activity are urged to attend and will have full opportunity to be heard.

Some of the matters suggested for consideration are not within the regulatory control of the secretary. As to such matters, any conclusions reached by the conference can become effective only by voluntary adoption by the interests affected. As to features falling within the powers of the secretary, the recommendations of the conference will be advisory.

AMATEURS MAY TEST THEIR WAVE LENGTHS

Amateurs and fans desiring to test their wave meters and sets on standard wave lengths will have opportunity to do so when WWV at the Bureau of Standards and 6XBM at Palo Alto, Cal., go on the air the 22nd inst., and October 8 to 21.

A revised schedule for both Atlantic and Pacific Coast standard wave transmissions shows that both stations will transmit wave lengths from 1000 down to 200 meters on the 22nd inst., and wave lengths between 222 and 93.7 in October. Instead of starting at 11 p.m., as in September, the Palo Alto station will commence sending at 10 p.m., Pacific time, on October 8 and 21, and stop an hour earlier. The signals for both stations should carry between 500 and 1000 miles inland, the Bureau of Standards states.

Mr. Lombard J. Smith, a business associate of Mr. Lindstrom, accompanied him. Mr. Smith is located here. He represents several manufacturing concerns.

NO STATE MAY RULE ON RADIO

Regulations for Use of Ether Strictly Federal Province, Law Holds

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Local authorities can erect formidable signs outside their city limits restricting the speed at which autoists may pass through the territory under their jurisdiction, but they cannot legally attempt, by ordinance or other means, to regulate the use of the ether for any form of radio communication, according to the interpretation placed on the opinion of local government officials. It is regarded as unconstitutional for municipalities to regulate radio traffic.

This opinion, which was anticipated by Secretary of Commerce Hoover at the radio conference in this city in March, 1923, when he stated specifically that "the government owns the ether," is the outcome of a peculiar legal entanglement that threatened at one time to set local city and State authorities at variance with the Federal government. It was finally made clear to those interested that no lesser regulatory body can govern any subject already regulated by Congress.

Last year, when the radio season was in full swing, one State was on the point of creating the office of "State radio inspector," and a number of cities were giving serious consideration to the matter of prescribing how and when the ether should be used. Their only authority for so doing was the so-called "police power," which State charters confer on them for the abatement of nuisances that endanger the health, morals or prosperity of a community.

That this special authority should be interpreted as covering the subject of radio communication was regarded by the legally informed as being little short of humorous, and practically all cities where such agitation had cropped out hastily pulled in their horns and ruled out proposed ordinances of this nature.

Probably no city in the country outside of Atchison, Kan., actually passed an ordinance of the kind, and this one was worded so indirectly that it was not regarded finally as encroaching in a literal sense upon the recognized and undisputed Federal powers, it applying more particularly to indefinite "electrical disturbances."

By Radio's Aid World Flyers Avoid Storms

A special warning sent by the Weather Bureau via naval radio to the cruiser Milwaukee off Greenland and relayed to the world flyers, may have saved them from forced landings and the dangers of the recent storm which swept up the northeastern coast of the United States toward their objective, Indian Harbor, Labrador. Following the receipt of the warning, the flight was delayed until the storm had passed. Further reports will aid in guiding these intrepid aviators to Washington and their home station in California.

Besides the special forecasts covering the route of the flyers, cryptic messages are radioed twice daily to the temporary Army Air Service base at Indian Harbor for rebroadcast to the Army pilots. Recently Washington sent the following: "Top notch run up," which according to the Weather Bureau gave the barometer pressure, temperature, indicated a west wind, clear weather and the mean temperature. Boston contributed this: "Tyrus runner three ingate," which might be interpreted by baseball fans as signifying that the "Georgia Peach" stood third in base running and that he called the umpire an "ingrate;" what it did carry to the meteorologist, Capt. A. H. Thiessen of the Signal Corps at Indian Harbor, was data on wind, barometer, temperature, and weather at the Massachusetts capital.

ENGINEER GIVES VIEWS ON RADIO

Better Connection Across Atlantic Expected

Will be Accomplished by Direct Short Waves

Transmission Problems Are Hardest to Solve

Ernest Walker Sawyer, radio engineer, believes that trans-Atlantic radio communication by use of directional short waves is gradually growing nearer.

"For more than twenty-five years," he said, "development along these lines has been proceeding. Marconi is only one of the many scientists who have been working, each along his own special inclination. Lodge, Fleming, De-Forest, Latour, Von Arco, Poulsen, Von der Groat and hundreds of others have made it possible. The big companies such as the Radio Corporation in New York and the Federal Telegraph Company in San Francisco, the Telefunken of Germany, the Lorenz of Berlin, the Japanese government, the Societe Francaise Radio Electric and, the British Marconi Company with its twenty or thirty satellites are the powers that are correlating the inventions and bringing the commercial possibilities of radio communication to fruition.

POWER REDUCTION

"With ordinary stations, it is at present necessary to employ from 250 to 1000 kilowatts to transmit commercially and successfully across the Atlantic in the summer time. It is quite satisfactory in the winter to reduce this power from twenty-five to fifty kilowatts. When the Marconi directional system is perfected which I anticipate will be in from three to five years, it will be quite possible to reduce the power necessary at all times to about twenty-five to fifty kilowatts. During this coming winter there will be many amateur American stations of less than 500 watts who will be heard in England and with delicate receivers Americans will be able at times to listen to concerts from London. For ten minutes or even an hour you may be able to hear England but you will readily realize the difference between commercial interchange of radio telegrams and the telephone messages and the freak unreliable whispers which will be heard this winter. We know how to do it and have known for several years but between knowing how and real operation there is a long step."

LOW STRIDES MADE

"As an engineer would you say that the art of radio is making very fast strides?" he was asked.

"Most broadcast listeners do believe that radio is making extraordinary strides but there has been almost no development since the war; that is no development worth mentioning. We have, it is true, many new types of receivers, a different dial, a different box, here and there, but the results today are no better than were possible seven or eight years ago. The superheterodyne, the reflex and others have lately been given much publicity but they were really developed for the trenches. Some of the old receivers of 1912 and 1914 are still in use and preferred to present models.

"There's one point I'd like to stress and that is don't be afraid that your radio equipment will become antiquated. It will no doubt be out of style in a few weeks but if properly built, it will still give service ten years from now.

"Transmission problems have not been solved nearly so readily as those of receiving. For instance, the English are ahead of us in high power broadcasting stations. We have held our own in small stations—I mean up to 500 watts. Our greatest developments have been along the line of improvement and perfection of modulation systems and various small issues. The Germans still stand preeminent in high power radio telegraph transmission, with the French a close second. It is, however, true that some of the developments of the Europeans are brought to more perfect commercial control and operation in America.

STATIC FLASHES

Prof. I. G. Gibson of the dairy husbandry extension department, College of Agriculture, University of Missouri, will be guest speaker on the farm program for the week of the 8th inst., at WLS, Sears-Roebuck Agriculture Foundation Station, Chicago. Prof. Gibson will give a series of seven talks on the noon and evening programs during the week. J. C. Hackelman, professor of farm crops, University of Illinois, says that the seed corn situation will, in all probability, be serious this fall. On Tuesday evening, the 9th inst., he will broadcast a talk on the best means of picking and storing seed corn.

Poland has lifted the ban on radio. Transmitting licenses soon will be issued for broadcasting by scientific, educational and manufacturing organizations and regulations covering reception will probably be similar to those of France, according to advices reaching the Department of Commerce. The new law, which went into effect in August, will undoubtedly stimulate the development of radio in Poland, especially among the general public. The government will probably adopt measures for the promotion of home industry, but competition with American and German radio goods will continue to be severe.

These gentlemen are business associates in the Electric Sales Company of this city and as a part of their business activities are devoted to radio. Both are ardent fans and take keen interest in broadcast. They report a steadily increasing interest in radio broadcast, and as a reflection of this decided improvement in the business, Mr. Coker states that it is very pleasing to note that buyers are showing a preference for the better class of receiving sets, thereby proving that their interest in radio is permanent.

OBSCENE NOTE WRITER CAUGHT

Ex-Officer Run to Earth by Finger-Prints

Released on Bail and Goes Violently Insane

Chief Heath Warns Public of "Harmless Nuts"

How modern detective methods are used in capturing writers of anonymous communications was revealed yesterday in an official report of Chief of Police Heath closing the case of M. A. Ferrer, one of the most crafty and persistent writers of obscene correspondence ever brought to the attention of the Los Angeles police. A hot day brought about an arrest and confession.

For many months big laundry establishments in this city had complained that mysterious notes addressed to laundry girls in big round handwriting, were being slipped into bundles of laundry. A careful investigation showed that the bundles in which the notes were received furnished no clew as to the sender of the messages. The messages were either placed in laundry wagons when they were unloading, or else a mysterious stranger managed to gain access to the sorting room and put a note into piles of clothes assigned to certain workers. In each case he made a definite appointment, but despite all the artifices of the police he was not located, for he never kept his "dates."

Finally Detective Lieutenant Lane was assigned by the chief to the case. The laundries were instructed to have their workers alert for the notes, but that under no circumstances were any of the communications to be touched by hand. It was suggested that a pair of scissors or pliers be used in picking up the notes, and that they should be placed, face up, and free from dust in a safe.

HEAT HIS UNDOING

Finally, on a very warm day, the note writer perspired freely as he wrote one of his screeds. He left very faint, but valuable fingerprints. Lieut. Lane had the note dusted with a chemical powder, which brought out the fingerprints, so that they could be magnified.

The next thing was to find the maker of those fingerprints. His notes were examined by handwriting experts in the Bureau of Records, and his style of writing, with every distinctive feature, charted. Then the detectives had all laundry slips watched for such handwriting, and used many artifices in getting suspects to sign receipts for goods delivered and to sign such petitions as might appeal to any citizen.

Suspicion pointed to M. A. Ferrer, a bachelor, 54 years of age, a regular deputy sheriff, who recently had been suspended. His fingerprints furnished exact duplicates of those noted by the police. His hotel was watched, and one day he was arrested. He was booked on a complaint obtained for "vag and dissolute," put up $200 bail and sought to forfeit it. When the case was called Police Judge Richardson set new bail at $1000, issuing a bench warrant. Ferrer was able to raise the bail. He was released after his case was set for trial in the near future.

GOES INSANE

Shortly thereafter the police received word that a man was running wild in a hotel, throwing furniture out the windows and making frightful threats. They answered the call and found Ferrer. He had gone violently insane.

The man was identified as a person who had been seen by laundry workers, who had supposed him an employee. He has been transferred to the psychopathic ward of the County Hospital, and psychiatrists agree that he is permanently and violently insane.

The chief thinks that Ferrer is another of the so-called "harmless nuts," whose communications are the subject of careful study and analysis by the Southern California Academy of Criminology. It has been found that approximately 50 per cent of 1500 letters written to the police in one year by cranks or "nuts" are the work of persons who are potential or actual criminals, and who act either upon impulse or upon the fixed delusions which control them.

Here is a suggestion from Chief Heath:

"Watch out for the 'harmless nuts' who make strange complaints or who persist in believing that they are being persecuted by neighbors. These are the people who are afflicted with the paranoidal tendencies, and their fixed and systematized delusions may cause them to attempt the slaying of an imaginary persecutor or person who denies their omnipotence."

TWO KEYES MEN STILL TO RESIGN

All of 112 in Prosecutor's Force Respond to Call Except Pair on Vacation

Only two of the 112 men and women who compose the staff of the District Attorney's office had not handed in their resignations at noon yesterday. They are Dep. Dist.-Attys. Van Cott and Hamner, both of whom are on their vacation and therefore have not been informed of the action of Dist.-Atty. Keyes in asking for the resignations of the entire personnel of his office as a preliminary step to a complete reorganization.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. Burke handed in his resignation yesterday to take effect either on December 31 or any time desired after the general election. He asked that his resignation not be accepted before the general election in order that his campaign for a Superior Court judgeship might not be affected.

However, Mr. Burke declared his complete sympathy with Dist.-Atty. Keyes intention to reorganize his office and thus keep his campaign pledges.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Fricke also came to the District Attorney's office yesterday and handed in his resignation. He was on his vacation when Keyes's demand for the resignation of his entire staff was made.

Bryan's Weekly Bible Talk
By William Jennings Bryan

Jesus Goes Back Home

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan

(Luke iv, 16-30)

And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up: and, as His custom was, He went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath Day, and stood up for to read.

And there was delivered unto Him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when He had opened the book, He found the place where it was written,

The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised,

To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

And He closed the book, and He gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on Him.

And He began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

And all bare Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?

And He said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

And He said, Verily, I say unto you, no prophet is accepted in his own country.

But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath,

And rose up, and thrust Him out of the city and led Him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast Him down headlong.

But He passing through the midst of them went His way.

The text for our Bible talk today invites reminiscence. "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up."

Smith, in his comments on the boyhood of Jesus, points out that Nazareth was on the great highway between Persia and Egypt over which the rich commerce between these far-famed ancient nations passed. Dr. Talmadge said of it:

"This town is beautifully situated in a great green bowl, the sides of the bowl the surrounding fifteen hills. The God of nature who is the God of the Bible evidently scooped out this valley for privacy and separation from all the world during the three most important decades, the thirty years of Christ's boyhood and youth.

"I do not believe there was one of the surrounding fifteen hills that the boy Christ did not range from bottom to top, or one cavern in their sides He did not explore, or one species of birds flying across the tops that He could not call by name, or one of all the species of fauna browsing on those steeps that He had not recognized."

"AS HIS CUSTOM WAS"

"And, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." I have underscored the words "as His custom was."

Jesus was brought up to observe the Sabbath and continued to attend synagogue worship regularly after He was old enough to mark out His own course. Who is to blame for the fact that children are not trained to regular church attendance, as they were formerly in both Jewish and Gentile families?

If it is the fault of the children, what has changed their attitude toward the church? Are the parents less religious than in former generations? If so, why? Have business, society and pleasure crowded religion into the background?

Business is necessary—a man's physical needs must be satisfied; but they are no greater than they were 1900 years ago, and his spiritual needs are not less.

Pleasures are as necessary as formerly, but the necessity is no greater and they are as important as in the past to satisfy man's longing for higher things.

Society is also a necessity, and yet universal experience proves that man cannot get along with society alone.

Business, pleasure and society—each can supply a part of man's needs, but neither or all combined can furnish a substitute for religion—"the relation between man and his Maker."

Even education cannot take the place of reverence for God. Man is by nature a worshiper; if he surrenders belief in God, he worships man, the next thing below God—and that man is usually himself.

Are parents giving up faith in God and becoming mind worshipers? Something is wrong somewhere, and it behooves us to find the cause as speedily as possible and remove it.

If the world's greatest need is to get back to God, its second need is to get back to reverence for God's word and for God's house.

It was the custom of Jesus to attend worship wherever He happened to be; if we follow in His footsteps we will not forget His House even when we are at summer resorts or at winter resorts or wherever we are taking our vacation.

JESUS READS THE LESSON

Christ could not have failed to attend the synagogue on His return to His early home. He was by this time so well known because of His teachings and miracles that He was invited to read the second lesson—according to custom, the first lesson was taken from the law and the second from the prophets.

The Book of Isaiah was given to Him and He turned to the following passage:

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

Having finished reading, He gave the book to the attendant, and proceeded to declare Himself the Messiah whose coming was foretold in the passage read: "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

The first to be benefited by His Messiahship were the poor; they were always on His heart. He was raised among them and knew their needs; His gospel is the only hope of the poor today; it is justice mixed with mercy.

The helplessness of the poor appealed to Him; He frequently showed His compassion. He used Lazarus, whose poverty was aggravated by cores, to rebuke the indifference of Dives.

In the passage He read, the captives were to be released; here again He was to minister to the sufferers. He was also to open the eyes of the blind—affliction still appealing to Him, and the same thought is repeated in the next line.

It was a wonderful vision that the prophet had of the beatitudes to be realized in that far distant day and it was a bold resolve that Christ announced when He declared Himself the divine agent through whom these blessings were to be brought to man.

His hearers were astonished "at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth." They had known Him only as a man—as Joseph's son—and could not understand His claim to the Messiahship.

Answering their manner rather than their words, He gave utterance to a bit of philosophy now current throughout the world: "No prophet is accepted in his own country."

It is hard to overcome the leveling effect of casual acquaintance. A great man's neighbors seldom put him on a pedestal until after he dies. Gigantic characters, like mountains, impress us most when viewed from a distance. The disciples who came into intimate fellowship with Christ revered Him more than those who knew Him only by the reports in circulation as to the wonders performed by Him, but even the disciples, as we learn later, could not comprehend all that He was and was to be.

Christ gave two illustrations, drawn from the Old Testament, of miracles performed for those outside the Jewish race; viz, the widow of Sarepta, unto whom Elijah was sent, and Naaman whom Elisha healed. This angered His hearers and they sought to kill Him.

The Jews have been regarded as an excitable people, changing quickly from ecstasy to execration, but they have no monopoly on fickleness, as anyone can testify who has attended a national political convention. It is a human rather than a race characteristic.

"But He passing through the midst of them went His way."

Here we have another evidence of His majestic presence. He did not disappear; He was not rescued by a miracle—He passed through the midst of them and went His way.

It was the same awe-inspiring bearing that saved Him from attack when He drove the money changers out of the temple.

It is well to remember that He who is to save the world by His blood and guide the world by His example was not a weakling, nor was He of a retiring disposition.

He preached the gospel of peace and was the personification of it, but He had the highest of all forms of courage—the courage to sacrifice and to suffer for righteousness sake.

It requires more courage to be a follower of Christ—to be true when others deny Him and to stand unawed when others flee—than it does to follow any human teacher or to apply any human philosophy.

History has turned on those who were steadfast—on the martyrs who would rather die than recant. It is not those who are willing to kill, but those who are willing to be killed, who do most to vindicate the power of truth.

Civilization is but a succession of reforms, each originating in the courage of some one individual, and all important reforms are in harmony with the teachings of the Man of Galilee. Back of each truth there are forces as constant and as irresistible as those that develop the ripened harvest from seed sown in fertile soil.

"Consider the lilies, how they grow." This is the language of the Savior, and in these six words He tells us something more important than we can find in any book that discusses merely the processes through which plants pass. Science may explain the methods, but Jesus states the law—"they grow."

So history describes the rising and fall of empires, and the changing of national boundary lines, but Christ states the law. Truth grows for the same reason that the lilies grow, because truth, like the lilies, has God back of it; He "keeps watch above His own."

The truth that Jesus scattered as He preached in Nazareth, about the shores of the Sea of Galilee and at other places visited, has grown and grown and grown until it is becoming the inspiration of all lands. Pilgrims go in multitudes to the Holy Land that they may look upon the places where Jesus walked during His brief sojourn among men, and one of the most interesting of all the sacred places is Nazareth, "where He had been brought up."

DAMAGES ASKED FOR PULLMAN CAR FALL

Charging personal injuries as the result of a fall from a ladder on which she was descending from an upper berth in a Pullman car on the Owl, a Southern Pacific train, Mrs. Julia Beaudroit filed suit for $15,000 damages yesterday with the United States District Court against the Pullman Company and the Southern Pacific Company. The plaintiff avers she sustained the asserted injuries while riding from San Francisco to Los Angeles on August 3, 1923. The ladder was so negligently placed in position that it slipped when she stepped on it, she alleges.

NEW ENEMY OF PATENT PAVING

Municipal League Lines Up to Fight Trust Forces

Trade Name Lobby Battles to Maintain Its Grip

Six Councilmen Still Favor Continuing System

COUNCIL LINE-UP TODAY

Opposed to patented pavement—President Workman and Councilmen Gregory and Mallard (3.)

In favor of patented pavement—Councilmen Allan, Baker, Criswell, Mushet, Sanborn and Wheeler (6.)

Necessary votes for either side to win—5

The Municipal League yesterday aligned itself with the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations which are opposing the inclusion of patented pavement in the new improvement specifications which will be considered again by the City Council on the 18th inst. The organizations opposing the patented paving trust lobby which for years has maintained a strangle-hold on the Council, include the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, Traffic Commission, San Pedro Realty Board, Hollywood Junction, Los Feliz, Hoover Street and many other improvement associations.

The Municipal League's letter to the City Council, which will be read at tomorrow's session, follows:

September 6, 1924.

The Honorable City Council,
City Hall,
Los Angeles.

Gentlemen:

The Municipal League wishes to place itself on record as opposed to the inclusion of patented pavement specifications in any call for bids on street work in this city.

We favor the adoption by the city of its own specifications that shall meet the needs of the community as to the various classes of streets to be improved.

Investigation has convinced us that under the system of patented paving specifications the taxpayers of this community have already been mulcted out of hundreds of thousands of dollars and that in the $50,000,000 street-building program immediately ahead of the city they will, if patented paving specifications are retained, be forced to pay tribute of several millions of dollars more to the paving trust.

We are unalterably opposed to special privilege of this sort and we respectfully request that the City Council abolish it by inaugurating a system of wide-open competitive bidding.

It should be the first interest of the City Council to look to the welfare of the taxpayer rather than to protect the profits of patent-holders and their favored contractors.

Very sincerely yours,
The MUNICIPAL LEAGUE OF LOS ANGELES,
By Franklin D. Howell, President.
R. W. Borough, Associate Secretary.

With a $50,000,000 street improvement program now ready to be started, the patented paving trust lobby is determined to retain and extend its activities in this city through the new specifications. Under the present specifications the only patented paving permitted is Warrenite, while the new specifications admit Warrenite, Chapmanite and Willite, national patented pavements.

City Planning Commissioner Mead and President McGuire of the Board of Public Works, in a statement of facts from the official records, have shown that the cost of public improvements, which include patented pavements are from 30 to 50 per cent higher than when the same improvements specify unpatented pavements. Patented pavements have been barred from most American cities, the records show, and recently, Long Beach, Huntington Park and other Southern California cities have taken similar action.

LEATRICE IS MOTHER OF INFANT GIRL

Effort to Reach Husband of Actress Fails; Talk of Reconciliation

Leatrice Joy, film actress, is now the mother of a baby girl born at 10:40 a.m. yesterday at the Good Samaritan Hospital. The baby weighs eight pounds and two ounces. She will be named after her mother.

Attempts to reach John Gilbert, actor husband of Miss Joy, who she is now suing for divorce, were unsuccessful yesterday. It could not be learned at the hospital whether Gilbert visited Miss Joy during the day.

With the star when her baby was born was her mother, Mrs. May Joy Ziedler. Dr. Titian Coffey attended.

Friends of Gilbert and Miss Joy talked yesterday of a reconciliation, which, it is believed, the birth of the baby will bring about.

The marriage of the two film players has been a succession of quarrels and reconciliations. Soon after the ceremony was performed in Tia Juana, April 3, 1922, it was discovered Gilbert had not received his final decree of divorce. He and Miss Joy separated and were remarried.

They quarreled and separated again and were again reunited. On August 11, last, however, Miss Joy sued Gilbert for divorce. She was awarded $1000 and $300 a month temporary alimony by Judge Hollzer. The suit has not come up for trial.

NEW SCHOOL STOP RULES FOR TRAFFIC

Arrows and Yellow Lines to Protect Pedestrians in Fifteen-Foot Lanes

With the opening of the schools tomorrow, the city's "school stop" ordinance becomes effective for drivers of automobiles and other vehicles, including street cars.

Under the new ordinance, school crossing will be designated on the pavements by two broad yellow lines, painted fifteen feet apart. It will not be necessary for drivers of vehicles to stop at these crossings unless there is a pedestrian or pedestrians inside of these lines on the same side of the street that the vehicle is proceeding.

Men started last week to paint the "school stop" lanes as well as the arrows warning motorists of the nearby school crossing. These arrows will start 100 feet from the school-crossing lane.

The painting of the school lanes and arrows will cost the city $14,210.

First Cars of Yellow Line's Order Arrive

Arrival of fifteen new street cars, the first of an order of 100 given by the Los Angeles Railway to a St. Louis manufacturer, was announced yesterday by G. J. Kuhrts, general manager. The full order of 100 cars is scheduled to be delivered so they can be in service before Christmas.

The cars are similar to the latest type in use on the yellow-car system and will be equipped for operation in single units and two-car trains. Installation of the electrical and air-brake equipment will be made at the Los Angeles Railway shops, Fifty-fourth street and South Park avenue.

In addition to the purchase of 100 cars, involving an investment of about $1,500,000, the street railway is building another twenty cars of the same style in its own shops.

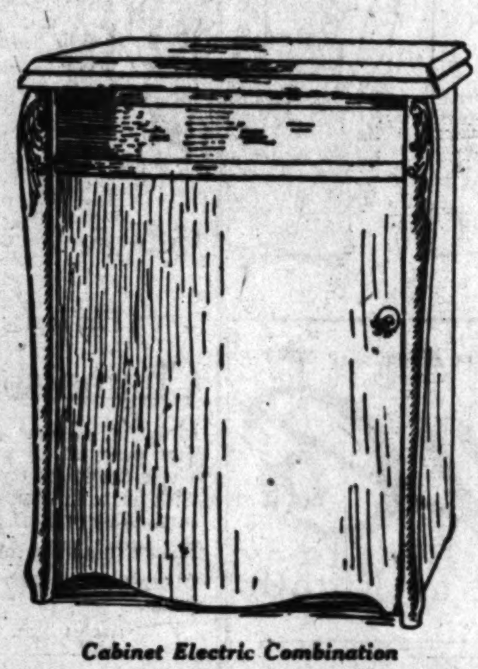
A Masterpiece Sewing Machine at a Sensational Price!

Two Machines in One

$135 Electric Sewing Machine, $98

It Sews by Foot Treadle or Electric Power



Cabinet Electric Combination

A sewing machine especially built to run by electric power as well as foot power! Beautiful cabinet type, as illustrated, made in fancy woods. A permanent sewing machine wherever you may be—in a country home not supplied with electricity it may be run by foot treadle. In town home it may be run by electricity, with not only hands and feet free all the time, but all work and strain gone as well—instantly shifted to foot power (if current should go off for short time or fuse burn out).

Consider these advantages well. The Domestic is not the old style foot treadle sewer, with a motor attached, but a distinctly new improved model, built at great cost. It has no gears that need oiling—the rheostat or controller has a thousand speeds which enable the operator to control the speed from a few stitches per minute to its maximum speed by gradual increase —not by jumps as in ordinary rheostat.

THIS MAY BE YOUR LAST CHANCE TO BUY THIS MACHINE AT THIS PRICE AS THE LOT IS NEAR GONE.

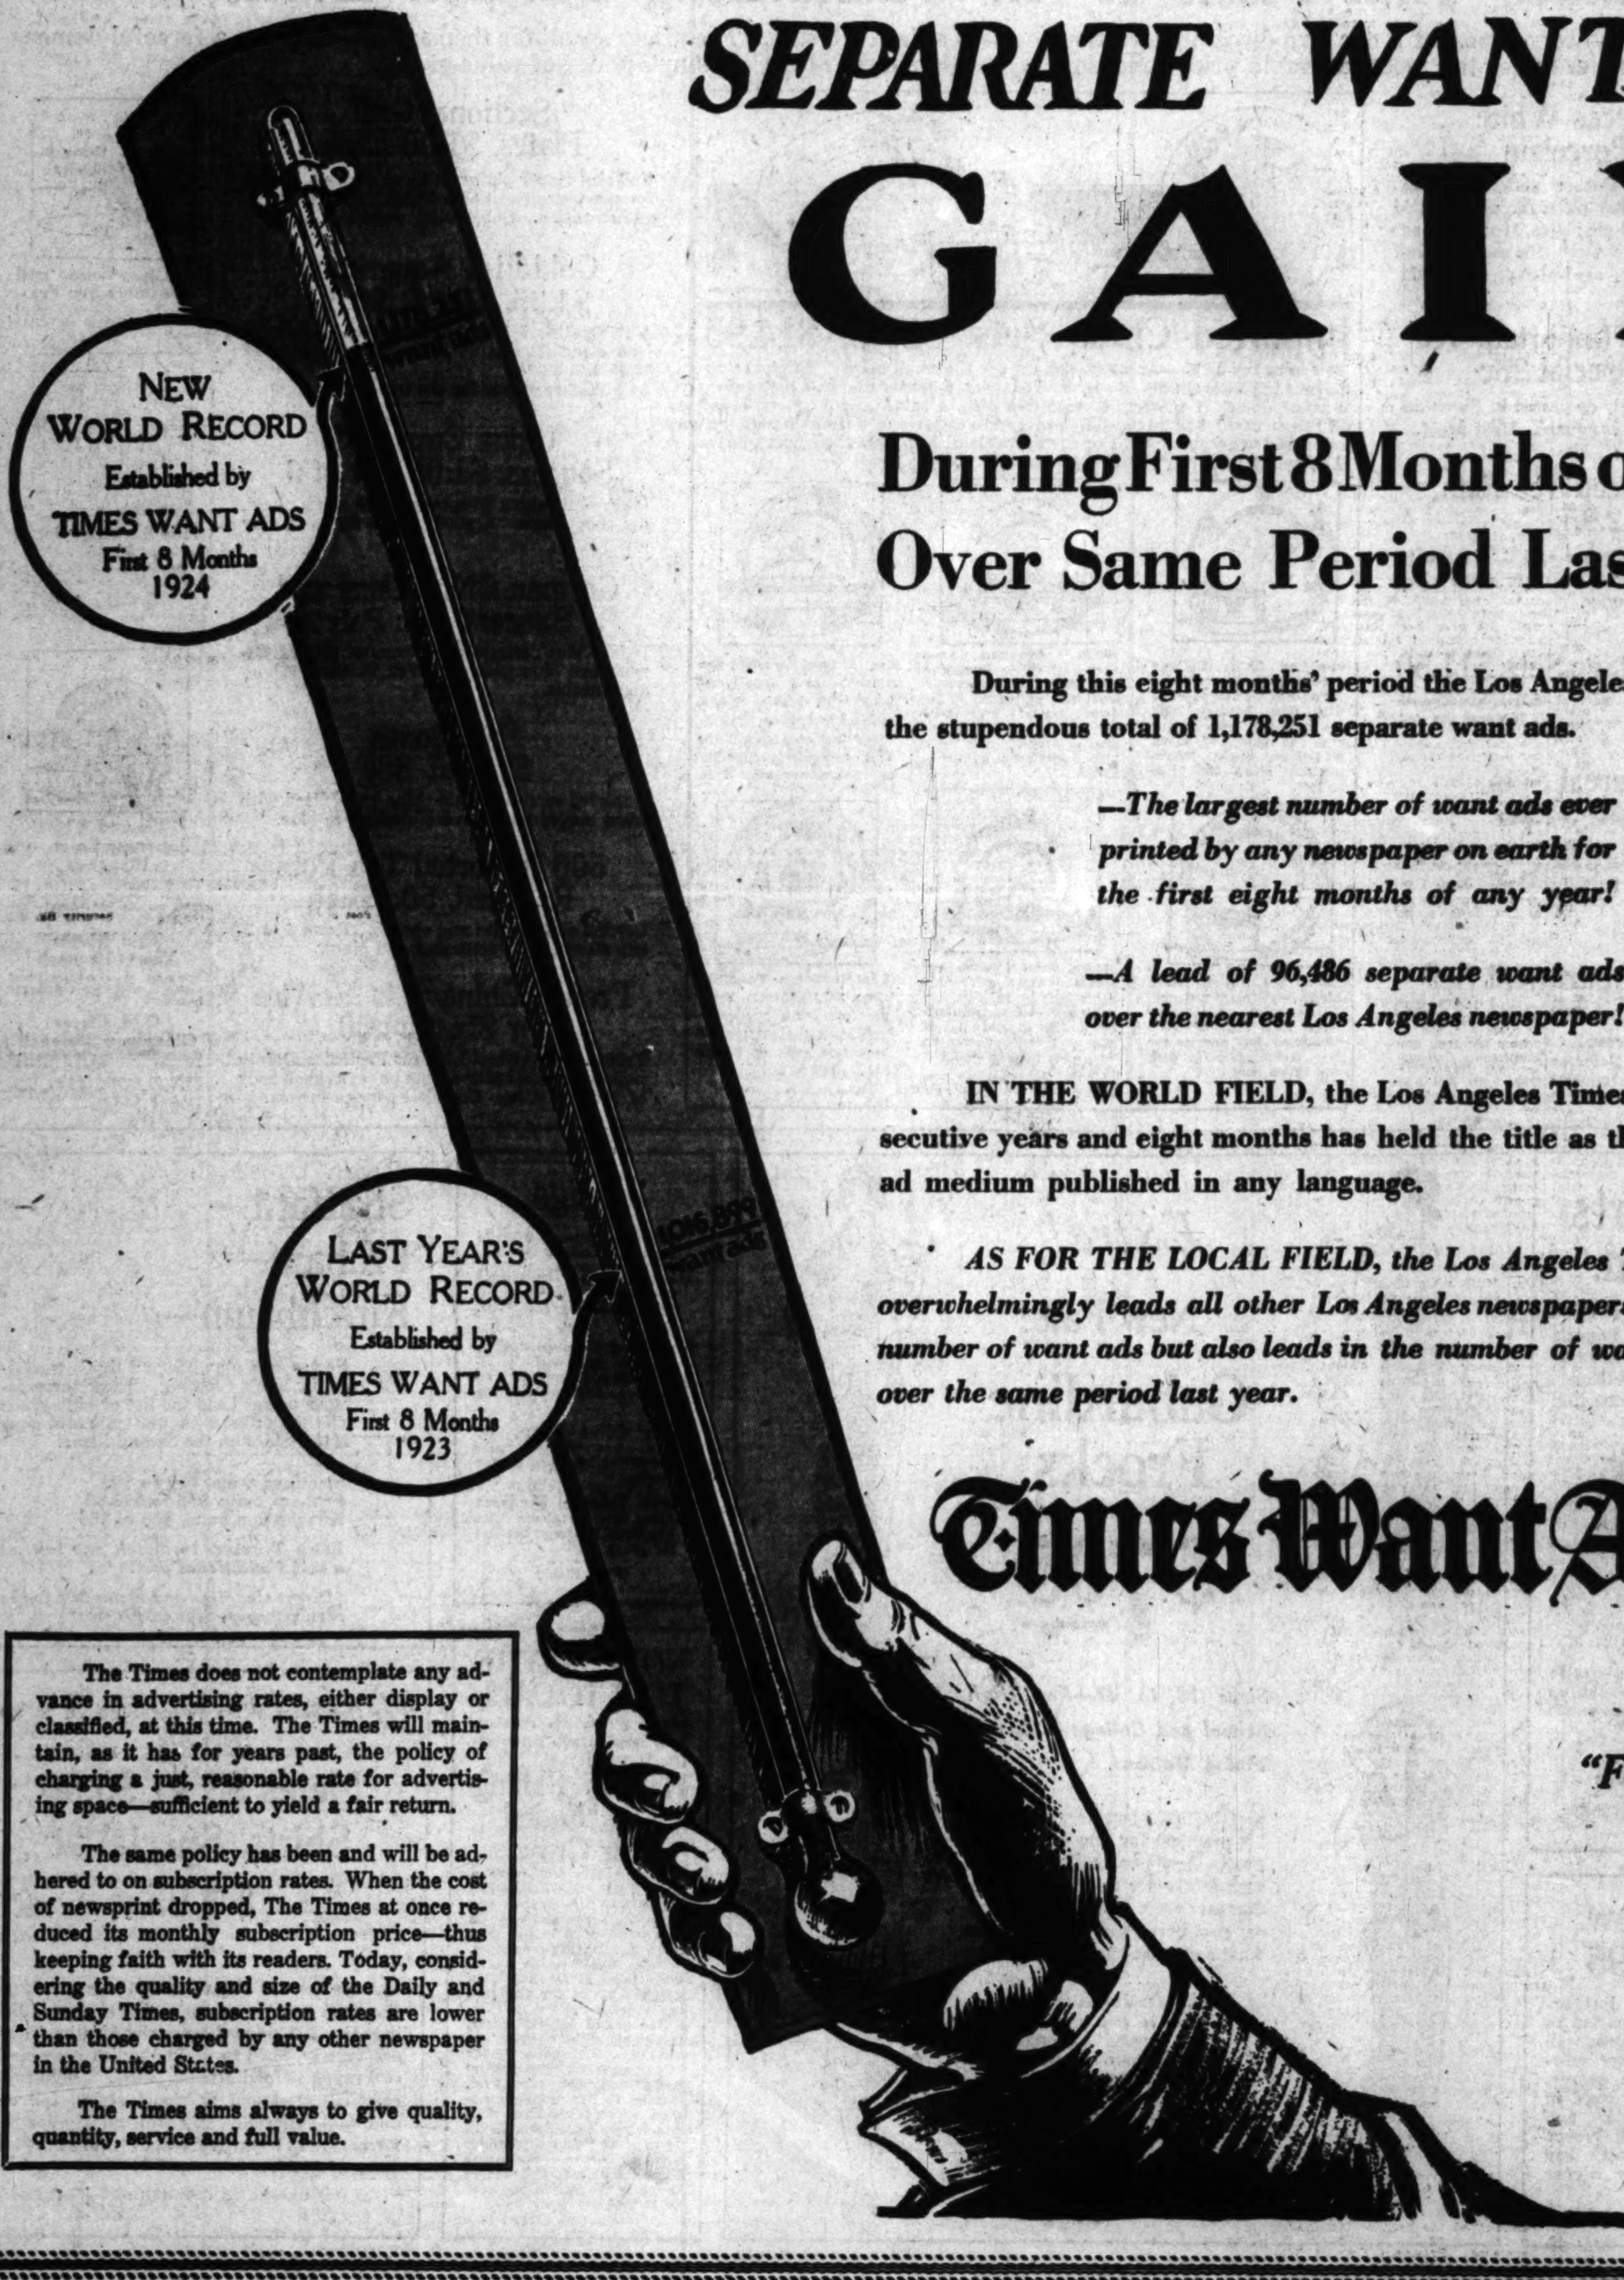
SEPARATE WANT ADS

GAIN

During First 8 Months of 1924 Over Same Period Last Year



During this eight months' period the Los Angeles Times printed the stupendous total of 1,178,251 separate want ads.

> —The largest number of want ads ever printed by any newspaper on earth for the first eight months of any year!
> —A lead of 96,486 separate want ads over the nearest Los Angeles newspaper!

IN THE WORLD FIELD, the Los Angeles Times for three consecutive years and eight months has held the title as the largest want ad medium published in any language.

AS FOR THE LOCAL FIELD, the Los Angeles Times not only overwhelmingly leads all other Los Angeles newspapers in volume and number of want ads but also leads in the number of want ads gained over the same period last year.

Times Want Ads

"Fastest in Growth" as well as
"First in Size"

The Times does not contemplate any advance in advertising rates, either display or classified, at this time. The Times will maintain, as it has for years past, the policy of charging a just, reasonable rate for advertising space—sufficient to yield a fair return.

The same policy has been and will be adhered to on subscription rates. When the cost of newsprint dropped, The Times at once reduced its monthly subscription price—thus keeping faith with its readers. Today, considering the quality and size of the Daily and Sunday Times, subscription rates are lower than those charged by any other newspaper in the United States.

The Times aims always to give quality, quantity, service and full value.

LEADING STOCKS RECORD LOSSES

Passing of Wool Dividend is Surprise to Traders

Speculators Seize Opening to Raid Favorites

Short Selling Strengthens Technical Position

BY HERBERT R. JACKSON
Howard G. Rath Company

After a brief rally which promised to attain greater proportions, the market for securities again turned reactionary toward the close of the week and many issues forfeited several points. Standard listed bonds shaded off slightly and corn, wheat, grain and cotton followed the general downward trend. Call money rose at one time to 3 per cent, but closed the week at the 2 per cent rate, which has ruled continuously for several months. The ruling opinion is that the security markets have discounted improved business and other favorable factors on the financial and economic horizon and that a new stimulus is needed to take prices out of their present trading area.

The outstanding decline of the week was that recorded by American Woolen which lost approximately 20 points upon failure of the directors to declare the usual quarterly dividend. It was expected that the worst that could happen would be a reduction of 1 or 2 per cent in the annual rate, so that the action of directors came as a complete surprise. An uncomfortable feeling was thereby engendered and quickly spread to vulnerable stocks thought to be in line for similar action. An example is Chandler-Motors, which sold off very substantially in the face of an advancing market for motor shares.

SHORT INTEREST

There is no doubt that much of the selling which took place last week was largely professional, though there was some genuine selling of stocks which still afforded profits to holders. Aided by the uneasiness caused by omission of the American Woolen dividend, large traders were heavy sellers of stocks they did not own and a large short interest now exists in such issues as Chandler Motors, Famous Players, American Can and American Woolen. Doubtless there has been created a short interest in numerous other issues less prominently in the public eye than these speculative leaders and as a result it appears that the technical position of the market is correspondingly strengthened, for these stocks which have been sold short must be bought back.

Possibly some new development may be needed to cause a covering movement, but a rally from present levels seems inevitable. General business is good. There is a notable improvement in sales of motors and accessories. The outlook for oil stocks is better and the market shows evidences of an impending movement in shares of this industry. Railroad and copper stocks may very easily attain higher levels. Applying the decline to the average price of standard industrial issues it is relatively small, a matter of about 4 points, when it could easily have totaled 10 points without necessarily indicating an absolute reversal of the trend over a long period of time. If it is true that this is no time to buy stocks indiscriminately, it is equally true that this is no time to sell high-grade investment issues.

BONDS ACCUMULATED

Despite a minor decline in the average price of active listed bonds, accumulation of high-grade issues continues. New issues are not only subscribed very quickly, but they are being absorbed and digested under conditions which have prevailed for many months past, the bond market offers the most remunerative employment for capital and the reserve funds of corporations, institutions and individuals have been competing for this employment. Money rates may temporarily advance as funds are withdrawn to finance removal of crops, but it is doubtful if bond prices will suffer to any great extent. On the contrary, the funds so withdrawn, together with new wealth, will find their way back into the security markets in a reasonably short period of time.

The stock and commodity markets are now going through a period which might be termed an evening-up of speculative scores. With completion of this readjustment and propagation of optimistic sentiment, a new upward movement may start at any time, and it will not be surprising if oils, coppers, motors and rails play a prominent part in the advance.

BANKER WILL TELL FACTS

Security Officer Leaves for East Armed With Local Figures; Globe Grain and Goodyear

George M. Wallace, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, will leave tomorrow for a month's study of business conditions in the leading cities of the East. While in the East he will attend the national conventions of the Investment Bankers' Association in Cleveland, on the 22nd to 25th inst., and the American Bankers' Association in Chicago from the 29th inst., to October 2.

In addition to making a study of business conditions elsewhere, Mr. Wallace will avail himself of the opportunity of telling some of the leading financiers of the Atlantic Coast and the Middle West the real status of affairs in Los Angeles and Southern California.

"I have known in a general way that there is a great deal of misinformation current throughout the country about this section, but I had the seriousness of the situation brought home to me a few days ago by a letter from Willis H. Booth, formerly of this city and still vice-president of the Security Bank, who is now vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York," Mr. Wallace said yesterday. "Mr. Booth told me that really reputable men believed fictitious stories of 100,000 motor tourists being stalled here and of the city engaging special trains to carry the unemployed to places where work is plentiful. He suggested that I come East armed with the figures and statistics to disprove these bad reports and in so far as one man can I am going to try to do this. I have had the Security's department of research and service gather the exact information to back up what many of us know to be the actual state of affairs in this State."

FIGURES CITED

"For instance," Mr. Wallace continued, "I have the figures to prove that in spite of factors which might ordinarily be expected to exercise a depressing influence, the volume of retail trade as measured by the business of leading department stores during each of the recent months has remained equal to or slightly more than that of the corresponding month of last year, while the total for the first seven months of this year is over 12 per cent greater than that of the corresponding period of 1923.

"Another lot of data will show the steadily increasing volume of commerce through Los Angeles Harbor, culminating with an increase of $75,000,000 for the year ending June 30, 1924, as compared with the year previous. And yet another group of statistics shows that there is a 10 per cent increase in the bank deposits in comparing these same two periods. Our deposits on June 30 reached the huge total of $841,396,000.

"Taking the average building activities here since the close of the war, our normal building rate per month is about $9,500,000. Official totals for the first eight months of this year show that we have averaged in excess of $13,000,000. This compares with an average of slightly more than $3,000,000, for our friendly rival, San Francisco. So far this year we have issued $104,321,000 in building permits.

"The value of manufactured products in the metropolitan area of Los Angeles amounted last year to $1,250,000,000, as against $960,000,000 for the year before. It is estimated that this year's production will amount to considerably more than $1,500,000,000 in value."

"In other words," concluded Mr. Wallace, "I expect to leave the impression with those bankers, whom I meet, that conditions in Southern California are really sounder than they ever have been. They will see, I believe, that this combination of accidental factors we know as the recent foot-and-mouth disease, the lack of normal rainfall and the power shortage, have served only to introduce a very desirable element of caution in our business situation, which due to the rapidity of growth might otherwise have developed undesirable elements of inflation."

DIVIDEND EXPECTED

Stockholders in the Globe Grain and Milling Company are awaiting with considerable interest the statement expected from the directors tomorrow relating to the future dividend policy on the common stock. Opinion is general that the company has decided to resume dividends, which were suspended January 1, 1921, but the rate of payment is a matter of conjecture.

The stock market has been forecasting the resumption of dividends for some time, and reached a new high last week at 57 1-2 in anticipation of this action. Earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, apparently warrant this assumption, even without the statement made to stockholders in the annual report that the directors were optimistic over the possibilities of the early resumption of payments.

Early last year the company notified stockholders that dividends at the rate of 5 per cent per annum would be paid on the common as the result of satisfactory business in the last half of 1922. Later, however, this action was rescinded before the actual payment of quarterly dividends, with the explanation that it would be wiser to accumulate a surplus to better handle the expanding business of the company. With this explanation the president of the company expressed the hope that when dividends were resumed it would be possible to start the rate at 6 per cent instead of 5 per cent per annum.

Opinion is divided among traders on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange as to the rate that will be declared if the directors decide on resumption of payments, the guesses running from 4 to 6 per cent.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, last, the company reported earnings and dividends from investments at $801,125.01, an increase of 46 per cent over the year ended June 30, 1923. The surplus and undivided profits account expanded from $1,265,319.57 in 1923 to $1,788,359.16, a gain of 41 per cent.

GOODYEAR DIVIDENDS

No action was taken by directors of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California at their regular meeting Friday on the payment of the deferred dividends of $24.50 on the preferred stock. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 was declared.

When the company formally announced the decision last March to resume regular payments on the preferred, President Edward Wilmer stated that the amount in arrears would be paid as fast as the current financial position of the company warranted. Vice-President and General Manager A. F. Osterloh said yesterday that the growth of business in the last few months was requiring a considerable amount of money, and it was not convenient at this time for the company to begin on the dividends in arrears. This matter, he said, would be considered further at the next meeting of the board.

OIL SECURITIES REACT SLIGHTLY

New Developments in Julian Interest Traders

Assessment Breaks United States Royalties

Strong Demand for Utility and Bank Stocks

BY FRANK L. GARDNER of Banks, Huntley & Co.

Trading last week on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange began Tuesday with an unusual outburst of activity and a pronounced tone of strength. Apparently the previous three-day holiday resulted in an accumulation of orders, particularly on the buying side. Activity was extended to practically every group and the ticker recorded transactions in many ordinarily inactive issues.

After early strength, new pressure influenced prices of oil shares and Union Oil Associates broke through its recent low, selling at 38½. Union of California appeared strong at from 132¾ to 132 with considerable stock absorbed. United Oil failed to hold all the ground gained the previous week and sagged from 34 3-4 to 33 3-8, with a close at that figure. Losses of a point in General Petroleum and a half-point in Standard of California were recorded, while Associated and Pacific about maintained their former levels around 28 1-4 and 47. Shell Union fluctuated between 16 1-4 and 16 3-4, closing at 16 1-4.

Julian Petroleum issues again provided the feature with a resumption of their spectacular up and down antics. The recent market career of these shares gives the appearance of professional manipulation, but close observers are of the opinion that the wide range is purely the result of a rapidly changing demand and supply. The results of Mr. Julian's plan for the pooling of all shareholdings to be followed by an attempt to stabilize the market around the book-value ($58 on preferred) will be watched with interest. After closing the previous week's trading at 14 7-8, the preferred opened on Tuesday at 19 and a brisk demand soon established a high at 20½. Profit taking hammered the quotation back to 14 1-4, where a rally resulted in recovery to 20 and closed at 18 3-4. The common rose from 9 to 12 3-4, reacted to 9 3-4, and closed strong at 12 3-4.

OIL ASSESSMENT

Following closely on the heels of an upturn from 7½ to 9½ cents, announcement of a 1½-cent assessment on United States Royalties caused a sharp break in that stock to 5¼ with a recovery to 7 cents. Mascot Oil made a further gain to 90½ cents and Midway Northern at 79 cents was up 3 cents. Recent strong demand for Superior Oil around 70 cents seemed to have disappeared and final quotations were recorded at 50 bid, 69¼ asked. Rio Grande Refining sold at 80, Republic Petroleum at 8½ cents, and Globe Petroleum at 2½ cents. Holly Development registered a sharp gain from 59 to 73 cents and closed around 73. Realization of the potential value of this company's fifty-acre lease at Dominguez is probably reflected in the improved demand for stock.

Los Angeles Investment began the week with a fresh advance which carried the quotation to 3.90. Reports that 620 adjoining acres, recently leased to Standard Oil, were at a bonus of $165 per acre instead of $1000, are said to be responsible for the selling which caused the slump to closing figures around 3.75. Rumor of the declaration this month of a 4 or 5 per cent annual dividend on Globe Grain common is ascribed as the reason for strong accumulation in that issue. New high ground for this movement was reached at 57½ with final quotations in the neighborhood of the top. Goodyear Tire and Goodyear Textile were dull at slightly lower prices. Mortgage Guarantee was in strong demand with little stock in evidence and Laguna Land and Water preferred rose 5 points to 1.30 bid. Sun Finance and Investment sagged off slightly to around 1.00. Moving up to 375 bid, West American Insurance established a new high.

OTHER SECURITIES

The demand for bank stocks continues and is noticeably reflected in advancing quotations on many issues. Bank of America made a fresh gain, from 135 to 140, and Security Trust advanced further to 382. First National was strong at 378 and California Bank sold at 290. National City was in good demand at 133¼ and Bancitaly Corporation, a new listing, sold around 136.

A stronger tendency was reflected in the price trend of many utility issues, with San Joaquin Light and Power prior preferred selling at 97, ex-dividend, equivalent to almost a 1 point gain, and Edison 7 per cent preferred advancing to 104, up a half. San Joaquin common strengthened to around 33½, approximately its former high, and Los Angeles Gas preferred was in good demand around 89½. Edison common sold throughout the week in the neighborhood of 98½, and Southern Counties Gas 6 per cent preferred was unchanged at 101½.

Practically all stocks in the mining list were under pressure with the greatest activity centered in Richmond Copper, which declined from 6½ to 4 cents. United Eastern broke 3 cents to 40, and Tom Reed was somewhat heavier around 19 cents. Telluride was moderately active at from 8 to 8½ cents, and United American at from 5½ to 6½. Simon Silver changed hands at 5 cents.

BAD CHECKS

A man representing himself to be J. P. Marston, recently has been operating among business houses, issuing worthless checks and obtaining valuable goods for worthless paper. Recently this person drew a check on the Bank of Italy for $180, purchased an excellent carpet at a local store and had the carpet delivered to his alleged residence. He accepted delivery and signed a receipt for the carpet and immediately disappeared. The check came back "No Account." In this case he filled in the payee's name with a typewriter.

It is not likely that this bad-check passer will again use the same name, and Assistant Captain of Detectives J. A. Winn, in charge of the forgery detail of the detective bureau of the police department, believes he is continuing his activities at this time. He is described as American; 40 to 45 years of age, five feet nine inches in height, weight approximately 160 pounds, ruddy complexion, grayish brown and rather wiry hair, nervous in movements, and when last seen wore a gray suit.

Splendid results are being obtained through the co-operation given the police by the newspapers. Through items carried in this space, two forgers of great skill and daring have been captured within the last few days. If business men save the daily bulletins on "Bad Checks," Los Angeles may soon be almost free from professional crooks who pass worthless checks for cash and merchandise.

74th Birthday Anniversary

Tuesday, September 9th, California celebrates her admittance into the Union—just 74 years after President Filmore signed the bill making her an official member of the United States of America.

The first vote was taken in the House on August 13, 1850, with 38 votes for and 14 against her admittance. On September 7th, following, the Senate ratified the bill with a vote of 150 to 56.

Peter H. Burnett, Democrat, was California's first governor, following the seven military governors from 1846 to 1849. To date, 25 governors have held office for an average term of three years. Three were returned for a second term: John Bigler, Hiram W. Johnson and William D. Stephens. Politically, California has had twelve Democratic governors; eleven Republican; one Union, and one Know-Nothing.

"New Albion" was the first name given this territory by Sir Francis Drake. Later it was christened California by Cortez, who also called it the "promised land"—an appellation which has stood by it even to this day.

Because California is a State of incomparable resources and destined to be one of the greatest industrial States in the Union, this corporation is satisfied to deal in

SMALL FLUCTUATIONS IN COTTON MARKET

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Spot cotton 10 points net higher, 25.30.

Cotton prices moved over an extremely narrow range in today's half-session with evening-up operations the principal source of business. Trading was only a little more active than in recent sessions due to the nervousness of some shorts, whose nervousness in seeking to cover their short contracts lent a tone of moderate firmness to the list. Closing prices were 6 to 12 points net higher.

ORANGES

The market on California Valencia oranges held steady the past week. There is a good, active demand for Valencias of good quality and condition. Growers and shippers are well pleased with present market conditions.

While it is generally conceded that the peak in the market has been reached, there is little likelihood of any appreciable decline in prices with the available supply of Valencias estimated at 4800 cars on September 1.

During the month of September, 1923, California shipped 3184 cars of Valencias, or an average of 105.7 cars daily. The first half of the month the daily average was 95.3 cars and the last half 115 cars.

Florida figures on being in the market early with her Parson Brown variety of oranges this season.

A continuation of highly favorable weather conditions throughout the Florida citrus belt has brought the present crop up to the point where the growers say they are assured of a good run of sizes. The lighter settings of last spring made possible the development of larger sizes. Weather conditions during the spring and summer have been exceptionally favorable.

The first of October will undoubtedly see the Parson Brown beginning to move.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion that Florida will produce between 16,000,000 and 18,000,000 boxes of oranges and grapefruit, with the grapefruit the lightest in proportion to the acreage.

No authentic figures on the 1924-25 California citrus crop are available. Preliminary estimates indicate an increase of about 10 per cent in oranges over this season's shipments.

F.o.b. California quotations on fancy Valencias are on the following basis: Size 126s, 5.25@5.85; 150s, 4.85@5.35; 176s, 4.85@5.35; 200s, 4.60@5.10; 216s, 4.10@4.60; 250s, 3.85@4.35; 288s, 3.10@3.85; 324s and smaller, 2.85@3.35.

LEMONS

There is a good demand for California lemons. Weather conditions have been favorable throughout the eastern markets, causing the best looking lemon deal since the first of last April.

F.o.b. California quotations are on a basis of 3.00@4.50 per box for extra choice fruit.

There are approximately 75 cars of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale in all United States ports within the next thirty days.

NEW YORK CURB

Following are the closing quotations on the New York Curb market, furnished by Logan & Bryan, members of the New York Stock Exchange, 626 South Spring street.

FIRM RUBBER MARKET

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—A rally which established a premium again for spot deliveries in the last day of the week's session of the local crude rubber market also offset the previous day's losses and brought spot rubber to 27 cents flat per pound. October delivery of sheets was available at 26¾ cents and October-December possibly at the same price.

The feeling generally in the market the last day was more confident on the upturn in London. The Akron manufacturers were inquirers rather than buyers and the little business that took place was mostly for September and October deliveries and was contracted with a great deal of caution.

Operations are satisfactory in all manufacturing plants with the automobile trade continuing to specify the balloon sizes for the fall trade. It is estimated that production of balloons at this time comprises almost 61 per cent of the total output. No price changes were made in the remainder of the list and holders of Paras, ambers and crepes declined to quote firmly.

CALIFORNIA DRIED FRUIT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Evaporated apples, nominal. Prunes, firm. Apricots, very steady. Peaches, very steady. Raisins, more active.

Probability that the entire southeastern area of the Rosecrans field may be productive of the same high gravity oil that was discovered in the Maxwell No. 1 of the Superior Oil Company, was asserted yesterday by Judge Brennan, general counsel of the Bransdall Oil Company of California. Gravity tests of the oil from the Barnsdall's Rosecrans No. 1 showed 42.4 deg. gravity in the flowline, and 41.2 deg. in the tank. These gravities were taken at corrected temperature of 60 deg. F. and are virtually the same as the gravity of the Maxwell product. The Barnsdall well's flow is building up steadily. Yesterday its output was estimated at 960 barrels.

In addition to this indication, Judge Brennan reported that samples of oil from the O'Dea well, about one-half mile northwest of the Maxwell and Barnsdall, showed gravity of 40 deg., somewhat lower than the oil in the wells farther southeast, but still several degrees higher than the oil of the Union Athens No. 1, which is around 36 deg.

Get New Well

The Sequoia Oil Company has completed its Chapin No. 1 in the Huntington Beach field with an initial flow of about 500 barrels per day, according to field reports. The well was originally drilled to about 3800 feet, where production is said to have been unsatisfactory, and it was redrilled, the new bottom being about 3100 feet. At this point the well flowed at the rate of 500 barrels per day, but later stopped flowing, and was placed on the beam. Production is reported at 150 barrels per day. The well offsets the Miley-Keck No. 46.

Make Water Test

The Union Oil Company is making a water test in its Trust No. 1 in the western part of the Rosecrans field, according to official reports. A casing test was made yesterday, and approved, and the cement was drilled out. Fluid is reported to have risen within 500 feet of the top of the well, showing salty water. Bottom of the well is at 4566 feet, with casing set at 4551.

Shell Cements Well

The Shell Company has cemented four-inch casing in its Hellman No. 1 in the Dominguez field at 5337 feet, according to official reports. A recent combination test demonstrated that production might be achieved even at this depth, if the shut-off can be effected. The well is said to have found about sixty feet of oil sand, and if it is placed on production will produce from the deepest, productive sand in California.

Set Casing

The Superior Oil Company has effected a shut-off in its North Whittier No. 1-A at 2980 feet, according to official reports. Casing was set as a conductor string, officials assert, eleven-inch pipe being used.

The Andres No. 1, in the same district, is drilling ahead at 435 feet.

In Barren Sand

After passing through two oil sands, the Brockley No. 1 of the Associated Oil Company in Rosecrans is drilling near 4400 feet in barren sand and shale, according to field reports. The first sand was passed up because of the fear that water immediately below would prevent production, as had been the case in other wells in the field. When the second sand was found no shale was available to set casing.

Coast Still Leads

The continuance of California as a factor affecting Atlantic seaboard markets in approximately its earlier-in-the-year ratio is promised for the next few months. This condition comes from two causes, one of which has to do with the almost certain maintenance of daily average production the remainder of 1924 at or above the 600,000 barrels mark daily. The other has to do with runs to refinery stills, which in July dropped below the 400,000-barrel mark daily. It is now indicated that 1924 refinery runs considered in terms of daily averages for the entire year will not be materially different from the 1923 record of approximately 406,000 barrels daily, says the National Petroleum News.

It will not be the disposition of various California interests to ship in inter-coastal traffic law any large quantities of crude, nevertheless the last half of 1924 will find average shipments around the 100,000 barrels daily mark.

With Rosecrans and Dominguez fields forging ahead in the production column and with Rosecrans especially an important factor to be considered in terms of 1924 daily averages, the long look ahead would be for the Pacific Coast again to exert material influence upon domestic markets generally next year.

Present evidence does not indicate a recurrence of 1923 conditions but in the face of accretions still being made to California storage as late as August 1 it is not improbable that inventories plus fresh crude in sight may be now regarded as promising considerable quantities of 1925 shipments from Pacific Coast loading points to intercoastal and foreign destinations.

Meantime unless August and September figures show draughts in California storage, no decline in Pacific Coast stocks is indicated for the remainder of the year.

Make Water Test

The Marland Oil Company is making a water test on its test hole, Cauley No. 1, Sec. 16, 28-27, West Front Extension of Kern River oil fields. The well was drilled to 2510 feet where live oil sand was encountered. The ten-inch string was run in and a cementing job was done. Should a good water shutoff be made the well will be drilled into the pay sand. Much interest attaches to the well because it is the first well to be drilled into oil by the Marland in Kern county. Another test well is being drilled by the company on the Shield's lease north and east of Lost Hills, a depth of 4400 feet being attained already.

An American firm has received a contract to construct a bridge in Tokio, Japan, to cost 2,000,000 yen.

MARKET REVIEW

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—No change in any direction was indicated in today's markets, all of which ended the week without change of form from the preceding days. That is to say, the stock market went irregularly lower, the bond market held steady with a further slight rise in government bonds, the foreign exchange market and the grain market halted in something like apathy. All of them have a somewhat perplexing position to consider.

The stock exchange has to make up its mind how far last week's swift reaction had "discounted" what is bad in a generally excellent business situation. It talked of "Monday's Maine election," but it knew perfectly well that, whatever the election figures, Wall street the next day will say, and say correctly that Maine has been an erratic and often misleading State. The bond market ended the week still undecided as to whether the usual autumn rise in money rates will not come, after all. Foreign exchange had the question to consider of American capital flowing to Europe with the movement stimulated by low money rates here and high rates in Europe. The grain and cotton markets had the government crop estimates of the next few days to keep in mind.

Under such circumstances there was no cause for wonder that all of these markets should have ended the week with a cautious movement. Only the stock exchange transactions were larger than those of any Saturday since the middle of August but the movement of prices was inconclusive. There were several declines of a point or more, and the average price both of railway and industrial shares closed lower; but most of the day's changes were small fractions and a few stocks advanced. In some respects the course of the United States bonds was particularly interesting, the days slight enhancement of values made an advance for the week ranging from 1-16 to 1-32. This is pretty good testimony to expectation of continued ease in money; it may be testimony also to doubt an early and general trade revival.

The commodity markets, which chose to halt in their alternating movements today, are certain to have an interesting week before them. We shall know more as to relative values in that quarter two or three days from now. One of the week-end complications had some bearing both on foreign exchange and on the state of trade. Export of cotton since August 1, has been 7 per cent below last year, but the last week's estimated export of cotton was four or five times as great as that of the same week in 1923.

Stocks Work Lower

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Stock market averages:

	Industrials.	Rails.
Saturday	100.7	89.04
Friday	100.43	89.17
Week ago	104.00	91.27
High, 1924	104.13	93.15
Low, 1924	90.27	81.00
Total sales, 437,500.

Stock prices again pointed lower in today's market, brief, but active. While selling apparently was not as urgent as it had been in the preceding days and short covering was in evidence in several issues, buying power continued to lack impressiveness. Recessions in most of the pivotal shares were limited to fractions, although losses of 1 to 2 points were quite common in their sections of the list.

One of the features of the session was the sharp break of 7 1-4 points in American Waterworks common to 105 3-4 just before the close. West Penn Power, a subsidiary, broke 6½ points to 80½ on one sale. United Railways Investment preferred also was in rather free supply, closing 2 points lower at 38.

United States Steel common touched a new low on the current movement at 105 7-8, but rallied later to 106 1-8, off 1-8. Baldwin closed 1-8 lower at 119 3-8, while American Can dropped 1½ points to 174 1-8.

Persistent liquidation of American Woolen sent that stock to another record low of 51½, but it moved back to 52½ at the close, showing a net loss of 2 5-8 on the day. Fears for the safety of the quarterly dividend of 1 1-4 per cent on Chandler were reflected in the liquidation of that issue, which sold down to a new low at 35 1-4. Union Bag and Paper also broke through its previous bottom, closing about a point lower at 39.

Buying of Lackawanna was again the outstanding feature of the railroad list, that stock moving up to 143½, a new high since 1921, before profit-taking forced it back to 143 1-8, up 5-8. Nickel Plate dropped more than 1 point to 116½, and Chicago Northwestern, and St. Louis Southwestern fell back a point. Pittsburg and West Virginia climbed nearly 1½ points, most of the other popular rails showing slight recessions.

Some of the weak spots in the industrial list were United Fruit, American Beet Sugar, Fisher Body, General American Tank Car and Nash Motors, off 2 to 5 points.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet with further recessions in the principal European rates.

Heavy Export Sales Fail to Incite Advance

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—While there is an immense amount of cash grain being sold for export, the removal of hedges is insufficient to maintain bulges. Those in close touch with what is passing in export circles estimate that during the past week 12,000,000 to 14,000,000 bushels of wheat, 4,000,000 bushels of rye, 2,000,000 bushels of barley and 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels of oats were sold abroad, a total of around 22,000,000 bushels. Large as this total is, it was only about 50 per cent of the amount of grain received at primary markets, 42,000,000 bushels, the largest on record by nearly 6,000,000 bushels, the nearest approach being 36,037,000 bushels for the week ending August 5, 1921.

Grain markets were decidedly unsettled, breaking only to rally later and then react toward the last, with wheat closing within a fraction of the bottom, with net losses of ⅛@⅜c, while corn was ¼@½c higher, oats ⅛@¼c higher and rye ⅜@⅝c higher.

Considering the news and the amount of export business passing, the grain markets acted in a most unsatisfactory manner for the bulls. Wheat at the close Saturday was 1⅛@2c lower than the finish the previous week, while corn was off ⅛@⅝c. Oats were unchanged to ½ cent lower, while rye showed independent strength, as export sales exceeded the amount of new grain hedges, and net gains were 1⅝@4⅛c, with September leading.

The wheat market was dull the greater part of the day, within a range of 1@1¼c, with the finish at 1.22⅝ for September, 1.27⅛@1.27 for December and 1.33⅝@1.33⅝ for May. Foreigners and the seaboard bought futures early, and with the strength in corn, made a strong rally after an early break, but each upturn there was increased pressure the same as has been witnessed for some time past, and the close was heavy.

Export sales in all positions were around 800,000 bushels, with France taking some grain. Winnipeg was off ⅛@¾c at the last, while Liverpool closed 1⅝@3d lower on scattered rains in Argentina. The decline in foreign exchange tends to check export business in all grains, as the continent was forced to pay 130 guilders for rye, or 6 guilders more than on Friday.

Frost was reported overnight in parts of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota and was largely responsible for a rally of 1½ cents after an early break, but the best figures were not maintained. September closed at 1.17⅝, December at 1.12⅝@1.12⅝ and May at 1.13⅝@1.13⅝. Some damage to the new corn crop is feared, as it was heavy in some sections. The forecast was for showers early in the week, with fair and warmer the latter part of the week. Lowest temperatures in Illinois Friday was 38 deg., while in Indiana and Ohio it was 36 deg. Cash premiums were well maintained.

Continued unfavorable reports on the Canadian oats crop, with further export business, had some effect on the oats market, increasing support on the breaks, and the undertone throughout the day was generally firm. Receipts, twenty-nine cars.

Houses with export connections were persistent buyers of December and rye and sentiment generally is bullish on the belief that the foreign demand will continue. Sales at the seaboard for the day were 500,000 bushels.

From Puget Sound to the Mississippi, Hills Bros Red Can Coffee is "The Recognized Standard"

NOT a bombastic claim, but a plain statement of fact, provable by simple arithmetic. More "Red Can" Coffee is sold in the great coffee-loving West than any other brand. The criterion of the critical!

From homes of wealth and nice perception, a tradition has spread, designating the West as the home of wonderful coffee. It is a tradition in which the whole western empire holds partnership.

The reason is not hard to find. Puncture the vacuum seal of a tin of Hills Bros. Coffee and breathe deeply of an unique fragrance. Brew a pot of "Red Can" and know that this rare aroma has not held out false promise!

There is no finer coffee to be had. It is the cream of the crop—not of one plantation, but of the plantations of the entire coffee-producing world. Blended with rare skill, roasted to a turn, ground with special machinery, and packed in a special way.

What a coffee, indeed! As you pierce the vacuum seal, the aroma that greets you defies description. And this intriguing aroma is but the herald of a flavor that again emphasizes the poverty of words. Lift a cup of Hills Bros. to your lips! . . . That's the answer!

Affairs of the week

By Juana Neal Levy

WITH the opening of schools and colleges, and the returning from beaches, mountain and summer camps, society is slowly preparing for a gay whirl of brilliant events, which will fill its ...ar until Lent comes to stop the merry whirl. One of the most ...ful affairs given in honor of a "home coming" was that of ...y afternoon when Eugene J. La Fon planned a surprise luncheon and bridge party for his wife, at their beautiful home in Hillside ..., Hollywood.

Mr. and Mrs. La Fon, with their attractive subdeb daughters, ... and Virginia La Fon, ... been summering at Santa ... and the family returned to ... Tuesday. Mr. La Fon had ... the house exquisitely redecorated and the rooms were filled ... great baskets and jars of giant ... and asters in browns and ... of the autumn tones, ... the den marigolds and ... were combined.

The luncheon table was centered ... huge pink rose Jack Horner ... ribbons extending to each ... place, and at the end of ... ribbon was a gift carrying out ... fancy of the honoree. ... hand-made cloth was ... pale green satin and at ... of the table was a huge ... of fruit with sweet peas, Brunner roses, cyclamen ... gypsophila sprays. ... the chandelier was an immense ... tulle bow, the long ... to the center of the table ... the place favors were ... wicker baskets ... bonbons, pink tulle ... the artistic touch to ....

... chair back was fastened ... Harlequin wand, topped by clowns and dancers in the pink and lavendar shades, the tally cards being attached by satin ribbons of pink with shower in corresponding tones.

A number of exquisite gifts were arranged in the breakfast-room, including a gold-mounted traveling case completely outfitted. Bridge followed the luncheon, the games being played on the veranda overlooking the sycamore trees and canyon.

Those enjoying the afternoon were Mrs. Eugene J. La Fon and her mother, Mrs. Louise Burnam; Mrs. Wayland Franklin, Mrs. Clyde Johnson, Mrs. Rena Pierson, Mrs. William Grant, Mrs. Harry Carroll, Mrs. Hal Hall, Mrs. J. A. Taylor, Mrs. Marian Estep, Mrs. George Fruehling and Mrs. James G. Sprecher.

One of the most charming hostesses of the season is Mrs. Jean H. Carpenter of La Brea avenue, whose many attractive affairs recently have been much enjoyed. Mrs. Carpenter entertained last week with a dinner party in honor of U. S. Dist.-Atty. Frederick Bernard and Mrs. Bernard of Tucson, other guests including former Governor of Arizona Thomas Campbell and Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Kent, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mallette Burdick, Mr. and Mrs. George Hoover, Miss Betty Bernard, Miss Harlean Carpenter and T. B. Cosgrove.

Mrs. Carpenter is planning a series of delightful affairs in the near future, one of them being in honor of Mrs. A. Roy Kilburn of Kansas City, who has been passing several months at the Ambassador, and who is returning home some time in October.

One of the attractive subdebs who has been enjoying a delightful summer abroad is Miss Mary Anne Strohn, daughter of Mrs. Royse M. Strohn, who, with her mother, returned to Southern California last week.

Miss Strohn, who is a junior at Mills College, has again resumed her studies there, but will come south for the holidays and visit with her mother and aunt, Mrs. George B. Macauley (Eleanor Strohn) at the home of the latter in Plymouth Boulevard.

Miss Strohn and her mother went abroad soon after college closed and enjoyed the summer traveling, passing most of the time in London, Paris and Italy, motoring through Southern France and on the Riviera.

Miss Strohn was graduated from Marlboro School and is one of the most popular members of the younger set here.

Among the popular visitors from neighboring States to Los Angeles this summer are Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton of Oklahoma City, who, with Mrs. Hampton's mother, Mrs. S. M. W. Gloyd, have been making an extended sojourn at the Biltmore.

Every day has been filled with parties given in honor of the visitors, among them being a delightful dinner party with which Mr. and Mrs. Judson C. Rives entertained at their home in Westchester Place Saturday evening.

A dozen guests were bidden to meet the visitors and during dinner music was furnished by a Hawaiian orchestra. Bridge was the feature of the evening's entertainment afterward.

A number of affairs are being planned for Mrs. Hampton within the coming weeks before their leaving for home.

In honor of Miss Lillian Kirksey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Kirksey of Eagle Rock, a dinner-dance was given recently by Miss Constance Branch.

Miss Kirksey, who has been enjoying her summer vacation with her parents, returned home in June from Nashville, Tenn., where she was a student at the Ward Belmont School.

A number of affairs have been given in honor of this charming young subdeb and several are in the "making" for the near future, although the dates have not yet been decided upon.

Mrs. T. D. Boyd, with her little son Tommy, arrived recently from their home in Havana, Cuba, to pass the summer here.

Mrs. Boyd, who was formerly Miss Helen Atkisson, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. J. T. Atkisson, at her home in South Ardmore avenue, but will be at home for the remainder of her stay here at the Gaylord in Wilshire Boulevard, where she has taken an apartment.

One of the attractive hostesses whose affairs have been much enjoyed this summer, is Mrs. Stafford Dunlap, who entertained several days ago with a charmingly arranged luncheon and bridge party at the home of her mother, Mrs. James Wood, in Crenshaw Boulevard, honoring her two house guests, Miss Charline Wood of Ames, Iowa, and Miss Genevieve Cleary, of Denver, Colo.

Miss Alice Wilber of Fullerton, whose engagement to Stanley Chapman was announced recently, shared the honors of the afternoon. The decorations were effectively carried out with asters and yellow roses, and sixteen guests were bidden.

Garden Wedding

One of the most charmingly appointed affairs of the season was the wedding Friday evening of Miss Lucie Hartzell and George De Forrest Home, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kimball Home of Santa Monica, the ceremony taking place in the beautiful gardens of the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hart, in Fremont Place.

The gardens were made into a floral cathedral, with flowering oleanders in pink and white shades forming the aisles leading from the house to the improvised altar, which also had been constructed with a background of latticed green and studded with the fragrant pink blossoms and sprays of feathery ferns and foliage. Roses in profusion were used on the altar shelf and myriads of lighted candelabra and soft-shaded electric light globes shed a rose glow over the gardens. Rev. J. M. Schaefle read the marriage service and Mr. Hart gave his niece in marriage.

The charming bride was attired in a gown of white velvet beaded in pearls and rhinestones. The round veil of tulle was caught to the head by sprays of orange blossoms and an imported pearl headdress added a delicate touch to the effect. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids, gardenias, bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Helen Tuthill of Portland, a sorority sister (Delta Gamma of Stanford,) assisted as maid of honor. Her gown was of chiffon from the orchid to the softest pink, with clipped ostrich trimming and she carried an arm sheaf of Columbia roses and maidenhair ferns. The bridesmaids, including Miss Francess Hartzell, sister of the bride, Miss Ruth Brauer, Miss Katherine Metcalf and Miss Helen Lawrence of San Mateo (also a sorority sister of the bride,) wore gowns of chiffon in the green shaded with trimmings of the clipped ostrich, and they carried bouquets of Premiere roses and pink sweet peas with sprays of delicate blue blossoms and maidenhair fern fronds, tied with pink and green tulle. Dorothy Belden, in shell pink chiffon, was the dainty flower girl, carrying a basket of pink blossoms and rose petals. Paul Home served his brother as best man and the ushers included Olin Wellborn III, George Hicks, John D. Home and Pezeril Marley.

A wedding supper followed the ceremony. The bride's table was an exquisite creation, the huge plaque centerpiece being of white and lavender orchids, bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The place cards were tiny brides and bridesmaids and the place favors carried out the same motif. The bride's cake, tiered and iced, was the centerpiece of the adjoining table.

Mr. and Mrs. Home will take a leisurely planned trip which will have as its destination New York City, where they will remain for a year and then will return to the Coast and will make their home in Los Angeles.

The bride, who has attended Stanford, is a Delta Gamma Sorority member, while Mr. Home was graduated from Pomona College and later from the law school at Columbia University. He is a Phi Alpha Delta Fraternity member.

Mrs. Hart received her guests in a gown of oriole-colored crepe de vine trimmed with silver and pearl beads while Mrs. Home's gown was of orange-toned crepe beaded in crystals.

Week-End Parties

Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Kellogg (Virginia Hanna) of Gramercy Park are enjoying a delightful outing at their summer cottage in Hermosa Beach. Each week-end finds them hosts at swimming and beach supper parties and they are planning to remain away until after October 1. Mrs. Kellogg returned recently from a visit in the north with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hanna, San Francisco.

Golden Wedding

One of the most delightful affairs of the week was that of Wednesday when Mr. and Mrs. George E. Jones of 2661 West Avenue 35 celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Jones came to Los Angeles twenty-seven years ago from Albuquerque, N. M., and with their sons and daughter, Clarence W. Jones, Ben Jones, George E. Jones, Jr., and Mrs. C. E. Pease (Mildred Jones,) have made their home here. Wednesday a family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Jones, 640 West Broadway, Glendale, when the dinner table was beautifully decorated, the centerpiece being a huge bride's cake iced and topped with bride and bridegroom and the place cards carried out the same motif in white and gold. Those included were Mr. and Mrs. George E. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Jones,

Dear Sirs

Please guard your hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I feel sorry to see men grow bald. It is easy to keep and to cultivate hair, and you owe it to yourselves and to us.

For many years I have sought and consulted some of the world's greatest experts on hair. They all agree that hair health comes from a clean and healthy scalp. Combat the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. Tone and stimulate the scalp. Then hair thrives, just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

Those experts have always supplied me the best helps known to science. Each new and better help discovered has come to me at once. Now I have had all of these combined in a product I call my Hair Youth. I have placed it on drug and toilet counters at every woman's call. But men need it more than women, so this is written to urge men to learn how much it does.

I am no longer young. For 35 years I have been a stage star. But my hair today is thicker and finer than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff and never a touch of gray. Now I offer you in my Hair Youth every help which brought those results to me. I am well assured that they combine the greatest hair helps in existence.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth is sold everywhere today. It costs 50c and $1 per bottle.

Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send with it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.—[Advertisement.

Going East

Miss Florence Marsh and Miss Martha Marsh, attractive daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marsh, are leaving tomorrow for the East where Miss Martha is entering Dobbs Ferry School. The Misses Marsh with their parents have been enjoying a delightful summer at their cottage on the Strand, Hermosa Beach, and each week-end has found them entertaining house guests from Los Angeles and adjacent cities.

Cards Issued

Cards are being issued by Mrs. A. F. Emminger of South Serrano street for a luncheon at the Mary Louise, Thursday afternoon, honoring Mrs. A. M. McLachlin of Washington, D. C., forty guests being bidden. Mrs. Emminger is also planning a large affair at the Biltmore in November.

Kerckhoff-Wright

Of much interest to local society was the wedding Wednesday evening of Miss Elise Kerckhoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton P. Kerckhoff of Covina, to Carleton Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wright of Pasadena, the ceremony being read by Rev. Father J. M. Quinn before an altar erected on the lawns in front of the home, it being a ranch house—large and interesting—far back from the road. The decorations and erection of the altar were under the supervision of the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was assisted by her sister, Miss Frances K. Kerckhoff, as maid of honor, nine bridesmaids led by Miss Doreen Tittle of San Francisco carrying sheaths of white chrysanthemums and streamers of white tulle from one to the other formed a complete aisle through which the bride leaning on the arm of her father and her maid of honor passed to the altar, meeting Mr. Wright and his best man, William Kellogg of Pasadena. The bridesmaids were Miss Rosa Porter and Miss Elizabeth Porter of Santa Maria, cousins of the bride; Miss Kathleen Wright, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Winifred Bowring of Charter Oak, Miss Wylie Jameson of Pasadena, Miss Lucie Warren, Miss Ruth Watson and Miss Rosalind Lovell of Covina. The bridal gown was of white georgette beaded with pearls over duchesse satin, her veil of tulle, worn en traine, being held in place by a coronet of rose pointe lace, and she carried white rosebuds, lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns in shower bouquet. The gown was cut short and edged with white marabout fur, the veil falling to the ground, forming a court train. The attendants were all gowned in pastel shades of georgette crepe and their bouquets were white chrysanthemums with great long stems. The improvised altar was banked with tall ferns, palms, white chrysanthemums, the whole being lighted by myriads of candelabra. After a wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Wright left for a two weeks' honeymoon trip, after which they will make their home in Santa Monica.

Salvage Tea

Perhaps one of the most interesting affairs of the month will be the salvage tea, which is being planned for the benefit of the Children's Hospital for Saturday afternoon, the 20th inst., and will take place in the beautiful gardens of the Berkeley Square home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor. Following the closing of the salvage shop of the Red Cross, after the armistice, a need was met in the Children's Hospital by establishing a salvage shop in South Maple avenue, which has been kept in operation under the efficient management of Mrs. Budd Frankenfield, whose untiring efforts have added almost $50,000 to the Children's Hospital fund during the four years of its existence. This has been accomplished entirely by volunteer workers—no salaries—and by the donations of all sorts and conditions of salvage, in clothing, millinery hosiery and, in fact, every known white elephant, not needed or wanted by some one, has found its way to the shop and been disposed of for a pittance or for a larger sum. The tea, which is being planned for the 20th inst., is to be unique in its way. No admission is to be asked, but each guest will please bring a bundle of some kind and this is to be your admission ticket. There will be on sale any number of things, dresses, hats, cloaks, etc., and the garage is to be turned into dressing-rooms, where the gowns may be tried on. Mrs. Albert Crutcher and Mrs. Russell McDonnel Taylor will be hostesses, assisted by the board of managers of the Children's Hospital, and Mrs. Oscar Lawler, Mrs. Melville G. Eshman, Mrs. Waller Taylor, Mrs. Silsby Spalding, Mrs. Sam M. Newmark, Mrs. Louis Cole, Mrs. Robert I. Rogers, Mrs. Budd Frankenfield, Mrs. John Moore Schmoele, Mrs. Walter Eaton, Mrs. George P. Griffith, Miss Helen Churchill and Miss Minnie Moulton. Mrs. Walter Pomeroy Eaton, who is in charge of the sales for the afternoon, will be assisted by Miss Florence Hunt, Mrs. Charles Anderson, Mrs. T. T. Heflin, Mrs. Rufus L. Horton and Mrs. Harry Baldwin. Mrs. John Moore Schmoele, formerly Miss Elizabeth Taylor, is in charge of the refreshment committee and will have a bevy of young society belles and matrons assisting her, including Mrs. Henry De Roulet (Nancy Billicke,) Mrs. Wilcox Drake (Katherine Hendricks,) Miss Dorothy Lillian Wellborn, Miss Hortense McLaughlin, Miss Margaret Martin, Miss Caroline Eshman, Miss Katherine Adam, Miss Roberta Crutcher, Miss Eleanor Cole, Miss Mary Gray, Miss Dorothy Gray and Miss Margaret Gray. The hours are from 3 to 5 o'clock and the slogan is "Come and bring what you don't need, taking home with you something you want."

For Bride Elect

Miss Helen Orendorff, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ulysses Grant Orendorff of Fremont Place, whose marriage to Judson Edwin Roberts will be one of the brilliant events of the 15th inst., was the guest of honor at a charmingly arranged informal tea with which Miss Frances Harrison entertained Friday afternoon at her parents' home in Fourth avenue. Autumn flowers in pastel shades were used with feathery ferns in the decorations of the tea table where covers were laid for Miss Orndorff, Miss Marian Our, Miss Marygean Thatcher, Miss Rose Skinker, Miss Ethel Robertson, Miss Kathleen Nolan, Miss Dorothy Nolan, Miss Veryl Sweeney, Miss Nelda Campbell, Miss Adele Smith, Miss Helen Gleason, Miss Helen Harrison, Mrs. U. G. Orendorff and Mrs. Fred A. Harrison. Wednesday afternoon Miss Marygean Thatcher entertained with a luncheon at the Biltmore in honor of Miss Orendorff, taking her guests afterward to the Orpheum, while Thursday afternoon Miss Veryl Sweeney entertained with a tea for Miss Orendorff at the California Country Club. Miss Harrison entertained recently with a luncheon and miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Orendorff, bridge and mah jongg being the features of the afternoon. Those included were Miss Orendorff, Miss Marion Our, Miss Helen Gleason, Miss Rose Skinker, Miss Adele Smith, Miss Margaret Campbell, Miss Kathleen Cullen, Miss Katherine Cole, Miss Veryl Sweeney, Miss Mary Belle Claggett and Mrs. Robert Perry Johnson.

Approaching Wedding

Announcement is made by Mrs. Julia Zuckerman of the Wilshire Apartments, of the approaching marriage of her granddaughter, Miss Helena Zuckerman, to Myron Zobel of New York City. Miss Zuckerman, who was graduated from University of California in Berkeley, was on her way to Europe where she was planning a post-graduate course in England. She met Mr. Zobel in Gotham and the romance started which culminates in the wedding which will take place in Paris, the 15th inst. The honeymoon will be passed in Switzerland, Italy and London, and they will return to New York where they will make their home. Mr. Zobel, who has a host of friends here, was graduated from Harvard University. He is the son of Mrs. Bailey, and his stepfather is Minister to Norway.

New Address

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson Haines and their two daughters, Miss Mildred Grace Haines and Miss Marian Elizabeth Haines, having recently sold their home at 1677 South Howard Boulevard are at home to their many friends in their new home at 1821 South Gramercy Place.

Mrs. Lillian Floyd has returned home after an extensive Alaskan trip, where she had gone for a rest after entertaining numerous D.A.R. visitors at the biennial. Mrs. Floyd and her mother, Mrs. Belle Waldron Kinsey, Regent, of El Camino Real chapter of the D.A.R., are enthusiastic workers in the organization.

Winter Plans

Planning a delightful winter outing at Miami, Fla., with their aunt, Miss Almira McMillan, who has a charming villa there, Miss Mary Elizabeth Kincaid and her sister, Miss Jean Bryce Kincaid, are leaving in November with Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Seeley in their yacht for several months' vacation. After the winter they are returning East and will enjoy Easter holidays as guests of Gov. and Mrs. Bingham at their home in New Haven. Friday afternoon Miss Mary Elizabeth Kincaid entertained with a luncheon party at the home of her mother, Mrs. Albion Steele McMillan, in Westmoreland Place, complimenting Miss Roberta Crutcher, who is leaving on the 15th inst. for Vassar. Miss Kincaid planned an affair for Miss Crutcher and her house guests early in the summer but, owing to a serious illness in the family, the party was postponed indefinitely. Those included Friday were Miss Crutcher, Miss Betty Bettingen, Miss Pooly Schoder, Miss Katherine Reynolds, Miss Katherine Wigmore, Miss Katherine Kumler and Mrs. Constant Billicke. Miss Crutcher, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crutcher of West Adams street, and her brother, John Crutcher, have been sojourning for several months at their summer cottage at Hermosa Beach.

Returned Home

Miss Eleanor Seavey, who has been the guest of her fiance's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Griffith, at their home in Orchard avenue for a month, returned home last Tuesday. No date has been set as yet for her marriage to Richard J. Griffith, announcement of which was made several months ago. Miss Seavey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Seavey of Hamilton and Boston, Mass.

Summer Outing

Mrs. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid and her attractive young daughter, Miss Elizabeth Von KleinSmid, have returned from a two months' vacation in which they have been enjoying the beaches and forests of Washington and Oregon, visiting also in Portland, the guests of the Fletcher Linns. Dr. Von KleinSmid joined Mrs. Von KleinSmid and Miss Elizabeth in San Francisco and together they passed a delightful fortnight at many of the delightful places on the Monterey Peninsula and are particularly enthusiastic over the Peninsula Serra Pilgrimage, which promises to attract many visitors, especially from the Mission cities of California. Miss Von KleinSmid will enter the University of Southern California this fall as a freshman, having been graduated last June from Girls' Collegiate.

Ballagh, at their summer home below Santa Monica. Mrs. Houston entertained Friday afternoon with a delightfully appointed luncheon at the Mary Louise, honoring the many hostesses who have entertained in her honor during her visit here. MR. A. FREEMAN, who assumes role as manager and buyer in the new Sweet Sixteen Millinery Department, is not unknown in the field of Millinery in this country. As owner of a chain of Millinery stores and having reorganized 42 Millinery stores in 37 cities in the United States, the success of these undertakings has been credited to his selection in Millinery and his efficient management.

It will be his policy to "carry on" in this department with only the finest productions. Famous designers and makers will be abundantly represented.

Volume of business is his watchword, based upon the policy that quantity gets the price to enable him to undersell.

Miss Harriet Matthews is spending the week at Balboa as a member of a house party given by Mr. and Mrs. William Pottinger of Los Angeles at their beach cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Barenchi went to Merced on Saturday to visit relatives for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bowmar spent Sunday at Catalina Island.

Riverside

Asst. U. S. Atty. Mabel Walker Willebrandt was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Mission Inn given by Mrs. Winnifred Ellis of Los Angeles Tuesday evening. Mrs. Willebrandt will return to Washington the middle of this month. She is scheduled to speak at the banquet on the closing day of the State Bar Association convention, which will be given at Catalina, September 18, and plans to go east a day later.

Mrs. L. B. Caldwell entertained at dinner Tuesday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Helen Caldwell. The affair was a surprise for Miss Caldwell and was given to celebrate her birthday anniversary. Delicate pastel shades of pink, blue and yellow formed the color scheme of the evening. A Jack Horner pie centered the table. From the midst of its petals of pink and yellow were drawn tiny rosebuds, which concealed snappers within. About sixteen young friends were the guests for the evening. Mrs. J. Stuart Barton assisted in serving the dinner.

Riverside society folks are regretting the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Crebbin, their daughter Barbara, and son Harry, who are to leave Riverside October 1. They will make their home for the coming year at La Jolla. Mr. Crebbin, who has been managing director of the Arlington Heights Fruit Company, is retiring from active business life for a year's rest.

Hundreds of tourists spent the two-day holiday this past week at the Mission Inn. A record-breaking crowd for September thronged to the picturesque spot. Visitors from Philadelphia, from New York, San Diego, Long Beach, Pasadena and San Francisco came to visit the art galleries and to lunch in the cool, attractive Spanish patio.

Word has been received by friends of Miss Anne Cameron that she is now in London with her sister, Mrs. P. T. Evans. Miss Cameron has just signed a contract with the Saturday Evening Post to write for them a series of short stories dealing with life in tourists' camps.

Miss Esther Woodworth has returned from attending a house party given by her sorority, the Alpha Theta Phi, at Redlands. She brought with her as her house guest for over Sunday Miss Pauline Nicholson.

Frand Lloyd, director of "The Sea Hawk," and Mrs. Lloyd, entertained a week-end party at the Mission Inn this past week. It was given for Director Richard Rowland of the First National Film Company, and Mrs. Rowland. For their guests they had Colleen Moore and her husband, John McCormack, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Beery, Milton Sills and Count Cippico.

Sierra Madre

The evening services at the First Congregational Church will not be resumed until October. During September the young people will gather at the Wistaria Theater as they have been doing during the summer for educational films such as have been presented heretofore. Dr. and Mrs. Tate are taking an outing at Seal Beach and upon their return, the doctor will complete his vacation with a trip north, spending most of his time at Berkeley.

Mrs. Frank Hart and her son Carl are back again at "Hartwood" after a trip to Victoria. Mrs. Caroline Ferris and her young son have returned from Naples. Mrs. Fred A. Cook has been at Santa Monica for a brief stay and plans to leave almost immediately for San Francisco. She will be accompanied by her little daughter.

A number of people spent the Labor Day week-end out-of-town. Among them were Mrs. Agnes Leifgton and Miss Fanny Montague Hunt who motored to Laguna Beach where they had three and a half delightful days.

Mr. Donald Parker returned some time ago from his summer at Lake Tahoe. He made headquarters at Brockway. This fall he will attend the University of Southern California, returning as a sophomore. Among the other college folk to return are Mr. Edwin Ward who is a student at Pomona. Miss Virginia Jones was graduated from the University of Redlands last June.

The school sessions are preparing for the fall semester. Dr. and Mrs. John Brice who have had a family of boys and girls for their summer camp will formally open the Brice Academy, 369 North Auburn, September 16, of this month.

Miss Marion Vannier who has spent the better part of the last month at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. H. Vannier of 153 South Hermosa started Friday for Minneapolis where she has been appointed to be the Director of the School of Nursing at the University of Minnesota with the standing of a professorship on the faculty of that institution. It will be recalled that Miss Vannier was formerly Superintendent of the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles. This honor shown her in her profession is one of which her Sierra Madre friends are very proud.

Eagle Rock City

Miss Amber Young and her mother, Mrs. Charles Young of Rock Glen avenue are spending a few days at their summer home at Hermosa Beach.

Mrs. Matilda Genn and Arthur Genn of North Royal Drive spent the last week-end with Mrs. Genn's sister, Mrs. Laura Eddy, at Hermosa Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartley Taylor and family are expected to return tomorrow from San Diego where they have spent the last week attending to business matters in connection with Mr. Taylor's ranch which is located near the Mexican border.

The women's social circle of the Congregational church held its regular monthly meeting last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Sinclair Smith, 5126 North Ellenwood Drive. Luncheon was served at noon to forty guests.

Mrs. Mary A. Hixon returned home Tuesday from Catalina Island where she has been resting for the last ten days.

Mrs. Elizabeth Richardson and her daughter, Miss Richardson from San Bernardino, returned recently from San Francisco where they enjoyed a short vacation.

Long Beach

Bridal music from a stringed orchestra, and a bower of fern and yellow and white blossoms in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Downey, formed a lovely setting for the wedding of Miss Lida Ardis of Downey and Edward Feltham of this city on last Wednesday evening. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ardis, was gowned in white chiffon and lace, with her mother's wedding veil of silk tulle confined with a coronet of orange blossoms. Miss Dorothy Ardis, a sister of the bride, was her maid of honor. The bridesmaids, Miss Kathleen Ardis, Misses Mattie Rowley and Gynethe Tipton of Los Angeles, and Miss Lucille Johnson of Anaheim, wore dresses of pastel yellow and orange shades. Welberta and Jean Haywood, in white satin and yellow organdie, were page and flower girl. Following the ceremony a reception in the spacious grounds of the Ardis home was attended by seventy-five guests. Music was furnished by the orchestra and the grounds were gay with Japanese lanterns. The bride is a graduate of the University of California of Los Angeles, and is a member of the Sigma Alpha Kappa sorority. Mr. Feltham was graduated from the Agricultural College at Davis. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Feltham, 1470 Locust avenue, and is affiliated with his father in the firm of D. W. Feltham & Sons, 416 American avenue. The Ardis and Feltham families have long resided in this community. After a motor trip in the north, Mr. and Mrs. Feltham will be at home at 2418 East Broadway.

Miss Marbarita Windham, daughter of the City Manager and Mrs. C. H. Windham, will soon leave for New York City, where she will return to the Castle School for her second year. On the 13th inst. a tea will be given in her honor by Mrs. Howard Nixon Coulter.

The California Yacht Club was the scene of a luncheon party given last Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Andrews. Their guests included J. A. Martin and James Kennedy from Muncie, Ind., John Steinback from Salinas and Mr. and Mrs. Baughman of Glendale. Their Long Beach guests were Mrs. R. A. Sheffield, Mrs. Rachael Lyman, Mrs. Ella Rice and Miss Margaret Waterhouse.

Miss Dorothy Normington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Normington, 1518 East First street, was the recipient of two prenuptial showers given on last Wednesday afternoon and Thursday evening by Mrs. Charles Curtiss of 1833 Appleton. Lavender and rose asters decorated the Curtiss home, and Betty Lane, dressed as Cupid, carried a basket of flowers, which, when the lid was lifted, revealed the lovely gifts for the bride-to-be. Mmes. G. U. Normington and Douglas Normington entertained at the home of the former, 931 Gaviota avenue, with a kitchen shower for Miss Normington.

Purple dahlias decorated the luncheon table and the living-room of the Virginia Country Club last Thursday, when Miss Brownie Mehesy gave a luncheon to welcome home Mrs. Arthur Fehn, who has just returned from several months' traveling in Europe, and Mrs. Putman Storrs, who has been in the East with her husband, an officer of the Navy. Five guests from Los Angeles completed the party. The afternoon was spent in bridge.

San Pedro

Two popular members of the San Pedro younger set were united in a wedding celebrated Friday evening, August 29, when Miss Orpha L. Brown became the bride of Walter E. Morris. Simplicity of arrangement marked the service, which was read by the Rev. Thomas Grice, pastor of the First Methodist Church, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ida L. Brown, at 1415 South Gaffey street, in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives. Flowers and greenery formed an attractive setting for the ceremony, and the bride, who is of the dainty blonde type, wore a gown of white satin and lace, elaborately tucked, and carried rosebuds and lilies of the valley. A reception followed the wedding and immediately afterward, the couple left on a wedding trip to San Francisco and other northern points. They will live in San Pedro on their return.

Relatives and a few intimate friends witnessed the wedding of Miss Elba Katherine Ponti of San Pedro and F. Harold Essert of Calexico, solemnized at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, August 28, at the home of Miss Ponti's mother, Mrs. Frank Bilbao, at 791 Sixth street. The bride's gown was of white satin, made with a pointed side-train, and the cap of her trailing veil of tulle, held in place by a circlet of orange blossoms, was of old Spanish lace. After a honeymoon trip, Mr. Essert and his bride, who has lived in San Pedro since her babyhood, will make their home in Calexico.

Miss Grace Johnson, whose marriage to Jack Martin of San Pedro was an event of Wednesday, was honor guest at a charming prenuptial affair of the week, with which Miss Helen Logan entertained at her home at 224 West Ninth street, for the Justamere Club. Tea towels and hand towels, which were gifts to the bride-elect, were hemmed at the affair, and a prize for the neatest went to Mrs. Jeannette Regan, Miss Florence Palmer winning second prize. A supper was presided over by the hostess and covers were marked by diminutive parasols, bearing the names of the guests.

A compliment to Miss Marion Jeffery, who is to become the bride of Edwin Burhorn in December, was the delightful prenuptial shower at which Mrs. B. W. Box, entertaining at her home at 428 Tenth street, was hostess to a large group of the friends of the bride-elect.

Ontario

In a charming garden setting at the home of the bride's parents in East G street, Wednesday evening, Miss Joyce Roberta Kistner became the bride of John Harlan Lohmann. Dr. Charles F. Seitter, pastor of the First Methodist Church, was the officiant. Just before the ceremony, Miss Ella Gemmel of Claremont sang "All for You," and "I Love You Truly," accompanied on the piano by Miss Margaret Lohmann of Monrovia, a sister of the bridegroom, who also rendered the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, which heralded the approach of the bridal party promptly at 8 o'clock. The bride entered on the arm of her father, W. Harry Kistner, who gave her away. She was gowned in white satin-back canton crepe, hand-embroidered, and her veil was caught with a circlet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses, lilies of the valley and maidenhair fern. Miss Alice Rowlands, as maid of honor, wore pink changeable taffeta and carried pink rosebuds and blue cornflower. The little Misses Thelma Rowlands and Caroline Combs were the flower girls. John Mendenhall of Monrovia was best man. On their return from a motor honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Lohmann will reside in a new bungalow which the bridegroom is now building in East G street. He is head of the manual training department of the city schools.

Simplicity marked the wedding Saturday morning at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Bogue, 302 North Euclid avenue, when their daughter, Miss Katherine Stewart Bogue, became the bride of Roy Wesley Nixon of Indio. The "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, which summoned the bridal party at 11 o'clock, was played on the piano by Miss Agnes Bradley, who was accompanied on the violin by Miss Elizabeth Wright. White satin streamers, held by Masters Cameron Bogue and Richard Newton, formed an aisle for the bride and bridegroom, who were preceded to an improvised altar of blossoms and fernery by little Miss Jean Ellen Bogue, as flower girl. Redlands

Mr. and Mrs. Stafford Paine entertained with a housewarming at their new home near Mentone, which has just been completed. There were forty friends who gathered to bless the new hearth and the evening was spent with music and cards. Mr. and Mrs. Paine are leaving for Detroit next week, where Mr. Paine will fulfill an orchestra engagement this winter, but they will return to Redlands early in the spring.

Mrs. A. P. Crim entertained with a children's party during the week, the feature being a parade of "floats" made with express wagons, kiddie cars and doll buggies. There were also a sandbox, flower garden and other features.

Local people were greatly interested in a wedding at Pasadena during the week, when Miss Edith Bentzien, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John Bentzein, became the bride of Albert Lundeen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lundeen. Miss Bentzien was in the University of Redlands and made many friends here, and Mr. Lundeen is the manager of the great Redlands Heights ranch on the Greenspot above Redlands.

Of much interest here is the wedding of two of the younger members of a pioneer family of Redlands, when Miss Irene McKenzie became the bride of Frank Reynolds, well-known contractor, and Donald McKenzie was married to Miss Lorraine Holliday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Holliday of San Bernardino. The weddings were both quiet and both couples will make their homes in this city.

Miss Dorothy Clement entertained during the week with a dance at the Clement camp in Mill Creek Canyon in honor of Miss Roberta Douthardt, her guest from Long Beach.

Miss Jeanette De Wolfe, Marian Hancock and Wilhelmina Harnly, who are all returning to their homes in the East after spending a year here, were honored with a picnic at Sylvan Park. Miss De Wolfe is returning to her home in Boston; Miss Hancock is going back to Vancouver, and Miss Harnly is also returning to her home.

Mrs. Louett Kronmiller of Pasadena has announced the betrothal of her daughter, Miss Ruth Clain Kronmiller, to Harry J. Winston Jenkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Jenkins of this city.

Huntington Park

A most delightful time was had by the members of the Matrons' Club during the week, when they were entertained by Mrs. Lynda Bill-Price, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bill. Those present were Mrs. Vera North, Mrs. Pauline Price, Mrs. Rachel Haworth, Mrs. Beulah Roper, Mrs. Verna Reeves, Mrs. Gloma Podmore and Mrs. Edith Shaffer.

Miss Wilma May Smith was the hostess to a company of lady friends at a house party during the latter part of the week, given at Anaheim Landing, the guests including Misses Lucille Cunningham, Ruth Rear, Mabel Russell, Margaret Moran and Edith Staples.

Mrs. John Cowles during the week proved herself a delightful hostess when she entertained the members of Circle No. 1 of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church at her home. Matters pertaining to the business of the circle were arranged, following which the hostess served elegant refreshments to the guests.

During the week Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pierce, among the best-known residents of the city, quietly celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. They were the honored guests at a most delightful luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Glen Cadwell, and in the evening were pleasantly surprised by all their nieces and nephews paying them a visit during which they presented the honored guests with a radio.

Acting as hostess for the members of Circle No. 3 of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Mrs. M. G. Dill entertained fourteen guests at an afternoon party during the week, which was an enjoyable affair. During the afternoon Mrs. Miller was heard in a recitation, which was most pleasingly given. Mrs. Hypes gave a violin solo, the accompaniment being by Mary Nichols. Children also were on the program, Ronald Conley giving a selection and Frances Hypes being heard on the piano. Little Robert and Mary Dill gave a pleasing duet. A two-course luncheon was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. McGrew.

HINTS ON STYLE SET BY PRINCE

Visit of Wales to Set Trend in Clothes for Men

Double-Breasted Jacket for Lounging Favored

New Garb Catches His Fancy for Evening Wear

The visit to America of his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, called the best-dressed man in Europe, and the style-setter for men everywhere, will influence emphatically the clothes men will wear the following six months, according to Tyler B. Shaw, director of the style news bureau of Silverwood's, Inc., the local men's store.

For his lounge clothes, the Prince has a strong preference for the double-breasted jacket, and particularly one made up from flannels in striped effects. Up to this time the Prince has remained partial to the two-button, single-breasted lounge jacket. He will continue to wear this type of single-breasted coat, with a leaning toward Glen Urquhardt, clean-cut plaids.

The Prince likes soft, turnover collars—in the same material as the shirt—some with two little tabs that button on the collar stud. His soft collars are one and three-quarter inches in height all around. He prefers the coat-shape shirt. He wears a Guards tie, a four-in-hand, with civilian attire, carrying the navy and dark-red colors of his regiment in wide, diagonal stripes.

THAT BOWLER HAT

All Americans are familiar with the bowler hat, which the Prince wears—slightly tipped back on his head. In shoes there is a distinct favoritism shown a brown buckskin shoe with a leather sole, in ordinary wear. But for smart or dressy service the Prince is partial to a button boot with dark-brown uppers. For evenings he was one of the first to adopt a shoe with a blocked toe-cap.

At a recent Le Touquet golf meeting the Prince wore a pair of gray flannel trousers, a Fair Isle jersey and a tweed jacket.

When the Prince attends any function in his official capacity he is certain to wear the one-button morning coat that has now become almost as familiar as the two-button sack suit. Latterly he has shown a desire to substitute the unbraided model for the braided kind, which is so closely connected with his name that in England it is looked upon as practically his property. Recently he was seen wearing this one-button Prince of Wales morning coat and waistcoat, and also the silver and black equal block-striped cashmere trousers, which both he and his brothers have been wearing during the recent London season.

Then there is the Guard's overcoat, with its belted back and inverted pleat, either in navy blue or black elysian, and occasionally steel gray for country wear.

A loose fitting, double-breasted coat, ventless back, the front carrying six buttons placed low, the collar made to button two ways, close around the neck or in a rolling front—the breast pocket and two skirt pockets on a slant—is for motoring and travel wear.

BROWN BAMBOO CANE

Fine weather finds the Prince in a single-breasted Chesterfield made with a fly front and rather heavy double-breasted lapels that have a suggestion of belly—usually a gray herringbone, with a plain back and long vent—the sleeves finished with a turn-back cuff and the skirt pockets made jetted.

Recent glimpses of the Prince have shown him wearing a brown bamboo crook handled cane—or a Malacca crook handled umbrella.

The indisputable influence of the Prince lies on evening clothes. Lately he has worn a single-breasted white waistcoat with a rolled lapel and rather long points—but that he has not lost a regard for his former specially designed waistcoat.

A large, white, evening tie, two and one-quarter inches across the end, knotted with two loops and two ends, as well as the high winged collar with the rather large opening and square wing, are other details that mark the Prince's evening clothes as individual, while the evening coat with a high front, the lapels finishing on a line with the top button, is also a garment made fashionable through his influence.

For outdoor, semi-cool summer functions the Prince will probably wear an easy-fitting raglan made from a West of England covert. It is cut in very generous lines, sleeves three-piece, raglan shoulder, the front fly, a deep back cuff.

FALL FASHIONS

BY OLIVE GRAY

On Thursday of the present week local downtown stores and shops unite in declaring that fall fashions will be in readiness and merchandise stocks complete.

Although no formal fashion show will take place, windows will contain exhibits of new modes, fabrics and accessories, and many new features of interest to women will appear.

More Land Thrown Open

Western Australia has entered into an agreement with the British government to place on the land within the next few years 75,000 men, women and children. The State takes care of the board of these newcomers for a few days after their arrival, and places them in suitable employment in rural sections. From these 75,000 immigrants it is proposed to select, in groups of twenty or thirty, 6000 of the more suitably equipped men to be settled, with government aid, on new farms in the southwest sections of the State.

Scholarships for students in mechanical and electrical courses are established by the will of Benjamin G. Lamme, an electrical engineer who was connected with the Westinghouse interests.

The will, which was admitted to probate July 17, after bequests to members of the family, provides for scholarships in several engineering schools and societies.

Former Representative and Mrs. Haines have turned over to the Florida Newspapermen's Association sixty-five acres of land, including a gas house and a theater, as a national home for newspaper editors. Mr. Haines also gave a check for $10,000. On his death 700 more acres and $100,000 will be added.

Children's garment making is taught in a practical way at Hutchinson High School, Buffalo, N. Y. Clothing classes sew for charity organizations and children's homes. Materials are furnished by the institutions for which they work. In the second year remodeling is taught. Old garments are cleaned and ripped up, good parts are salvaged, a little skillful piecing or mending is done, combinations are made and a "new" garment evolves.

Hull, Iowa, had one of the worst fires in its history when seven buildings, including the postoffice, were burned. Had it not been for the efficiency of Miss Anna De Bries, telephone operator, in summoning firemen and help from nearby villages and in spreading the alarm, the loss would probably have been considerably greater. She refused to leave her place at the switchboard and remained on duty until the cable had been destroyed and the smoke in the building had become suffocating. The roof of the telephone agency building caught fire from the flying embers.

A NEW PALINDROME

A Western columnist recently invited his contributors to send in some new palindromes, phrases which spell the same backwards and forwards. A classic example of the palindrome in this speech put into the mouth of Napoleon: "Able was I ere I saw Elba." Among the new ones sent in answer to the columnist's request was the following, purporting to be a sign which a store manager placed over a rat-catching preparation composed of Dutch cheese and tar: "Rat trap made a la Edam, part tar." Not half bad this, though we rather suspect the explanation about the sign. Not so in the case of another which comes to mind at this moment. Years ago when "Red root" was popular as a cure-all, a druggist's sign ran: "Red root put up to order"—which, in our opinion, is one of the easiest running, most natural and best of all the palindromes.—[Boston Transcript.

ACTING TAKES THE LEAD

Brunt Falls Heavily Upon Players This Year in Sustaining Many Mediocre Situations; the Advance in Interpretations

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

THE brunt of sustaining pictures seems to be falling more heavily even than usual on the players this season. I have looked at any number of productions in which their work has been about the only salvation for situations that meant nothing, defied the logic of what had gone before, and generally possessed only the most meager elements of continuity, drama and form.

On the surface this might seem to be a very disastrous condition for the advancement of the film. And as a fact, it has some very detrimental elements, because it is sometimes difficult to descry when a player is really making much of little. The tendency is to blame the performer for faults that lie rather in the character and in the plot.

There is, however, a hopeful circumstance, too. Personality and acting ability are really making headway and in so far as they are improving, this will mean much for the scope alloted to the scenarioist or the director when he really attempts to do more worth-while things.

The costume features, for instance, which for all their faults were big undertakings, found many unprepared to meet their demands. These costume films which have recently been exhibited, like "The Sea Hawk," have shown a notable improvement in acting, because the actors were more ready and experienced in the filling of such parts.

If stories ever manage to get beneath the surface, or rise to some heights of imagination, instead of following along conventional, bookish and footlightish lines, why the chances are, they will gain tremendously by the progress which has taken place along the lines of miming, pantomime and other essential attributes, especially screen interpretations.

By the same token, the further away screen acting gets from stage acting, or you might say, acting of any kind, the more it is going to approach something relating to art.

THE situation is unusual, to say the last, that has brought the three brothers Ince together on the same lot. Thomas H. is the producer and as such has had much to do with the making of screen history. And John and Ralph W. Ince are directors.

Heretofore they have all three worked with separate organizations. Most of the time Ralph Ince has been in the East, but now, both he and John are associated with their brother in the making of features at the Ince Studio.

SOME people must have received a terrible shock the other day when it was announced that Gloria Swanson was suing Joseph M. Schenck for something less than $2500. This isn't at all in accordance with the ideas that most people have as regards the valuations which stars set upon their money. Twenty-five-hundred dollars is after all relatively speaking a pittance for Gloria, who receives something like $7000 per week, according to report.

We sincerely trust that Gloria has not been getting poor since she moved to New York, but no doubt the cause of the action which she has taken, harks back to that grand old maxim that it is the principle of the thing which counts.

IT WAS a pleasure to hear once again a concert the other evening given under the direction of Modest Altschuler, formerly conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra of New York.

Altschuler was the leader of a benefit the other evening at the Hollywood Bowl, and had an orchestra body under his baton composed largely of the members of the Philharmonic and Bowl orchestras. He has also decided, so I understand, to remain in California indefinitely, with the hope of being able to continue his musical career here. His talents are an undoubted acquisition, because he has a very rich background of experience.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, which he founded, was perhaps not a great organization in the prominence of its personnel, but it was certainly a progressive and enterprising institution and fully lived up to its name of Russian.

Altschuler introduced to America the beautiful compositions of his countrymen in vast number—of Arensky, who was at one time his instructor in orchestration, of Moussorgsky, Rimsky-Korsakow, Scriaban and others, foremost exponents of the Slav tonal art.

Altschuler has also done some composing himself, which is filled with the spirit of novelty. He is an enthusiastic and at times, inspired, conductor, and his concert the other evening afforded, despite the natural obstacles arising from a limited association with the musicians who were under his direction, plentiful proof of the appeal of his work.

MARIAN DANCES

Dainty Star on Location Writes of Gala Event

A huge street dance and carnival, participated in by fully 15,000 persons, has proven to be the most interesting thing seen by Marian Nixon, now on location with the Universal-Hoot Gibson company in Pendleton, Or.

Miss Nixon says people from every part of the world, in Pendleton to attend the annual rodeo and round-up, took part in the jubilee. It was lighted by thousands of Japanese lanterns and was a rollicksome affair for all the members of the motion-picture troupe.

Are Searching for a Hot Weather Antidote Visit the Orpheum and Hear Fanny

of you "dear public" are longing for an electric fan during weather, please don't go to an electric store. Go to the Orpheum instead. The original electric "fan" is there and will continue week. Fannie Brice is the best antidote for the power I know. I talked with her for an hour the other afternoon was in a so-called exhausted condition, and I am still running the power she generated in me.

I was feel- this morning, an' it day, an' I couldn't way to stir things up in jail, so I put in the water to And, oh, ray look at it shine! have things dull—even And Fannie gave with her fingers. she had said, "Get up immediately got up. "Things have got in my life or I break something," she declared. "I'm only unhappy when I'm neither happy nor sad. I can be rolling in heavy tragedy or sorrow and be perfectly happy, but deliver me from a calm placid existence. I've got to be perching on the top of the world or rolling down the cellar steps to the depths in order to be happy. But 'when life moves along like a song,' there's an awful crash coming in my disposition. I simply wasn't built to stand the strain!"

As I watched Fannie Brice disguise one of nature's small eruptions with a bit of mascaro until it looked like an intriguing beauty spot, it dawned upon me that I wasn't running true to form at all. I hadn't asked her about her nose. It was as bad a faux pas as to call on Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Jones and not ask how the children were.

"The nose? Oh, it's doing nicely, thank you," said the irrepressible Fannie with a smile. "It's acclimated now and quite at home. I'm sorry that Jack Dempsey went east before I could see his newly arranged nose. It makes me feel well acquainted with him. We're both in the 'speaking of operations' class you see. However, I don't think mine looks much different than before. You see it hung down a bit at the end, and so I sort of jerked the reins on it, that's all."

About this time I realized that the electric Fan was slowing up a bit. It was evident that the sleepless night and the strenuous work of the afternoon were reminding her of their existence. So I took pity on her and left. But I've been feeling like a thief ever since. For I came away loaded up with pep to which I was quite a stranger, and I left her with her sleepless night collapsed in her dressing-room chair. But even at that she has the edge on me for I have run down already while the electric Fan has generated enough pep to keep Orpheum audiences going for another week.

COMONT RETURNS

Mathilde Comont, erstwhile stage star of Paris and London, has returned from Catalina, where she has been locationing with Jack Conway's Fox company now filming "Thorns of Passion." Miss Comont, whose most significant screen characterization to date is the Persian Prince in "The Thief of Bagdad," expects to complete the Fox portrayal this week, when she will immediately undertake the principal comedy part in a forthcoming Hollywood photoplay.

The Comic Angle

Staff Cartoonist Bob Day finds much to be amused at in life work of our studio location men.

BY KENNETH TAYLOR

THIS hobby of collecting has led mortal man into an infinite number of pursuits, predicaments, pleasures and businesses. Stamp collectors have specimens worth fortunes. The same may be said of collectors of antiques, jewelry, coins, rare cloths, autographs, photographs, cheeses and wines. For the most part this mania for collecting is evident only in one's spare time. Few persons make a living at it. But there are exceptions, and this article deals with the most exceptional of these.

In recent years the cinema industry has given birth to one of the most unusual types of collectors extant. Material things do not interest him especially except for reference only, photographs. He is the location man of the modern picture studio, whose work it is to have on file pictures or data indicating where any desired or conceivable scene, atmosphere, building, landscape, mansion, hovel, stream or lake may be found, quickly, cheaply and conveniently. A steel cabinet is his box of treasures, as dull and uninteresting from the outside as a cabinet of blueprints, but inside containing facsimile samples of the nation's splendor and grandeur.

WANTS SERVICE

A director walks into the location manager's office.

"I wanta fast movin' stream with rocks on the left bank and a meadow on the other," he says.

HE GETS IT

"You will have to go to Ventura county for that," says the location man, three and a quarter minutes after consulting his files. "It's so many miles north of Santa Barbara, and you can fish there, but you can't swim."

That, in effect, is the way the system works.

Most of the larger studios have departments devoted exclusively to the searching out of new and novel locations. The smaller producers either obtain this service from the bigger organizations, if they happen to be on friendly terms, or else make the business manager of the company do the work.

HOW IT WORKS

Both methods are employed at the Paramount studio here. A location department, in charge of Fred Harris, with Frank Kies as his right-hand man, has a comprehensive list of all kinds of settings that may be called for. It includes everything under the sun imaginable, from palatial yachts to gasoline stations, except, as Mr. Kies puts it with a sigh, the thing you are looking for.

For ordinary productions, where most of the work is to be done in the studio, this department functions in obtaining outside locations. They not only find the proper locale, but they make all arrangements, securing permission of the owner of the property and settle the rental rate.

Sometimes, however, the picture to be made is almost exclusively an outdoor story. This is true with most westerns, from "The Covered Wagon" down. In this case, when it is necessary for the company to go far away for great lengths of time, a production superintendent is appointed to care for all of these details and a lot more.

He is in reality the manager of the troupe, making all business arrangements, providing transportation and camping equipment—doing everything, in fact, but make the picture.

The first job on the program, after being assigned to a company, is to go out with the director in search of locations. A jaunt of this kind will sometimes take the two into the wilderness for weeks, and they will uncover many unsuspected beauty spots.

Photographs are made of these and turned over to the location department for future use. Many times a production manager has stumbled on something that looks interesting, but which he is unable to use in the picture he is then working upon. But with all the data filed away, it is possible to return to that spot at any time. Frequently the production manager will send these pictures back to the studio at a time when the location department is in search of just such scenes.

WHO THEY ARE

The production managers at the Lasky studio include William Griffith, who has done much interesting work of this kind; Frank Brandow; L. M. Goodstadt, who ranks officially as a production business manager, and Morton Whitehall, who serves as business manager to William De Mille.

Humanity benefits by this need of new locations on the part of the industry through a bureau operated by the Assistance League of Southern California. There are frequent calls from the studios for large homes and estates with extensive grounds, swimming pools and other conveniences of the wealthy. Owners of these homes who are willing to have their estates used for motion pictures list their property with the league. When a studio calls for a location of this kind the league makes all arrangements, charges a nominal fee, and the money thus collected is devoted to charity.

CLOTHES A-PLENTY

Raymond Hatton, one of the prominent character men in motion pictures, is said to have the largest individual wardrobe in the business. Because of his varied characterizations, Hatton must be well supplied with clothes of every type and period. He has three large dry goods boxes full of clothing besides two closets filled with hats, shoes, shirts and suits.

ELTINGE WOULD BE BILL DALTON

Famous Woman Impersonator Wants His Pants

To Desert Stage for Hotel Business in South

Plans Hotel in San Diego of Spanish Type

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

You don't call him Julian Eltinge any more—not and keep your health.

He is just plain Bill Dalton—hollering for his pants!

Never more, if he persists in this threat, will the beautiful Julian Eltinge strut his stuff in feminine garments on the stage.

Julian Eltinge is shortly to lie buried in a hundred feet of fluffy, fragrant memories.

"The most beautiful woman in the world is a man," wrote Channing Pollock of Eltinge, in criticising one of his shows. Those words should be Julian's epitaph.

Plain Bill Dalton is to become a boniface, down in San Diego county, where he is to erect a large hotel on top of a hill overlooking Imperial Valley.

"Say!" exclaimed Bill the other day, as we sat in the business office of Grauman's Metropolitan, "I want to quit the stage before they start saying, 'He used to be good, didn't he?'"

Julian Eltinge is a brilliant artist. Bill Dalton is a shrewd, matter-of-fact business man. He is, in fact, a horny-handed son of toil, these days, for he has been working on his 160-acre ranch, where the hotel is to be built, out under the blistering sun, aiding in clearing the land of underbrush and boulders, and his face is blistered and brown, his nose rather red, his hands hairy.

If you would see Bill Dalton as a Jane, now is your last chance. He is to be at the Metropolitan this week. But after a season of several weeks in the larger picture houses of the country, he will park the depilatory and give his gleeful garments to the poor.

You would never know him off stage, this Bill Dalton person. In fact I've never become used to the complete difference between Julian Eltinge and Bill Dalton.

"I don't know," he said, "honestly, how I'm going to camouflage my brown face and hands, gained from being a farmer in the great open spaces. But no more skirts for me forevermore. I want to let the hair grow on my arms and chest."

And those marvelous feminine garments and those jewels? What will Eltinge do with these?

Some of these, it seems, are to go to feminine relatives and friends. But as for the main wardrobe, Julian's mantle is to fall literally on two struggling young actresses, friends of his. May that mantle bring them luck!

"What will you do with all your time?" I asked Bill, who is a very energetic young man.

"There will be enough about the building of that hotel and the improvement of those grounds to

A DANGEROUS LITTLE DEVIL IS CLARA, IMPISH, APPEALING, BUT OH, HOW SHE CAN ACT!

BY ALMA WHITAKER

We are going to hear a great deal more about this little person called Clara Bow and not just because she has a press agent, either.

The only thing that can ruin Clara's chances of fame and fortune in filmland is the possible danger that she will try to become a lady. I hope for her art's sake that her ambitions will fall short of that.

At present Clara, who played the flapper in "Black Oxen" and is that engaging flapper in "Wine," whose innocence, violent sophistication and subsequent reform are largely expressed in hair styles—the reform being indicated by a chaste straight bob—is a jolly, natural, untutored, impish little hoodlum, an engaging roughneck, one of those glowing creatures that rise up out of drab neighborhoods every so often to enchant the world.

There is nothing highbrow about Clara and I suspect her of leaving school a year or two too soon. She was, you know, a little school girl two years ago when she won that film competition in Brooklyn "for a combination of personality, brains and beauty" as she herself told me, with a joyous giggle.

CASSANDRAS COMPUTED

"They said I was too young and too fat and too all sorts of things," beams Clara, "but I won it and everything has happened from that. And to think poor mother died and never saw me in a picture."

She can't be more than 17 or so now, and she radiates sex appeal—tempered with an impish sense of humor. When I visited her in that Hollywood home with father and brother (eating spaghetti in comfortable unembarrassment in the adjoining dining-room) she was all dressed for the motion-picture ball, with her wild hennaed hair in violent curls and her little feet restive in gorgeous slippers. She hennas her blonde hair so that it will photograph dark in the pictures, but with it straight and blonde she looks much younger and much less minxish.

Father and brother are properly impressed with Clara's new importance and father in particular is having the time of his life. The cuspidor has not yet been banished from father's life, but I suspect it soon will be. In the meantime father is playing chaperone with fearful zest. He makes a point of answering the telephone himself and expresses the utmost suspicion at any male voice. His paternal vigilance bristles as he puts the voice through a stern cross-examination devoid of subtle diplomacy and leaving no doubt that Clara has a paternal guardian very much on the job.

HIS PROUD RECORD

He proudly recorded some of these telephonic conversations for us—in which the reckless telephoner was ever vanquished and shown where he got off. That is Clara's papa. A little man—but never to be ignored.

But Clara, listening, frowns slightly and whispers, "Well, he takes care of me in some ways, you know, but I take care of him in others," which may or may not refer to the fact that Clara's papa has already had a Hollywood romance of his own.

In the meantime, Clara is reveling in her new life, her new opportunities, her new success, her new friends. Her social decorum is of that natural, good-natured, pleasantly informal kind, very slightly disturbed by vague unknown spheres that she is on the qui vive to meet with serene aplomb. She is not going to be quite so happy in those spheres when she reaches them unless she can manage to be comfortably unimpressed by them.

It is never going to suit Clara to aspire to social hauteur and cool condescensions. She is going to be happier and lots more fun if she remains Clara Bow of Brooklyn and Coney Island. I should say she was the belle of Coney Island—and a very superior little belle in that environment.

Given the right sort of role Clara is going to romp home to success. She has been in three pictures since "Black Oxen" and hopped off to Denver last week for another new production.

VICTIMS OF VANITY

She can act on or off the screen—takes a joyous delight in accepting a challenge to vamp any selected male—the more unpromising specimen the better. When the hapless victim is scared into speechlessness she gurgles with naughty delight and tries another.

Clara loves being interviewed. So far she can count the occasions on one hand, with a couple of fingers left over and she remembers every word these curious writer people said about her. She just bubbles off a recital of that film competition and the 10,000 competitors and the funny judges and what her girl friends thought about it and just how everything happened and then looks at you triumphantly and says, "So that's my story."

She knows it is almost like a fairytale—and gosh, how surprised all the girls were at school back in Brooklyn. Too little, was she? Too fat, was she? Too young, was she? She showed them . . .

But Clara can play sad as well as impish, and then she looks almost refined and infinitely wistful and appealing.

Dangerous little devil, Clara. Oh, I hope she won't ever try to be a lady!

keep me busy the rest of my life!" he explained. "Actually, I am already building the servants quarters—a picturesque building modeled on the lines of Ramona's home—on a knoll below the hilltop where my hotel will be built. The name of the hotel, by the way, will be the Sierra Vista.

"As soon as I finish my present tour, I'm going down to Mexico City to buy up some beautiful old Spanish furniture which I learn is stored down there. With this and other Spanish furniture now in my possession, I shall furnish my hotel.

"The hotel will be built practically a Spanish palace. It will also be a museum, as I have many wonderful collections of beautiful things—tapestries, bits of Italian and French period furniture, oriental rugs, rare vases, cameos and enamels, paintings—which I have picked up on my many trips abroad. Some of these things will be kept under glass. For instance, I have a priceless collection of miniatures which will be on view, but in a cabinet tightly locked.

"The building itself will be ready for occupancy about October 1, 1925. But the beautiful gardens I am planning will practically never be finished. There are to be Italian and old English gardens and a cactus garden. Also there are to be tennis courts and a golf court. You see I own 160 acres now, and am buying an additional 1600 acres to use as a game preserve."

The hotel is to be of adobe, adobe being warmer in winter and cooler in summer, and will contain thirty rooms. The adobe Dalton found right on the grounds—a very fine variety.

"My Spanish architect and I were going over the grounds," he explained, "when we came to a hornet's nest. We knocked it down, and were delighted to find it made of the finest sort of building adobe. We searched through the grounds and found a huge deposit of the same kind of adobe."

Dalton is likewise to have an art center on the grounds, and for that purpose will put up a dozen studio houses of adobe, comprising a Spanish village, and half a dozen painters, musicians and writers have already alleged their desire to engage cottages for at least a part of the year.

Not entirely, after all, either, will Bill Dalton abandon theatricals! He will build a miniature theater in the hotel, where amateur shows and pictures will be shown at intervals.

But the darling of his heart is a big out-door theater to be formed in one of the valleys on the grounds. This will be built in the old French style, with cedars and privets forming the natural walls, wings and stage backgrounds. The orchestra is to be concealed behind the shrubbery.

Dalton is to engage some noted artists to aid in decorating and designing the hotel. Martin Severtsen will be one of these. He is already at work on some of the plans and in developing some fine new ideas.

I should expect this Bill Dalton person to succeed in anything he undertook.

Indeed, if he starts out with one hotel, I shouldn't be surprised if he owns all the hotels in California before he gets through!

away as soon as they could for home. Mabel should be given a decoration by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce as its most confirmed booster.

She dislikes to be away from there for any length of time and insists that New York will merely see her in the future.

CODY BEWILDERED

Lew Cody has returned from abroad quite bewildered by the announcement here that he is engaged to marry Nora Bayes. I believe that the announcement came from Miss Bayes herself to her press agent here and instructed him to "step on the gas" which he did forthwith.

The combined efforts of all the officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew, Inc., are said to have been successful at last in persuading Rex Ingram to make another picture. It is rumored that he will go abroad soon to start production, but I cannot believe that he will really get around to it until his wife finishes her picture engagements in the West and joins him.

One of the most touching scenes ever played in the Biograph Studio took place last week when Barbara La Marr discovered her first screen idol playing extra in one of her productions. Glancing through the mob, Barbara saw a face that haunted her. When she could not remember who it was she consulted the casting director and learned that the woman was Helen Gardner, the early Vitagraph star. Barbara rushed over to speak to her. Soon they were both in tears. Helen Gardner will hardly be an extra any more if Barbara can help it.

There are a lot of new pictures playing on Broadway this week—but as I mentioned before, no one seems to care. The best of them seems to be "The Iron Horse," but of that I cannot speak with certainty, not having seen it. However, everyone seems enthusiastic.

The coolest theater in town is the Central, so "The Man Who Came Back" has everything in its favor. George O'Brien should become a great popular favorite and Dorothy Mackaill already has quite a following here. The story is powerful and has been filmed with every ounce of dramatic effect squeezed from its incidents. Some times the process of squeezing seemed a bit apparent to me, but perhaps that is because I see so many pictures.

Colleen Moore does a great deal to bring "Flirting With Love" to life, but the odds against her are terrific. She is so popular that people will flock to see her in anything, but I am afraid that this picture won't make any new friends for her. The picture is also enlivened by the presence of John Patrick, who is always a joy.

SHANNON DAY AT FOX

Shannon Day has been added to the cast of "The Star Dust Trail," starring Shirley Mason and directed by Edmund Mortimer, at the Fox studios. Others playing in support of the star are Bryant Washburn, Richard Tucker, Thomas R. Mill and Merta Sterling.

GILBERT PLAYS FOURTH PART

John Gilbert is to play his fourth role for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under King Vidor's direction in "The Wife of the Centaur." He has averaged almost one leading part a month since he signed with that company.

PICTURES TO BE MADE IN OREGON

Portland, Or., is to be the production center of several Associated Exhibitors' features to be made and directed by Louis Moomaw.

"The Greatest Thing," a magazine story by A. P. Younger, will be started there September 15. With the signing of Eddie Phillips as the juvenile, the cast is completed and includes Zasu Pitts, Mary Alden, Jean Hersholt and Frankie Darro.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

"Bread," the "staff of life," has been celebrated in poetry and prose by famous writers of all ages.

It has sustained life of the poor and rich alike, both in prosperous times and even more so in days of famine, war and pestilence.

No commodity in our modern life is more necessary. No commodity is in greater demand. No commodity is given better care and treatment in preparing it for the markets of the world. Scientists spend their lives searching out new ways to make it more wholesome, more edible and more attractive.

Now "Bread" is immortalized on the picture screen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios have picturized Charles G. Norris's famous novel of that title and made it into one of the most entertaining, most noteworthy human-interest dramas that has reached the screen in many a day.

After a week of prosperity at the California Theater it now has been transferred to the Miller Theater.

"Bread" was directed by Victor Schertzinger, who has succeeded in preserving all of the humor, romance and dramatic touches of the famous novel, with the aid of a brilliant cast of players, including Mae Busch, Wanda Hawley, Myrtle Stedman, Robert Frazer, Pat O'Malley, Hobart Bosworth and Eugenie Besserer.

that reached its peak in "The Bat."

"The Bat" shows these two gifted authors with the capacity to produce a play with more thrills to the square inch than any other American melodrama ever written. A shot in the dark, a bloody arm thrust through a window, a thunderstorm, ghostly knockings, the mysterious waving of a search light and the flitting of a crazed bat through the house! Is it any wonder women scream at this tense play and then go home and tell what a good time they had at The Playhouse.

Manager Macloon announces a special performance of "The Bat" at The Playhouse tonight at popular prices.

"Nervous Wreck" Great Hit

That Los Angeles Theater patrons enjoy good comedy is evidenced by the splendid attendance that continues at the Majestic Theater where Owen Davis's comedy hit, "The Nervous Wreck," begins the tenth week of its present engagement with the performance this evening.

To the many side-splitting situations and humorous lines of the play is added the excellent comedy work of Edward Everett Horton, one of the best light comedians on the stage today. In the role of the young man of many imaginary ills who comes West seeking a cure for them, Horton is offering some of the best work he has ever done since he first appeared at the Majestic.

Gladys George, opposite Horton, has already firmly established herself with Majestic audiences with her delightful charm and talent for acting.

Barbara Brown, Thomas Chatterton, Edward Woods, James Edwards, Henry Shumer, Norman Feusier, Henry Hall and George Webster round out the supporting cast.

A Fast Musical Comedy

"Steppin High," a colored musical comedy built on the revue type, comes to the Philharmonic Auditorium for one week beginning tomorrow night.

"Steppin High" is one of the few attractions of its kind to visit the Pacific Coast, and the first one to visit Los Angeles this year. It is billed as the fastest dancing show on earth.

Heading a cast of over sixty funmakers is Hazel Meyers, the famous Vocalion record star. Supporting Miss Meyers is a notable cast, including "Three Black Aces," "Dike" Thomas, "Strawberry Russell, Mary Richards, Richard Courtney, Leonidas Simmons, Seven Strutters, Thurston Briggs and the Steppin' High quartet, and many others.

Baby Dolls Still Active

"New Ideas of 1925" with the Baby Dolls putting over a few advance dance and song specialties, is the comedy revue at the Burbank Theater this week.

Lou Traveller and his jazz band and Chick Griffin, colored comedian, and Bobbie Fitzsimmons, provide the humorous touches to the production.

Ruby Darby gives a number of new songs in a new way that makes her the favorite with Burbank audiences.

Hippodrome Has Good Bill

"Condemned," is the title of a comedy drama to be shown at the Hippodrome this week, starring Mildred Davis, supported by Carl Miller.

The vaudeville menu contains a number of acts by Lillian Ruby, playing popular and worth-while selections on the violin.

Thacher, Deveraux and Adams present a singing and dancing revue entitled, "A Peach and a Pair." Arthur "Jiggs" Van, with the Kilkenny Three, late stars of "Bringing Up Father," will prove to be a combination of irresistible irish wit interspersed with lilting melodious melodies. Dona and Loehr in "The Melody Man." Chic, the wonder dog, is presented by Mr. Ben Carroll who has proved that a dog possesses a human brain. Chic's impersonation of a drunk is by far the funniest laugh provoker seen in vaudeville this season. Gallon and his lunatic sticks, a comedy juggler, complete the bill.

Indians and Gypsies

Chief Blue Cloud and his Wyoming Indian Syncopators headline the Pantages program for the coming week with an act whose essentials are told in the title. Added to their tribal syncopations are roping, singing and dancing tricks that lend novelty to the act. Russian Gypsies are the seven artists who present "Bohemian Nights," and Seoma Jupraner, who heads the troupe, is one of the famous entertainers of the land that has given us so many famous artists. A revue without music is proclaimed by Charles Hart's Hollanders. These seven Dutchmen show speed in their routine, which is different from any revue you ever saw. McGreevy and Peters offer a comedy by Jack Lait, entitled "Bright and Oily," while Smith and McGreevy call their crossfire repartee "By This and by That." Irene Trevette, the statuesque blonde who has thrilled Pantages audiences in other years, returns with new songs.

Pantages celebrates Fox week by presenting "The Cyclone Rider."

Joe Fejer at Hillstreet

For the week beginning tomorrow the 1924-25 season will be inaugurated at the Hillstreet by a specially arranged program of vaudeville and photoplay features. Joe Fejer and his famous Hungarian orchestra will be one of the headline features sharing the honors with the musical comedy favorites, George McKay and Ottie Ardine.

The Fejer orchestra is composed of a remarkable group of string instrument soloists who hail from Hungary and have been playing the famous Sunday night concerts at the Hotel Vanderbilt in New York for the last eight years. Joe Fejer is a remarkable violinist with an international reputation as a musician and composer.

George McKay and Ottie Ardine return this season with a brand new offering called "The Night Watchman." McKay is a distinctive comedian and Miss Ardine is an exceptional whirlwind and acrobatic dancer.

Specially featured on the bill is Dainty Marie, a young woman with a figure said to be as near perfect as possible. She does a thrilling aerial act on a flowing ribbon and also sings and dances.

Another special feature is Bill Robinson, the dark cloud of joy. Other acts are Valentine and Bell, known as "Furniture Removers," in a novelty offering, and Bernard Greenburg, the rosy-cheeked comedian.

Wesley Barry is starred in the photoplay "The Country Kid."

Story of Plain People

"White Collars" continues to be the biggest draw of the season at the Egan Theater, where this comedy gem starts upon its thirty-third week of popularity tomorrow evening.

"White Collars" is a story about the family next door, just plain regular people. Pa works in a hardware store, son is just a clerk, Sis pounds a typewriter all day in a factory, while Joan, the eldest daughter, after coming out of Barnard College, becomes private secretary to William Van Lyun, the young millionaire. The play starts with young Van Lyun finding it difficult to keep his mind on his dictation, so strong an appeal does Joan exert over him. She marries her rich "boss" and then the fun begins.

"White Collars" boasts an exceptional cast of players, all selected by the author, Edith Ellis, and includes Craig Ward, Dian Esmonde, Ross Forrester, Marvel Quivey, Blanche Douglas, Zellah Covington, Betty Sinclair, Alfred Arnold and James Bush.

A Shivering Thriller

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, it's a thriller that'll send the shivers up and down your spine and then make you laugh at your own fears and those of the actors.

That's the weird combination this coming week at the Morosco, where "The Cat and the Canary" goes into its thirteenth week with today's matinee. There have been nearly 125 performances of it on its present run and the playgoers of Los Angeles still give it their hearty approval, some of them by coming to see it and getting those thrills several times.

Harland Tucker and Charlotte Treadway have the lead roles, ably supported by Grace Travers, Gayne Whitman, James Donlan, Albert Van Antwerp, J. Morris Foster, Mary Fisher, Jane Morgan and Joseph Eggenton.

Age on Screen as Necessary as is Youth

Youth is no more important to the screen than age, believes Josef Swickard, veteran character actor. Swickard says that the screen is a portrayal of real life and in real life age and youth are equally important.

"Youth, buoyant in time of happiness, leans upon age in time of stress," said Swickard. "Without age in photoplays there would be a lack of balance that would become frightfully tiresome to theatergoers."

Hoot "Crashes Gate" Literally in New Story

It took Hoot Gibson and a high-powered racing car just a little longer than nothing flat to wreck a circus tent that had required two days to erect. Gibson, who is a registered A.A.A. driver and a screen star to boot, loves nothing better than to pilot a fast automobile.

He hits a lemonade stand at forty miles an hour and carries pieces of it clear through the tent housing the main show. This flying trip through the world of canvas, sawdust and pink lemonade came as the big thrill in a scene in "The Sawdust Trail," his latest Universal feature, now showing at the Cameo Theater.

The story is a screen version of the Saturday Evening Post story by William Dudley Pelley, adapted for the screen by Raymond L. Schrock and scenarized by E. Richard Schayer.

It is woven about the adventures of an eastern college man who joined a wild west show in preference to apprenticeship in his father's iron foundry.

ARTIST OF OLD SCHOOL IS PRAISED

Originator of California Lobby Display Adherent of Renaissance Style

When you have passed through the lobby of the California Theater you have doubtless been attracted by the artistic paintings of the stars which are exhibited there, but few have heard of the man who is responsible for them. He is Ingvard Jensen, an artist of the old school who has his own ideas of lobby display and refuses to change them unless the opposing argument is sound.

Ingvard Jensen was born in a little town in Norway and at the age of sixteen he came to San Francisco on a visit. While a boy he showed artistic tendencies but these were never brought out until he became a pupil of Solly Walker, well-known newspaper illustrator of San Francisco. Jensen studied under Walker for three years and then returned to the continent, where he entered the Ezbe Academy in Munich, Germany. Here he studied under some of the masters for four years and then returned to New York, where he entered the commercial art field and made a reputation. Feeling that he was getting in a rut in the East, Jensen came to Los Angeles, to become maestro of the California's art department.

Jensen is heartily in accord with the younger painters of today but does not countenance futuristic or cubist art. He believes that artists of the Renaissance are the real masters as far as portraits are concerned, and he uses them as his models for lobby display.

Those who have seen his work on the current attraction "Yolanda," declare that seldom in local theatrical history has a more beautiful display been seen.

NEW FIRE STATION AND JAIL ASSURED

(LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE)

INGLEWOOD, Sept. 6.—Inglewood is soon to have a sub fire station and a jail, the former to be located in the Fairview Heights section at the corner of Hargrave and Wexham streets and the latter as an addition to the present fire station on Queen street. The two projects were made possible by a bond issue voted several months ago and will cost approximately $30,000. David Donaldson of the city engineer's office is preparing the plans.

ONLY ONE THEME IN COMEDIES

Mack Sennett Says So, and He Ought to Know; Man-and-Maid Sure

There is no business to which the old adage about the level never standing still, applies with greater force than the making of comedies, according to Mack Sennett.

"You are making them either better or worse. You can never content yourself with the feeling that you have now arrived at the top rung of the ladder and can sit down and rest awhile and let the public laugh," says the veteran fun producer.

"In making comedies, the moment you stop worrying about them you really have something to worry about.

"The longer I am occupied with making comedies, the more do I become impressed with the fact that there must be real quality and real humanity and real drama behind them.

"Laughs are not enough. In fact laughs may be too much.

"I always regard it as a danger signal when I see our directors trying too hard for laughs.

"There is a kind of laugh that the public does not like. The most dangerous liberty that can be taken with a comedy is to wring a reluctant laugh from an audience. Often I hear an audience laughing at a comedy; but coming out of the theater, someone will ask them what they thought of the comedy, and they will say, "Oh it was kind of silly." In other words they are sorry they laughed.

"Speaking plainly, that is poison.

"The right kind of laugh comes legitimately from a situation that is honestly and logically funny.

"To say what the basis of a comedy should be is a big order. But I could at least say this: The right foundation of a good comedy is the foundation of all drama—the girl and the boy.

"There is no getting away from it. The "love of a man for a maid" is the story of life itself; and it's what dramas are about.

"The longer I make comedies the more firmly an I convinced that the love story must be the basis of any comedy that is to rise above the mere laugh-squeezer.

"Realizing as I have said, that the old level will not stand still, we are making a constant effort to make our comedy stories more real and sincere and genuine, to the end that the audience will laugh because they thoroughly enjoy and sympathize with the situation, not just because a laugh was suddenly and unexpectedly juggled out of them."

Settings for Tender Scenes Well Chosen

Motion-picture directors of today have practically discarded the long shot, which for so many years was used to establish atmosphere. The settings nowadays are merely the background for the story, and while all connected with the production strive to maintain the highest standard of beauty for the settings surrounding the players, yet always is the background subservient to the action of the story.

As an example, a scene from "Monsieur Beaucaire," which is showing at the Million Dollar Theater, shows Rudolph Valentino as the young Prince and Bebe Daniels reunited after a misunderstanding and separation. The action of this scene is conceded to be most dramatic, and would hold thrilling attention even were it enacted before a most prosaic background.

For this situation, Director Sidney Olcott caused to be built the most beautiful setting that could be imagined. It represents the Gardens of Versailles, with the marvelous parks and fountains, and the sparkling water of a cascade falling over a massive set of stairs. Yet, with all this, the minimum of detail was used to give the effect, so that nothing would distract from the actual scene played in front of it.

The designs for this were selected from etching and plates which Mrs. Valentino brought from Paris especially for this purpose.

CARTOONIST'S JOB WAITING FOR HIM

If the theatrical business ever goes to the bad there's a job waiting in New York for Craig Ward, who plays the male lead in "White Collars" at the Egan Theater. The job is on a New York paper, where Mr. Ward used to work as a cartoonist.

That was twelve years ago and he was a mere boy then. Young Ward was sent down to Chinatown to get pictures of the inhabitants. But he found more than pictures. He discovered the fascination of racial types. He studied the Chinese, not only their broken English, but their gestures and mannerisms. Then one day when he returned to the office the art department of the paper was given a series of Chinese thumb-nail sketches of leading characters in the Chinese quarters. Then Ward said good-by to the drawing-board and started his career upon the legitimate stage.

NOVEL USE FOR RADIO

While several Christie comedy actors were donating their services as radio entertainers at one of the broadcasting stations in Los Angeles their efforts were utilized to good advantage by Director Scott Sidney. It so happened that Sidney was directing a ballroom sequence for the current Walter Hiers picture and the story demanded the use of a radio set to furnish dance music. A radio set was hurriedly recruited from the home of Assistant Director Jimmie Clemins and the actors on the Hiers set tripped to the aerial music until an inconsiderate broadcaster launched upon a long-winded speech.

COMPANY'S FORECAST PLEASANT

De Mille Anticipates Better Pictures in Group to be Released Soon

"'The Famous Forty' means more than a name to Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, S. R. Kent and myself," said Cecil B. De Mille the other day. "To us 'The Famous Forty' represents the climax of Paramount pictures, the pinnacle toward which we have been climbing in the twelve years since our organization had its beginning in a belief that the public was ready for quality and real artistic intelligence in photoplays.

"It's a far cry from the tiny barn where Jesse L. Lasky and I started, from the days when Adolph Zuker startled the world by securing Sarah Bernhardt's signature to a then despised movie contract. Our huge studios and world-wide organization exist today only because the public has backed us with splendid faith as we risked millions to produce such artistic gems as 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' 'The Covered Wagon,' 'The Alaskan,' 'Wanderer of the Wasteland,' 'Mandhandled,' 'Peter Pan,' and the other offerings listed under the title, 'The Famous Forty.'

"For myself, I would be ashamed if 'Feet of Clay' and 'The Golden Bed' were not 3000 times better than my first picture, 'The Squaw Man.' Surrounded by expert people and things it is now possible to wring the last vestige of color and drama from a worthwhile story.

"'The Fast Set,' produced by my brother, 'The Enemy Sex,' 'The Sideshow of Life' (from William J. Locke's 'The Mountebank,') 'Changing Husbands,' 'Merton of the Movies,' 'Sinners in Heaven,' 'The City That Never Sleeps,' 'The Female,' 'Empty Hands,' 'The Man Who Fights Alone,' 'Argentine Love,' 'Unguarded Women,' 'The Border Legion,' 'Her Love Story,' 'Manhattan,' 'The Story Without A Name'—and all of these titles and stories with the assemblage of artists and directors required for their making are the result of a constant building up of experience gained through the most consistent record of success in pleasing the public sacred by a producing or distributing organization.

"I said good-by to the company making 'North of 36' with the confindent belief that they will return from their days in Texas with material that will equal in appeal that previous Emerson Hough story, 'The Covered Wagon.' I know that the public who remember the glories of 'Passion' are looking forward to 'Forbidden Paradise,' the first American Pola Negri picture to be directed by Ernst Lubitsch. It was with regret we all read of the death of Peter Clark McFarlane, but his genius will live again in 'Tongues of Flame,' a Thomas Meighan starring vehicle. 'Open All Night' proved a humorous triumph for a new director. From 'A Sainted Devil,' a Rex Beach story, one can expect another charming Valentino presentations. 'Little Miss Bluebeard' is a title and story to fit Bebe Daniels as if made to her measure. 'Lily of the Dust' shows Miss Negri splendidly directed by that talented gentleman, Dimitri Buchowetski. 'Locked Doors,' 'A Woman Scorned,' 'The Garden of Weeds,' Worldly Goods,' space does not permit expanded mention, but the titles speak for themselves.

"As a director," he concluded, "let me say that never have I had such an inspiration to top-notch work as the constant knowledge that striving to make other segments of the Famous Forty were new, aggressive, fertile minds, striving with fresh energy to snatch the laurels of anyone who might lag behind even for an instant. As an executive, with Mr. Zukor, Mr. Lasky and Mr. Kent I am very happy over the manner in which 'The Famous Forty' is fulfilling advance promises."

Aim at Stars for High Score, His Philosophy

Aim at theaters on Broadway, fight to get parts in pictures that are to be exhibited in motion picture houses located on the principal streets of cities throughout the world, and in time you are certain to become a success in motion pictures.

This creed is Wallace MacDonald's own, and he follows it as strictly as night follows day. Before he accepts a role in any picture, MacDonald carefully considers the release that production will be given. If it promises to be shown only in second-class theaters, he invariably refuses to appear in the cast. But if there are possibilities that it will be shown in first-class houses, he accepts parts offered him.

Since the first of the current year, MacDonald points with pride to a few of the pictures in which he has taken part. He also indicates with pleasure the fact that they have played in big theaters. Among them he names: "The Spoilers," played at the California in this city, at the Capitol in New York; "The Day of Faith," California in Los Angeles, Capitol in New York; "Thy Name is Woman," the Mission in this city, Capitol and Astor in New York; "The Sea Hawk," Criterion in Los Angeles, Astor in New York, and "Maytime," California in Los Angeles, Rialto in New York.

DIRECTOR PREFERS A SQUARE MONGREL

"I'd rather have a mongrel with a square-looking face than a blooded dog with a 'gold-digger' appeal in its eyes."

Immediately following this assertion Jack McDermott found a dog with a face that he liked and he bought it without a thought as to its breed. It was just a puppy and it looked rather like a fox hound. Homely little thing; flea-bitten. But it asked no favors, took a cold bath without a whimper and there was no tragedy reflected in its eyes.

"This pup has a sense of humor," said McDermott. "I think that he's part bird dog and maybe some hound, but he's as game as a bulldog and I'll bet that he can lick one, too."

The pup shares McDermott's skyline Moorish residence with the director on the top of a Hollywood hill.

INTERESTING NEW PICTURES ON VIEW

Four new pictures come to town this week, though one of them, "Secrets," at Loew's State, is the Norma Talmadge film which appeared several months ago at the Criterion. In addition to "Secrets," "The City That Never Sleeps," a James Cruze production, is at the Metropolitan, Larry Semon in "The Girl in the Limousine" at Miller's, and "The Sawdust Trail," with Hoot Gibson, at the Cameo.

Among the remaining features of the week are "Broken Barriers" at the Alhambra, "Yolanda" at the California, "The Sea Hawk" at the Criterion, "The Thief of Bagdad" at the Egyptian, "Between Friends" at the Forum, "Monsieur Beaucaire" at the Million Dollar, "The Girl of the Limberlost" at the Mission and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at Tally's.

Norma Returns in "Secrets"

Norma Talmadge's success, "Secrets," which is hailed as her greatest triumph, is showing this week at Loew's State Theater in its popular price world premiere.

"Secrets" unrolls the life story and romance of a beautiful character, portrayed by Miss Talmadge. The picture is cast in four periods, 1924, 1888, 1870, 1865, and the action takes place both in the Far West and in modern society settings. In all four periods Norma displays a remarkable range of characterization.

Eugene O'Brien is once more seen opposite Miss Talmadge in the leading masculine role.

Of great importance at Loew's State this week, is the appearance of Lipschultz, "the American Kreisler," who makes his initial bow to Los Angeles audiences, conducting the Loew's State Music Masters.

Fanchon and Marco have staged a prologue presentation act entitled "Marcheta's Sister," with a cast including Luis Fronde, Argentine, baritone, de la Plaza and Juanita, Argentine dancers, Boyce Combe, "The American Prince of Wales," Helene Hughes, and the eight maids from the Argentine.

Good Program at Forum

With the picturization of the Robert W. Chambers novel, "Between Friends," now well into its second week at the Forum Theater, the new playhouse has entered upon an era of crowds which have at times taxed the capacity of the auditorium.

So successful was the performance during the original week of "Between Friends" that the program has been retained in its entirety. The feature picture itself, directed by J. Stuart Blackton, boasts an all-star cast, including Lou Tellegen, Anna Q. Nilsson, Norman Kerry, Alice Calhoun and Stuart Holmes. As an accompaniment to the picture a beautifully conceived prologue, "The Vision," is given, with Rosalina Williamson in the principal dancing role, assisted by Ruth Shahan; while Victor Edmunds, as the sculptor, displays a tenor voice of remarkable sweetness.

The program also concludes the showing of "The Haunted Hotel," a picture made twenty-one years ago by Commodore Blackton and an organ interlude by Julius K. Johnson.

"Sea Hawk" Runs Blithely On

Milton Sills and Wallace Beery

Appear in colorful film of buccaneers at the Criterion.

Julian Eltinge Here

The Metropolitan is keeping "big company," this week.

Julian Eltinge and James Cruze, two of the highest paid and most talented artists of stage and screen, respectively, head the program. Cruze's talents are dispensed via "The City That Never Sleeps," his latest production, featuring Louise Dresser, Kathlyn Williams, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Lee Corbin and Pierre Gendron. It is a drama of human life and love opening in the Bowery in 1910 and continuing its story to the present day.

Julian Eltinge confers an extreme compliment on the Metropolitan by starting at that show house his farewell tour which will take him over the United States, Mexico and Havana. This is positively the last tour of the famous impersonator and his first appearance in a motion-picture theater.

"Thief" Still Loose

The Egyptian Theater in Hollywood is continuing to display the "standing room only" banner in the tenth week of Douglas Fairbanks's glorious Arabian Nights fantasy, "The Thief of Bagdad."

The Fairbanks opus is concededly the greatest fantasy ever produced. Its photographic beauty, scenic splendor, and romantic fancies admittedly the very apex of the motion picture's possibilities, while the prologue, "The City of Dreams" has by its sheer magnificence won the right to be compared to big New York musical productions.

"Sea Hawk" in Last Week

Sabatini's novel "The Sea Hawk" will end its twelve week cruise at the Criterion Theater next Friday.

In book form "The Sea Hawk" has been regarded as a modern gem and in relating the story pictorially Mr. Lloyd enhanced its value. To transfer the big drama to the screen it was necessary to build an entire Algerian city with its quaint slave market, winding streets, mysterious courts, four gigantic ships of the sixteenth century design and to use more than a thousand people actively in the several big sea battles.

Milton Sills has been given the dominant role of Sir Oliver, later Sakrel-Bahr, the hawk of the sea, and Enid Bettett is cast as Rosamund, his sweet heart. Lloyd Hughes, Wallace Beery, Frank Currier, Marc MacDermott, Wallace MacDonald, Mme. Medea Radzina, Kathleen Key, Christine Montt, Claire de Brey, Lionel Belmore, Fred de Silva, Bobbie Bolder, Albert Prisco, Kate Price, Louis Morrison and others equally well known are in the cast.

Valentino Still Pleases

Romance, spectacle and adventure are the principal ingredients of the motion-picture menu furnished at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater. This is in Rudolph Valentino's starring vehicle, "Monsieur Beaucaire," which swings into its fifth week tomorrow.

In this Booth Tarkington story Valentino is cast as the gallant Duke de Chartres, who refuses to marry the charming Princess de Bourbon-Conti, and as a result is compelled to flee the country. Under the name of Beaucaire, masquerading as barber to the French Ambassador, he goes to England and manages to gain access to the English court without revealing his identity. There he captivates the beautiful Lady Mary, but a pardon from the French King recalls him to France where he wins the love of the Princess.

"The Sawdust Trail," a circus picture, done from a Saturday Evening Post story by W. D. Pelley, is the attraction at the Cameo Theater. Hoot Gibson is the star, supported by David Torrence, Josie Sedgwick, C. K. French, Harry Toddy, G. Raymond Nye, W. T. McCulley, Pat Harmon and Taylor Carroll. It is a thriller, with a dashing automobile race, an Indian fight—staged, of course, in a circus—acrobatics, and all the rest of the things one would expect in a film telling the story of life as it is lead in a circus tent.

Added attractions of short reels are also offered Ted Henkel and his Cameo Orchestra will offer a fine supporting musical program.

"Yolanda" Another Week

"Yolanda" will be held over at the California Theater for another week. The picture has proven to be one of the biggest box office attractions ever screened at the big showhouse, and all last week lines formed at the ticket windows and were still there up until 10 o'clock at night. The week's business shows that the picture has come within a few dollars of equalling the house record which is held by Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last." "Yolanda" is the film version of Charles Major's story of the same name and tells a story of court intrigue during the reign of Louis XI of France and Charles the Bold of Burgundy. The cast is notable and includes such well-known players as Holbrook Blinn, Lyn Harding, Johnny Dooley and Ralph Graves.

Third Week for Porter Story

"A Girl of the Limberlost," Gene Stratton Porter's story, peopled with characters native to the Limberlost region of Indiana, and now in its third week at the Mission Theater, is different from the majority of motion pictures in that it is alive with realism—a homely narrative of homely people who really lived. The characters are prototypes of persons known to Mrs. Porter, clothed with romance and adventure, with drama furnished by incidents that really happened enacted in places in or near their actual occurrence.

Because of its "true to the story" atmosphere, the characters in "A Girl of the Limberlost" live as those who have read the book know them. The cast includes Gloria Grey, Gertrude Olmsted, Emily Fitzroy, Raymond McKee and Cullen Landis.

Larry Semon is seen in the comedy, "Lightning Love."

Leading Male Characters

Craig Ward in "White Collars" Egan.

Tom Chatterton in "The Nervous Wreck" Majestic

Morris Foster in "The Cat and the Canary" Morosco.

Henry Herbert in "The Pilgrimage Play"

Larry Semon's New Comedy

Managing Director Charles Wuerz of the Miller Theater has booked Larry Semon's first feature length comedy into the Miller Theater, where it is the current attraction. "The Girl in the Limousine" is the screen version of Avery Hopwood's Broadway stage success of the same name and those who have previewed it declare that the comedian has never made a funnier comedy. The cast is notable and includes with Semon Claire Adams, Charlie Murray, Lucille Ward and Oliver Harding.

Big Cast in "Broken Barriers"

The biggest cast of the year is the claim made by Metro-Goldwyn for "Broken Barriers," which opened yesterday at the Alhambra Theater for a week's run.

The picture was adapted from Meredith Nicholson's novel of the problems that arise in modern society, because of the divorce question.

The cast includes James Kirkwood, Mae Busch, Norma Shearer, Adolphe Menjou, George Fawcett, Winifred Bryson and a half-score of others of much prominence. This photoplay deals out philosophy to the younger generation, who are trying to smash down the barricades of convention.

"Big Business," an Our Gang comedy, is the laugh feature.

Hardy Story at Tally's

Marshall Neilan's latest directorial effort, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," with Blanche Sweet in the leading role, supported by Conrad Nagel and Stuart Holmes, is the main attraction at Tally's Theater this week.

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," is a screen version of Thomas Hardy's famous novel, the story of an enduring love. The story is of a country maiden in Wessex who falls victim to the brutality and passion of a wealthy and unscrupulous young man, but who later marries the man she loves.

AND NOW MIDNIGHT GOLF!

Enter—midnight golf!

It's the newest fad in Hollywood for busy movie stars and bids fair to become a national habit among those who are too engaged during the daytime for their round of golf.

With balls, hole sticks and other paraphernalia covered with a coat of phosphorus paint and electric bulbs taking the place of the customary flags at the holes, midnight golf came into being when Colleen Moore and Milton Sills introduced the fad in Hollywood recently.

A beautiful moonlight night helped to make the experiment a huge success and the Midnight Golf Club for Movie Stars is now in the process of formation. Already some fifty members have enrolled, including Helene Chadwick, John Bowers, Tony Moreno, Pat O'Malley, Dorothy Mackaill, Marguerite de la Motte, Estelle Taylor, Bessie Love, Sam Wood and other celebrities of the cinema.

The idea came into existence recently when Miss Moore and Mr. Sills were bemoaning the fact that the busy movie producing season now on kept them from the golf links.

"Let's play at night," said Miss Moore jokingly.

"I believe it could be done," exclaimed Sills.

Further discussion, and the details were conceived. The fashionable Wilshire Country Club in the heart of Hollywood was the site of the experiment and many ardent golfers gathered to see how it worked.

"The phosphorus painted balls were easier to find at night than the ordinary balls during the daytime," said Mr. Sills.

Cheerio, golfers, go to it.

WEST BETTER FOR ACTING

"I would much rather act in a motion-picture in Hollywood than I would in New York," declares Jacqueline Logan, leading lady, who is now in the eastern metropolis.

"There's something about Hollywood that New York doesn't have—something that makes acting fun rather than work. When I'm working on a picture in New York I never feel as though I'm putting my best efforts into it. Although the results are practically the same, I seldom feel really at ease.

"Making a picture in New York everybody runs around as though the existence of the entire universe depends upon it being done immediately. In Hollywood it's different. People dont seem to care whether a picture is ever finished. And yet I actually believe more work is accomplished on the West Coast in less time than the same amount is accomplished on the east."

WILL OPEN FALL TERM

The Marta Oatman School of the Theater announces that the next new fall class in drama will begin its study Monday morning, the 15th inst. A number of students have already signed up in the course. The Oatman school is distinctly a professional school for students of all ages who desire a thorough cultural and technical training for the stage. It is under the capable management of Miss Marta Oatman, a well-known leading woman, who has been featured in many stage successes, together with her assistant, Aurania Rouveyrol, a graduate of Leland Stanford University, who specializes in the technique of comedy; Joseph McManus, well-known actor and director; Miss Willamene Wilkes, director of the Majestic Theater, and Mr. Thomas Wilkes, with whom the Oatman school is affiliated. Other members of the faculty are Gwendolyn Logan Hubbard, an English actress of distinction; Wanda Graser, in charge of the dance department; Dickson Morgan, scenic director of the Majestic Theater, also a graduate of Leland Stanford University; Maude Fenlon Bollman, who teaches voice, and Katherine B. Hamill, who specializes in diction and the reading of the Bible.

READER IN PROGRAMS AT AMBASSADOR

Mrs. Malvina Dunn

One of the leading exponents of the art of reading, Mrs. Malvina Dunn, has recently come to Los Angeles to make her home and will be heard in a series of matinee recitals. Mrs. Dunn's first appearance will be at the Ambassador Hotel about the 15th inst., when she will present a program consisting of stories and poems told from the writings of Robert Browning, Kipling, Goethe, Richard Harding Davis, Austin Dobson, Charles Kingsley and Eugene Field.

Mrs. Dunn, who is the wife of Henry K. Dunn of the William Fox West Coast Studios, spent several years in New York City working with Lucy Feagin, whose interpretations have long been outstanding artistic successes at Carnegie Hall.

Later on in the season Mrs. Dunn will give a number of programs which will include classics, romanticists and modern writers whose works admit of highly original reading.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S WHAT

A Department of Information Regarding the Pictures and Their Players

BY MARJORIE PERRY LA FORCE

Charlie, Glendale.—Jack Daugherty can be addressed at Universal. He is away on location now, as it happens, working in "The Meddler," with William Desmond. Rosa Gore's address is 351 Laveta Terrace, Hollywood. Her latest film work was with Nazimova in "Madonna of the streets." The role of Larry Beveradge in "The Fiddlin' Doll," which was a chapter in "The Fast Steppers" series, was played by Frank Kingsley.

Mrs. Lorenzo S., Venice.—You misdirected your letter to Ramsey Wallace. He resides at 960 South Oxford avenue, Los Angeles. His studio address is Ince, Culver City. Mr. Wallace has just recently completed the lead opposite Mrs. Wallace Reid in "Broken Laws," which is being filmed at the Ince studio.

M. L. B., Los Angeles.—The latest pictures in which Norman Selby (Kid McCoy) has appeared were "Oath Bound" and "Tom Mix in Arabia." Joseph Kilgour can be reached by mail at the Garden Court Apartments, Hollywood. His most recent film work was with Marion Davies in "Janice Meredith." Previous to that he played in "Ponjola," "Torment," "Try and Get It" and other big productions.

In answer to your last question, the date of the death of Mrs. Frank Keenon was April 26, 1924.

B. M., Los Angeles.—It is not a very easy matter to interview a screen star with a view of obtaining a position as secretary. In the first place, only the very biggest stars employ them. From what I can learn, most girls working in that capacity now have previously worked at the studios in a similar line of work. I would suggest that you apply at the studios for stenographic work. You would then be on the ground floor, so to speak, and would have a better opportunity of knowing when there was an opening of that kind, and certainly a better chance of talking to the stars regarding a position.

Miss De Lacy, Los Angeles.—Yes, "The Sideshow of Life" was taken from William J. Locke's novel, "The Mountebank." William Farnum is now working for Famous Players-Lasky. His latest western drama is entitled, "The Man Who Fights Alone."

O. C. C., Los Angeles.—The wood scenes in "Robin Hood" were photographed at Las Turas Lake, which is about thirty-five miles out of Los Angeles on Ventura Road. You turn to the left off the highway. I believe there is a road sign there.

J. M., Los Angeles.—I note particularly that you are one of Bill Hart's greatest admirers. No, he is not making another picture right now and to my knowledge he has made no definite plans for any future productions. His last two pictures, which were made under the Lasky banner, were "Wild Bill Hickok" and "Singer Jim McKee."

M. H. S., Inglewood.—The two leading men supporting Pola Negri in "Montmartre" were Hermann Thimig and Alfred Abel. Hermann married the heroine, while Alfred played the role of the villain and did all in his power to separate them.

James B., Hollywood.—Marguerite Snow returns to the screen after an absence of several years in a Frank E. Woods production entitled "Chalk Marks." It was completed several weeks ago at the San Mateo studio and is to be released some time in September, I believe. Miss Snow uses her real name professionally. She was formerly married to James Cruze, as you probably know, but they were recently divorced. Miss Snow now plans to continue right along in pictures. Yes, she is considered a very good actress, or at least she was at one time. She has been out of pictures so long I think we can judge better after we see her work in "Chalk Marks." You can reach her by mail in care of Harry Burns, 5707 Santa Monica Boulevard.

COMEDIENNE HONORED

Molly Malone, dainty comedienne who is playing opposite Neal Burns in a new Christie comedy, has been informed by V. G. Warren, California horticulturist of note, that a new hybrid cactus dahlia has been named in her honor. The Molly Malone dahlia will be exhibited in the coming flower shows throughout California.

NEW SMILE GIRL

Gertrude Short

One of the oldest screen actresses of today is Gertrude Short.

And yet Gertrude is but 22 years old.

For seventeen consecutive years she has been appearing in screen features in prominent roles.

In 1907, when she was a 5-year-old tot, she received her first screen credit in an Edison picture, "Job's Picnic," the first three-reel feature ever made.

Except for two years Miss Short spent on the road with Thomas Jefferson in 1907-1908 playing "Rip Van Winkle," she has appeared in prominent roles each year on the screen. Her first picture in this city was made at the old Biograph studio under D. W. Griffith's direction in "Primity of Man." She has been employed so steadily since the age of five that she has never attended schools—the stage and screen producers always furnishing tutors.

Now she is playing a featured comedienne role in a Warner production, "The Narrow Street," under William Beaudine's direction.

PEACH AND FIG MEN TO GET GOOD PRICES

One and one-half millions of dollars to growers of peaches and figs in the San Joaquin Valley will be paid by the California Peach and Fig Growers' Association, according to F. W. Cornwell of Hanford, who in a letter to the California Real Estate Association of which he is a director, states that a mass meeting in Hanford disclosed the fact that arrangements had been completed by the association for payment to the growers. This amount in cash will be augmented by approximately $500,000 more in growers' notes, and is now being paid by the association upon delivery of the 1924 crop. About 12,400 tons of the 1924 crop have already been sold and there are still to be delivered 18,000 tons. Prices this year are slightly higher than last year.

CARL MILLER AND MARIE

Carl Miller has finished his night shots in "The Dark Swan" for Warner Brothers and is now doing some dramatic scenes in the art shop with Marie Prevost.

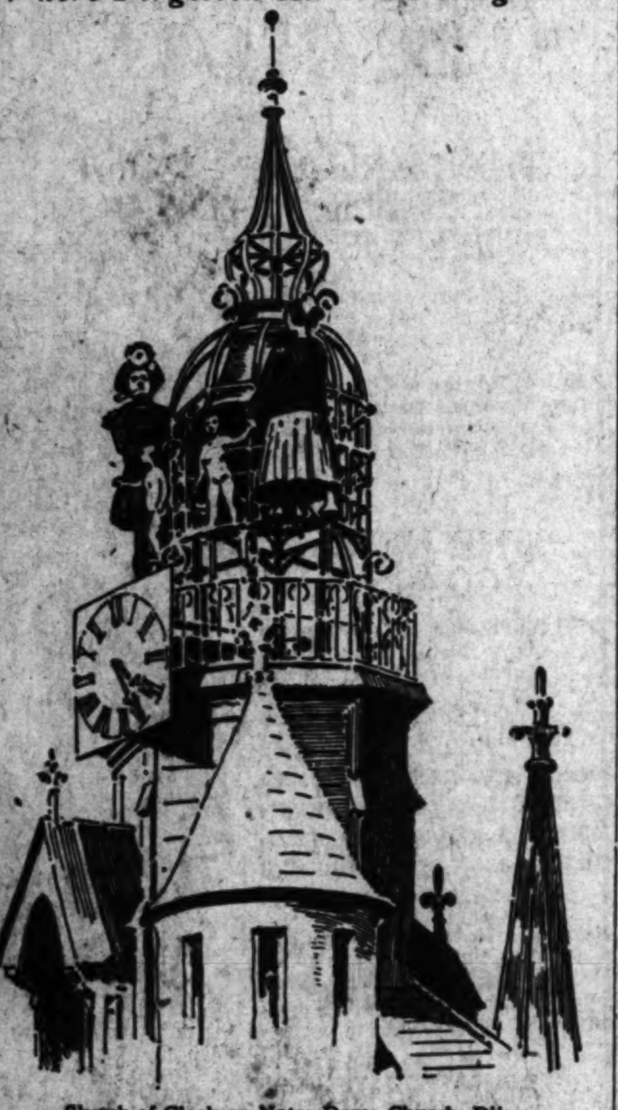
Where Forgotten Air Will Ring Anew



Sketch of Clock on Notre Dame Church, Dijon

Works unearthed in kitchens of old Dukes of Burgundy will play chime termed "most beautiful air" by Froissart, the historian.

CHIMES TO PLAY LOST TUNE

Air Last Heard Before Discovery of America to Ring Out at Dijon; Old Mechanism Found

BY STERLING HEILIG

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DIJON (France) Sept. 6.—A most beautiful old forgotten tune, they say, soon will be sprung on the world, which no human being has heard, since before Columbus discovered America! Will it be popular? It will have a better start than any modern tune has ever enjoyed. It will be hastily set down and published widely, if only as a curiosity. Cable agencies will have their men listening to it, at Dijon, to describe its style and tell how the waiting crowds of peasants, townsfolk and tourists liked it.

Because, the whole affair is remarkable. The tune has been the Riddle of Dijon for centuries. Many competent authorities have doubted if there ever was such a tune. Even today, the mass of the townspeople know nothing new about the subject.

TUNE IS DISCOVERED

Yet the tune has been discovered in two large old boxes, nearly the size of trunks, in a sealed closet (or some say a disused drain) leading from the kitchens of the ancient Dukes of Burgundy.

Now, for the story.

On the tower of Notre Dame Church in Dijon, one-time capital of the old Dukes of Burgundy, is the most ancient mechanical clock chime that actually works and strikes, today in Europe.

That is to say, the three life-size, famous old automaton figures, up there, still strike certain hours. Tourists regularly turn out to hear "Jacquemart" and his family strike 2:45 p.m.

MOST BEAUTIFUL AIR

It is a vast dome of ornamental ironwork, holding great and lesser bells, and considerable ancient machinery. Seated by it on the outside, where he seems almost liable to fall, is this lay figure of a man, in strange old gay clothes and high hat of felt, smoking a long pipe. Hat and clothes are renewed, about once in fifty years; but the pipe was put into his mouth on Easter Day, 1557, when he was already 200 years of age.

He is Jacquemart.

Previous to the year 1383, he sat on the tower of the Town Hall of Coutral in Belgium. He raised his arm, and with a graceful flourish struck the hour, "and then played a most beautiful air," as Froissart, the great old historian, declares, "by means of the most beautiful mechanism of the Low Countries or beyond the seas."

Philip the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, having a claim on the Free Cities, asked for Jacquemart, and was refused. He went to war—over a mechanical clock!—razed the walls of Coutral, hanged the notables, decimated a rich population, and brought Jacquemart in triumph to his capital of Dijon.

FAMILY GIVEN HIM

Today it is the same Jacquemart. A hundred years before America was discovered, he was placed where he still sits, on top of this tower of Notre-Dame de Dijon, hammering the hours. In 1654 they gave him a wife (she has no name) who rings the half-hours. In 1714 they gave him a child to pound the quarters. Then, as recently as 1895, the Dijonnais, who never tire of Jacquemart, added a second child, naked and wooden, like a jointed doll, but really very big indeed, who can ring the minutes—when the clock is set for him to operate.

The naked babe has a name. He is Aristide. Tourists always hope

PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Alys Wantmoor, Who Made Her Husband What He Is

BY LEE SHIPPEY

Alys Wantmoor is a born commander, a clever, forceful woman, who many persons say, has put her husband where he is today. Alys would not admit that—she would, indeed, indignantly deny it. For all that, people in close touch with her and her family have been saying it for several years and still say it. And that's the story.

Alys has always had a natural gift for leadership. As a child she recognized her superior abilities to such an extent that if the other children wouldn't play as she directed she wouldn't play at all.

In school she never took class

OLD HOUSES OF CITY RECALLED

Building of Adobe Gone But Memory Stays

Old Cuartel Housed Many Leading Citizens

Our Lady of Angels Church Now One of Oldest

BY B. G. ROUSSEAU

The historic old houses of Los Angeles have long since disappeared in the march of progress and given way to the modern skyscraper. Most of the old houses were built of sun-dried brick or adobe. The city of fifty or seventy-five years ago, fenced in with its high adobe walls to keep out predatory animals, hostile Indians or stray cattle, is a thing of the past. The old city has become modernized, beautified, rejuvenated like the up-to-date woman of today who wishes to preserve her youthful appearance and defy the encroachments of old Father Time with every new-fangled science. Just so has Los Angeles kept up with the march of time, despite that the City of Angels is one of the oldest in the State, and can remember back to old pueblo days, over 100 years ago.

Perhaps one of the very oldest buildings in the city was the old cuartel, or guard-house, which was begun shortly after the founding of the pueblo and finished about 1786. It was used as headquarters for the King's soldiers when stationed in the city to help the foreigners repulse the attacks of unfriendly Indians. It stood on the southeast side of the old plaza near the line of Marchessault street, north of the plaza church on upper Main street. In 1846, at the time of the American conquest the remains of this old guard-house were still standing. It was later rebuilt for a carcel, or prison for political offenders. Here Mexico sent her vanquished leaders to meditate on the error of their ways and the ungratefulness of governments. In course of time the old carcel became a sort of political headquarters for all sorts of politicals temporarily held in durance vile.

HOUSED NOTABLES

During the stormy and despotic reign of the tyrant Victoria this old jail housed many of the leading citizens of the city who had openly objected to his rule. About 1830 the old place was allowed to go to ruin as it was then considered too dilapidated for further use.

As no new jail was built to take its place the authorities for a time sent their prisoners to the padre's house, no doubt relying on the good priest's example to help their hard-boiled charges, but as time passed and the criminals increased in number they were sent to the jail at San Gabriel, then as that grew too small to accommodate their increasing number they were taken to Santa Barbara.

In 1841 a new cuartel was built on the hill! After the American conquest this was used by the Yankees as a guard-house while their troops were stationed at old Fort Moore on Fort Hill.

During the excitement of the mining boom the old cuartel was again used as a prison. The building at that time was a one-room affair with an adobe roof and no cells. The walls were soft, sun-baked adobe, the easiest thing in the world for a prisoner with an ingrowing thirst for liberty to break through, so to nip any such budding ambition each prisoner was chained to a staple attached to a heavy pine log, the end of the chain fastened to a shackle on the convict's leg. The prisoners who was lucky enough to get on the inside of the jail were looked upon as the aristocrats of crookdom and were spoken of as the "gente de razon" (people of reason) no doubt because they had pull enough to get themselves locked inside the jail. The pariahs of society, the real outcasts, Indians and half-breeds, were not so fortunate. These were chained to logs in the open where in sunshine or in storm they were left to meditate on their sins and enjoy to the full the healthfulness of California's unparalleled climate.

RAZED AS HILL GRADED

In 1853 a new jail was built on the northwest corner of North Spring and Franklin street, and the old courtel on the hill was transformed into a dwelling house. It was finally demolished when the hill was graded down on New High street.

The old church Our Lady of the Angels is in all probability one of the oldest buildings in the city, dating back to the Spanish occupancy. There is some doubt as to just where the corner-stone was laid, but the date of its laying was 1814. The location of the church was changed to its present site in 1818. Owing to the fact that the workmen of the pueblo were not overly keen about exerting themselves, and would only work when all visible means of support were gone, the church was four years in the building. The good work of erecting the structure was helped along by a various and miscellaneous collection of articles. For instance, 500 cattle were donated from San Miguel; San Luis Obispo sent 200; Santa Barbara, one barrel of brandy; San Diego, two barrels of white wine; Santa Purisima, six mules and 200 cattle; San Gabriel, two barrels of brandy, and one barrel of the same potent drink from San Fernando. Regarding this Bancroft succinctly remarked that the citizens promptly converted the brandy into money, some of them drinking immense quantities in their pious zeal for the spiritual welfare of the town. On December 8, 1822, the church was completed and formally dedicated.

In 1861 it was remodeled, and

OCCULTIST SEEKS WIFE BY MAGIC LIGHT

Plans Color Combination to Woo Ethereal Romance

Ben Hansen's Unique Los Angeles Home

BY LANNIE HAYNES MARTIN

FROM the outside, you might think it a long, low, rambling California bungalow with a huge circular window and some queer Aztec or Toltec decorations, but once inside, were you so fortunate as to be admitted, you would find an Arabian Night's dream come true, with its magic of light, coloring and decoration.

An Australian, an occult student, a business man and a bachelor, Ben Hansen, cousin of Abou Ben Adhem, came to Los Angeles a few years ago for his health. The eucalyptus, which came from his own country, too, made him feel at home and he had a house built of it, walls, roof, floor and inside finish, and all stained in that blue-green, antique brass shade which looks like the leaves of young eucalyptus boughs.

Composite sun symbols, made from the most ancient Egyptian circle and wings, Assyrian triangles and Persian sun-arrows, decorate the exterior of the house and, combined into a conventional stencil design, have a decidedly Aztec appearance. Oriental torcheres stand at one entrance, but the main and mystic portal is guarded by two Buddhas. This doorway has fitted around it a huge wooden frame into which may be slipped slides of different colored glass. It is the pouring of the sun's rays through this magic, colored disk that gives an air of enchantment to the interior of the mammoth living-room, and, if Mr. Hansen is to be believed, has brought him health, wealth, prosperity and everything in life he desires, except a wife. He is now experimenting on a composite arrangement of rainbow lights which he believes will materialize into a romance.

A living-room fifty feet long, with a gigantic fireplace, a ceiling fifteen feet high, and only a few luxurious divans and a piano, might look bare and empty were it not for the floods of colored light which pour in through the magic window and through the brilliant blue, yellow and rose-striped curtains; and for the profusion of oriental rugs which cover the floor. Instead of being crowded with furniture, it is filled with magic.

The ceiling is hung with dozens of gayly colored lanterns and the light which pours in through the circular door ripples over the entire room like an enchanted, undulating ocean and encrusts every object with sapphires, rubies and amethysts.

For the first year Mr. Hansen lived in his house he had rich crimson glass slides in his circular door, and these, collecting all of the red, life-giving properties of the sun's rays, brought him abundant health and vitality. Then he changed the slides to green. Not the crude grass green, or bottle green, that one usually sees in green glass, but a sort of transparent jade green which sparkles

SWAPPER TRIBE RUNS RIOT

Just 99 Cents Worth of Advertising Brings Deluge of Offers to Trade Anything from Lady's Pistol to Satsuma Vases for Typewriter; But It's Fun at That

BY ALMA WHITAKER

With innocent insouciance I stepped into the middle of a wild adventure last week.

I wanted a portable typewriter to take on a journey and thought I would find out how much I could raise on my old larger one. Someone suggested that I could probably make a more profitable deal through the "swap" column in The Times' classified advertisements.

So the Sabbath paper carried 99 cents' worth, as follows:

"Remington Junior Typewriter. Cash, or will take 9x12 rug, Victrola, mahogany dresser, library table."

My telephone began agitating early Sunday morning. The first caller wanted to know whether I could use a nice little lady's revolver, very stylish, warranted to kill. Every woman, said the voice, ought to have a revolver in these days. He would run out and see my typewriter and bring the gun with him. It would fit into a reasonably size vanity bag in a crisis. He would show me how to fire it.

HAS FURNITURE

Then a man rang up to say he had a dining-room table and six chairs he wanted to get rid of. No, he didn't specially want a typewriter, but maybe I had something else he wanted. He might take the typewriter at that if it wasn't too hard to learn how to use the fool things.

A lady said she craved a typewriter above all things. She had a furnished apartment and I could go out and choose most anything I liked. How about a complete encyclopedia that her deceased husband had bought and never finished paying for, and I just ought to know the fuss she had about the dratted things, but, anyway, it was paid for now, but what on earth he thought he wanted them for was beyond her.

A plumber's helper, so he described himself, rang up to say he had saved up $18 and was writing a story for the Saturday Evening Post which, he understood, had to be typewritten—and would the $18 buy my typewriter or say, "Well, of all the nerve . . ." he had gone.

A lady wanted me to take an old sealskin coat in exchange. Oh, if only I knew how badly she wanted that typewriter. There was an author friend of hers who would let her type his stuff and she could earn all of $25 a month and it would be such nice work and if I didn't want a sealskin coat, could I use some old lace or a Paisley shawl that was only a bit faded . . .

How about a garden hose, a shovel, a rake and a hoe, all in pretty good condition? A man said they had moved into an apartment—no use for such things there the typewriter would help keep her out of mischief.

And so it went for three solid days. We certainly had 99 cents' worth of excitement at our house. Twenty-two answers to date and still coming. A woman wanted to give me dancing lessons, and a man wanted to polish up my French, and a school boy wanted to mow our lawns all winter, and a widow was prepared to part with her winter coat—so eagerly did they all crave a typewriter.

And quite a lot of the people just read the swap columns regularly and get most of their excitement in life that way. They just love swapping things. One couple came out to the house, who did not look in the least like they wanted a typewriter. But they offered something queer for anything in my house they took a fancy to. Among other things,

Trip to Film Studios Leads by Wide Margin

Things of Human Interest Overshadow Big

BY A. L. WOOLDRIDGE

Approximately 1,250,000 tourists come to Los Angeles each year. What do you suppose they most want to see—the ocean, the orange groves, the old missions, the sunken gardens, the ostrich farm, the observatory on Mt. Wilson or Chinatown?

None of these.

They want to see Mary Pickford or Douglas Fairbanks, or at least see where they live.

The beautiful city parks, the mighty ocean, the places of worship established by the Franciscan fathers, the most beautiful gardens in the world, may interest a few, but the majority ask, "Where is Miss Pickford's home?"

Joseph M. Abrams, vice-president and general manager of one of the largest sight-seeing bus lines here, says nothing is looked forward to with so much interest as a peek at the place where the motion-picture stars, themselves, really eat and sleep and move about. And if the tourists can catch a glimpse of a film star himself or herself, whichever the case may be, they will have something to talk about for the rest of their lives. The home of Valentino is second in interest to the travelers, the home of Charlie Chaplin third and the residence of Gloria Swanson fourth. Then, in order, come the homes of Will Rogers, Pauline Frederick, Milton Sills, Jackie Coogan, Tommy Meighan, William Desmond, "Bill" Hart, Eugene O'Brien, Pola Negri, Lois Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan.

And then, the home of Jim Jeffries!

REID STILL LIVES

"Wallie" Reid never has died in the eyes of America," Mr. Abrams said, "and there is almost a note of reverence in the voices of tourists as they mention his name. The home where he formerly lived is, to them, one of the most interesting places in Los Angeles."

The two principal sights sought, says Mr. Abrams, are the homes of the motion-picture celebrities and the orange groves, where "sure enough oranges" grow right out on the trees. The demand for the latter has been so marked that Mr. Abrams made arrangements with a grower near La Verne to permit tourists to enter his grove and pick oranges for a nickel apiece. This is a never-to-be-forgotten experience, and the letter back home, written by the tourist always mentions it, he says.

"Our parks are viewed with interest, but not with marked enthusiasm," Mr. Abrams added. "Not knowing that we have an ordinance limiting the height of buildings, the absence of skyscrapers is remarked and some persons advance the idea that they are built low so they won't have so far to fall when an earthquake comes. The sight of our millions of flowers and our tropical trees and palms and the mountain peaks disappearing into the clouds is looked upon as worthy of attention, but they don't excite the interest that one building does when the tourists are told that three persons have jumped off it, one before it was finished and two after.

BIG THINGS IGNORED

"It isn't the big things the travelers wish to see, so much as the smaller things which have a human interest. One of our tours leads past the Los Angeles County Hospital, where the announcer calls attention to the fact that it is the largest hospital west of Chicago, where the principal physicians of the city give at least one day each week without charge to care for the sick and injured. But this doesn't interest the tourists as much as the little church in Hollywood, where they have been told Ben Turpin passes the collection plate. The sight of the Biltmore or Ambassador hotels does not arouse as much curiosity as the little home on Dayton avenue where Jim Jeffries was born.

"When the Madalynne Obenchain-Arthur Burch criminal trials were on, the tourists were insistent on seeing the cottage in Beverly Glen where Kennedy was killed. They had read all about Clara Phillips and wanted to see the jail and the very window from which she escaped. They knew all about the Denton murder and wanted to be shown where Mrs. Peete was captured. Right now, they are asking about Kid McCoy and want to be taken past the place where he and Mrs. Mors were living before she was killed and want to be shown the shops where McCoy ran amuck with a gun. They peer at the jail, where Harry Dunlap, the 'badge bandit,' is being held.

"The things of which the city is most proud, must be seen, they figure, but they have their own ideas of what is the most interesting to them. When the unkind and untrue stories about wild life in Hollywood were being so widely broadcast, a minister heading a party of tourists from Alabama, said to one of our agents:

BALKS ON HOLLYWOOD

"'No, I do not want to go to Hollywood and I do not want any of the women in my party to go, because it is the wickedest place in the world.'

"He did not go, but the women packed the buses to Hollywood that afternoon.

"One of our trips leads to Universal City and we stop for lunch at the studio restaurant. Travelers almost forget to eat, sometimes, as they look at the actors and actresses in make-up. They get to speculating who they are—certain surface fishes, which include the mackerel tribe and most of our other food fishes.

The third category is bassalian fauna, found on the ocean floor, from 500 feet deep on down to uncharted depths of five or six miles. All crustacea, such as crabs and lobsters, are included in this third group, which is the kingdom for most of the 13,000 or so known finny species.

In the depths are degenerate forms of shore fishes and the chimera group, which is one of our oldest living families, dating back say ichthyologists, to the Silurian time. The deep-sea fishes are grotesque and sometimes horrid, but not so interesting as our more familiar shore fishes, from an angler's point of view.

Among bassalian fauna is the order of lantern fishes, which are luminous, lighting their eerie travels in the depths where sun rays do not penetrate. A few members of the lantern fish family can be seen in the marine gardens at Catalina and elsewhere among the channel islands.

FOOD VARIETY

Our most important food fish are the scombridae or mackerel, and near relatives, such as the swordfish, tuna, albacore, bonita and several smaller varieties, the choicest of which is the Spanish mackerel.

At an assembly of the International Fisheries Congress held at Washington several years ago, an investigator estimated that one mackerel will lay as many as 1,000,000 eggs each season. Inasmuch as a six-inch pan fish grows from the spawn in a period of about six months, it looks like we can eat mackerel three times a day if we want to without endangering the supply.

The leaping tuna (thunnus thynnus) is called the tiger of the seas, and next to the swordfish is the royal big game of our waters. So little is known of the tuna that almost any lover of angling can enrich the store of scientific knowledge with notes on the appearance and habits of these fighting torpedo-like grand-uncles of the mackerel.

SPAWNING MYSTERY

Never, in their cruises from Monterey to Mazatlan, have cannery fishermen taken tuna bearing spawn, I am told; and never have young tuna been caught. It is supposed their hidden marine bourn is somewhere in the tropics and the adults of the tribe forage northward each summer when the warm Kuro Siwo current sweeps inshore. Commercially, yellowfin albacore are called tuna, but they are a different fish, according to some authorities.

The Tuna Club of Avalon is one of the most celebrated sport institutions in the world. It was founded by Charles Frederick Holder, who has written several attractive volumes mingling scientific fish data with enthusiastic field observations.

The genus salmo, which is the trout family, does not belong in a discussion of Southern California salt fishes because the steelhead trout is the only member of the group taken hereabouts. There is, however, the Catalina salmon, which is better known as the white sea bass, a splendid sport and food fish which certainly looks more like a salmon than a bass.

FIGHTING FAME

Another fish which has won fame as a scrapper is the yellowtail. The California yellowtail is said to be related to the amberjack of Florida waters and is taken from coast piers, particularly at Redondo Beach, as well as at sea.

Jewfish, huge prototypes of the small-mouthed black bass of fresh water lakes, blunder into the live baits of pier fishermen sometimes and great monsters weighing 500 pounds and more are brought to gaff on amazingly light tackle. The jewfish is a sluggard and not ferocious like the swordfish. Fish markets used to offer flakes of his white meat as "filet of sole" but the public is too fish-wise nowadays to buy it as such.

Sole, turbot, flounder and halibut are names for the several varieties of the flat fishes. The flat fishes, unfortunate fellows, don't know what is going on right under their noses because they have both eyes on their upper side. They are generally spoken of as the flounder family and twenty-two varieties are caught on our southern coast, including that far-famed delicacy, the sandab.

None of the twenty-two is the true halibut, however, as he is found north of San Francisco Bay on to Alaska. He is a giant, growing to be six or eight feet long, and weighing 300 pounds; while the market halibut of the south seldom grows over the fifty-pound mark.

FLOUNDERS DESCRIBED

An interesting pamphlet about our flat fishes was issued by the State several years ago. It described the various members of the flounder family, including the rare tongue sole, which is found only in San Diego Bay. As its name describes, the tongue sole is tongue-shaped, the tail lacking the usual serrations of other fishes.

Holder is one of the authorities who claims that halibut, when hatched, swim edge upwards like other fishes, and have one eye on each side; but that as they mature they turn on their side and the both eyes gradually slip around or through the topside of their possessor.

This sounds exceedingly improbable and is denied by many fishermen, including Ad Pearson, veteran sportsman of San Diego, who is not without claim to piscatorial distinction.

Pearson is an instance of an observing angler and nature lover who contributes to the general knowledge about fishes. One day he noticed a sardine of unusual appearance in his bait bucket. He sent a specimen to the State University for examination and the result was clupanadon Pearsonii, a hitherto undiscovered species, being named after him.

BORN THAT WAY

Pearson has assured me that the halibut bears a Ben Turpin-esque cast of countenance from earliest infancy. But this same angler was not so able in unraveling the eternal controversy about the California whiting, a game fish which swims the surf, and is known by many names. So he queried Dr. J. M. Gilbert, professor of zoology at Stanford University.

The key name of whiting, Prof. Gilbert replied, was menticyrrhus undulatus, ranging from Santa Barbara to Mexico. It is usually taken from shore by beach-casting, a pretty art.

Corvina is a misnomer for the whiting, according to the best authorities. The name came to be attached to the whiting by mistake, by anglers on the West Coast of Mexico. They evidently mistook the whiting for one of the croakers, a companion fish which inhabits the surf and sandy shallows.

SEINING STOPPED

The croakers, both yellowfin and spotfin, gained their name from the peculiar grating noise they make with their pharyngeals or "throat teeth" which they use to crush their food, which consists of tiny clams, shrimps, and hipps or sandcrabs. Corvina is the Spanish term for croaker, from the Latin corvus, crow.

When, as a small boy, I came to know the wonderland of Southland beaches, twenty years ago, commercial fishermen dragnetted the surf, beaching their hauls and littering the strand with young fishes of all kinds which were destroyed. The law now forbids this form of seining and the measure came in time to save the game whiting from extermination. As it is, this interesting and delicious fish is much less numerous than he was in past years.

The Santa Fe used to schedule a special week-end train to San Onofre, below San Juan Capistrano, for the convenience of surf fishermen. That "fishermen's special" runs no more. Maybe most of the old crowd go now in their automobiles.

STRANGE PERCH

One of the strangest inhabitants of the surf is the so-called surf perch, a bony and somewhat tasteless fish, with big silver scales mottled with olive patches.

Like the grouper family of the deep water, or rocks, (called rock cod in the markets,) and some varieties of sharks, the surf perch is vivaperous; that is, the eggs are hatched in the body and the tiny fishes are born like mammals, when about the size of the head on a dime.

Salt water fish lay their eggs in every conceivable locality, but it remains for the grunion or surf smelt, to utilize what is practically dry land.

The grunions are thrown upon the sandy beach at a certain state of the tide, on moonlit nights of March, April, May and June. Squirming in glittering windrows, they lie for a moment in the faint light, then flop back into the wash of the next wave.

Will F. Thompson, biologist of the State Fish and Game Commission in charge of the laboratory at East San Pedro, has written a pamphlet on the grunion which is scientifically authoritative, yet more thrilling than any novel.

READY TO HATCH

"The crowds of bathers who follow in their footsteps on succeeding days little think that four inches below their feet is unfolding one of the really remarkable stories in the annals of natural history," Thompson writes.

So miraculously is the hatching of the larvae synchronized to the phenomena of nature that ten days later, when the succeeding cycle of high tides erode the beach, the eggs are ready to hatch; and the larvae is liberated into the sea. In his book, Thompson tells the whole remarkable tale of this species "which exists on an action so unobtrusive as the shifting of sands on the seashore."

The sea has more shore students than ones who fare forth in small boats to witness the grander spectacles of the blue waters, such as leaping tuna schools, a swordfish slashing into a quivering shoal of mackerel and the glittering flight of the flying fishes. Seasickness, which often is only a form of fright, afflicts many outdoor lovers who otherwise might come to better know the delights of the deep water.

A compromise between the idle pastime of pier fishing and plunging at sea in a small boat is being reached by fishing barges, which are just coming into vogue at such resorts as Venice and La Jolla. At Venice, the barge "Bacchus" is boarded by as many as 400 fishermen on Sundays. Big catches are invariably made.

SIMILAR CONDITIONS

The study of commercial methods of fish-taking is an entirely different field of interest than sport fishing. Most of the commercial fishermen are Japanese, one reason being that the Japanese are a fish-catching race, another that California is climatically very similar to their own Nippon, and fishing conditions are much the same.

An estimated 1000 boats joined the tuna fleet at Los Angeles Harbor, this year, from Monterey, San Francisco and other northern ports. The great number of boats, together with an unprecedented run of fish, swamped canneries and resulted in a long lay-off. In winter, the cannery fleet rigs for sardine-seining, the region of Point Firmin being one of the greatest sardine grounds in the world. Japanese catch 90 per cent of the California sardines.

The fresh fish fleet which docks at the outer harbor, supplies most of the cities of the Western States as well as Southern California with ocean fish throughout the twelve months, and is controlled by Italians and Slavs. Native Americans are seldom seen on fishing craft.

The list of California fishes is nearly endless, and to even briefly enumerate the better-known varieties would fill many columns. But the long, slender California barracuda is so important a food fish that he deserves mention.

BARRACUDA IS GAME

The barracuda looks like the eastern pickerel and is said to be as game when taken by trolling with live bait or spinner. Although the meat is of excellent quality, no satisfactory method has yet been found to freeze barracudas and keep them in cold storage, as is done with other fishes. One concern went so far as to try to enthuse the public with fish sausage, made from the surplus of barracuda catches in the spring, but the fish sausage did not "take hold."

The California barracuda is a smaller fish than the ferocious giant variety which inhabits tropic waters of the Gulf and Gulf stream. The giant barracuda grows to be larger than a man, while the California fish average three feet in length.

The giant fish is ferocious and sometimes attacks bathers. Beach tragedies in Florida and at other Atlantic points, popularly credited to "sea serpents," are blamed by marine students, onto the giant barracuda.

But our California sea serpents, as was proved at Newport Beach, are the genuine article. And they are absolutely guaranteed not to make lunch of you when you go swimming.

INJURED COMEDIANS BACK

Jimmie Adams and Eddie Baker, Christie comedians, who were painfully injured while the final scene of Adams's latest two-reeler was being filmed, have recovered sufficiently to report for duty. Adams will be featured in a comedy which will go into immediate production, with Baker again assuming the role of a comedy villain.

they know many of them. First they'll find Eugene O'Brien, then Doug Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin and Corinne Griffith and Norma Talmadge—none of whom ever worked there, or has not in years at least, while right at their sides will sit William Desmond or Jack Hoxie or Jack Dempsey or Mary Philbin or Laura La Planta, unrecognized.

"Most of the reservations for sight-seeing trips about Los Angeles, are made by the women. They constitute 80 per cent of our patrons. Men want to go to the baseball game or to a prize fight or to the beach, where the bathing girls are. When they go to view the city, they usually are hauled along by their wives. Most all tourists know just where they want to go or what they want to see. They have been reading about California (which to them is just Los Angeles) and after doing the motion-picture colony, they begin picking out their itineraries. The women mention the Busch sunken gardens in Pasadena and the Mission Inn at Riverside. The men start talking about Tia Juana and "Old Town." The women suggest a ride through the orange groves or to Mission San Fernando, built in 1797, or a trip to the Camulos Ranch, which was part of the tract deeded to the Camulos family by the King of Spain when this section of the country was a Spanish possession. But the men opine that Doyle's arena at Vernon or a night trip into Chinatown would promise more attraction.

CHINATOWN POPULAR

"The Chinatown excursion is taken by throngs of tourists. The sight of a Chinese smoking an opium pipe (filled with tobacco) gives a thrill. The tourists want to know if there have been any tong wars fought there, if lottery games are operated and if the Chinese still wear queues. We stop at one place run by a Chinese, where the tourists buy ginger candy, Chinese nuts, cookies and curios.

"The Los Angeles River is a point of interest to the tourists, principally from the fact that it is dry most of the time.

"'It's just like the United States!' the guide explains: 'mostly dry.'

"Which suggests a drink to the men in the party and they begin looking for an opportunity to talk confidentially to the guide or the driver.

"'Say, fellow!' they begin. 'Do you know where I could buy a nice little drink for the two of us?'

TOUR CLUBS IN SOUTH

"Back in some of the Southern States, clubs have been organized by agencies to which persons pay certain amounts each week for a period of two or three years. The accumulated sums are to finance trips to California. One of these, started several years ago at Callego, Ala., brought 1200 persons, principally girls, last year. The pretty things of Southern California, they wanted to see. The men wanted to get across the line into Old Mexico, at Tia Juana, and put their shoes against a brass rail at an 'Old Town' bar."

To G. F. Mieding, driver, who has spent years piloting the tourists about, comes the most intimate contact with travelers. To him they confide their likes and dislikes and tell of their "wonderful sprees" to the Coast. Some time ago, a woman from Boston, 83 years of age, alone, expressed a desire to see the bright lights in the old town, just below the Mexican border.

"I want to get all out of life I can," she said. "Don't know where I'll be next year. Let's go!"

THIRTEEN-CENT TIP

"She walked into the bar-rooms when we got there," Mieding said, "and into the gambling halls, her eyes bright with interest. She didn't miss anything. When we got back, she handed me a tip of a dollar and said she's had the 'time of her life.' A man in the party, who saw the sights, dug up 13 cents and handed it to me.

"'S'all I got,' he said. 'Y'understand, don't you?'"

"The most amazing thing to the travelers," Mieding said, "is the way in which drivers find out where they're from. For instance, a man was riding with me recently, and I turned to him and said:

"'Well,' how are things in Texas?'

"He looked dumfounded. 'How'd you know I was from Texas?' he asked.

"'Just guessed it,' I replied.

"But I hadn't. The typical Texan talks with a Southern drawl, but he doesn't use the expression 'you-all,' as Southerners from other States do. The man from Chicago talks with a snap which brands him, while the man from New York is so proud of the fact that he tells you before he is well started on the trip. Persons from the Middle West can be distinguished by their dress and the man from the cow-country asks you about Tom Mix. The man from San Francisco advises you readily and promptly, he is 'from San Francisco, the metropolis of the West,' while the tourist from Kansas City starts telling you about Benton Boulevard and Armour Boulevard, the Paseo and of Swope Park with its acres and acres of woodland. Everyone is proud of something 'back home' and compares it with what there is here."

HONEYMOONERS, TOO

Each day the honeymooners come. If there are reserved seats in the busses, they get them, due to the discerning eye of the ticket agent. If the seats aren't reserved, the honeymooners appropriate them and hold hands. The billing and cooing on the back seats of Los Angeles sight-seeing busses is fervid as the newlyweds look out upon the fulfillment of the first of their long-awaited dreams.

The tourists "razz" the Los Angeles City Hall and marvel that there is no union depot. They voice their thanks that they do not have to drive in traffic and they laud the efficiency of the traffic cops. They enjoy being told the ancient joke about the effort to graft an olive tree onto a pepper tree so as to grow stuffed olives. They are interested in the eucalyptus tree, which sheds its bark, but not its leaves. When they see a cork tree, they want to know what good it is and they ask how dates can grow on the fan-like leaves of the date palm.

They are amazed to learn that the Los Angeles Aqueduct brings the city's water supply from beyond the mountains but they finish with:

"Do you suppose we could get to see Bebe Daniels?"

CHIMES TO PLAY FORGOTTEN AIR

to hear him ring the minutes. The machinery is all there. For years, after 1895, he did it. Also, there is a tradition that little Aristide should ring the hour of his birth, at least every Sunday, at fifty-seven minutes after the noon hour.

Dong! Dong! Old Jacquemart pounds his hammer twelve times. Dang! the lady hits one clip. Ding! the elder son rings the third quarter. Then silence! Regularly, little Aristide refuses to "function," even on a Sunday! He is all ready; but they do not want him to "wear out his works."

Such is the old story for tourists, absolutely truthful as far as it goes. But there has always been a silent undercurrent of feeling, in Dijon, as of something lacking, which, even takes some of the snap out of little Aristide's performance.

SOMETHING LACKING

Jacquemart hammers the hour like a blacksmith.

They love Jacquemart, but he lacks something. Wife and elder child were made in Dijon. They are natives. They are all right. Then, what?

That tune! You will not get any citizen to say it, but "that most beautiful air," which Froissart heard Jacquemart ring on the bells at Coutral has always been the Riddle of Dijon! Did Dijon have it? There are old references in local chronicles to "Jacquemart playing finely" and "Jacquemart always capable." It ought surely to mean more than hammering twelve strokes!

I think no passage can be found which squarely claims the tune. On the other hand, there are more bells up there than Jacquemart strikes!

Dijon has always, more or less, believed in the tune. But the transfer (that is to say, the bloody theft from Coutral) happened so long, long ago! Pehaps Jacquemart was playing the tune, here in Dijon, when Columbus was a young fellow! Then came wars, sieges, burnings, and alarms. There had been such before.

Who knows?

ETCHINGS UNIQUE

Now, for the kitchens, where they found the boxes.

Tourists, take off your hats to the most marvelous old kitchens, unique in the world, the only perfect and complete remains of their kind!

Here, the gilded honey-cakes, still sold today, as the glory of Dijon, were invented for the Court of Burgundy, on Christmas Day, 1361!

These hearths, chimneys and spits were already old when America was unknown, undiscovered! Destructive fires, in two different centuries, have left nothing of the ancient Palace of the Dukes, but an isolated four-story tower (called Tower de Bar,) very beautiful, built into the present palace-museum.

But twelve oxen could be roasted, entire simultaneously, in these kitchens! They are palatial. Their arch is wonderfully high to aid escape of smoke. They date before the Gothic, being almost Merovingian.

Floors, walls, roof, are all fine stone.

The Court of Burgundy (when Jaquemart arrived) led the cookery of the world, outside of Constantinople, then still ruled over by the emperor, successor to Caesar, before the Turks came, stunning civilization.

HUNDREDS AT TABLE

The dukes got their sauce-cooks from Constantinople! A hundred gentlemen were invited daily to the palace dinner. Half as many noble strangers, plus the court proper, trebled the number, says the contemporary chronicler, Chastellain. In 1381, two Dijon poultry dealers sold Aubin Cousin, the Duke's butcher, a single bill of 1000 chickens, 200 geese, 6000 eggs and 400 great cheeses. Another receipted bill exists for 48,000 breads. Olivier de la Marche tells of a ducal "provision hunt" that netted eleven deer, 350 wild ducks, nineteen wild geese, 680 wild pigeons, two bears and 275 quail and ring doves. In another account book the ducal snares caught "296 rabbits and 174 great hares."

Around the kitchens there are eighteen great chimneys. Obviously, many were for roasting at the spit. At the courts of France and England they were living on roast meats and a few boiled vegetables.

But here at Dijon (when Jacquemart arrived,) De la Marche specifies that "all were served with sauces and ragouts, richly spiced, down to the rank of squires, likewise so served on fete days." And there remains here unique in the world two Middle Age sauce furnaces, each with twelve lids and a great stone slow-heating table, covered with terra cotta squares—the first range and substitute for chafing dish then in the world, outside of Constantinople.

TREASURE IS FOUND

Here the "imported chef" of the old dukes of Burgundy concocted Byzantine sauces and delicacies, whose very spices and condiments came straight from the antique capital of elegance—from Constantinople, then, as from Paris today.

They still have (and it's worth a fortune,) the gold inlaid ivory and embossed painted leather knife and spoon case, which hung from the master cook's girdle. The knife and spoon handles are of cunning little mosaics, very beautiful.

Fires destroyed the palace.

The kitchens have been dismantled, quite completely, these 300 years past, perhaps longer. No one seems to know their history, after the destruction of the Palace. But it is easy to understand them as a hasty hiding-place for the two great iron boxes, before some anticipated capture of the city.

So, have recently been found two boxes, nearly the size of trunks, in a sealed closet, not of the kitchens themselves, but in a blind hallway beside it.

MECHANISM REPAIRED

Others affirm that the boxes were found in a disused drain of ancient times, which made an ideal hiding-place for bulky objects to be flung to safety.

In any case, there is a mass of very rusty machinery. The quantity is considerable, and it is vividly a very ancient chimes mechanism.

It was rusty. They have scraped and polished; and where pieces are too much eaten away with rust, they have been duplicated by good modern work.

It is supposed to be the original mechanism of Jacquemart, by which he played the "most beautiful tune" which Froissart heard. At some forgotten siege of Dijon, it is probable that Jacquemart and all his works were hurriedly fetched down from the tower to a place of safety. Later, Jacquemart was put back in place. His simple machinery, to ring hours was brought back with him. But the tune mechanism remained hidden—first delayed and then forgotten. Why not? It might have been in the year 1423 or the year 1511!

Is it the tune? Is it beautiful? Old Froissart was no fool. If Froissart said that it was beautiful, it may be something sweet, indeed, to hear!

OCCULTIST'S QUEER HOUSE

like the sea and looks like crystallized creme de menthe!

These green vibrations have brought him prosperity. He now declares that he is arranging a combination of rose, blue and orchid lights which he believes will attract an ethereal being to him, whom he will submit to various color tests. If she can pass the rose test, she will have the right physique and vitality. The blue test will determine her spirituality and moral standards and the purple or orchid test will reveal whether or not she is qualified along esthetic and idealistic lines.

But Mr. Hansen does not devote all of his time to romantic speculations or occult experiments. He has a thriving and prosperous business which keeps him occupied from ten to twelve hours a day and he takes care of his several acres of lawn and flowers.

FASHIONS IN DRAMA

Costume Pictures to be Vogue Until Something Else Succeeds

"Nothing fluctuates in values like screen productions," says Carl Miller, who looks for another season of costume dramas, following the successful leadership of "Beau Brummel," and also pictures of characterization, but little melodrama.

"One successful picture establishes a vogue that lasts until another style of production ushers in a flock of companion pieces. The comedy drama of domestic life has probably run its course, because the public is tired of everyday happenings. Not for the moment, because the age is so materialistic, it wants romance, which explains the success of the costume dramas, while on the other hand, for variety, pictures that are character studies are most acceptable."

Mr. Miller is much interested in the trend of pictures, for he is a careful student of drama and a wide reader. Just now he is filling one of the featured roles in Warner Brothers' "The Dark Swan."

CAREY IN HARTE STORY

Geography holds no restrictions for the screen. Hunt Stromberg's next Harry Carey feature, "The Man From Texas," is a photoplay version of Bret Harte's popular "Tennessee's Partner."

SWAPPERS ARE ON JOB ALWAYS

they coveted some autographed pictures of screen celebrities that caught their eye.

"Say, Sally, it would be kind o' nice to have some of them about. What about trading in some o' them fancy vases of yours? This lady ain't got no vases—nothing so pretty as them."

Sally thought she might spare one or two—she certainly would like that picture of Mary Pickford with her ma and that cutey one of Baby Peggy—did I like Satsuma vases? They were very disappointed in me, not wanting to get rid of a thing but that old typewriter. And not liking vases—fancy anyone not liking vases. They rather liked our couch, too—wouldn't I swap that for a fancy bookcase?

Heavens, how one finds one's self weakening. This swapping business gets in the blood. I was only saved when the baby came in, and they both waxed royally enthusiastic. Say, but that's a cute kid . . . We ain't got no children, we did have one once . . .

GOOD WAY TO TRADE

"Now, that will do," I announced firmly. "We positively won't swap the baby or anything but the typewriter."

"Oh, very well. But it's a mighty good way to trade. You are missing up on some fine chances. We swap all the time. Sometimes we makes good bargains and sometimes we don't, but we can always swap some more," they told me. "I guess we swapped most things in our place some time or another, didn't we, Sally?"

"Yes," beamed Sally. "I even swaps clothes with my sister all the time and last week we swapped help."

"Goodness, you'll be swapping husbands next," I laughed.

"Well, now, we ain't got around to that yet," grinned Sally.

But I want to tell you that I could entirely and completely change my whole mode of life through that swap column. Half the society women I know would gladly swap jobs and families with me tomorrow morning.

Oh, I certainly bought some astonishing experiences for my 93-cent swap advertisement. And had so many peeps into the lives and hopes and disappointments of all sorts of people. That swap column teems with human interest.

NO LIKEE RAIN

Because he dislikes rain right heartily Josef Swickard dislikes a shower bath. He prefers a dip into a tub full of cold water to the drenching of the shower. "I can't bear to stand out in the rain and I experience the same sensation when I'm standing underneath a shower," says Swickard.

TABLE

I thought our own table most interesting of all. of us whose single for the time being was the welfare of the Community House and all its divisions: Mrs. Banning, Miss Leta Horlocker, whose gospel is to feed the soul with lilies in preference to the body with bread; Mrs. Louise Geffene who knows more in one of her little polished finger nails than most women know in both hands about clothes and how to wear them; energetic and efficient Mrs. Frederick H. Seares who is surcharged with helpful ideas which she puts into action; Mrs. F. W. Kimble, who is head of the Vogue and Exchange Shop, very discreet and business-like, lunching solely on lamb chops and pineapple; and Miss E. H. Terrell.

Miss Terrell is head of the Helping Hand Unit. Everyone consults her and no one can get along without her. She knows how to distinguish those who come for no purpose and those who need help or can give it.

If the conversation about that table had been heard by all men the famous fallacy that women only gossip evilly at such times would be destroyed forever. To be sure the very word gossip has fallen in bad repute. It comes from two root words meaning, God and said meaning originally-godlike speaking. It went back to its first meaning that day.

In place of talking about the latest husband of a star, the topics were the latest achievements of an artist. And they all had to do with the Community House-Lorin Barton's etchings, some of which are for sale there; Porter Blanchard's exquisite hammered silver things, an art he teaches there each week; Genevieve Johnson's California homemade candy that has the history of this State written in its sweetness with Mexican pinoche and Spanish candied cactus.

The proud boast was made that the lovely handpainted chiffon and georgette dress pattern done by Miss Cornelia McLoughlin and Miss Eleanor Cornelia Cole brought a profit of $100 a month on an average to the Vogue Shop. That Miss McLoughlin and Miss Cole are cousins both with the feminine form of their famous grandfather's name, Senator Cornelius Cole, who is 103 years of age, added interest and zest to the bit of gossip.

LIST IS NAMED

Then Mrs. Banning and Miss Horlocker together were happy in naming the increasing list of those who under the direction of Miss Horlocker glorify common kitchen bowls until they are beautiful receptacles for flowers or food. There were included in the list of those who sit out of doors in the patio at a long table each Tuesday afternoon, the following: Mrs. Cosmo Morgan, Miss Marguerite Brunswig, Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Giles Hall, Mrs. Fredericks West, who is one of the leaders in this class, and Miss Mary Gray. These will in turn teach the same art to shut-ins or those not able to come.

"It isn't that we want to make artists out of everyone," said Miss Horlocker, "but we do want all artisans to be artistic. I am not averse even to machine-made things if they are beautiful. We here in California must establish a cult and search for beauty that is peculiar to California.

Too often we go to other States and lands for our motif for beauty. That is why the other day when I put for sale in a Seventh-street shop some of my art craft things, I was glad when I was told they were bought by a Japanese on his way to Japan. I knew that he would take them to some pottery shop as models. I believe that was the first time California art

PLAN TO PROTECT GIRLS

The club women of Florida plan to make a strong fight at the forthcoming session of the Legislature to have the marriage laws of the State amended, setting a limit upon the marriageable age of girls.

CLUB BRIEFS

Committees Appointed

Mrs. Ralph Waldo Bucknam, the president of the Opera Reading Club, has announced the selection of her committees for this club season as follows. Hospitality, Mrs. M. C. Mason; publicity, Mrs. Loren B. Curtis; door, Mrs. Charles S. Reed; decorating, Mrs. Gavin Witherspoon; vocal music, Mrs. Lora May Lamport; membership, Mrs. Harry M. Wolfgang. Officers in addition to Mrs. Bucknam are: First vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Stoddart; second vice-president, Mrs. Anna Shaw Yates; treasurer, Mrs. L. Frank Baum; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Nickell, and corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. B. Tannehill.

Musical education work is to be carried on by Dr. Frank Nagel, whose analysis and interpretation of opera have proved so popular for the last two years.

Plan to Divide Labor

Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, has inaugurated the committee idea for next year's work. Each of the thirty or more chairmen listed under the seven main departments of endeavor will be privileged to name a committee of three to assist her, thus dividing the labor, while multiplying the interest. This plan, it is expected, will increase efficiency in the district affairs and at the same time there will be less individual effort.

The executive board of the district will meet with the chairman of department, the 13th inst., at 10:30 p.m., in room 614 Junior Orpheum Building, Eighth and Hill streets.

Mrs. Willebrandt Honored

Honoring Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant Attorney-General of the United States, who is visiting in Southern California, Mrs. Benjamin W. MacLaren of Pomona entertained with a luncheon Thursday at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Those included among guests were: Mrs. Winefred Ellis, Mrs. David Walker, Mrs. W. D. Coleman, Mrs. M. Maxwell of Long Beach, Mrs. T. S. Miller, Mrs. Charles C. Belany and Mrs. T. M. Rinehart of Dallas, Tex.

Miss Woodward Wins Song Prize of Soroptimists

Agnes Woodward, whistler, won the prize for the best club song for the Soroptimists at the meeting Tuesday at the Biltmore, and Mrs. Harry Henley, presiding, remarked that it was the first time she had heard anything whistled in words.

The song, entitled "Soroptimist," is to be sung to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," or to "America the Beautiful." It was sung for the first time by Miss Glenna Long, smallest prima donna in the United States. She also gave a number to open the program, "Spirit Flower," by Campbell.

Others who submitted songs, all of which were greatly enjoyed, included: Mrs. Madge Connell, Mrs. Marian Schaffer, Miss F. Cadieux Allen and Mrs. Muriel Knight. Mrs. Stella Dennis Taylor, chairman of the committee on selection, presided during the presentation of the songs. She was assisted in the committee work by Madame Constance Balfour, Mrs. Allen, Sylvia Harding and Mrs. Woodward.

An innovation for this club was the community singing led by Hugo Kirchhofer, who will begin at the meeting Tuesday to teach the members how to sing the new song in unison.

Among the distinguished guests presented by Mrs. Henley was Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, who left for Washington yesterday. She brought greetings from the Washington Soroptimists and made a plea for the women of business and the professions to take part in the best and cleanest politics. She was the guest of Miss Elizabeth Kinney, attorney, who spoke a few words of appreciation of Mrs. Willebrandt's attainments and success since leaving Los Angeles.

Mrs. Gertrude C. Maynard, who is known for the quality of programs she presents to the club, is chairman for this Tuesday.

Miss Irene Tomlison, who is Mrs. Maynard's daughter, has recently returned from New York where she has spent the summer studying at various schools. She will give a talk on "That Sylph-like Figure—How to Obtain and Retain," accompanied by a demonstration of some helpful exercises. She will conclude the program with a Russian peasant dance composed by Adolph Boehm, in which she will be assisted by Miss Jessie Herron of the Playhouse for the dance.

Mrs. Maynard also will furnish stationery and give the attendance prize for the day.

STUDY FOR ELECTION

"Some practical reading along legislative and political science lines might be indulged in by our club women during September and October, to prepare us for the November elections," suggests Mrs. Gilbert Davis, Windsor, Vt., chairman of legislation in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

WOMEN DESIRE DATA ON INDIAN

Federation Wants Truth of Present Welfare.

Care Given by Government Acutely Questioned

Investigation of Bureau is Intimated by Body

By Lessie Stringfellow Read

What is the truth about the Indian question? Should the Indian Bureau be reorganized? Are Indians being prevented by open or covert means from worshiping God in their own way? Has New Mexico in her Indians a problem similar to the negro question in the South, the Japanese question in the West? Has the government provided public school education for all Indian children? Are the Indian health situations as they should be? Can an agent, who is dictator over a group of people who have no vote, no recourse, deal justly with "wards of the government"? Has the Indian Bureau been maligned or is it the thing John Collier and John Selden and Charles Lummis, veteran scientist, author of "History of American Indians," founder of the Southwestern Museum, and Indian agent under President Roosevelt, say it is?

ANSWERS SOUGHT

These are some of the questions clubwomen of America are asking themselves and others and to which they very much want answers.

It is evident that correct answers cannot come from employees of the Indian Bureau themselves. No man and no woman is going to attack the hand that feeds him or kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

It is evident that correct answers cannot come from any prejudiced person whose purse is affected.

A great cry has been raised in New Mexico and in Washington because of statements made at Los Angeles by Dr. Lummis, Mr. Collier and others, and subsequently quoted in the California press and the General Federation News, organ of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

On one side there is arraigned the Department of the Interior, United States Indian Field Service and some members of the New Mexico State Federation of Women's Clubs, who are said not to be in sympathy with the Indian welfare program of the general federation as it has been carried out during the last two years, and as it was presented at Los Angeles.

On the other side are people in no one's employ, who have spent their lives with the Indians, and who know the Indian welfare committee of the General Federation's public welfare department, Stella Atwood of California, chairman, and John Collier, secretary of the American Indian Defense Society.

At Los Angeles it was declared by the Indian welfare workers "whose program tended to show that many have waxed rich on Indian wealth, while little or nothing has been done to better the conditions of the Indian," and who made an appeal to the biennial "in behalf of the wards of the State whose living conditions are pitiful, who are still in ignorance with inadequate schools, poor sanitary conditions and who are virtually at the mercy of agents in their midst."

The general federation, remembering what former "Secretary Fall's bill would have done to the Indians if it had passed, are inclined to take with a grain of salt statements that certain people close to the Department of the Interior are working solely for the benefit of the Indian himself in its effort "to eliminate harmful influences which not only work injury to the Indians, but to the State in general."

On the other hand W. E. Johnson (Pussyfoot), a former employee of the Indian Bureau, declared, "Lord, save the Indians from their fool friends."

TRUTH IS WANTED

But the clubwoman would like to know the truth. She would like to see an investigation of the Indian Bureau, conducted by an absolutely impartial commission. She would like to know exactly what the government has done and has not done for the individual Indian, for his education, his health, his art, his right to liberty and pursuit of happiness. She would like to know just how much money has been spent in attaining the present "satisfactory" state of the Indian, and who received the money. She would like to know for herself just how satisfactory the Indian's present condition is.

Remembering a recent (thwarted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs) effort of unscrupulous grafters to steal 30,000 acres of Indian land, and the ousting of the corrupt officials involved, clubwomen have not lost faith in their government, for the government is of the people, and as sound as the people. There can be differences of opinion in the right and wrong way to govern a helpless people.

But without showing what has been done, the Indian Bureau should not resent criticism concerning it. It should lay its cards on the table, its books before the public. Until it does this it cannot hope to stop what it declares is "propaganda against the Christian religion and the United States government."

Mr. Johnson, in a letter of protest against bureau criticism declares there has been no attempt to prohibit pagan rites or to interfere with the Indians indulging in any form of worship they choose, provided it is not obscene or immoral. But a little further down, he says: "On one occasion I broke up one of these horrible affairs by strong-arm methods."

So the public is still confused. It would like an unbiased investigation of conditions in every Indian reservation and also of the Indian Bureau, which should not fear this if it can come clean. And the clubwoman wants it to come clean, if it can.

Mrs. Sherman Says American Family is Problem

Federation Leader in First Word Since Election

Seeks Aid of Coolidge to Study Native Apathy

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—What has ailed the alien? Does he intend to become an American citizen when he comes to this country? What does the immigrant do toward further cementing that great corner-stone of this republic —the American family? What about the native-born in this regard?

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is going to answer the question, says Mrs. John D. Sherman, the new president, who is in Washington for the first time since her election, to organize her work for the next two years.

Mrs. Sherman placed the problem of the American family before President Coolidge in July.

AFTER MORE DATA

Mrs. Sherman came to Washington to get together additional data to place before the President on his return from his vacation. Mrs. Sherman says that during her term of office, the federation will bend every effort toward putting before the American people data in regard to the American family as it has to do with the native and foreign-born.

Without any question, the American family controls the future of this republic. Just how much does the American family care about that proposition? Not much, it would seem, when less than 50 per cent of the registered voters went to the polls at the last Presidential election.

IMPORTANCE OF FAMILY

"Then, what can be expected of the foreign-born. Just what interest does he have in governmental affairs? The whole business starts with the American family. The American family is the most important business in the world and the biggest. Therefore, one of the big jobs of the federation will be to get the facts concerning it. To this end I am urging the naming of an unsalaried committee of representative citizens to get at the facts and recommend definite methods for educating the aliens among us in our standards of living.

"Recommendations of such a committee would be based upon the facts in regard to the American family as found in the 1920 census. These facts are unpublished because of the lack of appropriation. The findings of the committee, in the opinion of the Federation, would be the basis upon which to work in the future.

LESS HOME LIFE

"There is less real home life in America today than ever before. I have created a new department in the federation called the American home department, and it will endeavor to answer that oft-heard question: What is the matter with the American home? The General Federation of Women's Clubs certainly cannot ignore that question and fulfill the reasons for which the federation was created."

After the 15th inst. Mrs. Sherman will make her headquarters in the federation offices in Washington and push the activities of the organization. She was head of the Department of Applied Education when she was elected to succeed Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of Minneapolis as president of the federation.

ELYSIAN HEIGHTS CIVIC CLUB IS ENTERTAINED

Mrs. H. E. Wilkinson, president of Elysian Heights Civic Club and Mrs. Isabelle Hopper entertained the club Friday of this week at the Wilkinson home, 1554 Curran street, at its first gathering of the fall. After business routine of the afternoon the husbands and children were invited to dine with the members and to enjoy a literary and musical program.

Discussion of the work proposed by the State federation showed that members had kept in touch with the activities of both State and district presidents during the vacation time. High lights on the biennial were given by Miss Miriam Faddis and summer reminiscences by the members were interesting features of the afternoon. Mrs. Violet Stieneman of radio fame favored with a particularly pleasing number.

After dinner the remainder of the evening was spent socially and in card playing. A program by Dr. Albert Wilkinson, Miss Margaret Tremayne, Mrs. Ada Anderson, Lenard Zellais and Mrs. Madge B. Burnham, also was enjoyed.

PICTURE IS INDORSED BY WOMEN'S CLUBS

Rowland V. Lee, whose production, "The Man Without a Country," recently has been completed at the William Fox West Coast Studios, Hollywood, has received word from Mrs. C. D. Lee, president of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, that the picture has been accorded the unanimous indorsement of the Women's Clubs throughout the country. The picture followed the immortal story by Edward Everett Hale, admitted the greatest chronicle of patriotism ever written.

Mrs. Lee, in her letter, stated that the Women's Clubs feel keenly the necessity for a concrete expression of the patriotic impulse at the present time and realize that "The Man Without a Country" suffices. During the recent biennial convention of Federated Women's Clubs in Los Angeles, 500 of the delegates visited the Fox Studio and had an opportunity of watching Director Lee shoot some scenes of the picture.

LITTLE·THEATRE·MOVEMENTS

By W. E. HILL.

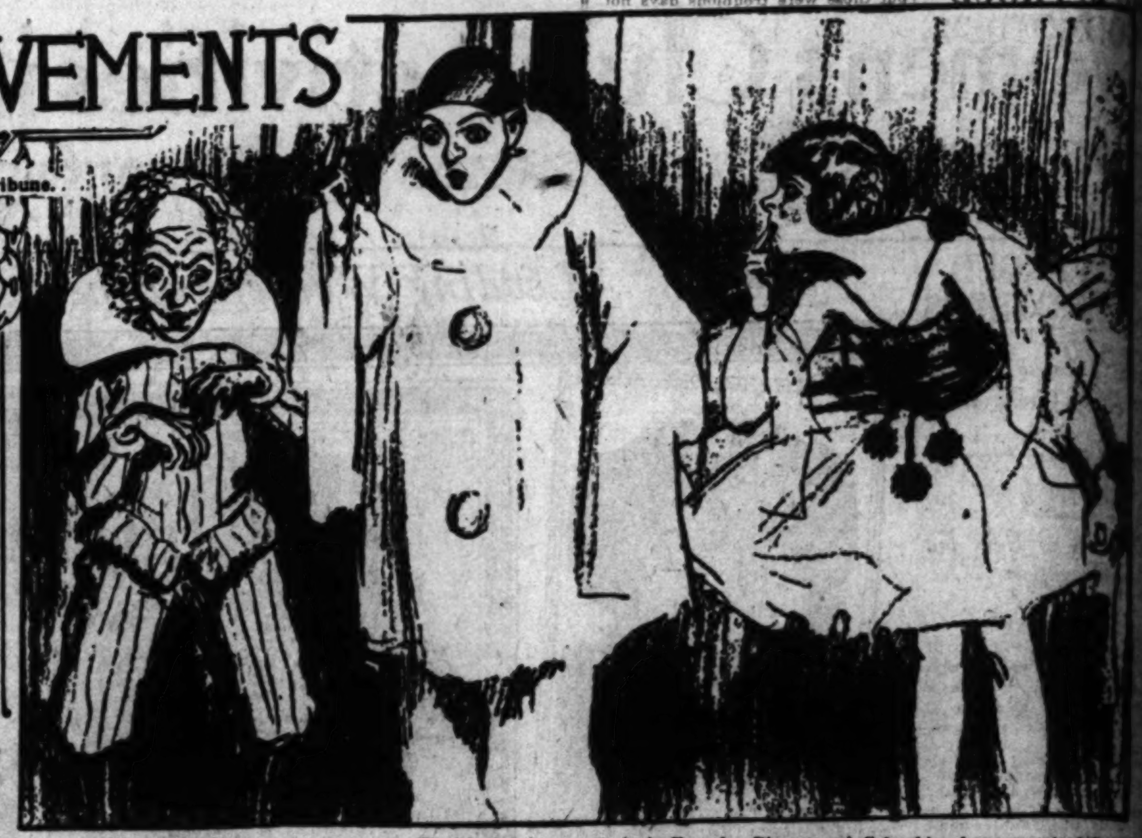
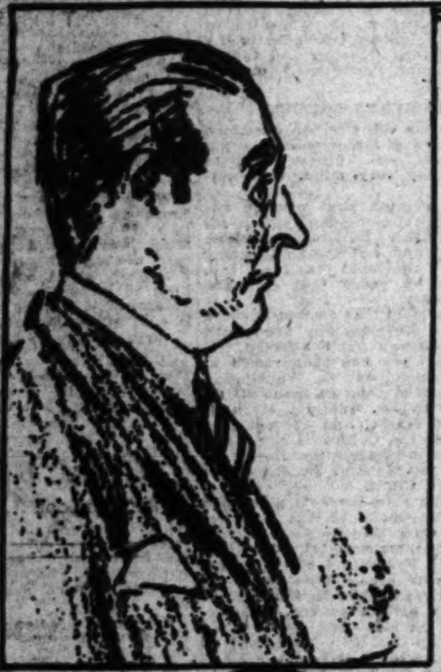
This is one of those gripping little one-act dramas about life in the Tennessee mountains. "Oh, Mammy, I'se afeared—I kin hear the bloodhounds!" says Sal, the daughter. Will you look at the trembling stranger! Already he feels the noose about his neck.

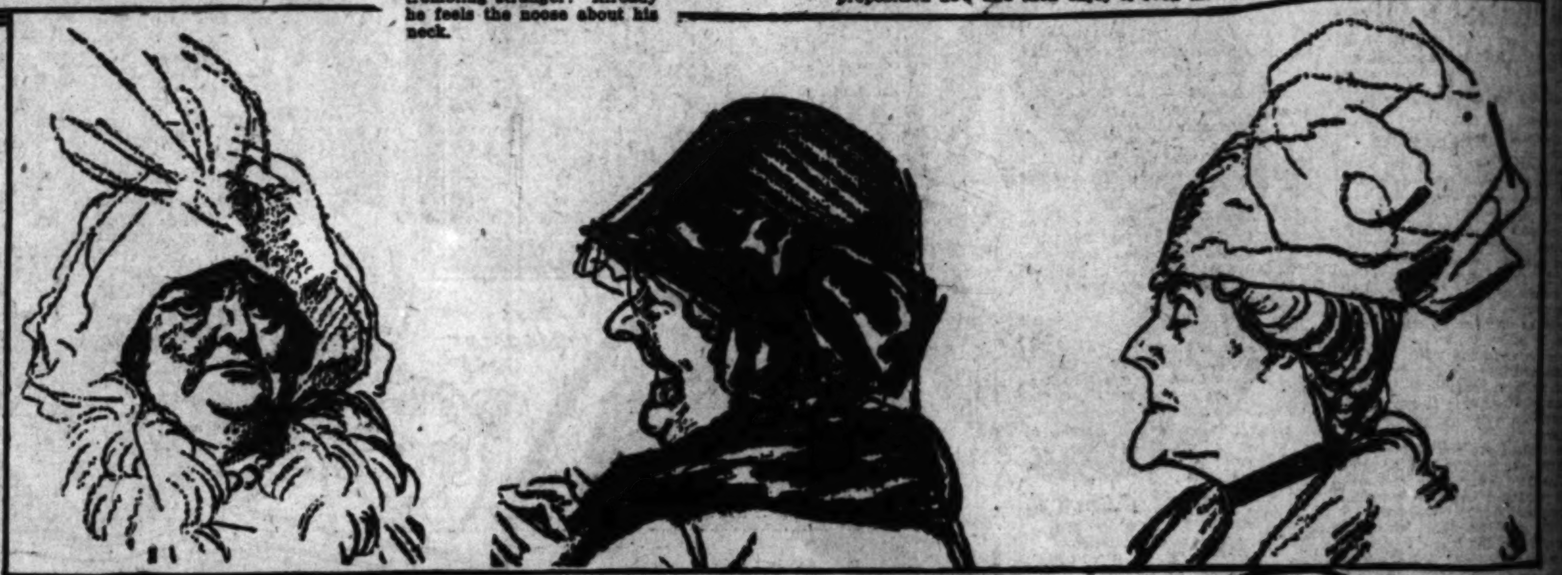


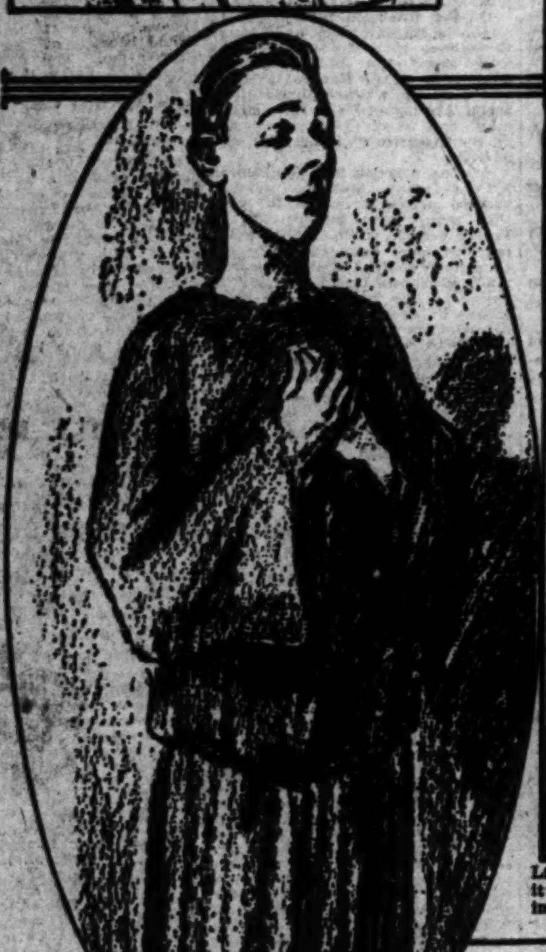
The playlet done entirely in French. Pierrot and Columbine have promised Pantaloon a nice new five dollar bill if he will pick up a pin from the floor. Pantaloon raises it to five dollars and fifty cents. After much haggling Pierrot agrees, and Pantaloon stoops over to pick up the pin. Thereupon, Pierrot gives him a kick and exits, with Columbine shouting gleefully. Pantaloon says "Je ne le comprends pas" and the curtains are drawn. Done in French, the audience supposes the playlet to be frightfully risque and enjoys it hugely. Those who get a stray adjective or a preposition now and then enjoy it even more.



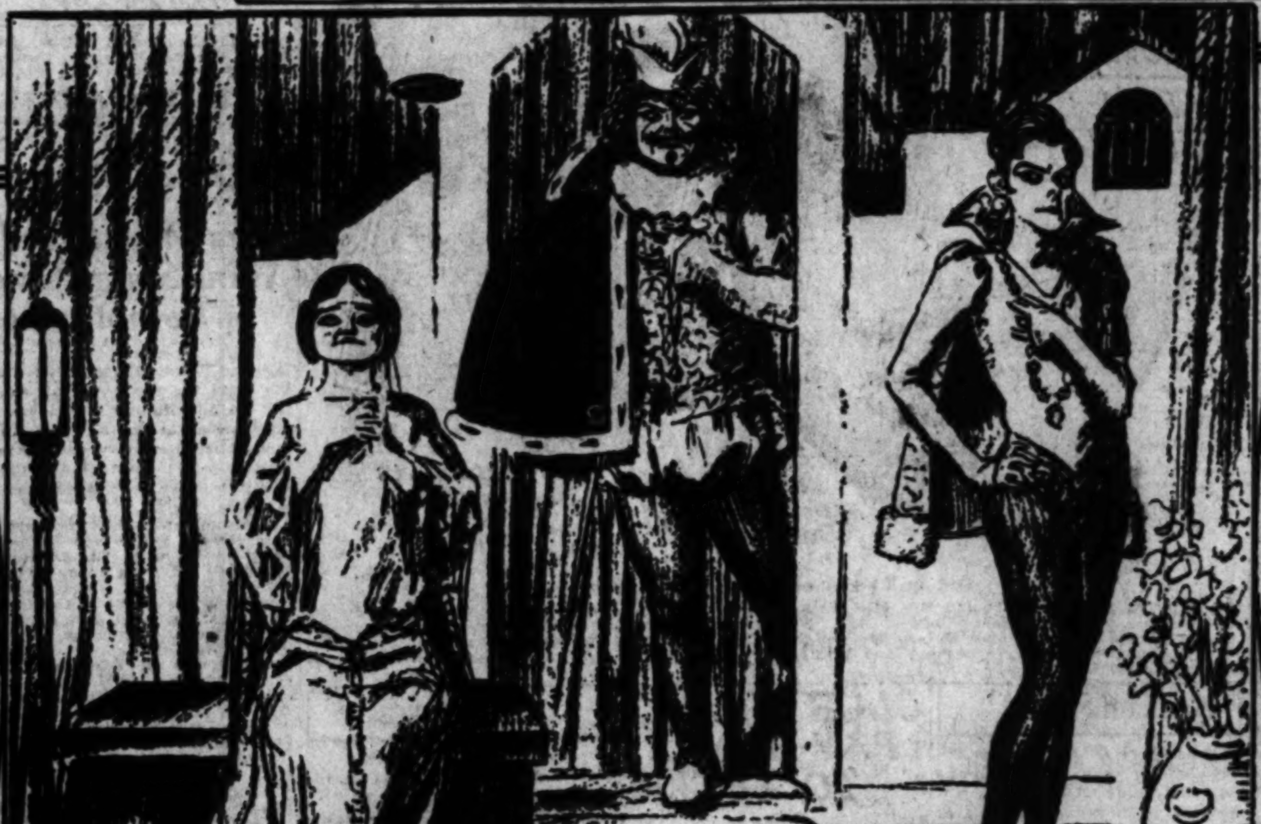
The visiting member of a rival little theater group. A bit too commercial is his verdict.

No little theater movement can move successfully without patronesses. Here are three of them. Only the socially right ones are asked. Sometimes a wrong one creeps in, but only if she has oodles of money.





Talented member of a little theater group as Saint Anthony of Padua—something to write home to Mr. Masterlinck about.



Little theater players doing "The Jewel Merchants" in a setting that is more or less suggestive of the northern border of Tuscany. While it does not in any way resemble the northern border of Tuscany, it gives one the feeling of northern Tuscany. This is a very tense moment in the drama. Graciosa, played feelingly by Mrs. Maud Crosby Bust, is hoping that heaven will protect the working girl.

The society ran into debt, the membership dwindled and finally the building was put up at lottery, Andreas Pico drawing the winning number. The Amigas Del Pias disbanded their sala (hall) becoming a vinateria (saloon.)

THE ROUND HOUSE

The Round House was built in the 40's by a French sailor named Roman Alexander, from the model of a similar house he claimed to have seen in his travels on the African coast. He married a native Californian and for a time they lived in the Round House. He then sold it, and after various changes it finally came into the possession of George Lehman, who remodeled the building and grounds into a saloon and resort and renamed it the Garden of Paradise. The house stood on the corner of Main below Third, the grounds extending through to Spring. On that street was a thick cactus hedge which formed an entrance to the grounds. The original circular house was enclosed in a frame and weatherboarded, making of it an octagonal building. One of the biggest celebrations ever held in the city was commemorated here in honor of the nation's birthday, July 4, 1876. The old house was finally demolished in 1889.

These are only a few of the fast disappearing landmarks which mark the passing of old Los Angeles, the Los Angeles of pueblo days, but their memory still remains in the memories of many of the older inhabitants, though even to them, looking about at the new and splendid city of the present, the memory of those long past yesterdays grows dim lik the figment of a passing dream.

"THIEF OF BAGDAD" INSPIRES NEW SONG

TED DU BOIS, LOCAL SONG WRITER, SEES PICTURE AND WRITES SONG

It is not an unusual thing for the management of the Egyptian Theater to receive letters eulogizing the glories of Douglas Fairbanks's "The Thief of Bagdad," and the dazzling stage production, "The City of Dreams," but recently Sid Grauman received a beautiful song from a Los Angeles song writer, which was inspired by his now famous presentation. A letter from the composer, Ted Du Bois of 127 West Sixteenth street, states that the song has been accepted by eastern publishers and is now being prepared for the market.

The song is entitled "While Bagdad Sleeps," and is dedicated to Douglas Fairbanks and "The Thief of Bagdad." Following is the lyric, which seems to have captured the very spirit of the Fairbanks opus:

In a far-off magic city of dreams,
Out on a balmy night,
In a mystic garden, where moonlight beams,
While stars above shine bright,
Sweethearts in tender romance true,
Whispering tales of love,
While the world is wrapped in dreams of the night,
And old Bagdad sleeps.
It sleeps, it sleeps, while stars above shine brightly.

CHORUS:

While Bagdad dreams,
Pale moonlight beams,
Sweethearts slowly roaming
In the silvery gloaming;
Night fades away.
Dawn comes a-stealing,
Hearts yearning, love burning,
While Bagdad sleeps.

LIFE LACKS CUES, ACTOR'S COMPLAINT

STAGE IS SIMPLER, HE SAYS; AUTHOR TELLS WHAT TO DO

The famous story of Turner, who asked a woman critic of one of his sunset pictures, when she protested there never was such a sunset and she had never seen one, if she didn't wish she had, has its counterpart in the art of the stage.

That is, the principle of the story has its counterpart. For stage art is frequently an improvement on life, just as the graphic arts are frequently an improvement on nature.

One is reminded of this by a conversation with Harland Tucker, the brilliant leading man at the Morosco, where "The Cat and the Canary" is going into its thirteenth week today.

Tucker was talking about "cues."

"There is one fine thing about a stage play," Tucker said. "One's cues are all marked out in advance. You know just when you are to come on the stage, when you are to move or talk.

"Not so in life generally. You have to guess. One often misses cues in real life. And that means, usually, an opportunity lost. One is in a given situation and there is no certainty in one's mind that 'here is my move to say something.'"

ENGLISH ACTRESS TO TEACH DICTION

Ethel Ransome is an English actress known most favorably on both the English and Australian stage, and came to Los Angeles upon the completion of a European tour. While she anticipates dramatic appearances here, she hopes to screen her pantomime productions in the near future.

In Australia Miss Ransome trained many children for stage work. She stated that since her arrival here she has noted the lack of suitable entertainment for children and said that she wished to film "Christmas" and other stories featuring children.

Before work in pantomime, thorough training is to be given in diction. The voice, normally a beautiful instrument, must be trained so that the diction is pure and free from localisms.

FEJER, VIOLINIST, AT ORPHEUM

Prompted by the constantly growing interest of the American public in good music, Joseph Fejer, noted Hungarian violinist, has temporarily abandoned his New York society functions and entered vaudeville with his orchestra. He is at the Orpheum Theater this week. Mr. Fejer, who inaugurated the famous Sunday night concerts at the Hotel Vanderbilt, New York, predicts a gradual change for the better in American musical taste.

"I have been watching carefully for months past especially," he says, "and I am sure that the trend of public interest is toward better music. I do not mean by that, that it has lost interest in jazz. There has come an added interest in quieter, better, more subtle music. Vaudeville audiences are beginning to welcome one offering of serious music in the midst of the clowning and dancing on the bill. For proof of this just look at the reception that has been accorded such people as Hugo Rosenfeld and Nahan Franke, who, with their orchestras, have made a tremendous success in vaudeville in New York."

It is by the way of the vaudeville stage, Mr. Fejer feels, that the American masses can become musically educated. He holds forth the theory, amply proved, that people resent being consciously "uplifted," whether it be morally or mentally, while on the other hand, a little judiciously applied education is always welcomed.

"There is not a shadow of a doubt in my mind," Mr. Fejer continues, "that the ranks of concert and operagoers in this country will be appreciably swelled as a result of the interest vaudeville is arousing in good music. So many people have long cherished the idea that fine music must be heavy and dull and boring. Now that they are hearing it in vaudeville they are coming to realize that it can be interesting and good at the same time. That is why I am pleased and proud to do my bit in vaudeville."

Mr. Fejer is considered one of the finest musicians in the world. Although he was born in Hungary, he studied in Belgium under the master of all violinists, Eugene Ysaye, and has been in this country more than twenty years.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

Friends of Miss Sarah Andrews of Moulton, Ala., shipped the material for an entire house to be erected by her in Japan. Miss Andrews is a missionary there and has been in the work for several years. Everything needed to put house together was in the shipment, including nails, bolts and screws.

A Hungarian engineer has invented a phonograph no larger than an ordinary watch. There is room inside for ten discs, giving a repertoire of twenty selections. By placing the instrument on a water glass the sound is amplified sufficiently for an ordinary sized room.

For the first time in its history the Newton (Mass.) Theological Institution has graduated a woman with the degree of doctor of divinity. She is Eunice G. Appleton of Jordan, N. Y., who has completed the four-year theological course and is also a graduate of Syracuse University.

The bride's cake of today is a relic of a Roman custom. At a Roman marriage the bride was expected to prepare a part at least of the wedding feast with her own hands.

Under the laws of the Province of Quebec a married woman is legally incapable of performing almost any civil actions without the authorization of her husband or that of the court.

When the warm weather set in Mrs. Walter Jones of Chester, Pa., stuffed $120 in the kitchen stove, her favorite hiding place for money in summer for many years. But there came a cool, rainy day, when Mrs. Jones's memory failed her just long enouh to let her kindle a fire and warm her hands before she remembered her cache. Now she has opened her first bank account with the $120 that the government gave in return for a sheaf of ashes.

According to the latest yearbook, the Congregationalists in the United States have seventy-five women who have been ordained as ministers, of whom seventeen are in sole charge of churches.

Mrs. Jennie Litchfield of Wiscasset, Me., takes pride in the fact that she is the oldest woman in Maine to hold a license to drive an automobile. She is almost 80 years old and recently returned from a six-day motor trip through the White Mountains.

The Queen of Denmark, who is a member of the princely house of Mecklenburg, is one of the wealthiest women of European royalty.

In the good old days in England during the reign of Henry VII it was illegal to sell a hat to a woman for more than two shillings.

It is estimated that in the cotton mills in China 40 per cent of the workers are women, 40 per cent are children and only 20 per cent are men.

ORCHIDS BOTTLE FED

Experiments which may revolutionize floral culture, particularly in the production of rare orchids, are being performer by Prof. Lewis Knudson, botanist, of Cornell University.

In the college of agriculture laboratories, far from the native homes in Central and South America, Prof. Knudson has "bottle fed" orchids which he believes will develop perfect mature blossoms in from two to three years less time than is normal in the natural state.

Eight or nine years is the normal time required for an orchid to reach maturity. By making available to the tiny orchid seeds sugar in readily assimilable form, Prof. Knudson has secured almost 100 per cent germination. The consequent economy in growth, the professor believes, will enable the blossom to mature in six or seven years.

Prof. Knudson believes that the price of orchids may eventually be lowered by the process. On the market perfect blossoms are quoted at $5 and up apiece.—[Chicago Tribune.

"I was held up by a footpad last night," he told her.

"Mercy! How exciting! Did he demand your money or your life?"

"Yes, but I only had 60 cents about me."

Take South Elevators to the Eighth Floor

BY THE WAY

BY EVA G. TAYLOR

I wonder if we have not all felt at times—perhaps when most actively engaged in constructive work—that we are really the automatic servants of Destiny? Are any of us really free? Do any of us act on our own initiative? Are not our very movements controlled by some force outside ourselves? You remember the poem of Longfellow's which in our school days acted as a spur to our idealistic imaginings, pointing us to some fancied nobler goal—the one which holds these lines:

"Be not like dumb driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!"

How we used to picture in mind the dumb driven cattle who acted only under the whiplash or goad, while we fancied ourselves greatly superior to such incentives. But are we? Do any of us act without the whiplash or the scourge, even when we imagine that we are cast in a mental mold of heroic quality? Indeed, are we not all driven to our Ragnaroks or our Valhallas? Do not the forces of destiny drive us even when we seem to be most free? If perchance we should stand in the class of "conquering heroes," crowned with deserved or undeserved laurels, our attainment would have been reached through some pressure brought to bear upon our aims or purposes. Most likely the whiplash of desire—than which there is none more potent to mortals—would have been the driving force. The desire to succeed, to achieve, to attain—what a spur to some fancied goal!

THE "CONQUERING HERO"

Sometimes I fancy that the timid eyed oxen so patiently plodding beneath the yoke, are not more dumb—if more docile—than we aspiring humans. Are we not dumb in the things that concern us most—dumb in figuring out ways to solve our world-problems—in knowing the why and wherefore of life? We plod along to our goal, but seem about as uncomprehending as the dumb cattle. In the last analysis, if we were not "dumb" would there be any strife or confusion — any frays to march into under the "conquering hero" delusion?

MUSICAL

SYMPHONY SOLOISTS

Philharmonic Orchestra Will Offer Brilliant Galaxy of Artists

The coming symphony season promises to be by far the most brilliant in the history of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, both as to orchestral repertoire and in the appearance of the most notable array of soloists that have ever added to the pleasure of Los Angeles concert patrons.

Conductor Walter Henry Rothwell is now hurrying back to Los Angeles after a summer spent in Europe and the East during which his time was almost wholly devoted to a search for and consideration of compositions new to Los Angeles music lovers to add to an already comprehensive library. As a result of his quest, he is bringing with him some forty compositions with which we will be regaled during the seasons to come.

The soloists appearing with the orchestra compose a most brilliant and scintillating galaxy of personages of international fame. Maria Ivogun, Hungarian coloratura soprano, captivated the Los Angeles public when she appeared in song recital last season. During the past summer this artist appeared with unusual success at Covent Garden in London.

Alfred Cortot is one of the great French pianists and one of the most consummate masters of the keyboard now before the public.

Georges Enesco, Rumanian violinist-composer-conductor has been long regarded in Europe as an artistic genius, and one of the supermen of the musical world.

Elizabeth Rothwell, dramatic soprano, needs no introduction to the Los Angeles public. Georges Baklanoff, Russian baritone with the Chicago Civic Opera, is too well established, both in Europe and America, to need further comment. Olga Steeb, superlative pianist, whose fame is not confined to her native State, will again appear.

Sylvain Noack, violin soloist, is the able concert master and assistant conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, who has appeared with the Boston Symphony, Los Angeles Philharmonic and other national orchestras with noted success.

Moriz Rosenthal, giant of the keyboard combines with an impeccable technique a poetic interpretation of the best pianoforte literature. His appearance in recital in this country last year demonstrated that he still retains his place among the foremost living pianists of the world.

Juan Manen, foremost living Spanish violinist and a fit successor to the immortal Sarasate, gained fame in a most successful tour of the Eastern States in 1923. He makes his appearance for the first time in Los Angeles.

At Ambassador

Following is the program which will be played in the Ambassador lobby this evening by the Ambassador sextet, under the direction of Josef Rosenfeld: "Iphigenia in Aulis," W. Gluck; Perfume waltz, C. Ziehar; "Depuis le Jour" from "Louise," Charpentier, "Faust" selection, Gounod.

Neblett Trio in Recital

The Neblett Concert Trio, Leona Neblett, violin, Ruth May Schaffner, soprano and Raymond McFeeters, pianist, gave a recital at Chickering Hall last week before a large and appreciative audience. The trio has worked its way into one of Los Angeles' real musical attractions. The warmth of Miss Neblett's exquisite legato was evidenced in the Romance, Second Concerto, of Wieniawski. She gave the Indian Snake Dance by Burleigh, a bizarre interpretation that was almost spell-binding.

Miss Shaffner was in rare voice. Her "Trees" by Rasbach, was a dainty bit of artistry that softly won its way into the hearts of her auditors. Mr. McFeeters played Liszt's Etude D Flat with admirable repression and precision of touch.

Alchin Harmony Class

Carolyn Alchin, than whom there is probably no more original teacher of harmony in Southern California, recently closed her class at the summer session of the Southern Branch of the University of California. Her total enrollment was 198 students for this session. She will resume her teaching at the Southern Branch about the 15th inst.

From Arens Vocal Studio

In this season's class of the Arens Vocal Studio, there were a number of prominent church singers, chief among whom were Mrs. J. B. Boothe, soprano and musical director at West Adams Methodist; Mrs. Hazel Elwell, soprano, First Presbyterian Church, Pasadena; Mrs. W. G. Robinson, soprano, First Methodist Church, Pasadena; Mrs. F. A. Groves, contralto, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Hollywood; Miss B. Kucker, soprano, Presbyterian Church, West Hollywood; Mr. A. J. Kisselburgh, baritone, Hollywood Methodist Church; Mr. A. H. Button, tenor and choir director, Methodist Church, Alhambra; Miss Helen Winfree, soprano, Hollywood Baptist Church.

Presents Musicale

Lillian Backstrand, soprano, who recently returned from an eastern trip of several weeks, gave a studio party and musicale with Mrs. Adelaide Trowbridge Perry last Thursday. Both musicians are members of the faculty of the University of Southern California College of Music.

Pemberton at U.S.C.

Charles E. Pemberton will teach two days each week in his studio in the Southern California Music Building, devoting the other days to his work at the College of Music of the University of Southern California. His fall classes are now forming.

Teaches Advanced Piano

Specializing in the preparation of teachers and advanced pianists, Blanche St. John Baker, herself an artist of much and varied artistic attainment, will present her pupils in several programs during the coming winter season. Five of her pupils from her class in Vancouver have come to Los Angeles to continue their work with her.

Gantvoort to Lecture

Arnold J. Gantvoort, a native of Holland and a noted educator, will give a lecture on the fundamentals of music on Tuesday afternoon, 4 o'clock, the 9th inst., at the Zoellner Conservatory of Music, 1250 Windsor Boulevard. This lecture is given to introduce the department of solfege, which Mr. Gantvoort will head at the Zoellner conservatory.

Solfege means in the science of music the development of an aural concept of music instead of visual; briefly —the hearing of what one sees. It is a system universally used in Europe in all conservatories and is for the rapid progress of music students, whether instrumental or vocal, being a sort of preliminary work preceeding the study of harmony and counterpoint.

Kalova to Play

This evening at the Hollywood Conservatory recital hall, 5444 Hollywood Boulevard, Mme. Lizetta Kalova, Russian violinist, will be heard in an exacting program. She will be accompanied by Alexander Kosloff, also from Russia.

Mme. Kalova studied for seven years with Leopold Auer, and he considered her not only one of the greatest woman violinists, but one of his three or four best pupils. She won auspicious success in Europe, and since coming to America twelve years ago has played with a number of symphony orchestras here, including the Los Angeles Philharmonic last season.

Her style is one which embraces a fine and ennobling feeling and extraordinary brilliancy. Her program, which includes the G Minor Sonato by Tartini, the "Carmen Fantasia," by Hubay, Scherzo-Tarentelle, by Wieniawski, and miscellaneous numbers, is most attractive.

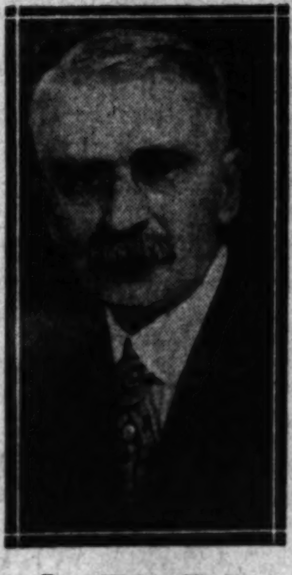
Mme. Kalova is to head the violin department of the Hollywood Conservatory, and has also been engaged to a like position with the local Sherwood School.

Davis College Activities

An early and large enrollment predicts unusual activities for the Davis Musical College for the coming season. Of the faculty are Dr. Eugene E. Davis, president of the school; Mrs. Davis of the vocal department; Dr. Ray Hastings, organist, and Henrietta M. Russell of the piano department. A. Ray Carpenter, the noted tenor and vocal master of Chicago, will begin his work early in September. Alexander Roman, internationally known for his success as a performer and teacher, as the head of the violin department, is succeeding in bringing to the college some of the most noted violinists of the city as students.

Gabriel Ravenelle, recently of New York City, has been added to direct the dramatic department. To meet the many demands for drama and its kindred subjects the college, which has heretofore been devoted exclusively to music, feels very fortunate in securing Mr. Ravenelle to fill this chair. Classes in harmony, counterpoint, history of music, pantomime and ensemble work are being organised under capable direction. Dr. E. E. Davis, pupil of Leschetizky, will take personal charge of the piano department.

DEVELOPS U.S.C. COLLEGE OF MUSIC



Dean Walter Skeele

Since 1895, Walter F. Skeele has watched the growth of the College of Music of Southern California from two small rooms in the Liberal Arts Building to its present position as one of the largest collegiate conservatories of music in the western part of the country. Appointed as Dean of the College in 1898, Mr. Skeele has been largely responsible for the growth and improvement of musical education in Southern California.

Following his graduation from Amherst in 1888, Dean Skeele studied at the Oberlin Conservatory for several years. He was organist of the First Congregational Church in Chicago. Prior to coming to the University of Southern California he organized and directed the Albuquerque Conservatory of Music.

He is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi, Phi Mu Alpha, Pi Kappa Lambda, Rotary Club, Organists Guild, Musicians Club and Music Teachers Association.

for the Auditorium Theater on Sunday afternoon, the 21st inst., when eight popular Victor artists will appear in a concert given entirely in English.

The eight members of the Victor party are Henry Burr and Albert Campbell, tenors; John Meyer, baritone; Frank Croxton, basso; Monroe Silver, the "Cohen" story-teller; Rudy Wiedoeft, saxophonist; Frank Banta, pianist, and the famous laugh-provoker, Billy Murray. The Sterling Trio, composed of Campbell, Burr and Meyer, and the Peerless Quartet, composed of Campbell, Burr, Meyer and Croxton, will give several trio and quartet selections. The program will contain many new selections which these artists have recently recorded.

Probably the best known of famous American tenors is Henry Burr. He is a former pupil of John Denis Mehan, and for some years was soloist of the famous choir at the Church of the Incarnation in New York.

The humorous work on the afternoon's program will be carried by Billy Murray and Monroe Silver, both of whom have been before the public for years, and both of whom have won repeated successes. Murray will sing some of the songs which have made him famous, and Silver, who is probably best known for his "Cohen on the Telephone" stories, will tell many of his Jewish dialect stories and sing some new original parodies.

John Meyer and Frank Croxton, the baritones of the party, have made music a life study. Croxton is rated by many American critics as one of the best American concert and oratorio baritones. He has sung with much success with the leading choral clubs and oratorio societies of the country, and has also appeared as soloist with the Chicago, New York, Boston and Philadelphia symphony orchestras and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

A feature of the event will be the saxophone selections by Rudy Wiedoeft, his mastery of difficult saxophone technique being a revelation. Frank Banta, youngest member of the party, has a hobby for jazzing [illegible] the piano.

SCHOOL OF BALLET OPENS TOMORROW

The Breon & Darrow School of Ballet in Hollywood, which has caused much favorable comment since the brilliant program which it recently presented at the Philharmonic Auditorium, will open its fall term tomorrow, when classes for every age and grade will be started. The Misses Beverly Breon and Virginia Darrow, who have already made names for themselves as excellent teachers as well as splendid dance artists, have planned much new and original material for the coming year. This will not only include the usual foundation in Russian ballet technique, but a variety of dance numbers arranged for picture and prologue work. A junior ballet is now being formed and new members will be selected from the most talented pupils of the fall classes, and these children will be used for club and theater programs.

SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION INCREASES FACULTY

With the ideals of self-development through artistic expression, the Emerson School of Self-expression is increasing its faculty, till with the opening of the fall term it will include students from all over Southern California, and many vocations will be represented.

The school has departments in expression, dancing and piano, and a complete course in business management. Recitals and programs of entertaining and diverse nature are a part of the curriculum. The school is three years old, with a constantly increasing enrollment.

WILL SING WITH LOCAL OPERA

Myrtle Aber Davis

That the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association is accomplishing its ideal of developing local talent was evidenced when it became known that Myrtle Aber Davis, a member of the chorus, had been assigned an important role in one of the operas to be presented by the civic association.

Miss Aber joined the chorus last winter for the purpose of keeping her voice in condition and for the opportunity of working under Alexander Bevani, who trained the chorus. Her voice stood out, however, and when last week one of the principals became ill, Miss Aber was given a tryout for the part which resulted in her being assigned to the role. She is to have the part of Bersi in "Andrea Chenier."

Asked whether she would continue an opera career, Miss Aber said: "That I do not know. It depends on the impression I make."

It is the purpose of the Los Angeles Civic Grand Opera Association to develop local talent for the performance as well as bring famous stars to this city. Several local singers who have had some experience in opera work have been assigned small roles.

It is the purpose of the opera association to present five performances starting October 6. Operas to be given are "Andrea Chenier," "Manon," "Romeo and Juliet," "La Traviata," "Gianni Schicchi" and "L'Amico Fritz." The following stars will appear: Claudia Muzio, Benjamin Gigli, Tito Schipa, Thalia Sabanieva, Jose Mojica, Giuseppe de Luca, Millo Picco, Louis d'Angelo and others.

CLARA ALONE WITH MANY

Clara Bow is now in Denver or its environs, busily enacting the feminine lead in "The Birth of the West." She is the only girl in the cast, or rather, the only female. The producers have provided two maids to look after her.

MUSICIANS AND THEIR ACTIVITIES

Grace Adele Freeby, pianist, was the accompanist for Arthur Wallenstein, 'cellist, at the Bowl, and has received most flattering comments for her beautiful ensemble work. Miss Freebey has resumed her teaching since her summer vacation.

Agnes Osborn Carter is planning a series of recitals for the coming season in which several of her artist pupils will be presented. Misses Ellen Grace Lee and Eleanor Devin will give the first recital. Mrs. Carter expects to be heard in recital this year.

After a summer spent in British Columbia, Isobel Tone, teacher of the Dunning System for beginners in piano, has opened a new residence at 626 South Catalina street. Her class has grown to such dimensions that larger studios have become a necessity. She will open her school September 15.

The Gaylord Trio played in the lounge of the Gaylord Apartments last Sunday afternoon, presenting a program of unusual and serious beauty.

Having made an extensive tour of the Eastern music centers, Hugo Kirchhofer, well-known music director of the Orpheus Club of Los Angeles, arrived home last week. His face beaming with that broad Kirchhofer smile, he slipped off the train with a merry hurrah at the sight of his Orpheus Club boys, and friends who met the train to welcome him home. The Orpheus Club, which opens a new season next month, considers itself especially fortunate in again having Mr. Kirchhoffer, who is nationally known as a music director, for the coming season. His work is greatly appreciated by the people of Hollywood, where he is director of the Community Chorus, and head of the voice department of the Hollywood Conservatory.

Ruth May Shaffner is vacationing in the northern part of the State. The latter part of the month, Miss Shaffner will again visit in the north, this time to fill an engagement with the San Francisco Civic Opera Association.

The Bertha Vaughn Studios will reopen September 1. The dates have been set for the series of morning musicales, which were such a social and musical success last year, and which will be repeated this coming season. Informal Saturday afternoon teas, for studio folk, will also be an innovation.

Like a magnet, teachers of voice are attracting students to this city from all parts of the world. Within the last two weeks, Otto Morando, voice teacher, has enrolled students from almost every point o fthe compass, one coming all the way from Paris, another from Calgary, another from Toronto, two from New York and one from far-away New Zealand.

ALLENE RAY HOME AGAIN

Allene Ray has returned to Los Angeles after a brief vacation at Del Monte. While at the famous summer resort Miss Ray read the working script of her next serial, and she will now prepare her wardrobe for the forthcoming chapter film.

HER SCHOOL TEACHES COSTUME DESIGNING

Mrs. Ethel E. Wolfe

Distinguished for the success of its graduates! This terse phrase, characteristic of Wolfe School of Costume Designing, tells best the record of this established Los Angeles school of design.

Because of the practical production of gowns and garments as well as their artistic design, both of which are stressed in this school, the students of Wolfe School of Costume Designing are well trained in the commercial design and production of garments. Theory and technique are taught in their entirety.

Costume designing, pattern drafting, fur cutting, creation of fashions, millinery, French draping and magazine and newspaper illustrating are given in Wolfe School of Costume Designing in complete courses that issue diplomas for full professional work.

Mme. Ethel E. Wolfe, fashion expert and public lecturer on the subject of "Costume Design in the Better Garments," is principal of the school. Embraced in the faculty of this school are Mme. Elly Charette, modiste; Jeanne Kent, teacher of millinery design and production; Cita Miller, magazine and newspaper illustrating; Leah Middleton, pattern drafting and fur cutting, and Merle Richardson, fashion sketching and painting.

WILL BUILD IRISH CASTLE

Architect Francis Joseph Norton has completed plans for a beautiful Irish castle to be erected for Miss Chan at Avenue No. 49 and Lincoln street, near York Boulevard, Highland Park. It will have nine rooms, two stories and basement, exterior stucco, with tile trimmings and stained glass decorations, hardwood floors and all modern improvements. Work on the first section has started. The same architect has completed plans and is letting contracts for a modern five-room bungalow at 3551 East Fourth street for Mr. and Mrs. Colbeck. Norton also is letting contracts for a five-room bungalow to be erected at 150 West Ninety-first street, for Mrs. Alice Moje, and is preparing plans for a four-flat building to be erected at Thirty-eighth and Pacific avenue, Los Angeles Harbor.

THE TREND OF MUSIC AT THE THEATERS

Orange Grove

The collaboration of two such musical spirits as Harry Carroll, composer, and Arthur Kay, orchestral conductor, will probably make "Harry Carroll's Pickings" at the new Orange Grove Theater the mecca for the lovers of good music of the tuneful variety.

Carroll's music for the musical revue, which opened at the newly named theater last night, is brilliant and catchy. Such numbers as "Mission Bells" and "Hot Steps" are particularly pleasing.

The last ounce of beauty is drained from the music by the orchestra under the masterful direction of Kay, who is one of the best known orchestra directors in Los Angeles, with a large personal following among music lovers who have known him and his work in the motion-picture theaters here.

Morosco

"Light, bright and snappy is the sort of music required for between acts music at the performance of such a weird mystery play as 'The Cat and the Canary,'" says J. N. Laraia, director of music at the Morosco.

So his list of offerings for the thirteenth week of the show, which begins with tomorrow's matinee, includes pieces like Berlin's "Lazy," Goldman's "On the Man," Nacio Brown's "Hoodoo Man" and Kern's melodious "Stepping Stones."

Lipschultz Debut at Loew's

Music-lovers here have an interesting week of concert promised in the local debut of Lipschultz at Loew's State Theater. "The American Kreisler," as he has been billed wherever his splendid playing has been heard, comes direct from San Francisco triumphs and should provide a season of interesting programs, judging from the selections he is making for the forthcoming weeks.

His opening bill will be the "Carmen" overture by Bizet, and for his own violin solo Lipschultz has selected Rehfeld's "Spanish Dance." Mr. Lipschultz is a graduate of conservatories of music throughout Europe, and has an international reputation as violin soloist and conductor of symphony orchestras. Under Lipschultz the Loew State music masters will consist of talented artists picked from the ranks of the United States. The opening concert will be featured with Norma Talmadge in "Secrets."

Cameo

An interesting orchestration of bits for the flute and the horn makes a remarkable semblance of the music of a calliope, in the score which Ted Henkel, director of the orchestra at the Cameo, has prepared for "The Sawdust Trail," which opens today at that show shop.

The picture is a story of circus life, starring "Hoot" Gibson.

CHILD DANCER WINS PRAISE

Mary Smith

Little Mary Smith, for several years a pupil at the Ritter School of Dancing, has appeared at many prominent events, winning unusual praise for her splendid technique and piquant manner. She will appear at several school affairs during the coming season.

The Charlotte Ritter School of Expression is located in Culver City. Expression, music, dancing, French, art and literature are among the courses offered. Not only does the school train professionally, but it affords an avenue to those who desire these accomplishments but do not care to follow them as a vocation.

PILGRIMAGE PLAY ONLY A WEEK MORE

It is always with a high degree of regret that the Pilgrimage Play closes its season. The remarkable depiction of the world's greatest story, staged in its picturesque setting amidst the hills of Hollywood, in a natural amphitheater of impressive beauty, has taken its place as one of the wonders of California.

The Pilgrimage Play, life of the Christ, will enter its tenth and final week of its fifth annual season's presentation tomorrow night.

Simple and easy to understand in its lines and action, the Pilgrimage Play is powerful in its meaning, its lines and characters being enacted hold an indominable charm of influence over the audience, and for minutes at a time, when there are soft and scarcely audible words being spoken, it is only the song of the night birds or the chatter of crickets that can be heard.

Vividly adding to the realism and fascination of the play are the trees and rugged shrubs in the background of the beautiful production, over which are flooded colored lights increasing the spectacular aspect of the many beauteous scenes.

The success of the Pilgrimage Play since the very beginning has been one of effective growth, and this, the fifth season in the history of this wonderful pageant spectacle, has been marked by a continued and sustained interest with a steadily increasing attendance.

MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Alex B. Francis has worked in many varied capacities in his life time. He has been a soldier, a lawyer, an actor, a farm hand, a hospital interne, and a chorus man.

FORMS OWN DANCE SCHOOL

Mrs. Gertrude Moore

Mrs. Gertrude C. Moore of the Moore-Gaymore School of Dancing, says that to the dancer, like the singer, the question of breath is an important one. How to increase the lung capacity, breathe correctly and control the breath to the best advantage should be a part of all dance training. Mrs. Moore bases her statement upon knowledge gained through her own study of voice and dramatics, a most helpful adjunct. She will be remembered by her many years connection as director of Denishawn School of Dancing.

DEVELOPS PHYSIQUE BY "SILENT SINGING"

Mme. Irwin Kellogg

Mme. Irwin Kellogg, who will open a residence studio at 1131 Queen Ann Place, came here recently from San Francisco, where three of her pupils were soloists in the University Glee Club, seven were soloists of high school operas and many were church and concert singers.

Last year Mme. Kellogg was director of the Cecilia Music Club of Long Beach, which gave a concert in Los Angeles during Music Week. Other activities of like nature are planned by the club for this year.

A new feature of Mme. Kellogg's is a short course which she calls "silent singing." She claims that in many cases this method will eve nrestore impaired voices, and will materially benefit anyone, whether they sing or not.

Mme. Kellogg said that anyone could in six lessons learn the breathing exercises which would develop a singer's physique.

"Singers are taught to conserve their strength for singing, and take no exhausting physical training; only scientific breathing exercises," said Mme. Kellogg. "These studies have been discovered by the great singing masters, and can be presented to the business man or woman as well as the operatic aspirant. It is merely a matter of learning chest expansion, breath control and relaxation, and these things will build up the health to the highest degree."

A FAIR BOXER

Helen Lynch has taken up boxing as an exercise since she played one of the featured roles with Reginald Denny in the Universal production, "Oh, Doctor." As the athletic society girl in "Oh, Doctor," Miss Lynch stepped several rounds with Denny, swam a hundred yards at full speed, and also indulged in a basket-ball game. She found she lost seven pounds in the boxing episodes, and now she is doing her daily dozen in an improvised boxing arena at her home, and has knocked out several of her neighbors, according to strict Marquis of Queensbury rules.

I Found the Way to Health in a Country Drug Store

Story of a Rich City Banker's Wife Who Had Been Ailing, Complaining and Doctoring for Years

"For years neither my husband nor I got any enjoyment out of life because of my ill health. I was always ailing, nervous, weak and run-down; never actually bed-ridden but life seemed just one ailment after another. Headaches one day, stomach upset the next, dizzy spells, pains in the back, colds and neuralgia. One day I would think I had heart trouble because of pains around the heart, another time I would have all the symptoms of kidney trouble with a dull aching back. My lips and cheeks were pale and sallow and I looked years older than my right age.

"One day in a little village drug store, the druggist, a kindly old man, said to me, 'You surely look all run-down and anaemic. Until you get your veins full of rich, red blood and the color back in your lips and cheeks, you'll always be doctoring for one pain and ache after another. Your blood is thin, pale and watery for lack of iron and when your blood lacks iron your food simply passes thru you without doing you any good. All your vital organs are starved for nourishment and you get these symptoms of dangerous disease.

"'You take an old druggist's advice and put some iron into your blood. The best thing is Nuxated Iron, because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood. I have recommended it to hundreds right here in this little village and it often makes an astonishing improvement in even the worst cases.'

"I took the druggist's advice and in two weeks I felt like a different woman. Even in that short time the color of health had come back to my face, I felt and looked years younger, and the old tired-out feeling was gone. That was three years ago and I have never had a sick day since. I am surely grateful to the druggist who showed me the way back to health and strength."

This is one of thousands of typical hypothetical cases which might be written showing the results that have been achieved thru the use of Nuxated Iron which may be obtained from any druggist in this city. Be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron which is true food iron ready for immediate absorption and assimilation by your blood, and not one of the old forms of metallic iron which many physicians say is not absorbed at all.

Rich American Girl Has Appendix Removed

Stricken With Appendicitis While in London

A special newspaper dispatch states that the young American heiress, Miss Rosemary Baur, was stricken with appendicitis while in London. She was operated by the best surgeon in England and her recovery is expected.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. The same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows: [illegible] acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports from Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. P. (Name given on request.)

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett. [illegible]—[Advertisement.]

COMBINES ART WITH BUSINESS

Theatrical Artist Has Happy Situation Where Ideas Have Play

That there is a continual striving for advancement in the heart of every commercial artist was made clear by Ingvard Jensen, staff artist of the California and Miller theaters, when he unburdened his mind the other day.

"I really don't believe that there is a commercial artist in this country, from the best to the poorest, who doesn't deep in his soul harbor an ambition to get out of his field and paint or draw for his own satisfaction. Commercial artists work under a terrific handicap when the urge to do something better comes over them. The man for whom they work has an idea he wants to put over with the public, and although the artist may not have the technique to do the work, he has to do the best he can. The result in cases like this is usually pitiful, as far as artistic value is concerned."

"My work is somewhat different from the usual run of artists who make their living with a brush. Managing Director Charles Wuerz of the California and Miller theaters gives me free rein. One week I may feel like making the lobby portraits in charcoal. Perhaps the next week I use either oil or pastel. Mr. Wuerz has told me to use whatever ideas I have in mind for the lobby display, and almost every week I try out some new combinations of color or treatment. In this way I get away from the deadly monotony that is prevalent in most theater lobbies."

Jensen is an artist of the old school. He began his serious study of art in Munich, Germany, over twenty years ago. Upon his return to this country he worked as a free-lance artist in New York, where his work is well known.

Knowing that he could never break out of the New York commercial rut, he came to California, where he was not so well known. Here he has ample time to paint what he likes.

Jensen has received many compliments for his artistic handling of the California lobby on the current attraction, and the stars of the production have put in bids for the portraits as soon as the picture closes.

Carewe Film Retains Its First Title

Edwin Carewe's latest picture for First National will be released under the title of "Madonna of the Streets." This was the original title given the picture. Many other titles were suggested and some of them were even used in publicity during the filming of the story. However it was agreed that "Madonna of the Streets" best fitted the story which was adapted from the novel, "The Ragged Messenger" by W. B. Maxwell, an English author. Carewe is now in the last stages of cutting the picture and expects to get the negative away to New York in a few days. Release of the picture is scheduled for early fall. The story takes place in London with most of the action in the notorious Limehouse district. Nazimova makes her return bow to the screen in this play and she is co-featured with Milton Sills.

PLAYING THE GAME IS WHAT ATTRACTS

MOTIVE IS EVERYTHING IN CROOK PLAYS, SAYS CREATOR

"Why is the criminal in 'The Bat' so absorbingly interesting?" was the question put to Effie Ellsler, now playing the role she created and played for 137 weeks in New York City in "The Bat."

"The crime as well as the criminal must be of a type that lends itself primarily to dramatic treatments," was the quick reply. "All crimes are not dramatically interesting. When the dramatist seeks material for a play like 'The Bat' he must choose a master criminal who thrills with the keenness of his own power to outwit detection up to a point where the mind of the audience is keyed up to the pitch of the clever crook. For instance, stealing for the motive of actual want would not be dramatically interesting in a crook play. The person must be one of the type described by St. Augustin nearly 2000 years ago as 'one who thieves for the actual love of thieving.'"

There will be an extra Sunday night performance of "The Bat," now being presented at the Playhouse by Louis O. Macloon, tonight and succeeding Sunday nights during its run.

CLASSICAL DANCING AID TO REDUCING

Dainty Marie, the perfect-figured aerialist, who comes to the Hillstreet this week, has her own instructions to women who want to reduce.

"This is not one of the usual physical culture schemes," says Miss Marie. "I have a scientific method which any woman can observe with one lesson and practice in her own home, and I claim that I can reduce any particular portion of my body, merely because my demonstration shows just how to apply force to the particular part required.

"I do not believe in diet for reducing," continues Dainty Marie, "because it is too weakening. Drugs, of course, are out of the question. The only healthy and sane way to get rid of flesh is to break the tissues where the fat accumulates. The application of the necessary force will do this and leave the skin clear and firm, and the lines of the figure in glowing, graceful proportions.

"My method consists of classical dancing, because plain exercise is too easy to forget and too hard to continue with. Almost everyone has a victrola in their home. All you have to do is put on any record and try to dance the ancient Greek steps. I can guarantee that in one month, a very noticeable difference may be noticed in any one who is diligent enough to keep at it."

LYRICS OF STAGE NOT COMPOSED

Popular Songs Usually 'Just Happen,' Says Writer of Theatrical Hits

Ballard Macdonald, who wrote the book and lyrics for "Harry Carroll's Pickings," now playing at the new Orange Grove Theater, was asked the other day how to go about writing the lyrics for a popular song.

"Ask me something easy," he said "I'm at it all the time, and I know of no formula.

"First, of course, there is need for a good swingy rythm in your verse. Of course, it must fit the rythm of the music. And the sentiment of it? Well, that may be anything, from pure silly fun, to straight love stuff, or the pathetic, which, I'm afraid, in most cases is likely to become the bathetic.

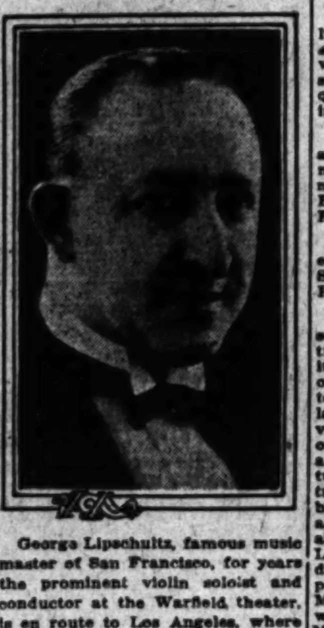
"And there should be as much sense as possible in it. The good Lord knows enough songs are written and get published, in which you couldn't find the sense with a movie sun-arc. They sound fine, Alexander, but they don't mean anything.

"And the 'book' of a musical revue or musical comedy? Man, don't poke!

"Those aren't written; they're arrived at through chance grasping at the wings of the god Luck. Having got a bit of the down from the wing, you sweat like a fool for a few days or weeks, before and during rehearsals, and then you trust to whatever gods there be that it will have a laugh in it every other line.

"Musical revue 'books' aren't written. They are manufactured, and out of so many different kinds of material it is a wonder they don't all look like literary crazy quilts by the time they are produced."

LIPSCHULTZ NOW AT LOWES



George Lipschultz, famous music master of San Francisco, for years the prominent violin soloist and conductor at the Warfield theater, is en route to Los Angeles, where he is to conduct the orchestra and guide the musical destinies of Lowe's State Theater.

Mr. Lipschultz, before coming to San Francisco, was concert master and first violin soloist for Victor Herbert. He was in charge of all the music activities of the Schlitz interests in Milwaukee, both in their theaters and in the musical organizations which they maintained and furthered in the eastern city. Lipschultz was originally trained by a musician father for the concert stage and has been acclaimed the premier violinist of Western America. He has served longer in San Francisco than any man in the history of the musical activities, save perhaps Alfred Hertz. His success at the Warfield has been one of the enviable features in San Francisco theatricals.

Arthur Kay, present conductor at Lowe's State, is giving up his post in order to devote himself to extensive work in scoring and synchronization of feature pictures. The coming of Lipschultz should be a red letter event in the life of Los Angeles music lovers. Those, who from time to time have heard him in San Francisco may well be his couriers en avant, for his violin playing is of the finest, his technique and musicianship and tone splendid.

As a matter of fact Lipschultz was for many moons urged to go in for concert work, Selby Oppenheimer, San Francisco impresario being his most steady adviser in this respect. He is a conductor of dynamic force and has a splendid understanding of the needs of motion picture theater music.

Music Cued By Hint of Character of Scene

Clarence Brown, producer-director of Universal-Jewels, has introduced another innovation on the set: he cues his musicians before each scene by giving them a word-description of the action to be shot. Paul Finestein, who leads the set-orchestra for Brown, has arranged several hundred musical compositions so that they fall into a given number of emotional and dramatic categories.

For example, Brown directed a sequence the other day in which a couple of factory girls discuss the love affair of their employer, played by Pauline Frederick, and a young man who has risen from the ranks in the same factory, Malcolm McGregor. The director's cue to the orchestra was "Scandal," and immediately the musicians [illegible]

From the results obtained in this picture to date—Brown has been shooting on this Cowan-Higgin original for about a fortnight now—the director is convinced that much additional value can be gained by this method of co-operation between himself and the set musicians. Besides those mentioned, the other leading players in Brown's cast include Laura La Plante and Tully Marshall.

A TRIUMPHANT PRODIGAL

A new comedian will make his bid for public favor at the Biltmore Theater Sunday night when Eddie Dowling, star of "Sally, Irene and Mary," the New York musical comedy success, makes his first appearance here on the stage. Dowling has been here before, but not as an actor. Five years ago he lived here for almost a year writing scenarios. He wasn't well known then, but in three years' time he has become one of the best-known comedians in the East.

Vaudeville patrons on the big-time circuits in the East have known Dowling for years as a popular entertainer. He wrote his own sketches and played them as he wanted them played. It was on the vaudeville stage that "Sally, Irene and Mary" started as a playlet. Its success was so great that Dowling was induced to elaborate it into a full-sized evening's entertainment.

"Sally, Irene and Mary" attained success right from the start, and it was chiefly the work of Dowling in the principal male role that made this musical play famous. He could sing and dance and had a way of scoring his points that seemed natural and easy.

Dowling is a boyish-looking chap, modest and anxious to please. His trip to the Coast was planned at his own solicitation. He knows he pleases playgoers in the East, and he wants to enlarge his following by pleasing those in the West. He knows the people he writes about, and that is what he has put in "Sally, Irene and Mary," every-day impulses of common, ordinary people.

LOS ANGELES NEEDS CIVIC SCULPTURE

Sculpture has been forgotten in Los Angeles! No, it is even worse than that, Los Angeles never did think of sculpture. Sculpture, the noblest, most enduring of the arts and a whole city that never thinks of it. Sculpture is one of the greatest miracles of the human spirit, man giving breath to stone—and a whole city is content to live without this miracle on its streets and public places.

The people who love sculpture love form, order and beauty and they want them to endure forever. The great relics of the past, the magiv keys which unlock the secrets of forgotten civilizations are works of sculpture. If Los Angeles were buried today in some tremendous upheaval of the earth's crust, by what would she be remembered? No archaeologist of the future would dig among our bones seeking the spirit of the people of Los Angeles. He would quickly decide that we were a people living only for the things of the moment and history would forget us.

The foregoing thoughts were expressed by Marius de Brabant, honored citizen who in addition to his work with the Union Pacific, his services to Los Angeles Harbor and Los Angeles city bonds, finds time for Los Angeles art and artists. De Brabant realizes the tragic fate of a city without art, and knows that if Los Angeles does not cultivate art, art will leave Los Angeles, and he is bending every effort that a busy life allows him, to awaken in the leaders of civic life a realization of the appalling absence of art in Los Angeles.

Our sculptors are forced into the soul-destroying business of making plaster casts for standard ornaments or turning out tombstones. It is shameful! They should be at work carving their immortal fancy on the stone facades of public buildings. They should be employed by the city in beautifying the public parks or carving public drinking fountains. There are thousands of places where sculpture is an absolute necessity if this tremendous city is ever to be humanized.

For some time past the Chamber of Commerce has cherished the idea of having a portrait bust in bronze of Frank Wiggins, their well-beloved secretary. An excellent idea, but as civic sculpture goes in a city that has learned to appreciate the tremendous importance of sculpture to a community, not a very great project. Yet the shameful thing is that this one comparatively small commission has caused an agitation among the profession very curious to contemplate. Every sculptor wants the job, not because he is filled with a burning passion to model a bust of Frank Wiggins but because this is the only commission in sight. This is his only chance to show what he can do, and more horrible yet, one of his few to make a little money.

I may be wounding the sculptors' pride by thus exposing the skeleton in the closet, but if only it will awaken in a few citizens the realization that if Los Angeles does not find a place for the sculptor he will shake her dust from off his feet or starve to death, the profession can bear the smart of its wounded feelings.

Sculpture is not the ornament on a tombstone. Sculpture is something infinitely greater than a portrait bust of any one individual, no matter how excellent or beloved. Sculpture is an act of worship. The mind of the sculptor is filled with beautiful forms seeking expression in stone or metal. The sculptor longs to praise God in stone. A city filled with fine sculpture is a city of man whose thoughts are constantly being turned toward the wonder of life, the nobility of the human form and the glory of God. Surely these are better thoughts than the increasing value of real estate or the intricacies of a new dance step.

Sculpture and gardens, one would expect Los Angeles to be a sculptor's paradise but she is not. Perhaps there is some unconscious fear in our people that sculpture is a remnant of idolatry. Perhaps our machine-made, standardized civilization crushes the feeling for beautiful forms, the handiwork of sensitive artists. Perhaps these things are so, but far more likely is it that the busy men who lead the way in our civic government have not been pierced to the heart with the tragedy of a city without art. They are too occupied with private and public problems of an immediat nature to notice, as they drive about the boulevards and parks, that the city of Los Angeles has failed to display her gratitude to God for her climate, her fertility, her natural God-given beauties—all of which have helped to make their fortunes—by adorning herself with enduring works of art.

All who have the interests of art at heart must work for a future Los Angeles, beautified and adorned by the cunning hands of her own artists. Remember that the men who vote appropriations for civic art are not going to think of such things unless you, the art lovers of Los Angeles tell them so. Is there a park in your neighborhood that needs a beautiful fountain, a street corner that would take on new significance if it were beautified by a piece of sculpture? Then talk to your neighbors about it. Point out to them what a shame it is that their children on their way to school do not receive the invaluable impressions of fine works of art. Agitate for it, call neighborhood meetings about it, and then deluge your Councilmen with demands for sculpture. Then realize that you want art, and you will get it.

The art committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which Marius De Brabant is chairman, was formed some time since, and its ideal is to so change the city constitution that the Los Angeles Art Commission, whose activities are at present limited to the height and alignment of buildings, shall be made into a body capable of planning civic art projects to beautify our city. That surely is worth working for also. Then there will be murals in our public buildings, the city will acquire fine paintings and art will flourish in Los Angeles. Such an art commission is worth working for, and if you have any influence, use it. Otherwise we shall have to wait for an earthquake, as San Francisco did, before we bring art into our civic life.

SCULPTORS COMPETE FOR WIGGINS BUST

At the invitation of a committee consisting of Marius De Brabant, Miss Helen Wisler of the Biltmore salon, William Lacy, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and William Dodd, the sculptors of Los Angeles, nine of whom were present, met at the Biltmore salon on the 2nd inst., to discuss the problem of who was best fitted to make a bust of Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. The outcome of a long discussion was a competitive exhibition of portrait sculpture to be held at the Biltmore salon on Monday, the 15th inst. On that day a committee from the Allied Architects will decide from the work shown who they believe best fitted to undertake the commission.

An invitation to compete has been sent out to all the known sculptors of the district, and the competition should be of great interest not only to the Chamber of Commerce, but to the public, who will have an opportunity of seeing in a central location what the sculptors of Los Angeles can do.

FOREIGN EXHIBIT TO CLOSE SHORTLY

The 14th inst., is the closing date of the Carnegie Institute traveling exhibit at Exposition Park. This is about the most notable group of paintings ever brought to Los Angeles, the only western city in which they will be exhibited. Everybody who has failed to visit the museum so far should make it a point to go out this week. All who have seen the pictures will do well to take a farewell look at them. Remember that the attendance recorded for such exhibitions determines whether such important exhibits will continue to be brought here or not, so let us all endeavor to break the attendance record and show the museum directors and the county officials that Los Angeles appreciates such efforts and expense.

It must not be forgotten that many of the pictures are available for purchase, and there are opportunities in this exhibit to secure for private or public collections works of art of first importance.

Lovins Murals in Hollywood

Henry Lovins of Los Angeles, who for some years past occupied one of the beautiful buildings in Balboa Park, San Diego, is exhibiting a group of his Maya and Aztec murals in the art gallery of the Hollywood Public Library.

This artist enjoyed exceptional opportunities to study the ancient carvings of the Maya race, and has used their designs and symbolism as the basic for a decorative art which he applies to modern houses.

He has performed many important commissions among which are the murals for the California State Building in Balboa Park, and the entire decoration of the Wilshire Park Country Club.

Lovins believes that to find a starting point for a true American art we must look to those art forms which are products of the soil of this continent, rather than to the traditions of European painting. Whether this theory matters or not, you will find much food for thought in his designs for windows, doors and tiles if you pay a visit to the Hollywood Library.

In the Galleries

Four paintings by that veteran of American art, Thomas Moran, are on exhibition at the Biltmore Salon. Moran has a long and honorable career behind him, and has brought over into our own generation a tradition of craftsmanship invaluable to present-day painters. If you study the pictures shown, you will notice the unusually transparent color gained by painting over a ground of white with pure colors unmixed with white. This, of course, has little to do with the enjoyment of the canvases themselves, any one of which has innumerable satisfactions for the lover of imaginative painting.

Look at "The Valley." Observe the grandeur of this desert canyon where huge red volcanic rock walls tower above the dry torrent bed. How this man makes us feel the immensity, the dry air, the ecstasy to be found nowhere but in the sterile, sun-baked, pitiless desert. Perhaps the early Christian fathers found something else in the desert besides mortification of the flesh. I think much of their ecstasy—far more than they would ever have dared admit to themselves—was the ecstasy of sun worship. We of the West know something of this form of rapture, and Thomas Moran knows also, for his western pictures are full of it.

"The Owls," painted in Mexico in 1917, is a thrilling canvas. The perfectly satisfactory arrangement of this Roman arch and the old tower, sun-gilded against the evening sky, the deep shady masses of tree foliage, hiding the gully, make a picture to live in the memory.

There is also a fine example of Moran's Venetian series and two other western pictures.

How to Make Grape Jelly in 15 Minutes

By Ann Procter

The most delicious grape jelly you ever tasted—chock full of the natural color and flavor—can be made at home by anyone within 15 minutes after the fruit is crushed and squeezed. I use the CERTO method because it takes only one-half minute's boiling, thus saving flavor and color, never fails, permits the use of full-ripe grapes, and is cheaper because I get one-half more jelly from the same amount of grapes.

To make 11 large glasses of grape jelly, use this simple recipe:

Stem and crush thoroughly about 3 lbs. ripe grapes. Add ½ cup water, stir until boiling and simmer 10 minutes in closely covered saucepan. Place fruit in cheese cloth bag and squeeze out juice. Then drip juice through cotton flannel bag if a sparkling jelly is desired. Measure 7 level cups (3½ lbs.) sugar and 4 cups (2 lbs.) juice from cooked fruit into large saucepan, stir and bring to a boil. At once add 1 bottle (scant cup) CERTO, stirring constantly and bring again to a full boil for ½ minute. Remove from fire, let stand 1 minute, skim and pour quickly.

By this short "CERTO Process" you save all the flavor and color that was boiled away by the old method. Time and worry are also saved and you have 5 lbs. of jelly from 2 lbs. of grape juice as against 3 lbs. of jelly by the old method; and the cost with 20c grapes and 10c sugar is less than 10c per glass.

CERTO is simply the "jell" property of fruit, refined and concentrated. It contains no gelatine or preservative and is sold by grocers everywhere.

The above recipe and nearly 100 others for making delicious jellies and jams by the "CERTO Process" are found in the CERTO Book of Recipes, a copy of which is attached to every bottle of CERTO. Be sure to try the CERTO recipe for grape jam, heretofore considered impossible to make.

Use CERTO this year in making all your jams and jellies. It saves time, worry and boiling. The "CERTO Process" never fails and saves money, because you make one-half more jelly from the same amount of fruit; it is endorsed by national authorities and housewives everywhere. Jelly and jam made with CERTO keep perfectly.—[Advertisement.

Quick Way to Make Hair Beautifully Wavy

The heated iron makes the hair dry and parched looking, burns off the ends, giving a most untidy appearance. You who have learned this from experience will be glad to hear of a very simple method which is open to none of the objections referred to and which gives better results than the curling iron for either bobbed or long hair.

Just get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine at your druggist's and apply a little with a brush before doing up the hair. Your hair will be as beautifully wavy and curly as though Mother Nature did it, and it will be quite manageable, no matter what style of coiffure you adopt. The effect will be much prettier than if you used a waving iron, will last much longer, and the health of your hair will not suffer. Silmerine is not sticky or greasy, but is quite pleasant to use.—[Advertisement.

BACK IN FAMILIAR DIRT

And "Times" Art Critic Confesses That He's Glad to See America Again

BY ANTONY ANDERSON

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—There are many Americans left in Norway, even though yours truly finds himself in New York (glad, if the truth must be told, to wade through familiar dirt again.)

In Christiania you may hear on every hand the words "Amerika" and "Amerikaner" from the lips of the people on the streets. A few weeks ago the city was agog over the concert given on St. Hans Haugen (Hill) by Mennerchoren from Chicago. After Mennerchoren, who had to sing in the rain, we had the Glee Club of the University of California. Christiania, you will observe, is a very cosmopolitan city, staunchly pro-American.

Apparently there is no day without its clouds in Norway and during my stay there I saw only one day without its rain. Sometimes just a gentle drizzle, to be sure, and very brief, but indubitably rain. "Unusual weather," say the natives, like the natives of every country all the world over. In London my week was warm, almost hot, with none of the dense brown fogs we read about in every English novel from "Vanity Fair" to the "Masquerader." But London had "unusual weather," they told me, and I left wholly disillusioned and disappointed.

But the rain holds no terrors for the Norwegian. With blithe recklessness he wears his straw hat, even when he snuggles under a raincoat. His bravado and vanity are so much like my own that I chuckle inwardly when I look at him, and check an almost irresistible impulse to rush forward and seize him by the hand, shouting, "Hail, brother, true son of the vikings!" Almost every other man wears a straw hat in Norway. In London nobody wears one. Will the psychoanalist tell me why this is thus?

TRANSLATE EVERYTHING

I used to wonder why publishers were so circumspect in the matter of warning book pirates against unauthorized translations of novels into foreign languages, never forgetting to add, with emphasis, "including the Scandinavian." I wonder no longer. Norwegian hack-writers, particularly translators, are the hardest-worked in the world. They translate every novel ever written in every language, including the American. Our novels, indeed, seem to be even more popular than the English variety, and Norwegians "eat up" Wild West stories. Zane Grey, James Oliver Curwood, Jack London and all the rest are displayed in every bookshop window, quite as often in the original as in translation.

But I saw no signs of Harold Bell Wright anywhere. Is this neglect of a popular American writer an indication of a high literary culture in Norway? Perhaps—and perhaps not. For much of the work translated is second and third rate, though some is of the highest order. I bought Edith Wharton's "Glimpses of the Moon," Sudermann's "Dame Care" and Hichen's "Barbary Sheep," all in excellent translations. (Not that I consider "Barbary Sheep" titled "Spahier" in Norwegian, a really first-rate novel.) I have also purchased Knut Hamsun's "Markens Grode" (growth of the soil) and I feel that I can't live without a Norwegian "Penrod."

Though Christiania is a city of somewhat less than 250,000 people, its literary provender is as diversified as that of any city in the world. The Norwegians constantly read books in English, French and German, and of course Swedish, though I have seen none in Spanish. Novels, as well as more serious books, in all these languages are on liberal display in every book-shop, and line the shelves inside. The shops are sometimes immense, tunnelling from one building into another. When you consider that some of the best literature of our time is being published in their own language, you will concede, I think, that the Norwegians have a cosmopolitan culture almost without a parallel.

Nor is this all. Weekly papers and monthly magazines from England, France, Germany and America, especially America—completely filled the windows of one shop near Storingen. And the windows are big. I saw the Literary Digest, Life, Punch, Revue des Deux Mondes, the Illustrated London News, Jugend, the Ladies' Home Companion, Ladies' Home Journal, the Scientific American, and so forth and so on, with numerous other French and German, English and American weekly and monthly journals, humorous and serious, and also magazines on art.

EAT AND DRINK, TOO

But lest you begin to think that Norwegians live by books instead of cooks, let me hasten to assure you that they eat and drink with as hearty a gusto as they devour novels and music. The restaurants in Christiania are big, numerous and good, the preferred ones facing Carl Johans Gade, and thus offering, from broad and lofty windows, an uninterrupted view of the passing throng—pretty girls, jaunty students, natty cadets, handsome matrons and solid (but not too, too solid, since the climate is a fat-reducer) business and professional men. On the whole, a remarkably good-looking lot of people—though you may take this statement with a grain of salt, since I am probably not quite unprejudiced.

They eat much meat and fish, but they also drink more port, bok, bayer and pilsener. "Spirits" are prohibited, but the lower classes—and some others—still manage to get gloriously drunk. I saw two drunken men and one drunken woman in one day, as against one drunken woman in London. But the London woman looked ten times more debased than any of the tipsy Norwegians — who, indeed, looked as respectable as anybody.

Pilsener is the favorite drink, and it is light enough to be imbibed, bottle after bottle, at breakfast, luncheon and dinner. Nobody but an American asks for water at meals. Then, of course, there is coffee, which the ladies often prefer to ale with their cigarettes. The feminie cigarette smokers are as expert and unabashed, in public or private, as English women.

MUSIC IS GOOD

The music at the cafes and restaurants is as good as the meat and drink, for the Norwegians are a musical people. Their eagerness to "import" singers from Berkeley and Chicago proves that, if any proof were needed. Another proof, and a much better one, is the high quality of their folk songs. Too, Norway produced Grieg, Kjerulf and Sinding. I never heard better jazz than that in a cafe just across the park from my hotel. The rhythm was perfect, far better than ours is as a rule. And the dancers had the easy grace of Americans, the best dancers in the world.

At a cafe on one of the islands in the fjord I ate the best meal of my career in Christiania. The singing, in French, was by women soloists, who looked French and English, never Norwegian. I had delicious fish, perfectly fried chicken, ambrosial coffee—all piping hot, contrary to my usual experience, where the waits before, between and after courses are so long that everything gets tepid before it arrives. Only one's temper is hot, as a rule.

You will perhaps pardon this monologue on cakes and ale if you stop to realize how important the question of food is to the traveler. No terra incognita, no uncharted sea, may prove more dangerous to comfort and safety—and perhaps even to life—than an unknown and unexplored foreign kitchen. I speak from an experience that, though brief, has been packed full of strange and disconcerting gustatory adventures.

OF INTEREST TO ARTISTS

esting group of moderate sized paintings is on exhibition. Murray Bewley's charming study of a little girl is one of the outstanding pictures.

There is a lone eucalyptus tree against a blue sky—a small picture by Alson Clark, which conveys a mood of Southern California that we all love but seldom see in a painting. William Wendt shows a canyon landscape composed with a deep respect for nature's architecture.

Constance Shockley is represented by one of her brilliant and original still life arrangements of flowers and china. Haldane Douglass shows one of the most successful pictures yet to come from his brush, and Henri de Kruif's water color is very luminous and colorful.

The Stendahl Galleries continue their exhibition of nineteenth century American paintings. This is one of the best opportunities we have had for some years to study a large group of the works of Francis J. Murphy, Blakelock, A. P. Ryder and other great eastern painters who flourished toward the close of the last century, and no one who loves American painting should miss this exhibit.

U. of C. Extension Course

A course in the appreciation and history of art, offered here by the University of California Extension Division, will be made especially interesting because of the use of lantern slides. Nellie Huntington Gere, the instructor, has one of the finest collections of lantern slides in the world and she will use these to illustrate her lectures. The course will compare all forms of art of different countries and from pre-historic times to the present. Art in the home, garden, shop and public building will also be discussed. One class in this subject meets for the first time Wednesday, September 24, from 10:30 to 12, in Room 614 Hillstreet Building. A second class meets Saturday, September 27, from 10:30 to 12, in Room 614 Hillstreet Building.

Students of art will also be interested in a new course in interior decoration offered by the university this year. This class will meet at Bullock's Department Store Tuesday, October 14, from 2 to 3:30 in the afternoon. Bernard C. Jakway, the instructor, has spent many years in this line of work in New York City and London.

Further information about any of the university courses may be obtained at 815 South Hill street. Anyone interested in the subjects may join these classes.

Art in the Sagebrush

The first exhibit of the Sagebrush Art Club, located in the Tujunga Valley, was held in the Laura Lee Sweet Studio during the Moon Festival and was successful beyond expectation.

Many hundreds of visitors came and admired the canvases, fifty in number, all painted by local artists.

Some of the exhibitors were Stanley Schultz, Perry MacNeely, Mrs. Nellie Horne, Emma Kraft, Mrs. Buttery, Mr. Peronet, Laura Lee Sweet and Clara Gard.

NOTABLES IN CAST OF "SINGLE WIVES"

SCREEN STARS GALORE IN PLAY NOW SHOWING AT ALHAMBRA

The cast of "Single Wives" the First National production that is now showing at the Alhambra Theater, is significant of the quality of this much discussed protodrama. Cofeaturing Corinne Griffith and Milton Sills, two of America's best beloved stars, the supporting cast is remarkable in that it contains names that have played prominent roles in the growth and development of the great amusement industry.

Kathlyn Williams, who is seen as Dorothy VanClark, is the best remembered heroine of that celebrated serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and will be recalled as Cherry Malotte in the original "Spoilers." Lou Tellegen, whose work on the legitimate stage with Duse, Bernhardt and Rejane placed him with the world's great actors, recently was starred on Broadway in "Blind Youth."

Henry B. Walthall portrays the role of Dexter, whose love for Dorothy VanClark creates chaos in the double triangle of the story. Phyllis Haver, possessor of the celebrated bathing-suit figure, plays opposite John Patrick, the likeable drunk of "Flaming Youth."

The comedy, "The First Hundred Years," Larry Semon's latest, rounds out the program.

JULANNE AIRPLANES

Julanne Johnston took an airplane express from Berlin to Paris and from Paris to London in order to reach the British capital in time to commence work on her present production being made in England and Switzerland.

CARNEGIE PICTURES PLEASING

Impressions of the Traveling Exhibit by an Art Lover

BY J. BALDWIN HAZELTON

I am a lover of art and yet, although I have lived for six years in or near Los Angeles, I have just paid my first visit to the art exhibitions at Exposition Park, to see the traveling exhibit from the twenty-third international exhibition of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg.

The pictures that I found on the walls of the museum are now all mine. Oh, no, I didn't steal them; much less buy them. The transfer was effected by a perfectly harmless and inexpensive method—from the eye to the brain and the memory. Not even a notebook, just looking and looking. Here they are on the walls of my mental house, hanging in the very orders in which they hang in the exhibit room. In the same way can they become the property of any man to whom eyesight has been spared and sufficient strength to get to the museum. Of course, the looking must be long and intensive; one cannot treasure up mental images of paintings by a hasty survey. Each picture must to be to us a shrine at which we linger to wonder and worship before passing on to the next.

Time will, of course, fade some of our memory pictures. It will be a long time, however, before those we love best will be lost to us. I am sure that I shall have continued possession of the view through the window near the Port of Honfleur, a gem in greens and grays by Henri Eugene di Sidaner; tow old Viking boats half buried in the snows. A Northland Study by Anna Boberg; Tito Cittandini's Mountain of Spain golden in glorious morning light; the Grandmother by Ramon de Zubiaurre; Prinet's Breakfast on the Grass, a charming glimpse of French life, all blant of love, gaiety, and the beauty of Nature; Laura Knight's Daughter of Eve, a laughing maiden in red holding in her dainty hands the symbolic apple; and that other magnificent woman in red who holds the place of honor in the exhibit. Clad in a gorgeous gown of garnet, she sits erect, rapt, tense, with bow drawn across her beloved cello. These pictures and many more will long adorn my Hall of Memory.

Nor is the gathering of memory pictures the only result of a visit to the Carnegie Exhibition. The trip around the exhibit room of the foreign section becomes a trip through Europe. We pass through England, France, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Russia, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Sweden. We become acquainted with peasants, grandees, and artists; we meet children, women in their youth, grandmothers, lovers; we view mountains, rivers, valleys, woods; we go from the dazzling light of a bright morning to the dusk of evening; from the soft loveliness of spring to the bleakness of northern winters.

Thus may we all become art collectors and, best of all, thus may we be spiritually rebuilt.

Lets Players Work Out Own Acting Ideas

Critics have been unanimous in complimenting the evident "sincerity" of the acting in "A Girl of the Limberlost," Gene Stratton-Porter's own screen version of her novel, which is now in its third week at the Mission Theater. A similarly unanimous verdict was given last year when Mrs. Porter's first production, "Michael O'Halloran," was shown in Los Angeles.

James Leo Meehan, who directed "A Girl of the Limberlost," is a former newspaper man, a comparative newcomer in motion pictures, but who has some ideas of his own on the subject of how to make the work of actors appear convincing and sincere.

"Let the actors do the acting, is the brief way to explain my viewpoint," said Mr. Meehan. "In other words, I regard it as the director's job to present to a competent actor a definite logical situation or movement, and then insist upon the actor's working it out until he, the actor, has convinced himself that the situation or movement is logical and right. Meantime, the director puts himself in the place of the audience, to see whether or not the actor is selling or putting across his idea.

"One critic, in reviewing 'A Girl of the Limberlost' expressed surprise at the 'cattiness' displayed by Gertrude Olmstead in the part of Edith Carr, saying she didn't know Gertrude could be so catty. Miss Olmstead isn't naturally catty, of course. But like any observant girl, she knows how catty girls act. And having histrionic talent, she has the ability to portray catty character—or sweet character. When I told her what Edith Carr did, she knew Edith was catty—and she showed me how catty Edith acted.

Ready to Advertise

Dorothy had been praying each evening at bedtime for a baby sister. The other day, her mother while reading the paper exclaimed: "I see Mrs. Smith has a little daughter."

"How do you know that, mamma?" Dorothy inquired.

"It says so in the paper, dear."

"Read it to me."

Her mother read: "Born on July 2, to Mr. and Mrs.—— Smith, a daughter."

Dorothy thought a moment and then said: "I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to stop praying and begin advertising."—[Boston Transcript.

THE COB DOLLAR

The "cob dollar" was a Spanish dollar which at one time had wide circulation in the United States. In 1778 when the Articles of Confederation were adopted, the cob or Spanish dollar was used in practically all business transactions throughout the colonies. Owing to its convenience it was adopted with slight change as our standard dollar. Even the dollar sign originated on these cob dollars coined in Spain and her American colonies. The smaller Spanish coins representing fractions of the cob dollar were called "cob money."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE NEW

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

Necklines, gradually creeping higher, to keep pace with the skirts. Not that all gowns or wraps have choker collars or muffle scarves. Occasion governs this, sometimes in a way quite reverse to the expected, the choker and muffle appearing for evening and the absence thereof for street wear. The same is true of sleeves, their where-and-nowhereness an uncertain quantity which lends piquancy to fashion's every varying whims.

Very Coatish

Many of the dresses for street wear are indistinguishable from coats. Also, many coats are so like dresses in line and finish as to pass for top garments. Even the so-called "three piece" suits own coats quite enveloping, the merest peep of skirt discernible below. Fabrics for coats and for dresses are interchangeable, or—one might say—commingalable, since plain and plaided or striped materials, silks and wools, crepes and twills may be disposed at couturial will in the composition of each. Sometimes a plaid forming the skirt, forms the lining of a coat; again, the same material makes reverse collar and cuffs of the top garment, the skirt being plain and visible only for a few inches below the tunic-like coat.

Unrealities

As was to be expected, with the return of the tunic and the scarcely visible lower skirt, shams have come into being. Most convenient are these make-believes, since the top may be extended to form a camisole, only needed undergarment, with the several layered three-piece suit.

Glove Lingerie

Glove-silk lingerie grows in popularity and no wonder. Anything wearable under the tightly fitting gowns exacted by the mode, must be skin-snug. It is rumored that many manage to get along without even this semblance of underwear.

More Than Ever Indian

The newest Paris gowns for evening, are embroidered to the point of encrustation, with tiny irridescent shells. The effect is singularly fascinating, colorful and rich.

Rainbowed

The popular rainbow or shaded effect in semblance of batik, is attained by many Paris couturiers, through the use of beads, handsewed upon a filmy fabric. One lovely import shown at a local exclusive shop, is in tones of brown, running up to tangerine, the beads applied in closely set zig-zag, or lightning stroke effect.

Beads and More of Them

Well it is for the early aboriginals that they did not live today. They surely would not have found beads enough to go around, so absorbed is Dame Fashion in her work of cornering the bead market. Beads on dresses, beads on hats, beads on hand-bags—beads, oh, everywhere! The latest is the tiny coin purse, of beads. This, carried in the vanity or the larger bag of whatever kind, is both convenient and dainty.

Color Touchery

Not only do gowns and dresses receive their completeness of chic by means of concentrated color, but in millinery of the seasonable dark tones—black or brown, blue or purple—rainbow tinted beads, motifs, feather fancies or other eccentricities afford a finishing touch.

Princely Wild and Western

A window exhibit of cowboy hats, broad of brim and soft of texture, presents the latest in western chapeaux for the broad outdoors. It is such masculine millinery that is said to have taken the attention of the English claimant to the throne—or should we say thrown?

Mirrored in Fashion's Pool

White bone buttons are used straight down either side of a frock of heavy white crepe de chine.

The toque and the mushroom shape are promised popularity this fall, as is also the rolled brim.

Wool flowers, in brilliant hues, are embroidered all over a frock of beige mousseline, belted in blue.

Box plaits take care of the front fullness of an unbelted three-quarter-length tunic of a red crepe frock.

A white gardenia is worn at the neck of a black crepe frock tucked all over, both horizontally and vertically.

The matching coat and dress make a smart and serviceable fall costume for the school or college girl.

Black satin fulgerante is promised an unusual vogue for fall. One chic coat model is trimmed with astrakhan.

An underskirt of black satin and a girdle of the same caught with pink roses are smart notes of a white satin evening gown.

An apron front faced with green, and green and gold embroidery gives color to a sleeveless dinner frock of black crepe satin.

A wide band of Roman-striped chiffon at the hem, and narrow bands on the sleeves, are effective for a frock of dark blue crepe.

A sash of white moire ties in the front of a black velvet frock, and is finished at the ends with silver fringe. Touches of silver embroidery are used.

COLORFUL DRAMA COMPLETE

Erich Von Stroheim and his collaborator, Benjamin Glazer, are rapidly completing the scenario of "The Merry Widow." When the script is finished it will take two or three weeks for technical preparations to be made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio before filming can start on this colorful continental romance, in which Mae Murray will star in the title role under Von Stroheim's direction.

BEAUTY NOT ENOUGH FOR THESE DAYS

Artist-Director Points Out Talent is Surer Road to Success

Dramatic character rather than beauty is the quality the screen demands today of its feminine stars.

No less an authority on both beauty and the needs of the screen than George Fitzmaurice, producing director and artist, is responsible for this declaration.

There was a time in the past when a pretty face might carry its owner to success. But now beauty is secondary—decidedly secondary, according to Fitzmaurice. And he proves his statement by facts drawn from the recent successes of some of the most popular luminaries of the silent drama.

Before achieving success as a screen director, Fitzmaurice won an enviable reputation as an artist. He knows beauty its possibilities and its limitations. And he unhesitatingly chooses character in preference to it as the vital essential for motion picture work. "The day of the merely beautiful star is over; in her place we have the actresses who can give us power and, most important of all, character in her work," Fitzmaurice declares in summing up his views. "If an actress has beauty as well as character, she is fortunate as long as she does not sacrifice her character to her beauty. When she makes this sacrifice, her beauty in a decided handicap.

"If anyone believes that beauty is in demand, he has only to study the hundreds of minor players in motion pictures. This large group includes some of the most beautiful women in the world. But because they are merely beautiful, they are destined to remain always submerged. They lack the other and much more vital quality—dramatic character."

Mr. Fitzmaurice has just completed the filming of "Tarnish," Frances Marion's adaptation of Gilbert Emery's sweeping New York stage success. May McAvoy, Marie Prevost and Ronald Colman head the strong cast. Both of the feminine members of this trio are rated among the screen's famous beauties. But Fitzmaurice insists that their beauty had nothing to do with their selection or the characterizations they give in this Samuel Goldwyn production for First National.

Possible to Photograph Thought Now

If you want to know "who loves who" in the movies just watch the screen closely.

At least that is the assertion of Chet Withey, who is directing Priscilla Dean in "A Cafe in Cairo," her second Hunt Stromberg production. It is just as possible to photograph a thought passing through a player's mind as it is to take a picture of a physical movement, Withey contends, and it is a well known fact that the camera never lies.

How terrible, you may remark, to come home in the wee small hours of the morning after a wery, wery goo' time at the sh-club, to find your wife waiting at the door with a thought camera, ready to photograph your innermost secrets!

"I know from experience and observation that the camera will record the thoughts of a person absolutely," this director states. "Upon one occasion an actress, now a star, revealed to me during the course of her performance in the picture that she was very much in love with her leading man. At that time neither the gentleman in question nor anyone else had the least inkling that such was the case. Some weeks after the picture was finished the two were married and are still living happily together.

"I noticed in another picture I was directing the extreme lack of feeling expressed by an actress in her love scenes with her husband who was her leading man. She seemed utterly unable to go through her part except in a forced and mechanical manner. Shortly after, she filed suit for divorce.

So why bother the answer man when we can see with our own eyes?

ACTOR FAVORS JAZZ

Lowe Prefers Jazz While Working on Set

Modern jazz music has won a permanent place on any set where Edmund Lowe may be at work.

The Fox star, now appearing in "The Brass Bowl," met Lilyan Tashman, to whom he is engaged, while a New York orchestra was playing a popular dance number.

At the studio this week, a jazz orchestra on Lowe's set started the day with the same number. Although he had heretofore been opposed to music on his sets, Lowe is now very much in favor of it, and constantly calls on the musicians for his favorite number.

~~Director Thinks~~ Virginia's Tears Are Finest Art

"That's the finest thing I ever saw," exclaimed James Cruze, referring to Virginia Lee Corbin, yesterday a baby star; today grown up into glorious blonde young-womanhood and playing a prominent role in "The City That Never Sleeps."

Miss Corbin, without any external aid, like music, soft lights or sympathetic conversation, had wept real tears.

She was facing Louise Dresser, who plays the part of her mother in the story. She had been kept in ignorance of her relation to her parent, whom she believes to be a notorious cafe owner. But suddenly a climax of the story brings a shooting affray and instantly recalls the moment of her babyhood when her own father was slain—and she recognizes her mother.

Virginia will be remembered as the dainty heroine of several juvenile pictures several years ago. Now, having attained the advanced age of 15, she steps out as the heroine of "The City That Never Sleeps," now showing at Grauman's Metropolitan with Louise Dresser, Ricardo Cortez and Kathlyn Williams heading the supporting cast.

CONSPICUOUS INCONSPICUITY

Very seldom can a star boast of what she hasn't been, but Allene Ray does.

She has never been a bathing beauty; Mack Sennett can not claim any honors for her success.

She has never been in the Follies; Flo Ziegfeld loses out with her.

She has never been "found" by any director; D. W. Griffith and Rex Ingram are minus some credit.

She doesn't save postage stamps or antique furniture; she hasn't that kind of a press agent.

She has no titled ancestors who own castles in Spain.

She has never been on the stage; the Shuberts are out of luck.

But she did win a beauty contest.

Allene Ray won the 1921 Fame and Fortune contest sponsored by the Brewster publications.

After she had been granted the award a number of independent producers secured her services. Then Pathe saw her work. She signed a long-term starring contract as their serial queen.

"Ten Scars Make a Man" is Allene Ray's third serial, which was completed this week.

AMATEURS' GOOD WORK IS PRAISED

Dramatic Authority Has Only Commendation for Pasadena Players

That there is a national theater developing, slowly but surely, in America was the gist of a talk made recently before the Pasadena center of the Drama League of America by Prof. George Pierce Baker of Harvard. As head of the "Forty-seven Workshop Course in Playwriting" at Harvard, Prof. Baker is in intimate touch with the American theater. He made it plain that his only interest is in practical plays, that is, plays for the stage that reach the people who patronize the theater.

And in this connection Prof. Baker declared it to be his belief that the American theater of the future would be a child of what is known today as "the little theater"—meaning those nonprofessional groups in all parts of the country that are making productions, not for profit, but to achieve dramatic expression, often along experimental lines.

"We hear much of the Pasadena Community Playhouse in the East," said Prof. Baker, in the course of his talk, "weherefore I eagerly seized the opportunity to attend several plays here. I must confess that your reputation does not surpass your merit. By that I do not mean that you are on a par with the Moscow Art Theater—there is nothing in America to equal that—but your productions possess a genuine quality rarely to be found in this country.

"Considering what the Pasadena Community Players have done with their limited facilities, I can only look forward to still worthier accomplishments in the new playhouse that you have planned. I want to say that I have never seen a more complete set of theater plans anywhere. When this building is up and in operation, it will be the most comprehensive dramatic workshop in America, and I doubt if Europe boasts anything better. Every detail of production seems to have been provided for.

"Right here, let me administer a word of caution. You face a grave responsibility in this connection. It means that you dare not fail. You must keep on going ahead and improving the quality of your productions. I don't mean that you have got to limit yourself to high-brow, poetic drama. Good, everyday folk plays can be done just as artistically and possess just as much practical value."

Public Prefers Artificiality to Screen Realism

The American public as a mass prefers artificiality to realism on the screen!

That is the real answer to the question, "Why are not motion pictures more true to life?" according to Samuel Goldwyn, producer.

"We are awaiting the day when the public will accept realism on the screen," Mr. Goldwn said in a recent interview, "but that day has not yet arrived. Until then, artificiality will continue in the motion picture.

"Unlike a stage play or novel, a motion picture is dependent upon mass support. Because of the high cost to produce and distribute motion pictures, the photoplay must attract millions whereas the stage play can succeed with the support of thousands. There is a sufficient minority to support realism on the stage. The public favors the unreal and the artificial in its entertainment.

"For every critic who complains of the lack of realism in current screen drama a hundred silent fans prefer the artificial and unreal on the screen. The larger group does not voice its approval. It registers its support at the box office.

"Regrettable as it is—and no one regrets it more than the makers of motion pictures—the American public as a mass prefers artificiality to realism on the screen.

"People know that life is not always happy; that heroes are not god-like, heroines more pure than the lily and villains of black hue. The American public, through the infallible box office indicator, has registered a preference. To these must go the blame for the conditions.

"If anyone demands proof of this the survival of the eternal happy ending forms an unanswerable example. We know that types in this world are not fixed by rule, we also know that drama in real life often ends tragically. With few exceptions, there has never been a successful photoplay that came to an unhappy ending.

"In the larger cities there are enough of the one-in-a-hundred fans to appreciate realism and make it locally profitable for the producer. But the mass emphatically refuses to accept it.

"In two cases producers tested this by filming two endings to a story—one happy and one tragic. They permitted the public to chose. Both cases overwhelmingly favored the false but happy conclusion.

"Some day the public will be educated to the point where it will accept life as it is," Goldwyn says, in conclusion. "That day the producer is awaiting, for it will open to him splendid story material now unavailable. Masterpieces will some day win the support which will make them profitable. Realism eventually will win the support on the screen which artificiality does now."

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

Athletic Director Decides 'Tis Not for Him to Say

Dave or David?

Whether it shall be the slang aphorism dear to his friends or the dignified cognomen that has been handed down from history's early day is the question.

Such is the problem David Butler has pondered and fought over during his entire picture career. He is proud of the name David, it's a fine name, but everyone calls him Dave, and he has tried unavailingly ever since he left Stanford to have screen producers bill him as Dave.

Promises have seldom been kept, however, and now this champion athlete has decided to let them call him anything they want.

'TESS' NOW EXPRESSED ALL WAY

Hardy Masterpiece Tol in Chisel, Brush, Baton and Camera Mediums

With Marshall Neilan's filmin of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," th character of Tess will have bee expressed in all art forms. Thom Hardy's beloved and pathetic her ine has been painted, sculpture acted on the stage, sung in ope and now photographed in moti pictures, with Blanche Sweet i personating the character. "T of the D'Uurbervilles," a Me Goldwyn production, is now sh ing at Tally's Theater.

The stage production of "T of the D'Urbervilles," was an a picious occasion. The Dram Mirror, in its issue for March, 1 states the presentation of the p was the most significant of t American stage up to that time. a review that waxed far more e thusiastic than the customary co servativeness maintained by th paper, which for a long time r mained the signpost of playdo the Mirror praised the drama power of the story and then w into ecstasies over the perfor ance of Mrs. Fiske as Tess.

The operatic version of "Tess the D'Urbervilles" was written Baron d'Erlanger, a noted mus dilettante. It was sung under title of "Tess." The premiere the opera was to have taken p in Naples in 1909, but nature int fered, in the eruption of Mt. V suvius. Two years after this d aster, the opera was put on at C vent Garden, London. It met w but indifferent success, owing to t weakness of the book of the ope

In the screen version, which presented by Louis B. Mayer, Tes is played by Blanche Sweet, wh has come to be known as one o the greatest emotional actresses i the films. Others in the cast in clude Conrad Nagel, Stuart Holme George Fawcett, Courtenay Foote and Joseph J. Dowling.

ROLE OF VILLAIN YET PURSUES HIM

"HEAVY" GOES DOWN SCALE FROM PRIEST PART TO LAWYER

Few actors can boast the widely varied experience before the camera that has fallen to the lot of Donald MacDonald, who is now under contract to Arthur Maude as a featured player in the two-reel classics of the screen which Maude is producing from stories inspired by famous paintings.

Several years ago, just how many he refuses to specify, Donald MacDonald was one of the prominent directors in the "game." But an irresistible fondess for grease paint, which he had contracted on the stage, was not to be denied, and Donald gave up directing to become an actor, and in the last few years he has achieved distinction as a heavy man.

He played with Charles Ray for some time and was featured in such pictures as "Yellow Typhoon," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and "Lorna Doone." Mr. Maude did not engage Donald as a heavy man, but MacDonald sadly affirms that he will end by playing the villain again.

"In the first Arthur Maude production," he says, "I played the role of a priest; in the second I played only a doctor. In the third I take the part of a lawyer, so you see my morality is steadily ebbing. Once a heavy, always a heavy, I guess."

MUMMIFIED ART NOT PATSY'S LINE

STAR OF FILMS COLD TO EGYPTIAN CRAZE SHE SAYS

Rameses blue and papyrus brown may by the dermier cri in women's shoes, as recently declared at the convention of the National Shoe Retailer's Association in Chicago, but they are not for Patsy Ruth Miller, the dainty star who is featured with Matt Moore in "Fools in the Dark," now at Tally's Theater.

Miss Miller is not an addict to the craze for ancient styles which seem to have been dug up along with the burlapped and thoroughly pickled figure of the eminent Egyptian king, from the hot sands of the Sahara.

"Egyptian shoes? Not yet! My bootblack is quite erudite but he hasn't added Egyptology to his store of knowledge," laughed Miss Miller. "As for the King Tut dresses, the King Tut hats, the King Tut stockings and the rest rest of the mummified modes, I can't say that I'm carried away by them.

"Perhaps those 'right angle' ladies who waltz about on the Egyptian friezes can wear things like that, but I can't smiled the the little star.

BRICKS AND BOQUETS

"White Collars" Player, Brick-Maker, Won Success at Once

Alfred Arnold, who appears in "White Collars," now in its thirty-second week at the Egan Theater, was born in a small town in Texas, near Dallas. His father was the owner of a brick yard, and shortly after leaving school, young Alfred was put in the brickyard to learn the business from the ground up. At one point in his short business career he was sent, with an older brother, to New York and this trip served to make him discontented with life in a small town.

While in New York he met a friend who was stage manager of "Six Cylinder Love." Then he met Abe Levy, general manager for H. Morris, the producer of the piece, while back-stage one night. After looking him over, Mr. Levy asked him if he would like to be an actor. He was given a part to understudy and after four weeks' rehearsing and a great deal of coaching he went on for a Saturday matinee tryout and scored a success.

EVOLUTION HAS A HEARING

Dr. Carl S. Patton Explains the Place of Religion in the Thought of Today and Dr. Vernon Kellogg Makes the Facts of Evolution Understandable

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

RELIGION IN THE THOUGHT OF TODAY. By Carl S. Patton. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This book of 150 pages contains the substance of a course of lectures given at Berkeley on the [illegible] Foundation by the author, who is the widely known pastor of the First Congregational Church of this city.

The book is timely. It begins with an exposition and discussion of evolution. Oddly enough, this doctrine which has been accepted by all intelligent and enlightened people for a number of decades, has suddenly come to the front again as the subject of bitter controversy. After the first flurry in pulpit and pew, which rose to a peak as scientist after scientist became converted to "Darwinism" in the 60's and 70's, the church gradually seemed to have become reconciled to the facts. The thinkers made such changes in their views on the Scriptures and on theological teaching as seemed advisable and then jogged along contentedly enough.

But today the Don Quixotes of the pulpit are a-horse, each riding in full career against the windmill that his errant fancy has evolved out of evolution. All this has had its results. Various backwoods States and counties have legislated against the teaching of evolution in schools and colleges and the proposal is even now before our own State Board of Education.

It is, therefore, time that intelligent persons had a fair and logical and well-balanced restatement of the case for evolution in relation to religion, so that intelligence may not perish from the earth.

Dr. Patton can always be depended upon to be explicit, direct, logical, and to speak without heat or prejudice. This he has done in his discussion of evolution. After a brief outline of the history of the modern doctrine of evolution, he states clearly Darwin's contribution.

Of the storm of objections raised by divines and theological professors, Dr. Patton says, in his usual calm, matter-of-fact way: "There was one characteristic which all these criticisms shared in common. They were all popular, sentimental, ad hominem in point of view. There was no support of scientific knowledge back of any of them."

Of the present-day opposition to evolution he says: "We might call attention to the fact that among these new opponents of evolution there are no biologists, no zoologists, no geologists, no botanists, no astronomers, no anthropoligists, no scientific men of any sort and rest our case." Having fired this broadside, Dr. Patton proceeds to enlighten his readers further on for the general acceptance of evolution by enlightened people. He details the various groups of facts explained by evolution and otherwise inexplicable. The distribution of fossils in the geological strata, the distribution of plant and animal life on the globe, protective coloration, similarity in the form and structure of animals, the development of the embryos of reptiles, birds and mammals, are all considered.

The new scientific light on natural selection, as brought out by investigation of the question as to acquired traits being inherited, receives due attention, as does the part altruism plays in evolution. Then comes consideration of the religious and spiritual implications to be drawn from the doctrine of evolution. Dr. Patton contends manfully for God and the Christian religion, reconciling a belief in these with an acceptance of evolution and leading his God out of the wilderness a much more likable and convincing God than the one built up from the Old Testament by the fundamentalists.

In the second chapter the Old Testament is subjected to Dr. Patton's scrutiny. Needless to say, he reads it in the light of scientific fact. He claims nothing new for his exegesis, but he puts the plain and sometimes amusing facts in a new and interesting way.

The New Testament comes next. In the beginning Dr. Patton squarely states his position: "If every word and letter of the New Testament is so inspired that everything in it must be taken for gospel truth as long as the world stands, no room for any real inquiry remains."

In the chapters on "Present Day Philosophic Thought" and "Current Theological Thought" the author rounds out his book, accomplishing what he states in his foreword to be his aim, which is "to bring out by relating all these subjects in a single course that, instead of a series of disconnected guesses in different realms, 'modern thought' is an attitude and method that produce congenial and converging results in all these fields."

Dr. Patton is not a voice crying in the wilderness. Many other enlightened divines there are. Never has the church been in greater need of such sane and honest and open-minded leaders. With more of them and less Lot-minded folk, the condition of the church will become less parlous.

EVOLUTION. By Vernon Kellogg. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

Those who are looking for a book on evolution that stresses the new scientific facts such as the noninheritance of acquired traits, modern knowledge of heredity as influenced by the work of Galton and Mendel and other new and interesting phases of the subject will find this latest work of Dr. Kellogg an altogether fascinating book.

It is written in a style that is clear, nontechnical, easy to follow and that yet quite avoids the too-prevalent tendency to introduce jazz into science. Dr. Kellogg has made his book one of very special interest to Californians by using for illustration many facts in regard to plant and animal life as found along the coast. Seeing even a Monterey pine through Dr. Kellogg's eyes becomes a new experience. For with it we see and understand something of the lichen, a combination of a fungus and an alga, and of other inhabitants of the tree, mostly unsuspected by the casual observer. These include the midge, which robs the new pine needles of the nourishment intended for them, the whitish scale insect, the bark-boring beetle, the resin moth and other interesting moths and beetles.

While Dr. Kellogg takes time to make the evolutionary process familiar and even personal, he never loses sight of the main subject in a welter of detail. The extent of the book and the fullness with which it covers the subject within the space limitations of a single volume of 290 pages are indicated by the chapter headings, which are as follows: Evolution, What Is It; Growth and Triumph of the Evolution Idea; What Evolution Must Explain; Evidences of Evolution; Casual Explanations of Evolution; Fundamental Factors in Evolution; The Evolution of Plants; The Evolution of Animals; The Evolution of Man; The Evolution of Mind; Social Inheritance and Social Evolution; The Human Factor.

A ROMAN HOLIDAY

In the old days they knew how to celebrate holidays. In the golden age of Rome, for instance, the emperors wisely took occasional relaxation from the affairs of state by planning generous celebrations for their populace. The eminent historian, Clem Hawley, in his history of the world ("The Old Soak's History of the World" by Don Marquis), gives a vivid description of a typical imperial frolic.

"When Ceesar for umpire of Roam he would say what! ho! up with the port cullis.

"And the port cullis would come up.

"Well Ceesar he would say rubbing his hands what shall it be.

"Am I umpire or ain't I, Ceesar would say.

"You dam well know you are Ceesar, the port cullis would say, yure majesty, I will put a tin ear on the bird says youer not.

"Umpire of Roam and the whole durned world besides Ceesar would say, I fit for the belt and I earnt it.

"I'm a gonna pull a party, port cullis, Ceesar would say and I want something flossy, something would make Sollomon in all his glory look like a piker. I leeve the deetails to you, port cullis, but theyer is one little thing I want tended to particler. I want the whole derned collyseeim filled with wine, you get me.

"Filled how deep yure majesty says the port cullis grinning and twiddling with the napkin over his arm.

"To the eeves says Ceesar, so that nobody can get into the place except threw the roof. Fill her up, port cullis, fill her up till the roof floats. And I want the intire Roamin navy sailing on that wine, this here is a gonna be a house boat party, how uproaryous it will be, port cullis, when the geets begin to push eech other overbord, get out the bids right now and ask all the queens in Roam, all my queens and any queens that hapen to be visiting hear, what I want, port cullis, is a party befitting the umpire of the known world.

"Well, no sooner said than done, and that party was one of the seven wonders of the world."

TALK OF PAINTERS

Sargent is more of a technical virtuso on canvas than John La Farge ever dreamed of being, but his drawings, as drawings, haven't a tithe of the felicity belonging to those of La Farge. It is strange, by the way, that the drawings of the modern painter seldom have the virtue residing in the drawings of the past. Occasionally draftsmen turn up. In England they have Charles Shannon, Augustus John, and William Orpen. Here we have a consummate draftsman like Arthur B. Davies, who is as unique in black and white as in color. But men like these are excessively rare. And the most singular circumstance is that the draftsmen who professionalize the subject, the artists who draw strictly for publication, make scarcely any contribution at all to our subject. A master like Forain is only the exception that proves the rule. Great illustrators like Abbey and Howard Pyle may draw with unqualified authority, but there is a crucial distinction between their draftsmanship and the kind of draftsmanship that I have been talking about. It is the great paradox of this cult for the drawing that the connoisseurs who have followed it from the Renaissance down have almost invariably sought the drawing which was not so much a masterpiece in itself as a stroke on the way to one. The typical drawing of superlative interest and beauty is a kind of sublime by-product of art.—[From "The Field of Art," by Royal Cortissoz, in the August Fiction Number of Scribner's.

A SIGNIFICANT DRAMATIST

Karl Capeck, whose play "R.U.R.," was given here to crowded houses last winter, is one of the most significant of present-day dramatists. He was born in 1890 in Northern Bohemia. He studied philosophy at Prague, Berlin and Paris. Since taking his doctor's degree he has been, at times, a journalist, a playwright, a theatrical art director, and a theatrical manager.

With his brother he has published a series of stories, and one drama "The World We Live In," a savage satire that has made a sensational success in Prague, London, New York and Berlin. Capek has also written a treatment of the American philosophy of William James and John Dewey and has published some translations of French poetry. His first dramatical work was comedy "The Robber," a lyric of youth and love. His second play, "R.U.R.," has made a tremendous success in the dramatic world—from the Theater Guild production in New York to stagings in Paris, Warsaw, London, Moscow and Berlin.

At present, Capek is director of the Vinohradsky Art Theater at Prague. As a point of modesty and artistry, however, his plays are produced by the National Theater—a rival organization.

A Group of Leaders in the World of Books

Thomas Nelson Page, whose novel "Red Riders" has just been anounced by Scribner's; Mary Roberts Rinehart, author of "Temperamental People," published by George H. Doran Company; Kathleen Norris, whose novel "Rose of the World" is a recent Doubleday-Page publication; Dr. Carl S. Patton, pastor of the First Congregational Church of this city, author of "Religion in the Thought of Today."

RECENT BOOKS

THE A B C OF ATOMS. By Bertrand Russell. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

Bertrand Russell, famous in two very diverse ways as one of the foremost mathematicians living and as so ardent a foe of war that he became England's foremost conscientious objector and served a long term of imprisonment, considers the investigation of natural processes and the construction of the universe "the most Godlike thing men do" and the waging of war the most devilish.

In this little volume he has given a clearly presented summary of the new theories in regard to the constitution of matter. For simplicity and clarity it is difficult to find its match. Hence, even those who know very little about the physical sciences will find the book easy to follow.

The chapter headings are: The Periodic Law; Electrons and Nuclei, the Hydrogen Spectrum, Possible States of the Hydrogen Atom; the Theory of Quanta, Refinements of the Hydrogen Spectrum; Rings of Electrons, X-rays; Radio-Activity; The Structure of Nuclei; The New Physics and the Wave Theory of Light, and The New Physics and Relativity. In the appendix Bohr's theory of the hydrogen spectrum is given.

This is the first book by a member of his Cabinet to be published since Mr. Wilson's death.

Many fascinating and little-known phases of the war are recalled by Mr. Redfield who, in his official capacity, came in touch with some of the most remarkable exploits of the civilian army. There was, for instance, the visit of the Canadian officials who reported the British Empire's lack of tin for the army's canned food and the setting in motion of machinery for gathering the world's supply of tin available in neutral territory; of the ferryboat ride with the director of the Bureau of Standards, when the conversation fell to the possibility of devising an instrument for detecting the approach of a torpedo to a ship, and the consequent construction of a successful instrument for this purpose.

The inside story of Liberty motors and of Col. Deeds, who was pilloried for his fearless and successful conduct of the enterprise; the history of the officer of the Department of Commerce who traveled through Russia and Siberia in the midst of revolution and incredible hardships to collect a mineral which could be found nowhere else, are a few of the matters of daily routine that border close to drama and romance.

SOME THOUGHTS ON HILAIRE BELLOC. By Patrick Braybrooke. The J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

To his survey of the writings of G. K. Chesterton, Mr. Braybrooke has added a study of the versatile Mr. Belloc.

He has collected a series of impressions of Mr. Belloc ranging over a number of years with a view to reaching those who know him as well as those who do not yet know his writings. The book includes not only a consideration of his more topical works, but a thoughtful estimate of his works as a historian and romanticist. It deals with his opinions, political and religious, and contains, too, his famous views on the freedom of the press.

THE ENGLISH SPEAKING NATIONS. By G. W. Norris and L. S. Wood. Oxford University Press, American Branch, New York.

A book that has for its main purpose to show the origin of some of the imperial problems, which the Imperial Conference considered last year, and the lines along which a solution is being attempted.

It is the supreme achievement of Britain, the authors submit, that she has given a new meaning to the word "Empire." They are not concerned with the military achievements of our ancestors so much as with the development of the Commonwealth ideal.

IN THE LAND OF ART. (En El Pais del Arte). Travels among Italian art treasures. By Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Authorized translation by Frances Douglas. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

In a preface written for this American translation of "In the Land of Art," Vicente Blasco Ibanez tells how he came to write the book.

In 1896, while Spain was engaged in her war with Cuba and the possibility of American interference was becoming imminent, Blasco Ibanez, then a young man of 28, was a vigorous and eloquent partisan of Cuba and as the result of his activities had to flee, disguised as a sailor, from his native land in order to save his liberty and probably also his life. He landed in Genoa and, with a very

BY M. F. CUMMINGS

SALVOS. An informal book about Books and Plays. By Waldo Frank. Boni & Liveright, New York.

These "Salvos" delivered with deadly intent from Waldo Frank's grisly pop-gun, will doubtless rebound harmlessly from the tough hides of those average "puritanical Americans" at whom they have been aimed. This would have been the case even if we had been humbly willing to be filled as full of holes as a shot-colander by way of helping to reduce ourselves to shapeless pulp in preparation for that generous remolding which "Brer" Frank and his attending statuaries offer with tensed muscles and itching fingers.

In the face of a series of so vigorous attacks that ought really to have separated our joints from their marrow we blush to find ourselves intact and can only suggest in palliation that our generation, like preceding ones, has been so hard-boiled in the bitter brew of "Puritanism" that our case is hopeless. To collectively "bust" all our inhibitions and turn our appetites, our passions, our possessive, sexual and murderous instincts loose and running, and so "live our own lives," is a long way beyond us. We are as stiff and stark as the pine tree which is the Puritan symbol, and can never be worked over into a plot of succulent leaks or an odoriferous field of garlic by all the sweating efforts of our recently adopted citizens, even when these are reinforced by the groaning laborers of our native decadents.

Does this fixity of type on our part imply that such Herculean exertions as those put forth by our Young Intellectuals must go unrewarded? Not by any means. Walt Whitman was divinely right when he assured his readers that "The song is to the singer and comes back most to him." Thus our would-be transmigrations will themselves be transmogrified, and suffer change "into something rich and strange." They may even become tolerant of "Puritanism" and learn from the Greeks whom they now disparage that "Nothing in "Excess" is the best rule of life so far discovered.

CULTURE AND DEMOCRACY IN THE UNITED STATES; GROUP PSYCHOLOGY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. By Horace M. Kallen. Boni & Liveright, New York.

Dr. Kallen divides his book into chapters on "The Meaning of Americanism, Democracy versus The Melting Pot, Americanization and the Cultural Future, America and the Life of Reason, Humanism and the Industrial Age." Through the imperfectly connected and discursive welter of argument which has been evolved from these texts a brief review must necessarily fail to pilot its readers, but can only give the mental burden which the author laboriously propels along his trackless way and with which, after much floundering, he finally emerges. In the interest of this idea Dr. Kallen alters to his own satisfaction, but without a scintilla of spoken or written evidence, every philosophical or governmental concept held by those who founded or later defended our republic. The idea in question involves a vigorous and determined opposition to our efforts to bring about a homogenous citizenship and aims at the continued existence and unlimited extension of heterogenous groups who, while claiming the title and all the rights and privileges of American citizenship, will sedulously preserve and carefully cultivate every social, political, lingual and cultural tradition or superstition which each successive or contemporary swarm of immigrants has brought, or may yet bring, to our shores.

The foreign-language newspapers and periodicals have already made us familiar with this demand for a modern Babel more far-reaching and thorough than the ancient one. But it remained for Dr. Kallen to assert that such a program, when carried out, will generate what he terms "a new humanism" based on science and described in the following terms. "Inevitably, in view of its structure and process, the machine of industry gives point and temper to science . . . Industry and its derivatives have rendered men more interdependent . . . . and slowly compels the conduct of governments and ideals of peoples to congruity with the basic facts of industrial life. So the perennial protean humanism casts its beams before, and sends its forerunners, heralds and trumpeters as once again its protean nature advances in new guise, with industry for body and science for soul. . . Of religion, in its traditional sense, it gives no indication. . . Its spirit, consequently, will be catholic, tolerant and serene. . . Such is the wisdom which the new humanism presages."

This conclusion is in harmony with the whole book, in being a quite captivating combination of high-sounding words clothing a body of jumbled ideas. If, for instance, under the new dispensation, "industry is to be the body and science the soul of life," how is the tail to so wag the dog as in its own right to "slowly compel the conduct of governments and the ideals of peoples in congruity with the basic facts of industrial life?" As if that many-headed and constantly growing thing which is fitly described as science could or would allow a static basis in industry. The more scientific humanity becomes the less can its wings be for one moment furled, the more shall it exist "not as a being, but as a becoming." A plentitude of sounding words, a sufficiency of apt phrases, but right reason, or its material counterpart, common sense, nowhere.

CALIFORNIA POET HONORED

Mr. Lee Shippey of Del Mar, Cal., a regular contributor to the columns of The Times, has just been signally honored by the Poetry Society. He has been recommended for election as a vice-president of that body, which carries among its vice-presidents such distinguished poets as Lord Dunsany, Alfred Noyes, the Countess of Warwick, Sir Ian Hamilton, G. K. Chesterton, Lady Margaret Sackville, "E. A." Lady Byron and a number of other outstanding personages.

Mr. Shippey will attempt to get in touch with poets and persons interested in poetry in Southern California with a view to promoting a wider appreciation of poetic lore in the Southland.

The Poetry Society is a far-flung organization with headquarters in London and branches in various parts of the world. The official journal of the society is the Poetry Review. Mr. Shippey recently won first prize in one of the contests conducted by the magazine. The editors were favorably impressed with Mr. Shippey's work and the honor conferred is an evidence of that appreciation.

According to Lord Coleridge, first president of the society, its objects are "to promote wider appreciation of the value and uses of poetry and nourish the love of it. In a material age there is much

A MOORISH BANDIT PRINCE

Rosita Forbes Gives Us a Sympathetic Account of Ahmed er Rasuli, Sheriff, Warrior and Philosopher, in a Last Desperate Stand for Freedom

BY THOMAS F. FORD

THE SULTAN OF THE MOUNTAINS. By Rosita Forbes. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

There is no more romantic and glamourous page in history than that on which is writ the chronicle of the Moors. One of the last great leaders of this once great, but at present insignificant and harassed race, is Mulai Ahmed er Rasuli, sheriff, warrior and philosopher, saint, tyrant and psychologist, who, despite the power of his ancient enemy, Spain, still holds out as the one leader of Islam who, though hemmed in on all sides, his power daily being lessened, still remains to all intents and purposes an independent and gallant leader of his people and defender of his ancient faith.

While he is usually presented by his enemies as a ruthless, cruel and crafty politician and bloodthirsty brigand, the account set down in this book of the man and his aims is one that is calculated to touch the wells of our sympathy and to see the man, not as his enemies would have us believe, but a man of simple, indomitable faith in the eternal justice of events, for being a true believer, he is in the last analysis a fatalist.

For this interesting account of Rasuli we are indebted to Mrs. Rosita Forbes, a brilliant Englishwoman, whose own romantic and adventurous career is scarcely less picturesque and glamourous than that of the wild hill Sultan of whom she writes with so much charm and sympathy.

Rasuli is the descendant of an ancient house, no less, in fact, than that of the Prophet through an older branch of the imperial house that now reigns in Fez. Mrs. Forbes was born in Lincolnshire, Eng., daughter of an old English family that has occupied its own country seat since the days of the Doomsday Book. Her wanderings over the world have been as extensive as that of probably any of the clan bitten with the wanderlust. Certainly no woman has outdistanced her, and it is probable that few men have.

She began her travels at the age of 18, shortly after her marriage to Col. Ronald Forbes. India, Australia, Africa, were the scene of her first wanderings. Then, after having been worn down by her labors as an ambulance driver on the western front, she traveled through America, Hawaii, [illegible] Sumatra, Java, Cochin China [illegible] and China. This trip was [illegible] recuperate. While in China she [illegible] taken prisoner and forced to [illegible] in the Red Cross, but she [illegible] by a daring trick, shooting [illegible] rapids of the Siam River [illegible] mere shell of a punt. She [illegible] engaged in secret service work [illegible] Syria, and it was during this [illegible] that she became interested in the cause of the Arabs, who now [illegible] all her loyalty and sympathy [illegible] their pathetic struggle for independence.

This account of the Sultan Rasuli is as interesting as a [illegible] and much better written than [illegible] of the novels that are being published today.

Not the least valuable [illegible] about this work is that it [illegible] serve to open the eyes of [illegible] persons who today are inclined [illegible] think of Morocco as a wilderness inhabited only by [illegible] wandering tribes of savages [illegible] will surprise many to learn [illegible] when Mrs. Forbes was ready to [illegible] out on her journey from [illegible] to Rasuli's primitive village [illegible] Tazrut, her coming was announced by telephone, and she was conveyed thither in a great [illegible] automobile of the highest [illegible] a machine that took the [illegible] grades on high and skimmed [illegible] roads that wound around precipices with the ease of a bird.

It is indeed a fascinating [illegible] that she tells, her purpose [illegible] to personally interview Rasuli [illegible] give his story to the world. [illegible] she found was not an [illegible] savage chief, but a highly cultivated statesman and philosopher. A man filled with a passion [illegible] justice, according to his lights, [illegible] a shrewd and polished diplomat fully conversant with world affairs.

Mrs. Forbes has recounted [illegible] adventures before many of [illegible] crowned heads of Europe, and she lectured in the great hall of the Sorbonne, where she was awarded the gold medal of the French Geographical Society. (She had [illegible] already awarded the Belgian Geographical Society gold medal [illegible] information derived from [illegible] trip.) The Sorbonne lecture [illegible] a signal honor, she being the second woman ever to be so distinguished, the first having [illegible] Mme. Curie.

LITERARY GOSSIP

The Princeton University Press Almanac for July, thus editorializes: Ford number ten million passed through Princeton a short while ago on its triumphal tour from coast to coast. The sight of it, and the knowledge that so many Fords had been manufactured, depressed us until we recalled the statement made by Mr. Jesse Lee Bennett at the twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Booksellers' Association. Mr. Bennett asserted that although 3,000,000 Fords are made every year, there are 12,000,000 books manufactured annually. More power, therefore, to Henry, for if this ratio of four to one can be maintained, publishers may yet do as well as college professors.

Maud Diver, whose new volume of short stories, "Siege Perilous," is published by Houghton Mifflin Company, has made her name in this country especially as an interpreter of India, although a large part of her life has been spent in England. In the formative years between sixteen and twenty-five, however, she lived in various army posts in India and during this time she scribbled verse and prose as she says, "without a thought of getting into print." She depended upon station libraries for books and there was no stimulus for literary tendencies except her natural enthusiasm until she met her first great friend, Rudyard Kipling's sister, who afterward became Mrs. Fleming, and whose sympathy was of inestimable value to the young literary aspirant.

Vere Hutchinson, author of "Sea Wrack" and "Great Waters," which have both been noted generally by critics English and American as having an altogether uncommon intensity and dramatic power, is a younger sister of A. S. M. Hutchinson, author of "If Winter Comes" and the less successful but much-discussed "This Freedom."

L. C. Page & Co., announce the publication of G. E. Locke's latest thriller "The Purple Mist." This, we are assured, is an even better story than the same author's "The Scarlet Macaw," which W. Orton Tewson, editor-in-chief of the New York Evening Post Literary Review, called "the best mystery story of the year."

William Macleod Raine, the author of "The Desert's Price," "Oh, You Tex," and many other popular novels of the unregenerate old West was recently married at the Marble Collegiate Church in New York to Miss Beard Hollingsworth of Denver.

Edna S. Tipton's new book, "Table Decorations for All Occasions" (Stokes,) has a chapter on unique decorations for mah jongg parties which will be welcomed by devotees of the game.

"Ann's an Idiot," Pamela Wynne's novel of a girl who fell in love and then couldn't fall out again, is in its eighth printing since publication.

The Atlantic Monthly Press publish "Louder, Please!" by Earnest Elmo Calkins, a sort of informal autobiography of a deaf man. There have been "lives" of deaf people before, notably the autobiographies of John Kitto and Harriet Martineau, but this is the first in which deafness appears in its real character of the villain (or perhaps the hero) of the piece. Mr. Calkins is an advertising agent, and deafness and advertising, so apparently incompatible, are pleasantly mingled.

Norma Lorimer provides an interesting armchair trip through Egypt in her book, "By the Waters of Egypt" (Stokes,) an informal account of her own travels, with much unusual information on the history and customs of the country.

"Every house," says Richardson Wright in his latest book, "A Small House and Large Garden" (Houghton Mifflin,) "should have some room and every garden some corner where one can withdraw when he doesn't want to see people. Down South I heard of a woman who had what she called her 'Pout House.' It used to be the plantation's smokehouse, but not being used now for that purpose, she fixed it up for a little relaxing room. When things go wrong or she's had a tiff with her husband, she retires to this room and pouts."

The Dean of Canterbury, Dr. G. K. A. Bell, has edited a volume of "Documents on Christian Unity, 1920-4," which the Oxford University Press, American Branch, hopes to publish next month. The results up to date of the various conferences and of projects and proposals for reunion, with the main documents—there are upward of ninety, all, with three exceptions, dating from 1920—are included in the volume, which is dedicated to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Harry A. Franck is approaching the end of his long stay in China, and expects to sail for Manila from Hongkong some time late in September or early October, and then proceed to San Francisco.

He has been wandering about Southern China for some six months or so, his wife, son and daughter remaining, for the most part, in such European-populated places as boast at least six white inhabitants.

A recent letter tells his publishers that he has been decorated by the King of Luang Prabang, "The Kingdom of the Divine Buddha," with the "Order of the Million Elephants and the White Parasol." The official document or bestowal was in a nice bamboo waterproof holder—for when it rains there, says Franck, things get very wet. This graciously permitted him to purchase his own decoration, which he did, for some 140 francs, in a French department store in Hanoi.

"The South American Tour," by Annie S. Peck (Doran,) is the third edition, completely revised and reset, of this standard work, declared by many travelers to be the most useful and trustworthy volume for one to carry when visiting South American countries.

If you are a golfer and want to know just why you don't get the results that Jock Hutchinson and Walter Hagen get, read R. E. Howard's "Lessons From Great Golfers" (Stokes,) and study their methods among those of many other famous English and American players.

Interest in "Cobb," of "The World" (Dutton,) is stimulated by the announcement that a special prize of $1000 was given to the widow of the late Frank I. Cobb by the jury of Columbia University, which decided on the Pulitzer prizes awarded for newspaper and literary work during the last year because of the distinction and influence of her husband's editorial writing and service. The book contains selections from his editorial writings on "The World" that evince his wide knowledge of men and affairs and his exceptional ability to express his convictions with force, humor and distinction.

Prof. Gilbert Murray's "The Rise of the Greek Epic" has been out of print for some time. A new edition, the third, will be published by the Oxford University Press, American Branch, this month. It other subjects, the historic background of the Homeric myths.

GEN. MORTON SHOWS TEST IS GESTURE FOR PEACE

No Intention to Assume Warlike Mien Through Observance, is Declaration of Officer

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—Defense Day, what it is, its purpose and objective, and reasons why the citizenry should give it their whole-hearted backing, is set forth in simple form in a list of questions and answers prepared under the direction of Maj.-Gen. Charles G. Morton, in command of the Ninth Corps Army Area.

The questions and answers are designed to explain exactly what the defense test, which has become known as Defense Day, is, and to [illegible] away the opposition against it, due primarily to misunderstanding.

It is an explanation and a try-out of plans prepared for the national defense, with added patriotic ceremonies, the first answer sets forth. Its purpose is to enable the people to see for themselves and to understand the initial steps necessary in mustering manpower for national defense.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE

Other questions and answers bearing directly on the defense test follow:

QUESTION: What are some of these initial processes?

ANSWER: The filling to full strength of the various units of the Army of the United States and the steps necessary to provide for their supply, shelter, payment, training, medical care and attention, etc.

Q.: Why is it necessary to hold a defense test?

A.: Because in all past emergencies from the time of our Colonial days up to the beginning of the World War, we have had no plans for the systematic development of the necessary forces, and no adequate plans for maintaining troops through an emergency. We have, therefore, been forced to rely upon hastily created bodies and there has resulted delay, confusion, duplication of effort, extravagance and unnecessary loss of life. Every generation has paid and the present and future generations must still continue to pay the price of this past lack of foresight and preparation. The present system contemplates that as much of this preparation as possible be made during times of peace and not at a time when our national security may be at stake.

PLANS FOR THE DAY

Q.: Of what will the defense test consist?

A.: Of patriotic demonstrations and a test of mobilization. In every city, town and other community in the United States conducted by State and local civilian committees acting in conjunction with local military commanders.

Q.: Is the defense test a mobilization?

A.: No. We cannot mobilize in this country unless Congress declares a national emergency.

Q.: Then why is the defense test sometimes referred to as Mobilization Day?

A.: Because the War Department's instructions called for a test of mobilization plans, and certain elements, opposed to the plan, knowing that our people ardently desire peace, thought to make it unpopular by holding up a bugaboo, and so called it Mobilization Day.

Q.: They also called it the "Goose-Step Day," did they not?

A.: Yes. And with the same idea. The Goose-Step is a symbol of Prussianism, Kaiserism, militarism, autocracy, and the symbol of the theory that might makes right; in short, of everything that Americans detest. They figured upon making the defense test unpopular by applying this designation.

Q.: Is this what the President meant when he called them un-[illegible]

A.: Yes. This and a lot more.

NOT TO BE HOLIDAY

Q.: Is Defense Day to be a holiday?

A.: No, unless a community decides to make it such.

Q.: Is the defense test a hostile gesture?

A.: No. No nation could possibly misunderstand the defense test or construe it in any way unless [illegible] regarding our wealth with covetous eyes. We have proven time after time that we desire no territory, that we desire no indemnities, and that we are prepared to fight only in self-defense. We have definitely established the policy of nonaggression which all nations know and recognize.

Q.: Is the defense test militaristic?

A.: No, it is the direct opposite. Militarism exists when the Army dominates and controls the government. Militarism presupposes a large standing army. In our country we depend on a citizen army. Our Regular Army, numbering only about one soldier per thousand of population, forms the smallest of the three components of the Army of the United States. The other two, the National Guard and Organized Reserves are made up of civilian citizens engaged in civil pursuits and devoting only a small portion of their spare time to military training. There is nothing in the defense test which by the wildest flight of imagination can be considered militaristic.

TOWARD PEACE

Q.: Is the defense test contrary to the spirit of world peace?

A.: No. The defense test is in harmony with all movements for world peace, and is expressly designed to insure peace to a considerable portion of the world, at least to insure peace to the United States of America. It is not in conflict with the principles of the Hague Tribunal, the League of Nations, the World Court or any other peace plan, and unless a person or society can absolutely insure our country against the possibility of having to defend ourselves he or they have no right to oppose the National Defense Test. No nation in the world today [illegible] higher than our own [illegible] of self-defense to insure us against the possibility of aggression.

Q.: Will the defense test incite a war spirit?

A.: No. How can it? The defense test is a movement in the direction of peace and aims to prevent war. Preparedness for defense never has and never will incite a war spirit. The strong country [illegible] peace is practically assured of peace.

Q.: Is it bad psychology?

A.: Hardly. To remind a person of past mistakes in order to [illegible] future action might, in some cases, be resented and be considered bad judgment, but for an executive to show stockholders of a company where they have suffered losses in the past due to lack of foresight and bad judgment, and to show them plans made to correct past mistakes, is hardly bad psychology.

RIGHT TIME FOR IT

Q.: Why hold a defense test when we are at peace with all the world?

A.: Because this is the only time we can hold it. When relations with any foreign government become strained it is too late to hold any test mobilization without danger of bringing on war. As late as 1917, although the possibility of our being drawn into the World War had been recognized from the beginning, we, nevertheless, had made no preparations or even plans. This was natural, as our government was trying to convince all the belligerents, especially Germany, that our motives were peaceful. After the commencement of hostilities in Europe in 1914 it was too late for America to make any real preparation, as this would have been viewed with suspicion by the Central Powers and might even have been considered a warlike act.

Q.: Then why hold a defense test at all?

A.: Because we can never tell just when we may find an emergency upon us. In 1914 no one dreamed of war, but that year marked the beginning of the greatest war of all history. In 1916 we were convinced that we could preserve our neutrality but, nevertheless, only a few months later, we were drawn into the war with no plans, no preparation and no policy; everthing necessary had to be done in haste under the pressure of the extreme necessity of war.

Q.: What does the National Defense Act say regarding plans for national defense and for mobilization?

A.: It specifically states that it shall be the duty of the War Department "to prepare plans for national defense and the use of the military forces for that purpose . . . and for the mobilization of the manhood of the nation and its material resources in an emergency."

Q.: How many Corps Areas are there?

A.: Nine.

Q.: What States are included in the Ninth Corps Area?

A.: California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada and the Territory of Alaska.

REASON FOR CORPS AREAS

Q.: Why have Corps Areas?

A.: In order to have decentralized plans and control so as to prevent a repetition of the congestion which has heretofore existed in Washington.

Q.: What are the missions of the various components of our organized peace establishments?

A.: The Regular Army must provide the peace and war garrison of our foreign possessions, and must stand ready in case of internal disorders and other emergency at home, but its paramount mission is to assist in organizing and training the civilian elements provided by the basic law. The National Guard is the component upon which we must depend in situations requiring immediate action beyond the very limited power of the small Regular Army. These two components form the first echelon of our national defense. The organized reserve constitutes the final reliance against any formidable aggression. Its ranks are to be recruited from the great body of available men who would respond to the call of service. This forms the second echelon of our national defense. Each component has its mission and each has a relation and dependency upon the other—the three together forming the Army of the United States.

Q.: How will enrollments for the defense test be made?

A.: By unit commanders, working in co-operation with local civilian committees. The exact method will be worked out in each committee—it is a part of the unit plan

Q.: What are these civilian committees and how are they appointed?

A.: The plan for the defense test contemplated that there be in each State a State committee to be appointed by the Governor, and local committees to be appointed by the Governor or by the State committee. These committees are to have full charge of all civilian participation in the defense test. In each State in the Ninth Corps Area, a regular officer has been designated as representive of the Corps Area commander, whose duty it is to assist the State authorities in their preparation for the defense test and to co-ordinate locally the efforts of the military personnel in connection therewith.

COMMITTEE'S DATES

Q.: How will the State and local committees function in connection with the test of the mobilization plans?

A.: By inviting men of military age to enroll for the test in some local unit of the Army of the United States; Regular Army, National Guard or Organized Reserves.

Q.: Where will the local committees get information concerning the local unit?

A.: From any army officer or from the State committee.

Q.: How should the enrollments be conducted?

A.: By mutual agreement between the local unit commanders and the local committees. The local unit commanders will normally inform the local committee of their requirements in men, together with the special civilian trade qualifications they desire as to many cooks, bakers, teamsters, clerks, foremen, mechanics, etc., and the local committees will assign the men enrolled with them to the various local units.

Q.: Will the local unit commanders enroll any men?

A.: Yes. They will endeavor to fill their organizations to full strength.

Q.: What benefits will be derived from the test?

A.: In the many communities where the plan will be thoroughly carried out the benefit will be great, both the civilian population and the military profiting thereby. Each will learn how dependent it is on the other. In addition, the various government and army officials who will be responsible for the effective working of the various mobilization plans in an emergency will have an opportunity to check the plans, learn of any deficiencies, and revise and correct them.

HAS PATRIOTIC PHASE

Q.: Is this test of mobilization plans all there is to the defense test?

A.: No, there are to be patriotic demonstrations as well.

Q.: What is the purpose of the patriotic demonstrations?

A.: Mainly to allow our citizens to show just where they stand on the question of national defense, which is one of the fundamentals of our government.

Q.: What would be a normal community program for Defense Day?

A.: That would depend entirely on local conditions and desires. It might include an assembly, a parade or other patriotic rally, but all local programs should include a public gathering of civilians with appropriate exercises, including (a) prayer for our national welfare, (b) patriotic music, (c) addresses to cover appropriate subjects, such as an explanation of the "common-defense" feature in the Preamble of the Constitution, the "duties and obligations of citizenship," the "general principles of the National Defense Act," and the "mobilization plans" made in accordance with that act, including an explanation of the "detailed plans of mobilization in that community," including shelter, supply, training and hospitalization arrangements. The community program might also well embrace organized recreation and amusement and might also include a picnic or barbecue.

Q.: To what may the Defense Test be compared?

A.: To a stockholders' meeting where the responsible executive officers of the government, acting in the capacity of a board of directors, will give an account of their stewardship to the people, who are stockholders. It has been compared to the periodical inventory made by all business men to determine just what they have on hand and what their future needs may be. It has been compared to a fire drill. We provide our school buildings with the latest modern appliances to insure the safety of our children in the event of fire, but these appliances are of little value unless the children are familiar with them and train in their use. It has also been compared to a practice run made by a fire department to fight an imaginary fire, and to an inspection of fire-fighting equipment and hose periodically made by all the fire companies.

INTERESTS CITIZENS

Q.: Is the defense test of interest to the average citizen?

A.: It is; just as much so as any other function of his representative government. The American citizen elects representatives to make his laws and to make his government, which guarantees the safety, order and tranquility of his country and his home. Therefore, that which concerns the safety of his home concerns the average citizen.

Q.: What part can the average citizen play on Defense Day?

A.: He can express his approval of what, in the last analysis is a guarantee of protection of his home and family. If he is of military age, he can register as a volunteer member of a defensive unit for that day. If he has passed that age he can still play his part by participation in the patriotic exercises and going on record as supporting national defense.

Q.: What can a woman do on Defense Day?

A.: She can add her presence to the assemblages and indorse the training and preparation of those who might some day be her protectors.

Q.: What part can the children play on Defense Day?

A.: They can witness the patriotic exercises and see for themselves a practical expression of patriotism which will be a foundation of ideals for them to form in later life.

Q.: What question should each citizen ask himself and answer for himself on Defense Day?

A.: The question: "Am I an asset or a liability?" "If my country should ever be in danger will I be a help or a hindrance?" If between the ages of 18 and 35, active service in defense may be demanded and each of the 5,000,000 Americans of this class should ask himself: "Have I the necessary strength and vigor? Am I physically fit? Do I come up to the standard?" If the answer is "Yes" he is an asset; if "No" he is a liability. The citizen who has passed the age of active service may find a favorable answer in one of the many "home services." Our "citizen soldier" must be cared for, he must be fed, he must be supplied. Individual and community co-operation are vital parts of our present national defense plans. All, no matter what age or sex, should on September 12 frankly ask themselves the question: "Am I an asset or a liability?" and if the answer is "liability," undertake to find a means of changing it to "an asset."

AGAINST CHILD LAW

Just who and what is Francis Buck Livesey of West Friendship, Md.? Whatever or whoever he is, Mr. Livesey is flooding America with literature against the ratification of the Child Labor amendment. Mr. Livesey rejoices that the legislatures of Georgia and Louisiana voted down the child labor amendment. He blames Arkansas for distinguishing itself as the first State to ratify. He extols "Ma" Ferguson of Texas as a Governor who will prevent ratification in Texas. He makes the interesting statement that "If the child labor amendment is ratified, farming will become a lost art."

need to keep alive the imaginative side." Its membership, therefore, it not limited to poets, but to persons eager to aid in the advancement of poetry. In England the society has a number of local "centers," which hold frequent meetings which are addressed by distinguished poets and literary authorities. Similar centers are organizing in New York, New England, Maryland and Colorado, and the society believes Southern California to be an especially suitable place for one of them.

Through these centers its official magazine (which is sent to all members) and its numerous prize contests the society not only stimulates the love of old poetry but the constant writing of new creations. At the present time the society is offering through the Poetry Review a $100 prize for the best sonnet descriptive of the beauty and atmosphere of any city or town, a $50 prize for the best poems on stars (heavenly, not Hollywood,) a $50 prize for ballad writers and a $50 prize for the best poem about music. The Poetry Review also offers a bi-monthly prize of two guineas for the best poem submitted during the preceding month.

A meeting to organize a center will be called in this city soon. All poets or poetry lovers of this territory who would like fuller information will be invited to that meeting if they will notify Lee Shippey, Del Mar, Cal., of their interest.

GROUP OF LATE BOOKS

little money and a change of underclothing, he wandered from city to city, working his way, studying the art treasures and having a very happy time.

He says of his experience: "Actually I can not explain to myself how I was able to make this journey with so little money. For three months I went from place to place over the Italian peninsula, in a dizzy whirl, wishing to see everything without delay, receiving impressions like cascades swollen with incessant rains, stopping to study some things and divining others, in such manner that, rather than merely coming to know Italy, what I did was to immerse myself in it."

When a little later the book was published in Spain it ran through many editions and was the first of his writings to bring him general recognition. It is still a valuable book for the general reader and especially so for the traveler, actual or expectant, in Italy. For this young man, with his ability, his quick and true perception of artistic values and his fresh enthusiasms, makes the very best of guides through the art treasures of the Italian cities.

KENNETH HARLAN WANTS TO BE BAD

POPULAR ACTOR LIKES TO PLAY "HEAVY" ROLES AS WELL AS BE HERO

Found—the screen star who doesn't always insist upon being the hero!

Kenneth Harlan, than whom there is no more popular leading man, is this rara avis, who is doing his best to explode the old notion that a screen star must never be seen in anything but "sympathetic" roles. Kenneth does not hesitate to admit that he likes, occasionally, to play even a "heavy" role (which is what studio folk call the villain's part) provided only that the character is a human and believable one.

Several of Kenneth's biggest successes have been in these "heavy" roles, in such pictures as "The World's a Stage," and more recently in "Toll of the Sea," the picture in color, in which his part, the masculine lead, was a strong acting role, and a human characterization, but certainly not that of the hero too frequently seen in pictures: the man who can do—nay, can even think, no wrong.

Mr. Harlan believes that the playing of an occasional modified villain role adds to versatility and increases his scope, particularly as it often happens that such a part offers more chance for good acting than the hero's part. It is an odd fact that Kenneth's first choice of roles does not include either of the types in which he won fame; first, as the dress-suited, top-hatted hero of the drawing-room, and, in direct contrast, as the "man of the great open spaces," typified by "The Virginian."

This independent, likable young man likes to play men—men who do things, whether in office, shop or ranch—and he doesn't believe that the strong, energetic character always does just the right thing. Sometimes he makes mistakes; sometimes he does an injustice, even—but if he is the right sort at heart, he does his best to make amends. "The little bit of bad in the best of us, and the good in the worst" may be a bromide, but it is also the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin—and makes a screen part that is remembered.

WALLY USES AIR

MacDonald Sends Photographs Swiftly to New York

Airplane mail was put to a new use last week by Wallace MacDonald, who dispatched several photographs of himself to New York. MacDonald is being considered for one of the biggest roles of the year in an eastern production.

The director believes MacDonald is too youthful in appearance, so Wally sent him by air mail several pictures to disprove this belief. Sent from Los Angeles Thursday, the photographs arrived in New York yesterday, a wire from the director, acknowledging their receipt, stated.

WOMAN PLANS COURT

Miss Dorothy Frooks, young woman lawyer, athlete, aviatrix, war heroine and author, plans to establish a poor man's court in New York City similar to the one recently established in Philadelphia.

TRAGIC TALE OF MRS. WANTMOOR

honors, but that was because the stupid faculty paid more attention to mere grades than to exceptional talents. And she was graduated in triumph, all the other characters in the class play being mere background for her. That was because she not only bossed the play but had revised and brightened it up for the benefit of her own part. Otherwise it would have been rather crude. It was a piece by some literary lout named Arnold Bennett.

Her betterments of that script showed her to be a scenarist by instinct.

PARENTS WELCOME BOYS

But do not assume that, merely because she could not be blind to her own superiorities, Alys longed to sit in the scorner's seat and hurl the cynic's ban. She much preferred to live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend of man—or men, to be more accurate. In that her parents encouraged her with unmitigated enthusiasm, realizing that they had never been able to do or give her anything to quite satisfy her, and having grown eager to shift that job to other shoulders. They realized that she had been a wonder at spurring them on, but had to admit they were not mettlesome enough to respond to the spur with a thrill when they had been getting nothing else for about eighteen years.

During the next four years Dad became a stranger to his own living-room, while Mom saw it only by morning light, when she entered with broom and dustpan. Evenings it was reserved for Alys and her company, while Dad and Mom were banished to the kitchen, the dining-room being too close to the living-room to give young men an encouraging sense of solitude.

Every youth who called was given ample opportunities to commit himself. But that seemed one thing not one of them wished to commit.

DAD PASSES ON

After four years of straining upkeep of a daughter he never satisfied and a living-room he never saw, Dad once more was admitted to the latter for a short while. But he was in a long, black box.

After that Alys had to go to work in a bookstore. A cigarstand job might have paid better, but she was not a college girl, had never learned to shoot craps and had to turn to unskilled labor.

Before that she had determined to wed a man worthy of herself—one who could give her a name which would make her conspicuous, a twelve-roomed house in an exclusive district, a Rolls-Royce, a liberal allowance, an unlimited charge account, ardent worship and constant attendance, when desired. But alas for the high ideals of youth! She then launched herself in a drive for the affections of a soda-jerker named Scott, who claimed to have saved up several hundred dollars.

No girl ever had a better follow-up system than Alys. When she gold hold of a promising man she took him out of circulation if she could. She had a flattering way of taking hold of the coat lapels as she said good night and asking, "Shall I see you tomorrow?" which few men could withstand—at first. She had her Shakespeare well enough to know that tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow are all that make up years.

SCOTTY HOOKED

In four days she had Scotty engaged, but then could restrain herself no longer. She took command of him in her superior way. He left vowing to return next night, but didn't. Instead he eloped with a very different girl, like a man jumping into a river to escape from a fire.

Ship-wrecked persons clutch at straws. Wantmoor was semi-invalid, sole support of an aged mother and two ancient aunts, but has prospects, and Alys clutched at him. He imagined a man in his position could firt a bit with no serious consequences. But half the husbands in the world thought that.

On the honeymoon she told him of so many things they'd have to have that his first act, on returning to the office, was to beg for a rise. He had a good record and was made assistant treasurer. All her doing. Wantmoor received more and had less than ever before.

Alys acted as if he had been elected president. It was, she knew, all because of the "front" she had made him put up, so she redoubled her efforts. She drove him so hard the next two years that he aged greatly, and was in line for the treasurership when his chief retired.

PERSONAL TRIUMPH

She recognized his election as treasurer as a personal triumph for her, and they spread out socially.

Not a night passed that she did not either give Wantmoor the thrill of going where he didn't want to go or entertaining someone he didn't want to know. She discreetly discarded his old friends and told him who they must cultivate.

Repeatedly she compelled him to don his evening clothes when he longed to don his night clothes. She assured him their position demanded it.

She frequently admitted that she was bringing him into public notice. And she was. He became so noticeable the directors of the company marveled at him—wondered how he could do it on his income.

The day after they called in an expert accountant to discover the secret, Wantmoor was arrested trying to slip across the border. His stenographer was with him. She was a cross-eyed, hare-lipped little girl, but she had never tried to boss him.

He is serving time for his villainy now, and there is a great deal of sympathy for his poor wife, who, of course, is suing. Nobody feels much sympathy for him—especially since the hardened wretch wrote that now he feels like a comparatively free man. He thinks the rest will benefit his health, too.

So it is plain he isn't entitled to sympathy unless he should begin teasing his mind with this problem:

Problem: If Alys made him what he was while advancing and he alone made himself what he is, find the value of Alys.

LOLA TODD WITH ANDY GUMP

Lola Todd has completed the feminine lead in Ernst Laemmle's latest short western production, "The Boomerang," starring Billy Sullivan. She has been assigned to a role in the current Andy Gump comedy directed by William Watson, in which comedy characterization ability is required.

AIN'T IT A GRAND
GLORIOUS FEELING!
When you start out in the morning to buy wife that car you promised her, and after tramping from one used-car lot to another, where first one car and another is tried, and they cough and spit and jerk and balk, and hi-pressure salesmen try to hook you into buying something you know you don't want, and after trying till your throat is dry, and your feet are sore and swollen, you finally arrive at BOZZANI'S where a courteous salesman shows you just what you want at a reasonable price and in excellent shape, and you lay down your dough in confidence and drive home something worth while to wife dear—say, man! AIN'T IT GRAND?

HOT DIGGETY!!
It sure is wonderful when a firm can advertise a number of cars and have customers come in and buy them without even hearing the motors run!
It means just this, folks, that a house with a reputation like we have enjoys big business only on account of having given buyers thousands of honest to goodness bargains where every dollar that has been spent bought $2 worth of merchandise.

OLD LANDMARK IS DESTROYED

Pasadena Apartment-House Scene of Blaze

Visiting Firemen Do Some Real Fighting

Adjoining Business Property is Damaged

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 6.—Fire of an undetermined origin swept through the Colonial apartments at 210 North Pasadena avenue late this afternoon causing damage estimated at $15,000. All available fire apparatus in the city was hurried to the scene and the firemen's convention now in session in Pasadena, adjourned while the delegates assisted in quenching the blaze.

The rear of the Hunt & Sons grocery store at 215 North Pasadena avenue was also on fire. Excited citizens and boys endeavoring to save merchandise literally threw cases of canned goods, pies, cakes and vegetables into the street. The damage to the grocery store stock was heavy as a result.

Beds, mattresses, dishes and breakable articles were hurled out of top windows of the apartment house. North Pasadena avenue and Walnut street, covered with household goods and groceries appeared as though a cyclone had struck the neighborhood.

The fire was started in the rear of the apartment-house and quickly spread to the interior. One woman, whose name was not learned by the authorities, was carried out of the burning building on a mattress. She is said to have been ill and confined to her bed.

The Colonial apartment-house is one of the oldest in the city. It is built entirely of wood, and according to local firemen has long been considered a fire trap. Occupants of the establishment which is owned and operated by Thomas Birch, are E. B. Bedwell, C. A. Bensen, F. J. Bickner, Mrs. Emma Butler, E. J. Carney, T. M. Carroll, T. C. Cross, William David, A. M. Eggleston, H. F. Kearnes, F. C. Norman, Frank Rausch, L. A. Wisenhorn and C. O. Wright.

OXNARD CELEBRATES

Visitors Throng to Gala Day In Ventura Town

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OXNARD, Sept. 6.—The city is crowded with visitors here to assist in the celebration of Oxnard progress day. A program of events started this morning at 9 o'clock and continued throughout the day, ending with a street dance. Bud Houser, Oxnard boy who won two Olympic first places, gave an exhibition in the shot put and discus throw. Robert Nunn, State champion horseshoe pitcher, showed his home town friends how he won the championship at the State Fair last week and how he made a record at Pasadena a short time before.

This afternoon Bud Houser was given a formal reception by the Chamber of Commerce. He was presented with a gold medal. The presentation was made by W. D. Bannister, president of the Oxnard Chamber of Commerce and who is also principal of the Oxnard Union High School, where Bud got his early training in athletics. Charles Donlon, vice-president of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, delivered an address during the formal opening of the new Chamber of Commerce offices in the new A. Camarillo Building.

MOTOR PATROLMEN ON FORCED LEAVE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 6.—The State motor traffic department in Kern county, now numbering six persons, including five highway patrol officers and a secretary, will be cut to three motor patrolmen, it was announced today by Capt. W. E. Small of the department.

The reduction was found necessary following the recent asserted failure of the Kern County Board of Supervisors to act on a request for a loan of $3600 to the California Motor Vehicle Department, wanted to tide over the highway patrol until the first of the year when more funds will be available from new motor-vehicle registrations.

KERN COUNTY PUPILS PLAY DAY IS OVER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 6.—Vacations for approximately 19,000 school children will have ended on Monday morning, when the schools within the county's 105 school districts will have opened for the year 1924-25. Of the 19,000, approximately 5000 are in Bakersfield, including 1700 in the city's high School.

More than 500 pupils outside of Bakersfield are transported to and from the city's schools in busses without cost to them. There is a total of sixteen busses in the county each covering from twenty to eighty miles on school days.

ROB QUICK AND OFTEN

Rapid Fire Burglars Stage Series of Exciting Events In and Around Orange

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, Sept. 6.—While victimizing three homes on the outskirts of the city, last night, burglars, believed by police to be the same that conducted a series of whirlwind robberies here several weeks ago, narrowly escaped capture at one place, brought a merry party to an unhappy conclusion at another and were rewarded with about $20 in loot for their evening's operations, it was learned today from police reports.

The intruder, termed by police as the "cash burglar," because he disdained everything but money, received a thrill when Ed J. Browne, Tustin street rancher, whose home he was robbing, returned home about 7:30 last night while the intruder was ransacking the place.

Browne, unaware of the intrusion, drove his car into the garage and started into the house when he was startled by a noise inside. Obtaining a gun, Browne dashed in the direction of the sound, but discovered the front door open and the intruder gone.

The house was in a bad state of disorder, showing evidence where the burglar had ransacked the place in search for money before his activities were interrupted by the arrival of the owner.

An investigation today by Herman Zabel, county finger print expert, disclosed two children's banks in the orchard, both shattered by a hammer and the contents, amounting to about $15, missing. Footprints, indicating a large-sized shoe, were also discovered in the grove.

While a party was in progress at the Fred Klaner home, a short distance from the Browne residence on North Tustin street, the thieves, operating with unusual boldness, entered the front room and departed with two purses belonging to feminine guests.

The burglars, suspected of being the same who entered the Browne home, waited until the merrymakers went outdoors before braving entrance into the brightly lighted room.

The theft was discovered as the party was nearing conclusion. A search by the men guests ended with the finding of the purses, rifled of contents amounting to about $4.50, in an adjoining orchard.

The third raid occurred at the home of G. A. Nuffer at 645 North Cambridge street, which was entered during the absence of the family. The thief escaped with a gentleman's watch after leaving the house in a topsy-turvy condition. Entrance was effected by slashing a screen and using a passkey on the door.

ANAESTHETIC FATAL

Glendale Woman Dies in Dental Office

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Ermina E. Hendrie, 408 Maple street, Glendale, wife of Matthew C. Hendrie, died Saturday in the dental offices of Dr. L. A. Wright, 220 Security Building, following the administration of gas before submitting to the extraction of her teeth.

The teeth had been removed by Dr. Wright and the patient had apparently started to regain consciousness after the anaesthetic, when she collapsed and passed away. Two physicians who were immediately summoned, were unable to revive her.

Dr. Wright declared he had been informed after Mrs. Hendrie's death that she had been in poor health, but there was nothing to lead him to believe that the operation might be attended by any serious consequences. Disposal of the remains will await word from her mother in the East.

ONE-DAY RESIDENT IS UNDER ARREST

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 6.—Facing charges of dry law violation on three counts, R. J. Cottrell, asserted bootlegger, is in the local jail while his friends are attempting to raise $1000 cash bail set by Judge H. S. Farrell in Police Court today. Cottrell pleaded not guilty when arraigned in court, demanding a jury trial, and the date will be set next Saturday.

Cottrell was placed under arrest late last night by Officers Boone, Vigneau and Reeves, after, it is said, an operative of the Alhambra police department had purchased a quart of wine with a marked bill.

The prisoner had moved to Alhambra only a day before his arrest, the police say. Equipment and supplies used in the manufacture and sale of beer and wine were found in Cottrell's room, according to the officers.

MANY ATTEND FAIR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 6.—More than 3000 persons attended the tridistrict Weed Patch-Arvin-Edison Fairfax fair held at Weed Patch today, under the auspices of the fruit growers, vineyardists and cotton planters of the three communities. The varied agricultural products of these sections of Kern county were displayed to excellent advantage and numerous prizes will be awarded. A novel feature among the exhibits was a 300-pound cake of ice, containing frozen grapes and other fruit.

OVERCOATS GIVEN CALL IN NEW YORK

Cool Wave Drives Straw Hats to Cover; Citizens Do Involuntary Shimmy

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—There was a nip in the air this afternoon. So much of a nip that overcoats outnumbered straw hats five to one. Those who count themselves among the fresh air friends did an involuntary shimmy until long after noon when the temperature climbed to 58.

The reason for top coats being worn is that this is the coldest September 6 in the history of the weather bureau. At 6 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 48, which equals the record for the early fall made on September 4, 1872.

However, the forecaster says that balmy weather is due to arrive here not later than Sunday afternoon and will continue. He did not say how long it would continue, but he volunteered the information that no rain was in sight.

The present cool wave covers a wide area, extending back to the Mississippi Valley. In Michigan and Northern Ohio frosts are reported, while throughout the Adirondack Mountains and Montreal the mercury fluctuated around the 44 mark. The cool wave came down from the Lakes region during the night.

ALL READY POMONA

College Plans Opening For Biggest Year

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

CLAREMONT, Sept. 6.—With increased facilities and a strengthened faculty, Pomona College will open the new college year with the largest outlook of its history. Registration will occupy the three days of the 15th to 17th insts. On Wednesday, the 17th inst., at 10:30 a.m. in Bridges Hall of Music, President James Arnold Blaisdell will deliver the opening convocation address.

Applicants for admission have exceeded by several hundred the 225 to which the freshman class is limited. Applications from all parts of the United States and foreign countries have been received, and the student body will represent a wider area than ever before.

Notwithstanding losses through graduation, Pomona College looks forward to a year of signal success in athletics. The seasoned athletes of previous years will be joined by some of the best high school men of Southern California. In football, Coach Nixon confidently figures on retaining the conference pennant for the Blue and White.

VOTERS TO DECIDE VITAL PROPOSITIONS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 6.—A special water and harbor bond election will be held Wednesday when the voters will pass upon a proposition to issue $4,475,000 for water conservation and harbor improvements.

A unanimity of opinion exists in favor of the harbor bonds, which will be used to extend the present docking facilities, but public sentiment is equally divided on a proposal to erect a masonry dam in the Mission Gorge. The City Council is divided on the question of where the dam should be located, although two hydraulic engineers have approved the Mission site No. 2.

In order to obtain an expression from the voters, the Council decided to submit the problem for solution in a special election.

Irvine, secretary of the Kern county Chamber of Commerce, has been elected vice-president of the Exhibitors' Association of California, at a meeting held in Sacramento attended by representatives of the fifty counties in the State. MAKE HISTORY AT OLD MISSION

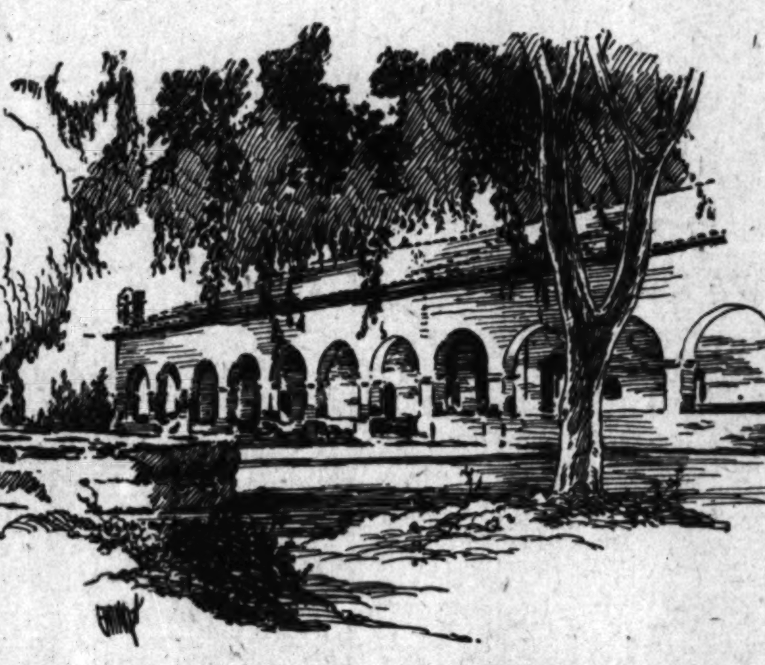
Society Pledged to Preserve Landmarks Comes Into Being



Where the Padres Trod at Mission San Fernando

TO PRESERVE THE MISSIONS

Grand Chapter of New Society to be Organized at Old Mission San Fernando

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN FERNANDO, Sept. 6.—Indications are that there will be a great revival of Californian patriotism at the old Mission San Fernando, Tuesday, next, Admission Day.

Moreover, the thousands, who are expected to attend the celebration, will have the satisfaction of making history. At high noon the Grand Chapter of the Society of the Golden Scroll will be organized in the historic old sala of the mission, where the Spanish governors of California held their great receptions in the olden times. The Society of the Golden Scroll is the new organization which has pledged itself to the preservation of the old Franciscan missions, and its new board of directors will adopt the constitution and by-laws of the society, while seated under the four flags, which have waved in dominion over California from the time of its discovery until the present day.

A great program of dancing, music, sports and merry-making will be carried out beginning at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. This program will be in the general charge of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West. John P. Sweeney of San Fernando and George Blake of the Los Angeles Athletic Club have collaborated in an hour of sporting events, which will include boxing, fencing and wrestling by champions. A whole block of the new street has been roped off for dancing, which will continue throughout the day. Two brass bands will be in attendance, and at 2 o'clock John Steven McGroarty, author of the Mission Play, will deliver an historical address.

The celebration marks not only the organization of the Grand Chapter of the Society of the Golden Scroll, but also commemorates the 126th anniversary of the founding of the Mission of San Fernando. The "Garden of Memory," opposite the Mission, the newest and the most beautiful of the Los Angeles city parks will be open to the public throughout the day and accomodations will be ample for picnic parties. The mission itself will also be open and free to the public, guides will explain to visitors the various historical features.

The day being a legal holiday, great crowds of people are expected from as far north as Ventura and as far south as Santa Ana.

The various civic organizations of the San Fernando Valley including Kiwanis clubs, Women's clubs, chambers of commerce and Knights of Columbus will look after the comfort and pleasure of the visitors.

SALVAGE SEA WRECK AT SAN LUIS OBISPO

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Sept. 6.—Work of salvaging the wrecked oil tanker, Orowaiti, which went on the rocks off Point Sal several weeks ago, has been begun. The work is being carried on under difficulties, as it is impossible for a ship to come within 1000 feet of the beached tanker, and all equipment is being hauled over long lines attached from the ship to tugs standing off shore.

The crew of forty-five men from the tanker have been taken to San Francisco, where they are awaiting transportation to their homes in New Zealand.

It is believed that an attempt will be made to junk the vessel. The tanker has been greatly weakened by attempts to pull her from the rocks, and it is believed she will break up within a couple of months, or after a storm or two.

GLENDALE CO-EDS IN UNIFORM DRESS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, Sept. 6.—The opening of the Glendale High School Monday, September 8, will mark the banishment of frills and furbelows from the school grounds following the adoption by the girls of a uniform dress of middy blouse and pleated skirt for school wear.

Students who violate the dictates of the dress censors will lay themselves open to punishment, it has been decided, and a uniform committee appointed by the girls and headed by Mrs. Ethel H. F. Moyse will see that the pupils adhere to the prescribed dress.

Glendale Takes Part in Coming Water Congress

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, Sept. 6.—Virgil B. Stone, City Manager, and Peter Diederich, superintendent of water plant and production, have been appointed to represent Glendale at the meeting to be held in Pasadena on September 17, to consider plans to bring water from the Colorado River to this part of the State.

It is the belief of City Manager Stone that the Pasadena meeting may result in the formation of a permanent organization to work for the development of the Colorado River.

Whatever may be the outcome of the plans for bringing water here from the Colorado through the construction of the dam at Boulder Canyon, or some other point, Glendale is not released from the imperative need of voting bonds to acquire more water bearing lands, Stone declares.

ONTARIO PIONEER FINDS OLD PAPER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Sept. 6.—A copy of the North Ontario Surprise dated Thursday, December 21, 1899, was being exhibited today by Judge George R. Holbrook in his offices in the City Hall. This paper was published at the time that the present city of Upland was known as North Ontario, by R. W. Rontzong.

Advertisements on the front page, news stories written in a familiar style, type sizes and general arrangement are some of the outstanding differences between the North Ontario Surprise and modern newspapers. Names of pioneer citizens who are still prominent here are to be found in the old paper, among them being James B. Draper, attorney; E. H. Joliffe, Leroy R. Bradley of Upland, and others.

Fire Laddies Finish Work of Convention

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 6.—Because the firemen of California want several bills passed at the next meeting of the Legislature, the 1925 convention of the California State Firemen's Association will be held in Sacramento, it was decided today at the close of the Pasadena convention. Convention officials expressed the belief that if the convention was held in the northern city at the time of the meeting of the Legislature their bills would receive more consideration.

The feature of today's session of the convention was a demonstration of first aid to fire victims given by the Long Beach Fire Department. A paper on that subject was read by the Long Beach chief, A. H. Mentor. The demonstration consisted of various systems of bandaging and the art of artificial respiration.

A movement was started among the delegates today for the enactment of a Firemen's Pension Law. The matter was brought up by Chief E. H. Stark of Lodi. His recommendations were unanimously endorsed by the convention.

Dr. John Marvin Dean, pastor of the First Baptist Church, delivered a memorial address in honor of the twelve firemen who were killed in action during the past year.

A "slander" resolution as it was called, was passed by the convention making it unlawful for firemen to call each other, so called uncomplimentary names. The resolution, one of the most unusual to be passed by any convention that has met in this city so far, directs that when disputes or hostility of any kind develops in a department among its members, the matter shall not be openly discussed but shall be taken to the chief in charge. The fire chief will then appoint a committee to investigate the trouble in question.

CELEBRATE TEST DAY

Soldiers to Present Program in San Diego Stadium

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 6.—A patriotic program, in which units of the Army and Navy establishment will participate, will be held in the stadium next Friday on the occasion of Defense Test Day.

Senator Samuel Shortridge, who was scheduled to deliver the principal address, has telegraphed that he will be unable to come, and Rev. Roy Campbell will be the speaker of the day. Amplifiers will be installed which will carry the words of speakers to all parts of the big bowl.

A battalion of the Fourth Marines, recently returned from Santo Domingo, will hold a dress parade, and a company of the local National Guard will put on a guard mount. Detachments of the Loma Portal Naval Training Station will give an exhibition drill, and Troop G of the Eleventh Cavalry will stage a musical drill and cavalry circus.

Tomorrow afternoon Defense Test Day will be the subject of a debate between opposing speakers.

HELPED IN WINNING OF THE WEST

Bakersfield's Best-Known Pioneer Passes Away at Home of Daughter

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Ellen M. Tracey, 86 years of age, Bakersfield pioneer, after whose first husband, Col. Thomas Baker, the city which now is Bakersfield was named, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Jameson, last night.

Mrs. Tracy was born at Ann Harbor, Mich., later moving to Iowa and came to California in the middle of the last century. She was married to Col. Baker, then receiver of the land office, at Visalia in 1857 and they moved to the city which her husband founded in 1863. Col. Baker died early in the '70s and his widow was married to Ferdinand A. Tracy, another pioneer and prominent cattleman in 1875. Tracy died in 1908.

Mrs. Tracy was Worthy Chaplain of the local chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star for more than thirty years. She gave generously and spontaneously to many charities, including the site and building for a sanctuary for orphan children.

CHAFFEY TO OPEN

Union High School Prepares For Coming Year

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Sept. 6.—Announcement was made today by Merton E. Hill, principal of Chaffey Union High School, that the official registration for high school and junior college students will take place Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 15th, 16th and 17th insts. Regular classes will start on Thursday, the 18th inst.

As in previous years, the freshmen will be given the opportunity to register first, Monday being reserved for them. Sophomores and juniors are to register on Tuesday, while seniors and junior college students are to make out their schedules Wednesday.

Mr. Hill will be in his office, available for consultation with students who are undetermined as to their courses on the 10th, 11th and 12th insts. Persons between the ages of 16 and 18 years who are not enrolled for regular school work are required to register during the week of the 15th inst., for part time work, according to the State law.

TAXES LOWER IN VENTURA COUNTY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VENTURA, Sept. 6.—The lopping off of 37 cents from the county tax rate has been made by the Ventura County Supervisors. The saving will be about $200,000 to the taxpayers and was made possible chiefly by eliminating provisions for roads and bridges, with the exception of the district road funds. It was found possible in this manner to lop 30 cents off the general fund and 9 cents off the maintenance fund. The State makes it imperative that an increase be made each year in the high school fund so that the 30-cent rise this year cut down the total, but another 1 cent was taken off the salary fund, bringing the net cut to 37 cents.

AUGUST BUILDING SHOWS HEAVY GAIN OVER JULY

Los Angeles Totals $2,000,000 More Than Preceding Month; Increases General in District

Southern California building forged ahead during August, gains being made over July in many sections of the district. In Los Angeles August figures exceeded those of July by more than $2,000,000 and comparitive gains were recorded from many other points.

Los Angeles building totals for the month were $13,892,095, compared to $11,598,762 for July. The [illegible] for the month, however, was less than that of August, 1923, which was one of the high months of the year, with building valuation of $22,249,262.

Building officials, however, point out that the gains made in July and August over preceding months of the summer were indicative of the rapid return to former peak figures. The trend toward high figures is attributed to the fact that new residents are coming into Southern California in increased number and that prices of building material are at the lowest point in many months.

Classification permits issued during August in Los Angeles show [illegible] new dwellings authorized, [illegible] garages, sixty-five mercantile buildings, fifty-six appartment-houses, thirty-two school buildings, [illegible]-three industrial structures and miscellaneous other buildings.

San Diego reported the second largest total for the month. A new record for the year was set in the southern city, $1,617,316 worth of permits have been issued. This is a gain of approximately [illegible] over August of 1923. Pasadena's permits totaled more than $1,000,000 also, $1,306,328 having been recorded in the Crown City during August. Long Beach had nearly $1,000,000 for its monthly total, while Glendale was [illegible] the $700,000 mark.

SAN DIEGO FIGURES SOAR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 6.—August, usually a quiet month as far as building activity is concerned, reached a high record for the year to date, with 577 building permits valued at $1,617,316, as compared with 421 permits worth $651,598 in August, 1923.

The total for the year to August 31 was $9,180,228, or nearly $2,000,000 in excess of the total value of new building for the corresponding period last year, the city building department announced.

Two permits for high schools, one in Loma Portal to cost $360,000, and one in East San Diego to cost $275,000, were included in the August total. These were the principal major projects launched during the month, the bulk of the building permits, as usual, being for home construction.

LONG BEACH NEAR $1,000,000

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONG BEACH, Sept. 6.—Building permits for the month of August in Long Beach total $992,248, and for the year to date $14,878,401. Eight school buildings with a total value of $1,036,982.12 are now under construction and twelve more, with a total value in excess of $1,800,000 have been authorized and work on them will soon begin.

GLENDALE SHOWS DROP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GLENDALE, Sept. 6.—Building permits amounting to $687,611 were issued during the month of August. Though less than the valuation in building issued last August the total permits issued brought the year's figures to $7,081,399, which is $432,560 in excess of the total for the first eight months of the year 1923.

RECORD AT FULLERTON

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FULLERTON, Sept. 6.—Hanging up a new record for a single month's construction activities permits for August touched $370,600. This figure brings the total for the year up to $877,552, as compared with $1,237,781 at this period last year, when building operations were at the peak. There were thirty-one permits issued altogether during the month the majority of them being for new homes. Included in the August total is a permit for the new Stanley Chapman Theater block, $287,450; new school buildings, $23,000, and new Ebell clubhouse, $11,500. The mounting totals this month are construed as indicating a revival of construction work in this city and district.

SANTA BARBARA GAINS

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 6.—Building permits issued during August by the city building department amounted to $95,905 more than August of 1923, according to the monthly report filed with the city manager today.

Permits issued during the month totaled $212,835, compared with $116,930 for August, 1923, an average cost of $2446 for the eighty-seven permits issued.

Forty-five permits, amounting to $173,950 were issued for residences; five permits, totaling $18,850, for commercial structures; sixteen permits, totaling $4025, were for garages and twenty-one permits, totaling $16,010 were for alterations and additions.

Eighty-five plumbing permits were issued during the month, seventy-four gas permits, 152 electric permits and one plumber's license.

REDLANDS MARK HIGH

REDLANDS, Sept. 6.—August proved to be another month with the building total around the $60,000 mark in this city. August of

FACT AND COMMENT

Los Angeles building permits figures for August released last week by the city building inspector show a gain of more than $2,000,000 over July, which in turn showed a gain of more than $1,000,000 over June.

These gains should encourage the faint-hearted who have been holding off on building projects to get into action and aid in pushing the gain for September even higher.

For many months the conditions for building have not been ideal and yet in the face of high prices for building material and labor, and the difficulty which was experienced in obtaining both, Southern California construction reached its highest point in 1923.

Building material prices are at present at the lowest point in a number of years. Labor is plentiful and can be obtained at rea-

Many Stately Structures Are Added to Skyline of Downtown Los Angeles During Year

The story of the growth of Los Angeles has been told in many different ways. The Chamber of Commerce has prepared statistical information showing the progress being made in industry, population growth, building, shipping and other branches of activity in this vicinity, while other organizations such as the All-Year Club have spread the story of this city's expansion in every line of activity in another way.

In construction the story of progress has been revealed by the number of building permits and the amount of work being planned for the coming months. Architects have shown the growth of Los Angeles by the prospective additions to the skyline of residential and commercial Los Angeles in the form of architectural perspectives or pictures. BEAR LEADS TO GOLD DISCOVERY

Valley Named After Bruin Now Pleasure Resort

Cattle Ranches Replaced by Beautiful Cabins

Thousands Entertained Each Week-end in Mountains

In the year 1859 a certain William Holcomb found himself and prospector partner stranded in Los Angeles. They heard of a far-off Big Bear Valley where meat was plentiful, and gold probable. They finally made their way over the steep, rough, snowy range from the Santa Ana side, to be welcomed by the half-dozen prospectors already there. Provisions were soon exhausted, luck poor. The partner was departing on the morrow. They tried the spot where they were sure there was no gold—and found it! The partner set out to bring back his family and provisions. Meanwhile, Holcomb built a smoke house which was never empty of bear bacon so long as he remained in the valley.

Out hunting, Holcomb climbed the divide between the Santa Ana waters and the Mojave. Trailing a wounded bear lead to the discovery of pay dirt. A wild-fire rush began. In 1861 nearly one-third of all the votes cast in San Bernardino county were cast in "Holcomb's Valley." Not a few ruins point out the transitory nature of sudden wealth, but mining has never stopped. The mine that was the foundation of Lucky Baldwin's fortune, fitted with modern machinery, still overlooks the lake that bears his name.

ORANGES IRRIGATED

Big Bear Lake was created in 1884 to irrigate the orange lands of Redlands. A dam flung across the precipitous walls of Bear Creek Canyon filled the great natural basin above. The site, 4500 acres, was purchased outright for about $30,000. After tempestuous decades of legal battles the reservoir is now in the hands of the Bear Valley Mutual Water Company.

In 1912 a new dam seventy-six feet high lifted the level of the lake twelve feet, and increased its surface area by hundreds of acres. The gray skeletons of grand old pine monarchs looming prophetic-like among the big boulder islands, form a most unique spectacle now rapidly disappearing, as the surrounding shores are being improved by the summer homes of the wealthy. The rich China gardens where the Chinese raised vegetables for Doble in the '80's, has become a saturated marsh, which a small dam may soon convert into a big shallow lake for ducks and skating.

Even in the earliest days Big Bear Lake was favored for summer residence. In 1900, when there were 400 tents around Charlie Henry's little red-roofed green supply store, many families, among them the Garsins, Morrisons, Havels, Fishers, Painters, and Whiteshalls, had already built comfortable log cabin summer homes. The Fisher cabins are now the Castle Rock Inn, and the office of Woodland Lodge is now in the old Whitehall cabins, whose hospitable roofs have sheltered the first nights of many of the old residents.

POPULARITY GAINS

As the years rolled on Bear Valley became more and more popular. Resorts sprang up to care for the numbers who flocked to the great heights for vacation. Gus Knight, Jr., founded the first. In 1913, Pine Knot Lodge, now the oldest, was started. Then, there were less than 100 homes, now there are many thousand homes and half a hundred resorts. It is estimated 40,000 people were entertained in one week-end. Except for the shortage of beds the great resources of "California's Topmost" could care for many times that number without crowding.

For half a century the great cattle ranches, thousands of acres in extent, were a feature of the valley. Gus Knight, Sr., was a pioneer, William Talmadge in 1892 bought the famous I. S. outfit. Shay-Barker and Grimes-Hitchcock came afterward. In the last decade the annual return from cattle sales was well over $250,000. These pastures and stately woods are now home sites for the city-weary.

Western Avenue Transfer Made

Bought by J. R. White

BRICK STRUCTURE BOUGHT

Sale of a two-story brick building, located on the west side of Western avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, for a reported consideration of approximately $220,000 was announced yesterday. The building has a frontage of 113 feet on Western avenue, and contains five stores on the ground floor, and apartments on the second story. A large proportion of the store space is leased to the Kress company. The seller, Harri Carpenter, was represented by Burton & Co., and the buyer, J. R. White, was represented by Laack & Williams.

ings have been published from time to time in various newspapers.

Probably the most effective way of showing the general trend of construction during the year is to show the number of completed buildings as they stand today, monuments to the genius builders, architects and owners of yesterday. In a compilation of downtown buildings, in the skyscraper class, it is revealed that more than twenty-five office and loft buildings have been completed within the last six months. This does not include numerous smaller structures ranging in height from one to eight stories.

Among the prominent structures in the business district completed recently are the Standard Oil Building at Tenth and Hope streets, the Insurance Exchange Building on Ninth street, the Chamber of Commerce Building at Twelfth and Broadway, National City Building at Eighth and Spring streets, Hellman Bank Building at Seventh and Spring, Financial Center Building at Seventh and Spring, Transportation Building at Seventh and Los Angeles, Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation Building at Eighth and Hill streets, and Western Costume Building at Tenth and Broadway. These buildings were built at a cost of more than $12,000,000.

Valley Body is Seeking Change in Street Name

With the filing of petitions before the City Council for the change of name of Saugus avenue and Brand Boulevard to that of Sepulveda Boulevard, the Greater San Fernando Valley Association has taken the initial step to make this highway one of the major thoroughfares of Southern California.

Sepulveda Boulevard will traverse the San Fernando Valley from north to south through its geographical center. It will cross Mulholland Scenic Skyline Drive and continue down through Sepulveda Canyon and connect up through a series of other present highways a direct and important travel artery to Los Angeles Harbor. Its northern connection will be San Fernando Boulevard at Sylmar.

It is the opinion of the City and County Planning Commission that Sepulveda Boulevard will at once become one of the most useful and heavily traveled thoroughfares of Southern California. It will enable all of the freight and other traffic coming into Los Angeles from the northern counties destined to the harbor to take a short cut through the west part of Los Angeles direct to the port and evade the congestion of the harbor and other boulevards. It will also enable San Fernando Valley an opportunity of an outlet into the western part of the city, to the west beaches, and also to the harbor.

This splendid highway is one of the major projects of the Greater San Fernando Valley Association, and this initial step presages an active campaign by this organization in its highway campaign in the valley.

BALTIC STATES TRADE DOWN

United States trade with the Baltic States—Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, slumped during the fiscal year ending June 30, last, total figures for the year amounting to $26,900,000 as compared with $30,900,000 for the year previous, and $26,400,000 for the year ending June, 1922, according to the European division of the Department of Commerce. Imports from these countries rose continuously from $6,000,000 in 1922, to $12,500,000 in 1923, and $14,000,000 in 1924.

FACT AND COMMENT

sonable wages. A home or a business building erected under present conditions is an investment that will pay rich returns. Present conditions will not prevail for any great length of time. Prices of building material are going to rise shortly. Labor is going to be harder to get and may cost more. Prices of real estate are going up and will keep on doing so.

In view of the present situation it is difficult to understand the psychology of those who have been contemplating building this year, but who have put it off.

Every day of delay now will cost real dollars to the prospective home builder or man who builds as an investment.

Far-sighted people have been making hay during the past summer and will reap a rich reward with the return of maximum activity in the real estate and building world.

The Don't Like Us

The writer, recently returned from an eastern trip, learned of one campaign against Southern California being vigorously prosecuted in eastern States which may do this territory more good than harm.

The campaign is being carried on through the medium of stickers purporting to be of I.W.W. origin. These stickers warn people against coming to Southern California and proclaim that we are building only jails here.

The stickers occupy prominent places in cheap poolrooms and other places of a similar nature.

The campaign, which is, of course, an effort to avenge the failure of the port strike here and the inability of the organization to foment labor troubles in this district, will not keep away from us the type of people we want. Poolroom loafers and habitues of bootleg dives do not go to make up the typical Southland population.

It is to be hoped that the I.W.W. or the individuals connected thereto who are behind the campaign are successful in attaining their ends so far as concerns their own ilk. The fewer people of the type reached by the stickers, or who would be influenced by the sort of men who ask them to avoid this State, the better.

On the Upgrade

Real estate brokers in Los Angeles report that during the last two or three weeks a definite strengthening of the market has been felt here. Business has been better than at any time for the last six months and inquiries from live prospects are pouring into the realty offices in large numbers.

The improvement in the situation also has been noted by the railroads. Passenger officials say that more one-way tickets from eastern cities are being sold to Southern California than for some months.

Those who have been in close touch with the situation are not surprised. Those who had the foresight and courage to buy real estate during the quieter summer months are preparing to reap a well-earned profit. They realized that business was slow because of temporary conditions and that the forward progress of Southern California would not be halted for long.

University Adds Correspondence Realty Courses

The University of Southern California has come forward with a contribution to education that is of interest to every person in the real estate business or who is thinking of entering it. It is now offering a correspondence course in real estate based entirely on conditions in California and in which the law and practice of California are discussed in detail.

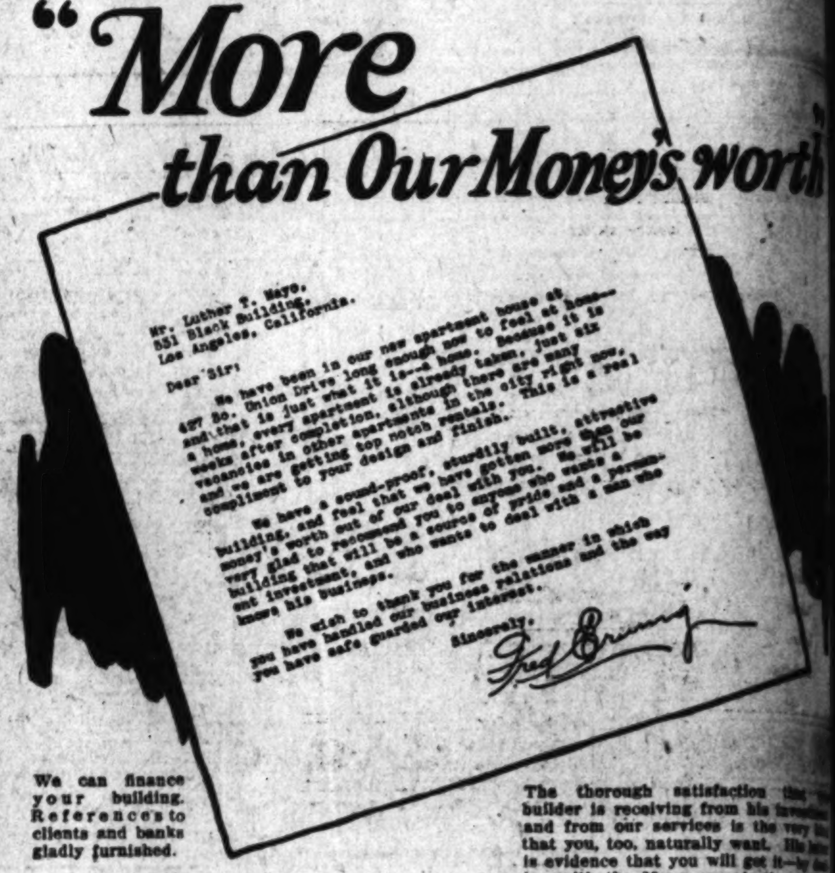
There are twenty-six lessons altogether, each discussing a definite topic, such as mortgages, escrows, selling (two lessons,) handling the various types of property—residential, subdivision, industrial, business and farm; management of property, investments in real estate, etc.

The authors of the lessons are widely-known experienced real estate brokers, university teachers, bankers and others who have made a special study of the subjects they discuss.

NEW FINANCIAL HOUSE OPENS IN INGLEWOOD

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, Sept. 6.—The People's Finance and Thrift Company of Inglewood opened its doors for business this week at 124 North Market street, but the formal opening will not be until the 18th inst., it was stated by the secretary-manager, Ralph Lamb. This occasion is delayed pending the completion of the fittings and equipment, which are expected to be finished and installed by that time.



"More than Our Money's worth"

Mr. Luther T. Mayo,
531 Black Building,
Los Angeles, California.

Dear Sir:

We have been in our new apartment house at 427 So. Union Drive long enough now to feel at home—and that is just what it is—a home. Because it is a home, every apartment is already taken, just six weeks after completion, although there are many vacancies in other apartments in the city right now, and we are getting top notch rentals. This is a real compliment to your design and finish.

We have a sound-proof, sturdily built, attractive building, and feel that we have gotten more than our money's worth out of our deal with you. We will be very glad to recommend you to anyone who wants a building that will be a source of pride and a permanent investment, and who wants to deal with a man who knows his business.

We wish to thank you for the manner in which you have handled our business relations and the way you have safe guarded our interest.

Sincerely,
Fred Ereiming

We can finance your building. References to clients and banks gladly furnished.

The thorough satisfaction this builder is receiving from his investment and from our services is the very thing that you, too, naturally want. His letter is evidence that you will get it—by dealing with the Mayo organization.

OPEN NEW THEATER AT INGLEWOOD

Near-by City Boasts Fine Playhouse; Structure Cost $150,000

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, Sept. 6.—The latest addition to Inglewood public buildings is the new Granada Theater, a $150,000 structure of ornamental brick and tiled roof. Andrew Bennett of this city is the owner. A ten-year lease, said to be for the largest consideration given in the history of the city, was taken on the structure by De Witt B. Van Derlipp, manager for the Inglewood Theater Company and the Venice Amusement Company, who will give the beautiful new theater his personal supervision.

The imposing structure has seating accommodations for 2000. It is equipped with a fine organ and the stage is large enough for the largest legitimate productions.

The interior decoration is unique and is declared to be unexcelled by any theater of its size in Southern California.

On either side of the spacious lobby there are large storerooms fronting on Market street, the main business thoroughfares, while above are a number of office suites.

The theater, which will present moving pictures, vaudeville and drama, was formally opened on Friday evening with the preview of "Find Your Man," a Warner Brothers production. Miss June Marlowe, a Warner star and heroine of the picture, made a personal appearance, introduced by one of the Warner Brothers.

Work Pushed on New Hollywood Apartments

Everything to be utilized in the construction and equipment of the Havenhurst Apartment in Hollywood has been purchased, and marked progress has been made on the building itself, according to the M. A. Charlston Company, fiscal agents.

The Havenhurst will be the first individually owned apartment to be finished in Hollywood, it is said.

Indicative of the high type of appointments that will feature throughout, mahogany woodwork in the living-rooms, cove ceilings, paneled and canvased walls, all tile bathrooms and hardwood floors will be used in every apartment.

A new idea recently incorporated in the plan is that of creating a roof garden on the roof of the garages, and the structure has been specially reinforced for that purpose in pouring the concrete, which was done last week. The entire roof had to be poured in a single operation.

The firm of Pfaefke & Estinoza has been retained as financial advisers.

NEW QUARTERS FOR DRYGOODS COMPANY

Through the W. Ross Campbell Company, business and industrial property brokers of 712-14 S. Spring street, a lease was consummated for the storeroom located in the Stewart-Dawes Building, a five-story, Class A structure, on the southwest corner of Eighth and Santee streets between A. J. Coldwater of the Stewart-Dawes Company and Nat Freedberg. Mr. Freedberg is engaged in the wholesale drygoods business and has removed from his present location at 856 Santee street into his new quarters. Negotiations for the consummation of the lease were conducted by O. C. Dyatt of the W. Ross Campbell Company, sales and leases department.

KERN COUNTY ROAD ASSESMENTS GAIN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 6.—Assessed valuation of the four county road districts has increased $5,197,890 over the total valuation of last year, according to figures presented to the Board of Supervisors and which will later be discussed in an attempt to cut the road district tax. Last year the total assessed valuation of the four road districts amounted to $133,878,345. This year, according to the County Assessor's office, the total valuation for the four road districts is $139,076,235, an increase of more than $5,000,000.

Statistics of the National Board of Fire Underwriters show the fire loss in the United States to have been more than $500,000,000 in one year. Carelessness is given as the chief cause.

Hot Springs Resort Will be Fine Watering Place

Prominent Men Interested in Proposed Improvements

Prof. C. G. Anthony, vice-president of the Arrowhead Hot Springs Company, yesterday announced plans for the development of Arrowhead Hot Springs said to be the most comprehensive proposed for any watering-place in the United States. Seth Marshall, for more than twenty-five years active head of the California resort, became president of the Arrowhead Company.

It is said that the proposed development of Arrowhead Hot Springs, located seven and a half miles from San Bernardino, calls for an expenditure of more than $3,000,000, representing the largest sum of money expended on a similar resort. Mr. Marshall, recognizing the importance of developing this property along European lines, has secured the exclusive services of Prof. Anthony, mineral water authority, as manager of the new development.

Prof. Anthony made an extensive study of all the more important and famous European watering-places as consulting expert for the State of New York in connection with the restoration of Saratoga Springs which had ceased to flow. It is said that the Arrowhead Hot Springs development under Prof. Anthony's direction will make this resort the world's finest bath establishment.

MANY ATTRACTIONS

"As far back as 1884," said Mr. Anthony yesterday, "Arrowhead Hot Springs began attracting patrons because in this one remarkable spot are to be found the hottest curative springs, radio-active waters, cold springs, hot mineralized mud and natural steam caves.

"Thirty years ago Mr. Marshall saw possibilities of Arrowhead's natural outdoor playground and because of his foresight he has succeeded in making these Southern California springs one of the five foremost watering spots in the world.

"Many of the most prominent business and professional men in this part of the country are interested in this development, including Reese Llewellyn, William Llewellyn, David E. Llewellyn, John Milner, Lee A. McConnell, D. W. Pontius, L. L. Elliott, Richard H. Lacy, William Lacy, Willis G. Hunt, George W. Lichtenberger, Louis Lichtenberger, C. J. Kubach, Harold L. Wilson, Michael Shannon, Lucian Clark, A. F. Morlan, David K. Edward, W. J. Hunsaker, L. C. Scheller, Byron Waters and Arthur N. Davidson.

PLANS COMPLETED

"Our present plans for this unfoldment of Arrowhead Hot Springs," said Mr. Anthony, "have been worked out in detail. Architectural drawings of many of the magnificent new buildings already have been made by Kenneth MacDonald. The present hotel is to be remodeled and open for the exclusive use of members of the Arrowhead Hot Springs Club and their guests.

"Later, additional wings will be constructed to meet the full requirements of the club. There will be a 1000-room unit plan hotel of the beautiful Spanish-Italian architecture; the 250-room completely remodeled and beautifully refurnished clubhouse; the white stucco and tile bath houses, concert pavilion and ballroom, eighteen-hole golf course; sporty nine-hole golf course; miniature golf and driving practice course; outdoor gymnasium; tennis courts, handball courts, warm mineral water swimming pools, trout pools, cascades and lagoons, botanical gardens, children's playground, aviary, springs, pavilions, natural steam caves, the famous beauty baths, tea garden, spacious garages and stables."

PLANS LAID FOR CONFAB BALL GAME

Oakland and Los Angeles Realty Teams to Clash at Pasadena

Oakland Real Estate Board's team of ball tossers will represent the northern section of the State in the play-off of the realty baseball championship at Brookside Park, Pasadena, October 11, as part of the athletic program in connection with the twentieth annual convention of the California Real Estate Association. It is probable that the Los Angeles nine, heroes of the tie game with the San Francisco team at the Del Monte High Jinks, will represent Southern California. The handsome silver loving cup, donated by Fred T. Wood, Oakland realty man, and baseball enthusiast, becomes the property of the board whose team triumphs at Pasadena.

Entries are coming in rapidly for the handicap golf tournament scheduled for the convention. Fresno, Oakland, Berkeley, Sacramento, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Stockton, Beverly Hills, Huntington Park and Pasadena already have entered contestants. The Sacramento Realty Board's cup now is held by the Berkeley board. The tournament will be over the Flintridge course.

Tennis, horse-shoe pitching and other sports will dominate the program on the afternoon of October 11.

Tranships Gunny Sacks

One of the principal items of the transhipment trade of Hongkong is gunny bags. Approximately 9,000,000 of these bags were imported from India into Hongkong during 1923, this figure being slightly above the import for the previous year. The bags, which are chiefly used for packing of cereals, are exported to North China and other near-by markets, says Consul Leroy Webber, Hongkong.

TODAY'S HOUSE WELL PLANNED

Architect Meets Requirement of Average Builder

Pleasing Design Adopted in Exterior of Home

Garden Feature is Salient Point in Small Unit

The skill and artistry of an architect are seen through his accomplishments in home designing, and in the same way is the technique of the builder determined through his efforts at construction. An architect with all the advantages of cleverness and creative ability may have his masterpiece in design developed into a contraption of ugliness if the merits of the contractor are not worthy.

From that it can be seen that the home owner should be very careful in his selection of architect and builder. He must secure the services of architects who will co-operate with the builder, and the builder who will work conscientiously with the designer. Many instances have been brought to light where the owner was more than glorified with the pencil sketch of the architect, but was completely disgusted with the results in actuality, because the contractor had not carried out instructions as outlined.

NEEDS CONSIDERATION

That is not to say that it is always the builder's carelessness when a dwelling is erected not to the credit of his profession, because many times the designer involved in the execution of plans is unfit to plan the project as the owner sees fit. It takes considerable forethought to plan a home so, the owner must secure the best designer if he desires the best.

For instance, the arrangement of today's small house is the result of a bit of thinking and planning. The architect who designed it had in his mind the ideal brick home built at moderate cost. He strived to incorporate an attractive architecture that would at once attract attention from the building profession as well as from other persons. This brick residence has been attractively arranged on the exterior and the interior.

The planner of today's English home, while not the best in the country, has created a monument to his architectural achievement. When this house is erected it will stand as a compliment to his art and to his name. From the exterior a person is made to see that the residence is of architectural merit, inasmuch as steep roofs and pleasing lines predominate.

SPACIOUS ROOMS

A spacious living-room, thirteen feet wide and twenty feet deep, is large enough for ordinary use. It can be elaborately equipped with mahogany furnishings or it can be fitted with finishings of lesser value, and yet it will be attractive to the occupant. Two bedrooms are of good size, one being 12x16 feet and the other 10x14 feet. The kitchen is conveniently located to the dining-room and breakfast nook.

A bathroom is arranged in the front of the house, but in such a manner that it attracts rather than detracts. A garden wall can be made to hold within its fold a veritable fairyland of flowers and shrubbery, which can be seen from the windows in the bedrooms, dining-room and terrace. If any one element gives style to a house it is roof lines, and without doubt this home has the necessary features along that line.

Pomona Store Moves Into New Business Home

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA, Sept. 6.—With the formal opening today of the new three-story structure of C. O. Bowen & Co., pioneer dry goods merchants of this city, another milestone in the city's progress has been passed. Situated at the northwest corner of Second and Locust streets with a frontage of thirty-five feet on Second street and 130-foot depth on Locust, the building is a model structure to house Bowen's particular line of business. Large windows on the two upper floors will admit a large volume of daylight, so essential to the dry goods, millinery, dresses, etc., lines, while the main floor is amply lighted throughout. Large display windows at the Second-street entrance give the large structure a metropolitan touch. Every modern convenience for customer as well as employee has been incorporated into the building, hardwood floors and counters are used throughout, while electric lighting fixtures are of the latest type. C. O. Bowen & Co., have been located in this city since 1905, and their removal to the new and modern location is the result of years of planning on the part of the management. The new structure will admit of sufficient expansion during the years to come to care for all departments.

LIME QUARRY OPENED

Lemon Cove Property Leased to D. M. Root by Bank

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LEMON COVE, Sept. 6.—The lime quarry at Lemon Cove is being reopened by D. M. Root under a lease from the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank of Fresno, which took over the property of the Kaweah Lime Products Company. The new lease will operate under the name of the Kaweah Quarries. There is a steadily increasing demand for the products of this quarry, which has been in operation intermittently for fifty years.

At present the farm bureaus of five counties are said to be negotiating for a bulk purchase of lime for commercial fertilizer. The lime dust manufactured by the local quarry is guaranteed to contain 85 per cent calcium carbonate and the plant is capable of making 60,000 tons of lime dust a year. The new organization employs fifteen men.

Builders' Questions Answered

By Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America

[With the view of rendering assistance to prospective builders and for the purpose of giving sound advice on problems arising in connection with building projects, The Times has instituted this department, which will be conducted as a weekly feature. All questions should be sent to the Real Estate and Building Department, Los Angeles Times.]

DEFINITION OF DORMITORY

Question: Will you please advise in what manner the word "Dormitory" is defined under the terms of the California State housing law?

Answer: The law states: "A dormitory is a room in which more than two persons are 'guests' and are not living together, and shall, for the purpose of computing the number of rooms, be deemed a separate guest room for each 100 square feet of superficial floor area therein."

CASEMENT WINDOWS

Q.: Will you kindly suggest some method of curtaining a series of casement windows in our dining-room? There are five of these windows in a row. What would you suggest as the suitable curtaining for them and in what manner would you hang same?

A.: One of the most frequent problems met with in the decoration of the dining-room is the proper arrangement and selection of curtaining for the windows. The problem is all the more difficult for some housewives when the windows are of the casement type. In such cases, however, the most satisfactory results are obtained by strict adherence to dainty patterns and by making the curtains and overdraperies as simple as possible.

LIEN LAW PROBLEM

Q.: How can we recover cost of expense in filing liens?

A.: You can recover from the contractor if you provide in the contract with the contractor that he shall pay your costs, your attorney's fees for preparing your lien, and for suit to foreclose. That should, of course, be a matter of contract between yourself and your contractor, which should be effected before the contract is let. If such an agreement is not entered into beforehand you have no redress.

PLANS FOR BUNGALOWS

Q.: Can you advise where plans can be obtained or seen in this city for Spanish type of California bungalows?

A.: Plans may be obtained from several sources. The Small House Plan Service in the Metropolitan Building, Fifth street between Hill street and Broadway, is a very good source. The plans on exhibit here are prepared by some of the foremost of Southern California architects. The California Home-Owner, with publication offices in the American Bank Building, Second and Spring streets, also have a book of very attractive plans of small homes, especially Spanish-type bungalows. The Public Library has a large number of small house plan books in the technical department.

BUILDING TERM DEFINED

Q.: What is meant by "dentils" as applied to the building industry?

A.: They are a series of small oblong blocks, set at equal distances from each other, suggesting teeth. In classic architecture, they are an ornament for cornice decoration moldings to which they add a lively effect of light and shade.

RICH HARVEST FOR STATE

California Fruit and Vegetable Crop Will Exceed Last Year's by $15,000,000

E. E. Kaufman, agricultural statistician for the Federal government, who will speak at the twentieth annual convention of the California Real Estate Association at Pasadena next month, has just completed a survey of the State showing that this year's fruit and vegetable crop of this State, will exceed last year's by $15,126,850. At the farm lands division at the State Convention in Pasadena Mr. Kaufman will discuss diversified farming which has brought about this great increase in California products.

Fruit, field and vegetable crops this year in California total $432,929,850. The fruit crop, according to the government expert, will yield $176,345,000, almost $15,000,000 more than was received last year. The field crops show a loss over last year of close to $7,000,000, the yield this season being $191,684,850; but the vegetable crops show a gain of $4,500,000 over last year. The yield from vegetables this year will be $64,900,000.

This report, submitted to the farm-land conference of the California Real-Estate Association, is a further indication of the fact that the "back-to-the-farm" movement in California will increase in intensity. While the estimate of the value of dairy and live-stock products has not yet been completed, the dairy industry is expected to show a large increase in revenue.

J. V. Mendendall, president of the California Approved Land Settlement Association, an organization of holders of large acreage of State-approved lands open for colonization, reports that a careful check of the inquiries of those who answer the advertisements of the colonization companies in the newspapers of the Middle West shows that the American farmer is sincere in his desire to come to California to till the soil. There has been a pleasing lack of inquiries from those who were simply curious, the chief question with the prospective settler being the particular section of California to settle in rather than whether or not he should make the change.

PLAN PERFECT WORKS

Globe Ice Cream Company Engineer on Tour for Modern Ideas

"Nothing short of perfection!"

This is the watch word outlined for the construction of the new $500,000 plant of the Globe Ice Cream Company to be erected immediately in Beverly Hills, A. A. Comey, president and general manager of the concern, announced yesterday. In keeping with this policy, Joseph Hausfelder, chief engineer of the Globe Ice Cream Company, has been sent on a tour of inspection of every large ice-cream and ice-manufacturing plant on the Pacific Coast from Seattle to San Diego.

Last week Mr. Comey announced the Globe Ice Cream Company had put in its order for a new $35,000 Deisel engine, which will be installed in the new plant. With the installation of this engine, the factory will be able to generate all of its electrical power, with enough left over to sell to neighbor manufacturing concerns.

MANY DEALS IN REALTY AT COVINA

Active Market During Last Week; Orange Groves Change Hands

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

COVINA, Sept. 6. — The past week has been unusual in the importance of its sales in real estate here. Frank M. Chapman has sold ten acres of bearing orange grove and a large and modern residence on Section Center to E. H. McMann. The price paid was $37,500.

The San Antonio Ice Company has purchased of E. F. Dudderar 100-foot frontage on Italia street. The San Antonio Ice Company, which is a subsidiary of the Pasadena Ice Company, has at present a storage plant upon a portion of the property. A residence for the manager, W. M. Mann, will be built adjoining. This storage house supplies Covina, Glendora, Azusa, Baldwin Park and the adjoining territory.

Another sale of importance is that of sixteen acres owned by Grant Chapman on Grand avenue to I. Worth Everett and Trask Grant for $1500 per acre. Mr. Everett has also purchased of Mrs. Grace Chapman McCarn thirteen acres on Grand avenue adjoining the city limits for $150 per acre. This acreage which is a part of the F. M. Chapman estate, will be subdivided.

The Cub Ranch, former home of Frank Chance, and one of the famous and beautiful orange groves of the upper San Gabriel Valley, was sold recently by L. A. Boadway to R. H. Henderson of Breckenridge, Tex. The groves which is in full bearing, comprises twenty-one acres.

Richard Jackson of Charter Oak has bought the five-acre grove on Bonita avenue in the Charter Oak district of Dan McVay of Imperial Valley.

The pronounced activity in ranch property in this vicinity is due in part to the splendid crop set for the coming year which promises to be the best since 1917. Citrus experts report that the crop outlook for the Covina district is the heaviest of any section in the State. The sizes also are excellent.

SHIRT COMPANY PLANT IS SOLD

Sale and lease of the building and property on the northwest corner of Tenth and Wall streets is reported by Richard C. Willis with Metcalf & Ryan, Pacific Finance Building. The two transactions involve approximately $275,000.

The building is two stories in height and has a mezzanine floor. It was recently erected by Lem A. Bronson for use by the Bronson Shirt Company, contains 27,000 square feet, and is used as the manufacturing plant and offices of the shirt company and as offices for other wholesale firms.

The transfer involves the sale of the property for a reported consideration of $125,000, and a lease for a long period of years at a sum in the neighborhood of $150,000.

The Los Angeles Income Properties, Inc., with Rolden Lee Borden, president, and Lewis C. Borden, secretary, were the purchasers and Lem A Bronson the seller. Purchase was made for purely income purposes. It is the third large income property taken over by the purchaser within the past year.

Has No Standing Now

The old stork, famous in German song and story, is fast disappearing. His black wings, white breast, and red bill were the colors of the old monarchy. His coming in spring was welcomed, and he was permitted to build his nest on any old chimney top, because he brought good luck. He is not considered a harbinger of luck now.—[Capper's Weekly.

OFFER AWARD FOR HOUSE PLAN

Magazine Will Pay Two Cash Prizes of $1000

Only Dwellings of Nominal Cost Eligible

Sponsors Aim to Stimulate Good Architecture

For the best small house west of the Mississippi completed since September 1, 1921, the House Beautiful Magazine is offering a prize of $1000. Another prize of $1000 is offered for the best small house completed east of the Mississippi in the same period. The total cost of the house must not in either case exceed $25,000.

The judges, who are to be appointed by the president of the American Institute of Architects, will make the awards first on the basis of the excellence of the design; second on the adaptability of the house to its lot and surroundings; third, on the convenience and economy of the plan. Photographs of the prize-winning houses will be exhibited at the Architectural and Allied Arts Exposition in New York in April, 1925. Only new, not remodeled, houses are qualified to enter.

The prizes are to be equally divided between the person submitting the house and the architect who designed it. The contestant need not be the owner, but he must obtain the owner's permission to enter the house in the competition. It is even possible for one person to submit several houses provided they come up to the conditions required. On January 1, next, the contest will close.

It is the aim of this competition to arouse popular interest in really good architecture. If it meets with the success that its sponsors hope for, it is believed it will help to raise the standard of popular taste, awaken local enthusiasm in all parts of the country, and bring forward many attractive houses which the public has not yet had the pleasure of seeing.

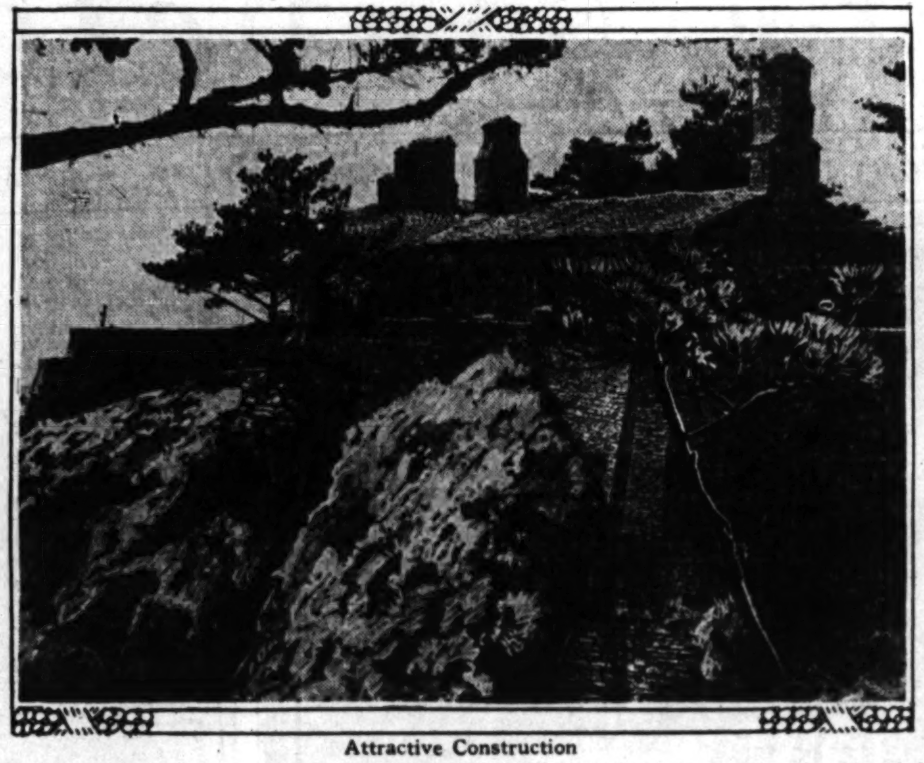
Architecture of Novel Home Typically Californian



Attractive Construction

This house is one of a series of photographs secured by Hollywoodland as representative of strictly Californian architecture.

COMBINES ITALIAN AND SPANISH DESIGN

Hollywoodland, through its sales manager, Martin T. Hildinger, announces an innovation in community development. An attractive series of photographs, taken throughout California, showing the treatment of hillside homes has been accumulated and is on display in Hollywoodland where those desiring to obtain ideas for hillside home building may scrutinize the photographs and obtain new ideas gleaned from actual practical conditions.

This series of photographs includes every style of architecture from the early Spanish farmhouse type to the Italian, Norman French and the Californian. The Californian architecture, a combination of Italian and Spanish influence, is developing into a beautiful, practicable type of architecture for this country. According to Mr. Hildinger, the hills of Hollywoodland which are rapidly becoming one of the most interesting residential districts of Southern California, offer exceptional opportunity for individual architectural treatment, each homesite presenting a distinctive and unusual apportunity for treatment.

Many organizations have supplied architectural drawings and studies for their clients to inspect. In introducing a photographic library to be added to from week to week, it will supply an essential need in Los Angeles, for architects and home builders now may avail themselves of the efforts of photographers all through the country who are supplying photographs of new homes which are appearing in their communities.

UNLICENSED REALTY MEN FACING AXE

Keiser Planning State Drive on Operators Who Have No Papers

A vigorous clean-up campaign against unlicensed real estate operators has been launched by State Real Estate Commissioner Edwin T. Keiser.

"The Real Estate Act," the commissioner said, "reads that it shall be unlawful for any person, co-partnership or corporation to act in the capacity of a real estate broker, or real estate salesman, within this State, without first obtaining a license therefor.

"And the statute defines a real estate broker as anyone who, for a compensation, sells, or offers for sale, buys, or offers to buy, or negotiates the purchase, sale or exchange of real estate, or who for a compensation negotiates loans on real estate, leases or offers to lease, rent or place for rent, any real estate or improvements thereon as a whole or partial vocation.

"The penalty is a fine of not more than $2000 or more than two years in the County Jail or State prison, or both.

"Complaint has been made that many unlicensed brokers are operating, taking sales away from legitimate brokers who are conducting a legitimate business, and it is these same illegitimate operators who use unfair, unethical practices, which reflect upon the reputation of licensed brokers who conduct their affairs in an upright manner.

"It is for the benefit of the ethical brokers that this drive is being launched, and an extra corps of investigators and deputies has been obtained to enforce this act."

Office Building Space Rapidly Being Absorbed

Clem S. Glass, vice-president of the W. Ross Campbell Company, business and industrial property brokers, announced this week that in the past two months 16,000 square feet of space in the Transportation Building, Seventh and Los Angeles streets has been leased.

"The outlook for leases and leasing conditions so far as Los Angeles office buildings are concerned," says Mr. Glass, "is most favorable if the present demand for space in the Transportation Building is to be taken as a criterion. The leasing condition in this new office building has greatly improved in the past several weeks and activity along this line seems to be drawing to a climax which will means the 100 per cent leasing of the building, as indications furnished during these last two weeks, when no less than five firms signed leases for space in the Transportation Building, point toward this situation." The W. Ross Campbell Company are managing agents for the building.

The pipe race for men and the nail-driving contest for women caused a great deal of merriment. Twenty valuable prizes were distributed. Music for entertainment and dancing was furnished by Southwest Athletic Club Orchestra. The committee in charge consisted of A. F. Schuler, chairman; A. M. Bright, F. H. Hellmann, J. L. Cottrell, W. REALTY SCHOOL WILL OPEN SOON

Opening Lecture September 22 at Metropolitan College

Real Estate Sales Will be Feature of Course

Law and Methods Classes Are Also Planned

Real estate selling, in all its phases, will be featured in the course in general real estate instruction, which will be offered by the metropolitan college of the University of Southern California, beginning Monday evening, the 22nd inst., when the opening lecture of the general real estate course will start the fall quarter.

There will be three divisions of the real estate educational activity, according to Emory E. Olson, director of the metropolitan college. The first will be a course in general real estate, many of the speakers being from the Los Angeles Realty Board and other organizations connected with the real estate business.

The second part of the course, real estate methods, will be offered by George A. Schneider, member of the Los Angeles Realty Board, while the third will be a course in real estate law given by Oliver J. Marston.

END IN DECEMBER

The class in general real estate will be on Monday evenings, while the one in real estate methods is scheduled for each Tuesday evening. Every Wednesday evening will be devoted to the class in real estate law. All of the courses end in December before the Christmas holidays. The meetings will be in the Transportation Building on Seventh street.

The twelve lectures in the course in general real estate include the following subjects: "Selling Unimproved Property;" "Selling Residential Property;" "Finding Prospects;" "Developing Salesmen;" "Real Estate Leases;" "Home Building and Home Financing;" "Real Estate Escrows;" "Title Insurance;" "Real Estate Advertising—Newspaper Display;" "Real Estate Advertising — Classified;" "Real Estate Legal Instruments," and "Real Estate Contracts."

CLASSES START EARLY

This year the classes will start promptly at 7 p.m. and continue until 9:20, instead of occupying only an hour and three-quarters, as they did last year. In some instances, there will be two or three speakers in one evening in the general real estate class, as in this way it is felt that more practical instruction can be given.

Last year nearly 500 students enrolled in the four sections of the general real estate classes, and it is expected that this year the registration will be large, for all three divisions of the real estate curriculum.

Structures Set Back to Permit Wider Vermont

The Vermont-Beverly Association reports that the property owners on Vermont avenue, from Wilshire Boulevard to Hollywood Boulevard, are so enthusiastic about the project of widening the street from an eighty-foot artery to a 100-foot artery and have received so many indorsements from different sources, that some of the property owners have elected to go ahead with their buildings even before the ordinance of intention has been passed for widening the street.

One of the most prominent buildings to go ahead is the two-story building at the northwest corner of Santa Monica Boulevard and Vermont with 200 feet of frontage on Vermont avenue. This building is being erected by Nicholas J. Priester and in having the building designed, he has arranged for the steel frame so that it would carry several additional stories. This building is set back ten feet in order to take care of the widening program.

Across the street from this building on the southwest corner of Vermont and Santa Monica, the building has been remodeled and rebuilt and also set back ten feet to take care of the widening project.

Mrs. Susie M. Johnson is erecting a garage for the Southern California Telephone Company on Vermont, between First and Beverly, and this building is also set back ten feet to take care of the widening project.

The plans for the ten-story hotel to go in at the northeast corner of Sunset Boulevard and Vermont are being planned in accordance with the widening.

Mr. C. L. Netzel of the Standard Furniture Company, is also having plans drawn up for a building just south of Melrose on Vermont, which provide that the structure shall set back ten feet.

The Vermont-Beverly Association advises there are several other contemplated improvements, all of which are having plans made for setting the buildings back on the 100-foot line. The announcement of these building projects will be made in the course of a few weeks.

IMPERIAL LAND YIELDS WEALTH

Production Value for Year Placed at $45,000,000

Alfalfa and Cotton Leading Crops in Acreage

Increased Demand for Farms Noted in District

Land value production for the present year in Imperial Valley is conservatively estimated at $45,000,000, according to a report just issued by Ray Edgar, director of the California Real Estate Association and president of the El Centro Chamber of Commerce. There are 352,225 acres planted to farm crops and fruits in the valley this season. Alfalfa leads with 108,275 acres, while there are 87,600 acres of cotton on the American side of the line. Cantaloupe and lettuce shipments during the past season totaled approximately 26,000 carloads, while shipments of other vegetables bring the total up to more than 30,000 carloads, a gain of 600 carloads over last season. Butter production to June 1 exceeded 6,500,000 pounds, valued at $2,295,000.

Increased demand for Imperial Valley land is marked, according to Mr. Edgar. The large companies are conducting active selling campaigns in the Mid-West, notably in Kansas City and Detroit, and one firm has sold in excess of 3000 acres of grapes and grapefruit in small units within the past year.

This year 30,600 acres of cantaloupes and 18,000 acres of lettuce set a new record for Imperial Valley in the quantity and value of that crop. Barley and milo maize, with 60,000 and 25,000 acres, respectively, show the largest acreage, with the exception of alfalfa and cotton. This will be the greatest year in the history of Imperial Valley, and new land is constantly being reclaimed and made ready for the plow.

The PRIDE of POSSESSION

EVERYONE feels proud to be the possessor of the BEST. Money does more than just buy… for when money, plus judgement and vision, is applied to the purchase of a lasting homesite . . . it means more than profit. It means pleasure and satisfaction.

The RIVIERA

is a vision fabricated into fact. Vision is most essential when you are locating for life. You can only get vision by comparison. Comparison then is essential to the use of money for purchasing an estate site.

Price should not be the first consideration since vision is paramount. Price becomes important only when by comparison it is revealed that you are paying the right price for what you want. Comparison of the Riviera with any other high class estate subdivision will reveal these facts.

The Riviera has a most unique geographical location. Canyons surrounding it make it forever immune from commercial encroachment. Like the European Riviera it will be a work of beauty and art. Prices challenge comparison with like estate properties.

Oak Knoll, Marino, Becomes Art Collection Center

H. E. Huntington Provides Cultural Environment

Tract Has Improvements of Finest Character

[This is the ninth of a series of articles concerning the progress of local community projects as seen by a staff writer.—Ed.]

BY AN OBSERVER

Romance with a veritable story of adventure and history is intermingled in the development of Oak Knoll, Marino, a new community project being launched by Henry E. Huntington in the exclusive residential area of Oak Knoll, adjoining the famous Huntington estate on the west. Here has been created an environment that has attracted attention from all sections of the United States, inasmuch as numerous features have been included in the general scheme to make this new community unique as far as character and attractions are concerned.

El Molino, probably better known as the "Old Mill," which is located on the property, at one time was a part of the San Gabriel Mission lands. It was substantially built with a mixture of ox blood and milk added to mortar, thus providing strength to resist the occasional rebellions caused by the natives under the Mission control. Through its historic past it has been used as gust mill, ranch bunkhouse and a fortress in time of uprisings.

However, this landmark is only a minor attraction for the residents of the Oak Knoll district. Henry E. Huntington, owner and developer of Oak Knoll, Marino, has gathered world-famous paintings, rare manuscripts and books, and has erected a spacious library on his estate for the sole purpose of preserving these masterpieces. This magnificent collection of valuable works is considered the finest and costliest in the entire world.

RARE COLLECTIONS

Among his collection is Gainsborough's "Blue Boy," a painting made in 1770, in refutation of a prevailing theory among artists that red, with its warmth and feeling, was alone suited to the creation of masterpieces. It is now valued at more than $1,000,000. With the view of making his adjoining property the most attractive, he has presented the library and surrounding grounds to the city.

Situated on Huntington Drive, on property bounded on the west by the Pacific Electric right of way and on the east by the Huntington private estate, it commands a splendid view of Huntington Hotel and its beautiful grounds, the towering mountains of the Sierra Madras and development of the near-by library grounds. As the name implies, the Oak Knoll, Marino, is an extension of the Pasadena world-famous Oak Knoll section.

The property is within the confines of the town of San Marino, bringing to the buyer the advantages of San Marino's low tax rate, and its system of civic improvements and conveniences. According to statistical data, San Marino is one of the wealthiest communities in the United States on a basis of per capita wealth. Many other features are provided by San Marino facilities.

Frank Meline and his associates have been appointed exclusive selling agents for the tract, and under their supervision the property has sold at an amazing pace. According to Norman J. Boroughs, member of the Meline organization, the lots in the development are plotted into varying sizes more than eighty feet in width and 250 feet in depth, thus providing large sites four times the average size of other subdivisions. Restrictions are of the very highest, $15,000 being the price determined as the minimum.

ARTISTIC DRIVES

Boulevards in the tract are laid out in an artistic curving plan, all widths being more than 100 feet, with generous parkways and planting places. Included in the planting are the Cocos Plumosa, walnut, Australian and Canary Island palms, oaks, redwoods and other choice varieties. The finest improvements prevail throughout the tract, including sewers, cement curbs and sidewalks, paved streets and ornamental lights.

One of the main features of Oak Knoll, Marino, is the fact that it is in the center of the country club district, being in close proximity to seven exclusive clubhouses. Two lines of the Pacific Electric serve the property, while Huntington Drive serves as the connecting link between Los Angeles, Pasadena and other points by motor transportation.

Many beautiful residences have been erected on the tract since its inception more than a year ago. The first unit opened by the Frank Meline Company included property on the north side of the Huntington Drive, while land on the southern portion of the acreage is being arranged into a second unit. Both units included, few districts in Southern California offer the appeal in love of home, culture and desireable environment that Oak Knoll, Marino, boasts.

SITE SOLD FOR LARGE SANATORIUM

Southland Counties Will Spend $150,000 on New Mountain Project

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, Sept. 6. — The property of Dr. H. L. Coffman, between Oakglen and Beaumont, up in the mountains on the edge of the Colorado Desert, has been purchased by the counties of Riverside, Orange and Imperial as a site for a large tuberculosis sanatorium, soon to be established.

The property consists of fifty-two acres and in the past it has sent to the markets of the South some of the finest fruit grown in that section. The apple trees there are consistent producers and bear the finest quality fruit.

The property was sold for about $15,000, it is stated. The first year about $51,000 will be available and the present plan is to build two units of the hospital the first year. The administration building and the infirmary will be built first and will accommodate about fifty patients. When the establishment is complete it is expected that 150 patients can be accommodated and some $150,000 will have been expended in the buildings.

Tentative agreement for the building plans has been reached but there are some details that have not been worked out, so that actual construction can not start for a short time.

Enormous Gain in Valuation of School District

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, Sept. 6.—An increase of more than $10,000,000 in the assessed valuation of the Inglewood Union High School District in the last year is announced by Principal George M. Green. Last year the valuation was $24,911,550, while the present figure is $35,094,-845.

The building and grounds are valued at $1,000,000 while bonds have been voted for a $200,000 addition to include a gymnasium for boys and a twenty-room study hall.

The district includes Inglewood, Jefferson, Hawthorne, Lawndale, Wiseburn and El Segundo. The enhanced value, it was said by Mr. Green, is to a large extent due to the activity of the Santa Fe Railway in establishing an industrial tract to the southwest of Inglewood.

NEW SUBDIVISIONS APPROVED

Five of Nine Tracts Submitted Are Given Approval; One is Held Over; Two Referred and Former Decision Upheld in Other

Maps of nine new tracts were passed upon last week by the subdivisions committee of the City Planning Commission. Five of the maps were formally or tentatively approved. One was held over to allow for time for a conference with owners of an adjoining tract, one was referred to the City Council, one to the City Engineer's office at Van Nuys and former action taken on one of the maps was sustained. Following is the report of the committee:

8261—Exhibit "B"—A new subdivision lying southerly of Vanowen street and westerly of Lankershim Boulevard. The commission sustained the former action with the exception that Archwood avenue be allowed to extend through to Lankershim Boulevard as a thoroughfare.

7788—A new subdivision lying northerly of Doheny Drive at Schuyler Road. Formally approved upon condition that Read Terrace be extended to the boundary of the tract between lots No. 1 and No. 7; also that the intersection of Irma Drive, Schuyler Road and Read Terrace be widened as shown on the tentative map.

8658—A new subdivision lying northeasterly of Fenton street and northwesterly of Osborne avenue. Tentatively approved upon condition that the necessary storm drain easements be granted, also that no residential lots be less than 4800 square feet in area.

8657—A new subdivision lying northerly of Ninth street and westerly of Kohler street. Formally approved upon condition that the necessary storm drain easements be granted.

7769—A new subdivision lying northerly of Seventy-sixth street and easterly of Angeles Mesa Drive. Formally approved upon condition that the necessary storm drain easements be granted.

Formal Opening

Formal opening of Coast Royal is to be celebrated this week. The Henry P. Barbour Company, selling agents for the seaside tract, are accepting reservations for sites.

"Coast Royal is two miles south of Laguna Beach and embraces 4000 feet of palisades overlooking and fronting directly on a sandy strand secluded by two major points extending into the waters of the Pacific," says M. C. Giffen of the Henry P. Barbour Company.

"This property has been held intact by Skidmore Brothers of Laguna Beach, and it was only after many long sessions that we persuaded them to subdivide this tract.

"There has been a demand for this section of beach frontage, and it is being developed after advanced ideas. It is to be beautified with parks and ornamental stone stairways, bridges and winding roadways paved with concrete.

"One feature is the ultimate completion of the all-Coast highway from Santa Barbara to San Diego which calls for an eighty-foot roadway the entire length of Coast Royal and extending from Laguna Beach to Serra where it again joins the coast road to San Diego. The contract has been let for the stretch between Balboa southward to Laguna Beach, which will bring Coast Royal much nearer to Los Angeles than the present route through Santa Ana.

Realty License Directory Will Set New Record

The directory of the State real estate department will contain the largest number of names of any directory that has been published by the State real estate department, according to a statement made by Real Estate Commissioner Keiser, who in a letter to the California Real Estate Association stated that the State printing office informs him that the directory will be ready for mailing in four weeks.

Printing the amendments to go on the ballots in the November election has swamped the State printing office, according to Mr. Keiser, but the wrappers are all addressed and just as soon as the weight of the volume has been definitely fixed they will be stamped so that no delay will occur in delivery. The names of all real estate brokers and salesmen receiving a license prior to July 1 will be contained in the volume, together with articles on real estate and development.

PARK WORK ASSURED

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, Sept. 6.—The passage this week at a special election of a 15-cent tax levy proposition will assure construction work in Inglewood parks. This will realize, according to the assessed valuation of the city, about $15,000. Of this amount six-tenths will be for parks, three-tenths for a municipal band and one-tenth for advertising. The assessed valuation of the city has risen nearly $4,000,000 since last year.

CHARACTER AND SKILL REQUIRED

Brig.-Gen. Nathan William MacChesney, general counsel of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in delivering his annual address at the Ohio State Bar Association recently, said that with the present trend of business and of legislation upon business, the discussion of how far Legislators should go in regulating those entering business is one that will have increasing attention.

Gen. MacChesney believes that with the learned professions it has always been recognized that the elements of personal character and skill were factors and might be obtained for the public by legislation requiring certain minimum standards as to character, knowledge and caracity, but the tremendous growth of modern business has brought with it a condition which is pointing to a similar regulation by law as to who may be licensed to enter certain businesses.

"There is a distinctly fiduciary relationship," Gen. MacChesney says, "involved in certain businesses, such as that of real estate broker, which require the establishment of standards as to character, knowledge and capacity."

As to what the Supreme Court of the United States thinks about it, Gen. MacChesney cited the decision in the case of Bratton and Chandler, which sustained the constitutionality of the Tennessee law requiring a license for engaging in the real estate business. The decision, he pointed out, is the first instance in which the Supreme Court has upheld legislation embodying regulation of the personnel of a business to the extent of requiring as a pre-requisite not alone responsibility or competency in the narrowest sense, but personal character and knowledge of the business as well.

Through the influence of the Los Angeles Realty Board the California license law was the first legislation of this character to be passed in any State and this statement by Gen. MacChesney is, according to W. L. Brent, president of the local board, a compliment for its endeavor to pass this Legislature which recognizes the State's relationship to the real estate fraternity.

RADIO IS SOURCE OF LIFE TO CRIPPLE

TOM SHINNERS, ON HIS BACK IN HOSPITAL, "ENJOYS LIVING"

After years of patient, persistent hope and faith, cherry Tom Shinners has literally brought the world to his bedside. Despite a pathetically crippled body, Tom keeps in touch with everything that goes on in every part of the country, and is acquiring an education such as few men can boast.

Twelve years ago Tom Shinners was a hugh iron worker, living in Jersey City with his young wife and small daughter. While he was working one day a derrick collapsed upon him. He was rushed with all speed to St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, N. J., where no one expected the poor fellow to live more than a few hours. Every once in a while Nature plays a trick on the doctors, however, and this was one of those times. Tom lived, but was paralyzed for life. He could use only one hand, and that with difficulty.

TOM'S SMILE IS CONTAGIOUS

If you want to count up your own blessings visit Tom Shinners in the tiny sun balcony at St. Mary's. Five minutes' talk with him will uproot the deepest set of blues. The lines in his face tell just a little of the suffering, but the smile he wears is permanent. As a matter of fact, Tom's smile is contagious. Its happiness will permeate your life.

During the years in bed Tom has developed a philosophy of life on the order of Tiny Tim's. One of his epigrams is, "If you can't be cheerful, be still." "The first five years are the hardest," Tom admitted.

When broadcasting started someone gave Tom a little crystal receiving set. It brought in the outside world and gave Tom a new supply of courage. The doctors noticed how much the set helped, so they put their heads together and talked about the cripple when they were at their club. Other people became interested, quite a number of them. They became interested to the extent of nearly $600, and with that sum they bought a five-tube neutrodyne, loud speaker and all.

MEMBER OF NIGHTHAWKS

A cabinet maker rigged up a handy cabinet on wheels so that it can be moved about easily. Within reach of his one good arm hangs a radio map, and it has a border of canceled postage stamps cut from letters that have come from all parts of the world. A Nighthawk card from WDAF adorns the lower left-hand corner. The card means much to Tom.

As Tom hears programs he makes marks on his map and writes (on his typewriter with one finger,) a letter to the artist who has entertained him. Many of them visit him and he has a good collection of signatures. Tom has learned to take almost entire care of his set. He has a log of stations that is the envy of fans for miles around. They come to him to compare results.

HAS A SPECIAL PROGRAM

One of the nicest things that happened to Tom was a group of special numbers arranged for him from The Star's station on a Nighthawk program. Later Vaughn de Leath, the "original radio girl," sang some of her own compositions for him.

Tom has a great number of visitors, cranks and otherwise. He greets everybody with the same smile—and everybody that comes goes away with a bit of that smile tucked away in his own heart.

"Radio's a wonderful thing," declared Tom, listening to the Democratic convention being held in Madison Square Garden. He heard the one in Cleveland, too, in fact, he hears almost everything that goes on the air.

Radio has made him feel as he never dreamed he could feel during those "first five years."—Kansas City Star.

Question of Kinship

PUSH BOULEVARD PROJECT

Deeds conveying the titles of land for rights of way for the first unit of Beverly Boulevard over more than ten miles of territory between the ocean and Beverly Hills are being signed and turned over to the boulevard committee so that all right of way will be in before the $1,000,000 bond election the 23rd inst.

As there has been no opposition to the highway and as there will be no need for condemnation suits, it is expected that work will be begun immediately so that much of the boulevard can be completed before winter.

It has not yet been decided whether the boulevard will be built by city and county force accounts or whether contracts will be let to the lowest bidders, but these things will be determined as soon as the bonds are voted, according to Secretary Arnold Kruckman of the committee.

The assessment plan provides that all the 11,000 acres in the district be assessed on the basis of the assessor's valuations at equal rates. As the effect of the boulevard is felt in increasing values on and near the boulevard, those near the highway will pay more taxes than those further removed, according to J. Herbert Knapp, field engineer on the project.

The approximate assessment of $90 an acre is spread over a term of forty years for payment.

GLENDALE SETS NEW PACE

Neighboring Metropolis Establishes Records in Population, Building and Civic Growth

BY LAURA-WILFORD BROWN

Keeping pace with the general progress of Southern California, Glendale has continued to merit the slogan of "The Fastest Growing City in America."

Ideally located at the southern end of the San Fernando Valley, homeseekers from all parts of the country have sought such a spot. The growth in population at Glendale has been phenomenal, there being less than 3000 residents in 1910, while an estimate made recently by the Chamber of Commerce shows a population of 52,000, this figure being based on city service connections of light and water meters. There are now in use 10,122 water meters and 13,351 light meters, while last year at this time the number of water meters being used was 8433. Light meters totaled 10,132.

Coming of new families made it necessary to augment the school system. During the year of 1923 a new high school plant was erected at a cost of $1,000,000. Registration at the close of the school term last spring was 2250, while the year previous at the same time it was 1914. There will be 110 instructors at the high school this year, an increase of ten teachers. At the beginning of the construction of new buildings it seemed that these would be adequate, but it was soon found necessary for the freshman and sophomore classes to hold their sessions at the old buildings on East Harvard street.

In the elementary schools there has been a marked increase in registration. In 1923 the total registration of the grade and kindergarten schools was 4106, while at the end of the school year it was 5248. There will be twenty-five additional teachers for the elementary schools this term, making nearly 200 teachers employed.

RAILROAD FACILITIES

Railroad facilities and California's famous boulevards make Glendale easily accessible. Last year the Union Pacific electrified its steam line on Glendale avenue, creating a long-needed service for the eastern section of the city, making connections with Los Angeles-bound cars.

The old Salt Lake Railroad on Glendale avenue, with one train a day previous to 1904, was the only means of transportation to Los Angeles. The center of town was then at the intersection of Glendale avenue and Wilson street, two blocks south of the site for the new Union Pacific freight and passenger depot for which the permit for the first unit to cost $40,000 was issued last week. The Southern Pacific operates through here also.

In 1917 Tropico was annexed to Glendale, and it now comprises the southern section of Glendale. A theater and a market building were built last year, while there have been completed a bank building and hotel, as well as automobile show and sales rooms, at the intersection of Brand Boulevard and San Fernando Road. A market place on Los Feliz Road is now under construction with parking space provided for cars of the shoppers. The building will cost approximately $15,000.

Glendale has all of the needed shops, there being department stores and exclusive shops here that would be of credit to a metropolis. In all outlying sections of the city there are small shopping centers with stores and markets.

BUSINESS CENTER

The business section is a model one, and is being constantly enlarged by new buildings and business concerns. Brand Boulevard, one of the widest commercial avenues in Southern California traverses the city from beyond its southern boundary line to the foothills at the north. During the last year the Security Trust and Savings Bank completed a new building at the corner of Broadway and Brand, it is Glendale's highest building and represents an expenditure of $600,500. Store buildings and apartment-houses have been added to North Brand, and for a while it seemed that the main shopping district would move entirely to the north of Broadway.

Six automobile agencies have moved to South Brand into specially constructed buildings. There have been a number of one-story store buildings and three two-story buildings with apartments above stores constructed. An undertaking company erected a building on South Brand which cost $40,000.

Not only on Brand and Broadway have there been new stores erected, but on many of the side streets. Since the paving of Glendale avenue, a new business center and thoroughfare is coming to the front.

Building permits for the year to date total $7,081,399. Last year at this time the total was $6,648,-839. The total for the entire year of 1923 was a little more than $10,-000,000, and it is expected that this year will be $4,000,000 in excess of that record. During the month of July the building per capita was $23.

In 1886 Glendale was known as Mason, where a postoffice was established. After the town was plotted as Glendale it became a substation of the Los Angeles Postoffice. In January, 1922, it became an independent office with headquarters in a storeroom occupying 2500 square feet of space. In July last year the office was moved to newly constructed quarters with a floor space of 5600 square feet. Outgrowing that building, another building was erected and leased on East Broadway. The floor space in this new building is 12,600 square feet. Postal receipts for the fiscal year ending in June, 1923, were $131,628.07, and at the end of the fiscal year, 1924, they were $196,023.55.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Since January, 1924, thirty-six streets have been improved by the engineering department of the city at a cost of $911,448.36. There has been added fifteen miles of paved streets since the first of the year. In the northwest section of the city the street improvements since January have cost $106,873. This is a newly annexed district. The last district annexed to Glendale, comprising 350 acres, which was annexed in March of this year, is now having all streets improved. Street improvements now under construction represent an expenditure of $1,142,317.

There is more than $100,000 in street light installation now being done in the eastern section of the city along East Broadway and Glendale avenue.

There were two banks in Glendale in 1905. Now there are nine banking institutions, with local deposits of $13,000,000. Two of these banks are branches of large Los Angeles institutions, adding resources and financial help for the community development. There are four finance and loan associations independent of the banks.

A bond issue of $1,500,000 for a complete sewage system was voted early this year, and it is expected that construction will be begun in the immediate future.

THE IMPORTANT DESK

As Education Increased in Scope It Changed to Meet New Ideas

Occupying the center of importance in the beehive of modern business is the desk. From the desk emanates urgent instructions which radiate to the remotest ramifications of business activity.

Over the desk problems are threshed out; policies laid down; plans conceived, weighed, put into operation; deals consummated; work—work—work accomplished. In the ideal desk of today—at the finger-tips of the busy office worker—are the vital records necessary to the speedy dispatch of the day's routine.

The primitive desk gave little space for writing materials and furnished no room for storing papers. It was the custom to secure papers in chests and cabinets. The shape of the early writing tables varied. Those most generally used consisted of high and narrow tables with sloping surfaces for writing and reading—such as are pictured in scenes of old monasteries.

The first development consisted in the addition of a drawer. Next the table came to be supported upon legs or columns. Desks indicated that the owner was educated, and all homes of aristocrats began to boast of desks. Elaborate grace was added to the design and the finish.

The seventeenth century, saw the construction of desks on a high plane of cabinet art. Boulle and his school of desk makers became famous. As the ability to read and write became more general different types of desks were made. The yeomanry favored a bureau-like desk, while those higher in the social scale preferred the lighter and more table-like forms.

In Washington's day, the desire for utility combined with ornament found expression in many graceful and practical works of cabinet art. Desks, or secretaries, built largely for convenience, predominated in Lincoln's day.

Rapid progress of business following the Civil War, and the introduction of modern methods brought the flat-top desk, now almost universally used. Not only for the executive, but for every office worker, there is a style and an arrangement which will be a real aid to greater efficiency.—[Carl Gasley in Visualizer.

Reginald was in for a trying ordeal. As he stood on the doorstep of old Mr. Green's house he assured himself that there were far easier things in the world than coming to "ask father."

At last he was ushered into the library, where the old man was sitting looking very stern indeed. (Lobster mayonnaise never did agree with Mr. Green.)

"But why do you want to marry my daughter?" asked the stern father. "That's what I want to know."

"Because—er—er—" stammered the young man. "Because I—er—I have no reason."

"My dear fellow, I know that," broke in the older man. "You can't have or you wouldn't be so anxious to get married."—[Exchange.

VENTILATOR IS SOUND PROOF

The problem of ventilating a room and at the same time excluding objectionable noises from the outside, which has long perplexed ventilating engineers and structural contractors, has been solved by a device which will be manufactured in large quantities in Los Angeles in the near future.

The device, known as the soundproof ventilator, is the invention of Todd C. Woodworth, engineer, who has just returned from South America to begin manufacture of his invention, which follows the principle of the truncated cone with felt-padded wood strips interspersed, on which sound waves are impinged and dissipated.

A company has been formed with Mr. Woodworth as president, W. A. Johnson as vice-president, and J. A. Brierley as secretary-treasurer, and offices have been opened in the Citizens' National Bank Building under the name of the Sound Proof Ventilator Company. Preparations are being rushed for the equipment of a plant to manufacture the devices. The stock is all held by the three principals in the firm and no stock sale will be carried on. The sound-proof ventilator will go into production immediately, according to Mr. Woodworth.

The ventilator, which is similar in many respects to the automobile muffler and gun silencer, is readily mobile and is built in sections similar to office book cases, which allows the assembly, of any desired number of units. Downtown offices and hospital rooms are rendered silent by the device without sacrificing ventilation. Following establishment of the local plant, a national chain of factories will be built with Los Angeles as the headquarters.

ITALY USES MORE AUTOS

A rapid growth in the use of motor vehicles in Italy is shown in figures of the Ministry of Finance, forwarded to the Department of Commerce by Commercial Attache H. C. MacLean, at Rome. Passenger cars in use on June 1, totaled 61,251, as against 11,243 on the same date in 1911; trucks advanced from 392 to 28,212 in the same period; increase in the use of motorcycles is seen in the comparative figures of 7513 in 1911 and 38,262 in 1924; in bicycles, from 930,651 in 1911 to 2,264,105 in 1924; and motor boats, from 104 in 1915 (date of first available figures) to 1557 in 1924.

MANY BUILDINGS UNDER WAY BY MEMBERS OF ASSOCIATED GENERAL CONTRACTORS HERE

The Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, announces activities for some of its members for the past week as follows:

C. T. McGrew & Sons, Long Beach builders, were awarded contracts totaling $105,000 for the construction of three English and Spanish type dwellings at Treasure Island, Naples Bay, Long Beach, for persons residing in the latter city. The plans for the residences were prepared by the building firm. Construction work will be started immediately.

Rapid progress on the construction of the new Moore-White Clinic at the corner of Sixth and Bonnie Brae streets, is reported by J. S. Metzer & Sons. The structure is of the Class D type and was designed by Webber, Staunton & Spaulding, local architects, and is costing approximately $65,000 complete. It will be the most modern type of hospital, containing seventy rooms and a number of special operating and X-ray departments. Construction is under the supervision of J. S. Taylor.

The Mann-Walker Building Company reports considerable progress upon the construction of a $50,000 apartment building at Ocean Front and Hill streets, Santa Monica. The structure, which was designed by the building firm, is being erected by E. J. McCartney. It will be three stories in height and contain twelve apartments with all modern installations for heating, ventilation and sanitation.

The Mann-Walker Building Company also reports considerable progress on the construction of a $25,000, four-family flat building on West Miramar Boulevard between Lake and Grand View streets. The building, which is being erected for G. K. Ray, will be two stories in height and of Spanish architecture with stucco exterior.

The Winter Construction Company is proceeding rapidly upon a contract for the erection of a two-story apartment building on Park View avenue near Seventh street for the Parkview Investment Company. The building was designed by W. S. Hubbard and will cost $20,000. It will cover a floor area of 34 by 100 feet and will have a frame construction with a stucco exterior.

H. E. Cox, Pasadena general contractor, has started work upon the improvement of portions of Sycamore and Pasadena avenues, Pasadena. The work is being done for the city of Pasadena at a cost of $22,760.16.

DRUGS AND LITERATURE

Narcotics Blighted Career of More than One British Author

Many a masterpiece of literature has been left unwritten forever because of the deadly effects of drugs in shortening the lives or dulling the energies of great writers.

Wilkie Collins, the author of "The Woman in White," the best seller of its time, was addicted to opium. Possibly the weird and wonderful dreams which this drug produces account in part for the terror and mystery of which he was a master.

Another devotee of the poppy was Thomas De Quincey, who showed himself a supreme master of English prose in his first work, "The Confessions of an Opium Eater," the dream pictures of which can only be compared with one of Blake's designs. De Quincey first tasted the drug to which he became so tragically addicted at Oxford, during a sharp attack of neuralgia. This weakness possibly robbed literature of masterpieces of the first order, for De Quincey was a philosopher and scholar as well as a stylist.

But probably the most tragic case of literary doping is that of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, the great poet, who wrote "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," "Christabel," and "Kubla Khan." Nearly all his poems are fragments, and though we possibly owe their wonderful imagery and weird enchantment to opium dreams, this does not compensate for the years that were wasted in remorse and vain regrets.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti, poet and painter, was the victim of chloral. He began to take it to ease his sufferings from neuralgia, and also from that curse of the artistic and poetic temperament, insomnia. The cure, as always, was worse than the disease. His influence both in art and literature had hitherto been enormous, and he was undoubtedly one of the most gifted men of the last century; but the last fourteen years of his life were practically ruined by this habit of drug taking.

His natural nervousness was accentuated by the use of narcotics, and he became a recluse, seldom leaving his house, and refusing to see even his old friends.—[London Answers.

REALTY DAM STAND BACKED

Resolution on Colorado River Adopted by State Board Supported by Congressmen

The resolution adopted by the Colorado River committee of the California Real Estate Association of which W. I. Hollingsworth is chairman already has received the indorsement of two representatives in Congress and promises to aid in obtaining immediate action on this subject.

Congressman Walter F. Lineberger says in his letter to President Henry P. Barbour:

"Your letter of August 22 last was awaiting me upon my return to Long Beach and I assure you that I am in hearty sympathy with the sentiments expressed in the resolution adopted by the board of directors on August 16, with reference to the construction of a dam on the Colorado River, which will accompany the purposes of supplying adequate power, as well as water for irrigation and domestic purpose.

"I am cognizant of the importance of this matter and am desirous of co-operating, both personally and officially, realizing fully, the great importance it bears toward life and property in the Southwest.

"I will be very glad to discuss it any time with the membership of your board. To those problems requiring the best efforts and closest study of our California citizenship, there are few who are devoting themselves so assiduously to our material development as the California Real Estate Association."

At the same time Congressman Clarence F. Lea, of the First District, wrote:

"I received your letter of August 22 enclosing copy of resolution in reference to Colorado River by your organization. I entirely agree with the position taken by your organization. I will be glad to give it my co-operative support."

The resolution offered by the realty men at the Long Beach meeting called for the construction of a dam or dams sufficiently far up the Colorado River to assure the development of the Pacific Southwest through the curtailing of the waters of the river.

Diagnosing an Old House

Persons who were engaged in the building art a century or more ago did not realize that these structures might sometime be objects of great interest or they might have taken the trouble to put a date upon them, but the age of an old house may, however, be very definitely determined by a close and intelligent examination. Henry C. Mercer, of Doylestown, Pa., has browsed about these old structures so much that he can tell within a few years just when a building of this kind was built. He looks at the laths used, the hinges and other hardware, the screws and nails to arrive at his conclusions. He knows just when the hand-wrought latches were generally supplanted by those made by the cheaper processes, when hand-made nails gave way to cut nails. For instance the pointed wood screw which we so generally make use of was not invented until 1847 and prior to that the screws had a blunt end and the way had to be prepared for their passage with a gimlet. Restorations, no matter how cleverly they may be done, are readily detected in this manner.—[Exchange.

No man can read the future, but I would venture to say that it will be a long while before prime conservative loans will reach a higher level than 6 per cent."

ETCHING OF METALS

Acid and Electricity Usually Employed

Etching of metals, in other words eating away the surface of metal in order to reproduce thereon a design, has been practiced for a long time. The old masters, Rembrandt, Rubens, Durer and many others did a great deal of work along these lines and developed the art of etching metal to a high state of perfection. Today the art is practiced chiefly by jewelers, manufacturers of novelties and gold and silverware of all kinds. There is scarcely an article made of any metal that cannot be and is not etched in some manner in order to enhance its appearance.

It is interesting to note that the word etching is derived from an old Dutch word, "etsen," which literally means to eat. Thus the art of etching applies the application of some corrosive liquid to the surface of metal so as to eat out a design therein. There are many different substances that can be used for this purpose, and their use depends on the metal to be etched, as well as on the method employed in etching the design. It is understandable that an acid which will etch copper readily will not etch gold or silver, or may not have any effect on zinc or silver.

There are two general processes of etching. In one, chemical agents only are employed. This is known as chemical etching. In the other, the electric current is used as an aid to the chemical. This is called electrolytic etching.

Chemical etching is of two kinds, relief and intaglio. In relief etching the design is drawn or painted on the surface of the metal. This is done with a special, acid-resisting varnish or gum preparation which is painted over the surface of the metal. The rest of the metal is left uncovered and is eaten away by the acid, leaving the design in relief.

In intaglio etching the entire surface of the metal is covered with the varnish preparation and the design is cut into the same with the aid of a fine tool, which scrapes away from the insulating varnish and exposes the metal underneath. The acid is then applied to the surface and the design is eaten into the same in the process of intaglio work.

The etching fluids are of many different compositions. Acids such as nitric, hydrochloric and others are employed.

In electrolytic etching an acid is also employed, but the article which is to be etched is covered with varnish in the usual manner and then immersed in a bath of acid, when the current passes through the bath, producing an acid which is the corrosive for eating the design into the metal. Thus it is important to use the proper electrolyte in accordance with the nature of the metal that is being worked. The results of electrolytic etching are superior and in certain ways much better than those that are obtained in the ordinary chemical process.—[Scientific American.

installation of gas mains to supply cities in the west side of the San Fernando Valley under an agreement between Victor Girard and the Southern California Gas Company, will be started and a force of workmen will commence laying pipe at Mission Acres.

Engineers for the gas company in their estimates, stated that approximately 149,898 feet, or thirty miles of pipe, will be layed within ninety days at a cost of $153,445. Construction will start at Mission Acres across Parthinia street and continue to Reseda. From Reseda the line will run to Zelzah, from that city to Weeks Colony, thence to Owensmouth, ending at Girard.

According to present plans, laterals will be layed in Mission Acres, Owensmouth, Reseda and Girard. Two-inch pipe is to be used for the laterals, while the specifications call for a six-inch pipe for the main line. When completed Girard will have 13,400 feet of laterals, Owensmouth, 38,957 feet, Mission Acres, 14,567, and Reseda 13,982 feet.

More than a year ago when the necessity of supplying gas to the rapidly increasing population of the valley became evident, Victor Girard, with a force of engineers, made a survey of the district and drew plans showing the most expedient and economical way in which the locality could be served.

These plans were then offered to the Southern California Gas Company to take under advisement. After several weeks' consultation between technical officials of the company and the Girard forces, it was stated by the company that the initial cost of constructing the proposed line would be in the neighborhood of $153,445.

The community benefited was asked to subscribe $60,000 to assist in defraying the initial expenditure, with the agreement that the $60,000 would be paid back to them over a period of years. The $60,000 was subscribed by Victor Girard and others and placed at the disposal of the gas company, and negotiations for the construction work were made.

Moves Into New Offices

In order to handle the increased business that has come to the company during the last few months, the J. Harvey McCarthy Company announces that it has moved its Carthay Center office from the mission bungalow at Wilshire Boulevard and McCarthy Vista into more commodious quarters in a new building in that community's shopping district. A complete organization is to function in the new office.

With the completion of the work of lowering the Pacific Electric tracks there has been great activity in this Wilshire Boulevard community, especially in its business in the shopping center, Mr. McCarthy reports. Only a few business lots are unsold, and the district is rapidly assuming a busy and thriving appearance. According to Mr. McCarthy, there is every evidence that the coming fall and winter will see a remarkable revival in real estate activities.

To Erect Lighthouse

Construction is under way at Point Vicente on a lighthouse and group of buildings that when completed will undoubtedly be unique among all structures of this type in the United States. Of a modified Spanish type of architecture, with stucco finish and red tile roofs, the Point Vicente light will be of a type decidedly different and interesting. Officials of the Palos Verdes Estates are responsible for the departure from official custom in building the new lighthouse.

When the government first announced its intention of building the Point Vicente light the Palos Verdes officials wrote the lighthouse service and told them of the plans of the Palos Verdes Estates for the development of a community of homes with a uniformly high standard of architecture. They pointed out that the lighthouse buildings would be situated prominently on Point Vicente and that it would be very greatly appreciated if it were possible to make the group of government buildings conform to the general architectural scheme and standards of the Palos Verdes Estates.

A request then came from the government that plans be submitted for lighthouse buildings which would be acceptable from the Palos Verdes viewpoint. The Palos Verdes architects accordingly submitted plans, and Olmsted brothers, who have charge of the landscaping of Palos Verdes, drew plans for the landscaping of the grounds around the buildings.

The government officials evidently found the plans thoroughly practical as well as pleasing from an architectural standpoint for they were accepted. A contract for the construction of the buildings was recently awarded to G. W. Young, a San Pedro contractor, and it is planned to have them ready for service shortly after the first of the year.

Establish Branch Postoffice

Announcement was made last week of an order from the postal headquarters in Washington establishing a contract postoffice in Westwood. The power and water bureau first recognized the future of Westwood many monthse ago when it established a branch office. Then the city fathers and the Board of Education followed with structures and high and grammar schools in the Westwood district. Now comes recognition from the United States government through this new postoffice arrangement.

The order from the Postoffice Department becomes effective September 15, and arrangements have been made for a location at 3007 Westwood Boulevard. Westwood Boulevard is Westwood's only through north and south business street, and is adjacent to properties purchased by the Harold Lloyd, Christie and National Film companies.

Plan Yacht Harbor

In addition to the Los Angeles Athletic Clubŝs work which has already been started at the Riviera, immediate plans will be inaugurated for the yacht harbor a few miles north of Santa Monica Canyon, adjacent to Topanga Canyon, for the new development of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

In thus bringing an aquatic affiliation with the balance of their seashore activities at the Riviera, the club will undoubtedly take its place as one of the largest and finest athletic clubs in the United States. Although there will be a few miles separating the club's golf course and polo fields and its yachting activities, the distance is not so great that a complete feeling of oneness may be had between the two developments.

Los Angeles and especially the reaches of seashore between Santa Monica and the Malibu Ranch, have long needed such a development as is premeditated by the Los Angeles Athletic Club. There is perhaps no more beautiful vista of sea and mountains than lies between these two points. The fact that today the seashore along this section is crowded with motorists and bathers is no better proof than that this section cannot help but be one of the beauty spots of Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club and those associated with it in the development of the land, have shown perspecicacity in choosing this location for such an enterprise. The possibilities of an ideal yacht harbor have been carefully investigated and when the contemplated breakwater has been constructed there is no doubt but what one of the finest harbors in this section will be available for yacht purposes. From the ocean, a view of the mountains which come down to the sea level affords an outlook of unrivaled beauty.

MANY WOMEN EXPECTED

Plans Made for Entertainment of 200 at State Realty Convention in Pasadena

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 6.—Hazel M. Grant, chairman of the woman's committee of the California Real Estate Association, announced today at a meeting that there would be in excess of 200 women realty dealers of California in attendance at the twentieth annual convention of the California State Real Estate Association in this city October 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Mrs. Mae Liddy of Watts, only woman director of the State realty organization, tendered an invitation to all the realty women of the State to be her guests at a breakfast at the Hotel Huntington on the morning of October 9. Mrs. Liddy was the hostess to the women at the Sacramento convention last year.

Special arrangements have been completed for a session of the women and they will be royally entertained while they are in the Crown City according to plans of the committee.

Among the members of the State woman's committee are Mrs. Ione Davis, Miss Jessie Hosmer, Pasadena, Mrs. Myra E. Dutton, Santa Barbara; Mrs. Valentine Lewis, Santa Monica; Mrs. Mae Liddy, Watts; Mrs. Hilda F. Walter, Venice; Mrs. J. B. Biethen, San Diego; Mrs. Jeanne Dunham, Inglewood; Mrs. N. Elizabeth McCann, Lankershim; Miss Ruby Barham, Mrs. E. T. Church and Miss Willard, Long Beach.

AUSTIN LAUDS LOS ANGELES

Cleveland Manufacturer Says City Sure of Great Industrial Growth

"History has repeated itself in three years, and again Los Angeles is the nation's 'white spot,' according to the business map appearing in the Nation's Business." W. J. Austin of Cleveland, president of the Austin Company of California, as well as of the Cleveland company, made this and a number of other interesting statements before leaving for the East after two weeks' inspection of the Coast branches and business.

"The Los Angeles summer climate is surprisingly mild and invigorating, this being my first summer visit. The facilities and opportunities for summer recreation and vacationing are as alluring as those of winter, I have discovered.

"Every year, every season, increases our interest in the Coast, and adds to the conviction that Los Angeles is not at all the victim of a 'boom,' but is in the beginnings of a long and continued era of prosperity and development.

"Our eastern headquarters enable us to make comparisons of conditions, and while we are able to say that industry and business are improving throughout the country, the building activity in Los Angeles—especially the industrial—is the most active of any section of the United States.

"I find on this trip, a more favorable banking attitude toward industrial loans. This is important because it indicates that industrial development has penetrated to the financial centers, where the bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, or, in other words, industry is becoming a stabilized fact instead of a future hope.

"Throughout the East and Middle West the industrial interest in the Pacific-Southwest is keen, and our Cleveland offices receive many inquiries that enable us to help the industrial movement, whether it be in the building of Coast warehouses or Coast factory branches.

"Cotton is growing in importance to Los Angeles, from both textile and byproduct interests, and is spreading into the San Joaquin Valley. Two big cottonseed warehouses and a second cotton compress at the harbor, built by the Austin Company, are witnesses of the increased activity in cotton growing, distribution and industrial application.

"There is every indication of a very lively season of industrial building ahead of Los Angeles. We are at the present time negotiating for a number of important plants which will be erected here in the near future and our inquiry list indicates early construction of more industrial and warehouse buildings than in the best seasons of the last four years.

"Population is the first requisite of an industrial center, and it is coming to Southern California faster than ever; but it must continue at a fast pace for a long time to build up a center able to actively compete with the established eastern points of production. The people are bound to come faster and faster because of the attractive conditions. We are convinced that industry will increase as fast as the population, so that it will be a long time before any material lessening of building may be expected. This means many years of prosperity for Los Angeles and the Southwest."

Cane Waste Good Lumber

Synthetic lumber is bound to arrive and it is a question whether it has not already arrived. There are several kinds of various origin which are being introduced, most of them made from the refuse of the saw mill, but the newest idea is that of making a very satisfactory lumber for building purposes from the waste of the sugar mill. The big advantage of this is its exceeding lightness. It weighs one-fourth as much as pine board and its sound insulating qualities are superior to anything which has ever been used for building purposes. The cane refuse from which this lumber is made is a drug on the market. Is accumulates in great quantities and there is always a difficulty in getting rid of it. Not so long ago it was found that this could be made up into a cheap paper of coarse texture, but the project was never a success commercially.

The Mongoose Affectionate

Hans Cudenhove, an African traveler, has been for months at a time in places where he has not seen a white man and on one of these occasions he made a pet of a mongoose which are generally supposed to be blood-thirsty little beasts with little to interest the human in them. But the experience of this traveler seems to have changed this estimate of the little beast for it showed unusual love for its master and the result was that the traveler took several under his wing and found them all quite as responsive as a dog. When he left camp it was necessary to resort to force or strategem to keep them from following and when he returned the animals seemed to be watching for him and recognizing him in the distance they ran out to meet him and showed their pleasure by throwing themselves about his feet.

Alligators Are Slow Growers

If you ever have occasion to guess the age of an alligator go a little slow for they are always older than they look. One of these may be only two feet long and his age will be at least 15 years. The age of an alligator is always problematical. There seems to be no rule to go by. They are very slow growers and long livers. A twelve-footer is likely to be about 75 years old. Lots of them grow to pass the century mark if they are fortunate enough to have started their existence in a locality where the gunners do not get after them.

ARMY SURGEON'S WILL

In It He Exposed the Peculiar Traits of His Relatives

The Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain received recently from an Ontario correspondent a copy of the will of Dr. William Dunlop, who was an assistant army surgeon in the War of 1812, in the Eighty-ninth British Regiment. It is said the will is registered at Goderich, and is dated at Montreal, 1847. As a legal document it seems to stand in a class by itself. The main portions follow:

I, William Dunlop, of Gairbraid, in the Township of Colborne, County and District of Huron, Western Canada, Esquire, being in sound health and body, and my mind just as usual (which my friendes who flatter me say is no great shakes at the best of times,) do make this my last Will and Testament as follows, revoking, of course, all former Wills.

I leave the property of Gairbraid and all other landed property I may die possessed of to my sisters, Helen Boyle Story and Elizabeth Boyle Dunlop, the former because she is married to a minister whom she hen pecks—the latter because she is married to nobody nor is she like to be, for she is an old maid and not marketrife, and also I leave to them, and their heirs, my share of the stock and implements on the farm, provided always that the enclosure round my brother's grave be reserved, and if either should die without issue, then the other to inherit the whole.

I leave to my sister-in-law, Louisa Dunlop, all my share of the household furniture and such traps with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned.

I leave my silver tankard to the eldest son of old John as the representative of the family. I would have left it to Old John himself, but he would melt it down to make temperance medals and that would be sacrilege—however, I leave my big horn snuff box to him—he can only make temperance horn spoons of that.

I leave my sister Jenny my Bible, the property formerly of my great-great-grandmother, Bethia Hamilton of Wood Hall, and when she knows as much of the spirit of it as she does the letter, she will be another guise Christian than she is.

I also leave my late brother's watch to my brother Sandy, exhorting him at the same time to give up Whiggery, radicalism and all other sins that do most easily beset him.

I leave my brother Alan, my big snuff box, as I am informed that he is rather a decent Christian with a jolly face.

I leave Parson Chevasse (Maggy's husband) the snuff box I got from the Sarnia Militia, as a small token of my gratitude for the services he has done the family in taking a sister that no man of taste would have taken.

I leave John Caddle a silver teapot to the end that he may drink tea therefrom to comfort him under the affliction of a slatternly wife.

I leave my books to my brother Andrew, because he has been so long a Jungley Wallah that he may learn to read with them.

I give my silver cup with a sovereign in it, to my sister, Janet Graham Dunlop, because she is an old maid, and pious, and also my granna's snuff mull, as it looks decent to see an old woman taking snuff.—[Toronto Globe.

SOME GLOBE-CIRCLERS

Before the 'round-the-world airplane flyers were half-way on their journey, says Popular Mechanics, they had taken more than twice the time required by John Henry Mears of the New York Sun, to circle the globe traveling by land and sea. He made the trip in 1913 in thirty-five days, twenty-one hours, thirty-five and four-fifths seconds, bettering the performance of the mythical hero of Jules Verne's story by more than forty-four days. He covered an average of 537 miles a day. Notable among other journeys are those of Capt. W. D. Seymour, who, in 1876, made the trip in 117 days; Nellie Bly's record of seventy-two days, six hours, eleven minutes and fourteen seconds in 1889, lowered by about five days by George Francis Train the following year. His mark was bettered by nearly a week in 1901 by Charles Fitzmorris of Chicago. This record was then lowered by Henry Frederick, Col. Burnley Campbell and by Andre Jaeger-Schmidt, a Paris journalist, who held the record until Mears made his notable trip.—[Indianapolis News.

A Royal Present

As a friedly return for the recent visit to England of the Prince Regent of Abyssinia, the British government has decided to present to the Empress Judith of Abyssinia, the crown of the Emperor Theodore, which was captured by Lord Napier at Magdala in 1868. For many years the historic relic has been among the exhibits in the Victoria and Albert Museum.

The FONTANA FARMS CO.

WE WILL not say "we told you so" but this is the last opportunity that anybody will ever have of acquiring a planted irrigated vineyard on the Fontana Estates at the low price of $500 per acre.

The Fontana Farms Company, developers of the largest fruit and poultry ranch in the world, has planted its last vineyard acreage. Even unplanted land on this famous project would enhance into splendid profits but when you consider an acreage already set aside to the very finest European variety of grapes, with a perfect water right, and a share of water stock worth $200 a share to go with each acre—and that indestructible pipe lines have already been installed with a hydrant every twenty feet apart—to say nothing of the free cultural care by the Company and free water for three years from the date the vineyard was planted, you have some conception of this final investment offering.

During the last week in August, the Fontana Farms Company advertised special vineyards as being attractive—Investors readily purchased $30,000.00 worth of these vineyards in a single day—

We tell you now that these vineyards that will produce at maturity 5 to 10 tons of grapes per acre that are selling this year from $80.00 to $90.00 per ton will soon be entirely sold out—If any vineyards remain unsold after the 1st of October, 1924, the price will advance $50.00 per acre—You can save that amount of money by investing during September—

The terms of purchase are easy—$125 an acre is all the cash required for the first payment—You have 5 years to pay the balance—

Remember this investment offering is part of the largest estate of its kind in the world—It is reached by transcontinental railroads, Pacific Electric trains, motor busses, running at frequent intervals, and within an hour and forty-five minutes' ride from the city of Los Angeles—

Hundreds of thousands of people who will come to Southern California during the next few years will say that they wished they might have been here in time to acquire a portion of this wonderful property—It is your opportunity today and you are right here now where you can easily investigate this extraordinary offering for yourself—

Prompt action is necessary if you expect to enjoy the profits—

RAILROADS ARE ACTIVE IN DEVELOPMENT OF INDUSTRIAL LOS ANGEL

SOUTHERN PACIFIC PLACES EIGHTY-ONE FACTORIES

Union Pacific Has Thousand-Acre Project Within City Limits; Major Enterprises Sought

That both the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific railroads are lending their energy and resources to the upbuilding of industrial sections in the metropolitan area of Los Angeles is indicated by the report last week from both organizations on the progress they have made in this work.

Southern Pacific officials announce that fourteen new industries were located on their spur tracks during August and that the total of new industrials established during the eight months of the year already exceeds the total for the corresponding months of 1923.

"Our records indicate that the city is not experiencing any depression as far as industrials are concerned,' said Charles R. Smurr, industrial agent of the Southern Pacific Company. "We have already established eighty-one inindustries on properties adjoining our spur tracks since the first of the year. These new plants, warehouses and yards represent investments of thousands of dollars and indicate that the current industrial growth of Los Angeles is on a sound basis. We are co-operating with all organizations and individuals having properties, which can be used for industrial sites, giving them every advantage of economical, direct and uninterrupted transportation service.

ACRES OPENED

"During the past eight months nearly 400 acres in Los Angeles proper, Florence, Burbank and Alhambra have been opened for industrial sites and served with new Southern Pacific spur tracks. This exceeds the 1923 record when only 275 acres were opened and occupied. The city industrial tract of 130 acres opposite Lincoln Park on the Alhambra road was laid with spur tracks and opened for industrials in August, 1923.

"Last month the last plot was taken by industrials and at present fourteen plants are in the course of construction or have been completed and forty-eight industries have purchased sites but have not yet begun erection of their plants. Six additional spur tracks have been installed on the tract. By the installation of the drill tracks this area was transformed in approximately six months from a grain field to an industrial center.

"The sources of inquiries for industrial sites made during 1923 were chiefly from new and venturing organizations, according to Mr. Smurr. Present industrial conditions are tending to reduce inquiries from newly formed organizations and enterprises. Substantial eastern manufacturers seeking branch plants have been interested in properties adjoining new Southern Pacific drill tracks laid in recently opened tracts.

"Concerns based on stable industries and generally of independent production are now seeking larger facilities which offer possibilities for expansion without the need of relocating."

The railroad does not own the land offered.

A noticeable demand for factory sites in the Union Pacific Company's industrial tract has been in evidence within recent date as the result of the actual start in the work of constructing the Ninth-street viaduct and the determination upon definite plans for the widening of Tenth street with the assurance of the ultimate building American Way, according to Walter C. Fraser, who is in charge of the disposal of this property.

Already three concerns have secured locations on the Union Pacific Company's 1000-acre industrial property, occuping a total frontage of nearly 1200 feet, while many inquiries are being received daily, says Mr. Fraser, on this property on account of inducements offered industrialists to build on this property.

The Angelus Furniture Company has purchased seven acres with a 497-foot frontage on American Way and a depth of 756 feet. This company's factory will be situated on the corners of American Way and Calada and Calzona streets.

MANY TO BE EMPLOYED

O'Keefe & Merritt, metal workers, are building a plant with a 201-foot frontage on American Way to a depth of 756 feet on Calzona street. This plant will occupy three and one-half acres and will be completed within thirty days.

A warehousing concern, which has invested $160,000 for a site on which to erect a $2,000,000 four-story building will have the same frontage on American Way as the Angelus Furniture Company. The building will have a depth of 416 feet on Esperanza and Mirosol streets.

These three plants will employ in the aggregate approximately 1500 workers. Their original investments will be in the neighborhood of $3,500,000.

In the disposal of this industrial property, which is within the city limits, as well as other industrial tracts west of Montebello, the Union Pacific Company is offering sites only to companies which will have such a volume of freight as will prove profitable to the Union Pacific to have factories on their property. In other words, major industrial concerns only are being induced to take up sites.

Drawing Goods Manufacturers to Start Plant

That the Eugene Dietzen Company, nationally known manufacturers of drawing materials and mathematical and surveying instruments, will open a branch factory here soon was announced this week by the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce.

The growth of Los Angeles, with its attendant demands for architects' and engineers' supplies, as well as the city's increasing popularity as an art center, were instrumental in hasting the company's decision to open a branch factory here serving the Southwest, according to L. Sutterlin, who for some time has managed the company's store at 840 South Hill street.

WORK BEGUN ON WORLEY WORKS UNIT

Pico Locker Factory to be Ready for Occupancy by October 15

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WHITTIER, Sept. 6.—Worley & Co., manufacturers of steel lockers and shelving, began the construction of a manufacturing plant at Pico, a few miles west of the city limits of Whittier, this week. The first unit of the plant, with equipment, represents an expenditure of approximately $100,000.

Moran & Co. of Los Angeles have the contract for the buildings, work upon them now being under actual construction. The shops are to be ready by October 15. John Worley, Jr., is president of the company and R. J. Burke is secretary. Aside from steel lockers and shelves the company will manufacture patterns, new designs and steel cabinet work.

The first unit will have a floor space of 12,000 square feet and will be of concrete and steel. It is well situated near the Union Pacific Railway so that a spur will connect the plant with the main line.

Much credit is due the Pico Chamber of Commerce for locating the manufacturing plant, which it is hoped may prove to be a nucleus for a manufacturing center. The chamber in order to secure the plant purchased a manufacturing site of two and one-half acres for $11,250, which was given to Worley & Co., as an inducement to locate at Pico.

ITALY'S IMPORTS RISE

Italy's imports of merchandise from January 1 to May 31, last, amounted to 7,363,000,000 lire, against 7,103,000,000 during the corresponding period of 1923, and 6,081,000,000 in 1922, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner J. A. Palmer, Rome. Imports have therefore increased by about 260,000,000 lire over 1923 and 1,282,000,000 over the first five months of 1922. On the other hand, Italy's exports during the period under review amounted to 5,436,000,000 in 1924, against 3,942,000,000 and 3,336,000,000 in 1923 and 1922, respectively. Exports have thus risen by 1,494,000,000 during the first five months of 1924, compared with the same period in 1923, and 2,100,000,000 over 1922.

CAR DEMAND SUSTAINED

New Zealand continues to be one of the leading markets for American cars and trucks, according to the automotive division of the Department of Commerce. During the first half of this year, New Zealand has held twelfth place among the passenger-car markets of the United States, and fourteenth place among truck markets, as compared with eleventh and fourteenth, respectively, during the year 1923. Shipments to New Zealand so far this year have been only slightly less than half of those during the twelve months of last year, showing that in general, the automotive trade with that country is well sustained. The latter half of 1924, if consistent with past years, will see the usual spring boom, since seasons are reversed in this land south of the equator.

F. S. The local concern is a member of the national organization and will cooperate with Mr. Laurence in investigating conditions in the ceramic industry in this territory.

Mr. Frost has extended Mr. Laurence a special invitation to return to Los Angeles in February in order to be present at the convention of the National Association of Builders' Exchanges, scheduled to meet from February 23 to 26, inclusive.

READY-CUT HOME SHOW IS CHANGED

Three Models Erected on Grounds at Fourteenth and Hill Streets

Complete renewal of the unique exhibition grounds owned by Pacific Ready-Cut Homes, Inc., at the corner of Hill and Fourteenth streets, is taking place under the personal supervision of W. P. Butte, president. During the past two months three new model homes have been erected on the grounds, and construction is now progressing on two additional exhibition structures. As soon as these are completed, work will begin on three other model homes, so that within sixty days practically every house on the grounds will be new.

This exhibition of houses is said to be the only one of its kind in America, and represents an investment in excess of $50,000. Selling houses by showing prospective purchasers exact duplicates was the plan originated by W. P. Butte, the firm's president, sixteen years ago, when he erected the first sample house on the corner of Eighth and Broadway. From that modest beginning the firm expanded and at the present time occupies approximately one-half a city block on Hill street, just south of Pico.

Each of the houses is furnished with the most elaborate type of furniture. The interior decorating is handled under the supervision of the firm's interior designing department, and each of the homes is complete, even including the chinaware and linen.

PIG-IRON OUTPUT DOWN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON (D.C.) Sept. 6.—Pig-iron production in July totaled 1,787,000 tons as contrasted with 2,026,000 tons in June and 3,678,000 tons a year ago. Furnaces in blast at the end of July totaled 144, with an average daily capacity of 55,350 tons, as against 154 in blast on June 30, with a capacity of 65,200 tons and 298 a year ago, with a capacity of 184,200 tons. Production of steel ingots totaled 1,869,000 tons during July, as compared with 2,056,000 tons in the previous month, and 3,531,000 in July, 1923. July production of Portland cement totaled 14,029,000 barrels, as against 13,528,000 in June and 12,620,000 in uly, 1923. Shipments of Portland cement made a similar high record in July, a total of 16,614,000 barrels, comparing with 15,036,000 in June, and 13,712,000 a year ago. Stocks of Portland cement at mills on August 1 totaled 12,318,000 barrels, as against 14,503,000 on July 1, and 8,081,000 barrels a year ago.

HAVRE COTTON IMPORTS GAIN

Importations of raw cotton into Havre, France, during May, 1924, showed an increase of approximately 6000 metric tons over each of the two preceding months, reports to the Department of Commerce from Consul Lester Maynard at Havre indicate. The greatest gain was in the importation of cotton from the United States, which amounted to practically 100 per cent, and which covered about 87 per cent of all cotton imported.

IN the group of companies headed by Mr. E. M. Smith, each plant profits by the experience of the others.

That is why each of the three Emsco Companies have WESTYPE steel plants.

First the Emsco Steel Products Company, then the Emsco Tool and Emsco Press Forging Companies specified WESTYPE as the best type of plant to cut operation costs and speed up production.

The reason is this: WESTYPE construction conforms to the requirements of the particular industry to be housed and capitalizes the advantages of the climate in the Southwest.

"A Beautiful Roof Forever"

America is rapidly growing away from the old "pioneer" forms of temporary wood construction. The most evident trend of the present day is toward solidity--permanence.

... The roof of clay tile survives the wearing tread of the years. The sun and rain merely mellow it--lending added beauty as time goes on.

... Here are a few of the newer school buildings in Southern California roofed with clay tile from the kilns of Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company.

GYPSUM WORKS EXPAND

Buildings and Equipment Added to Mill and Plant at Arden (Nev.) Location

An expansion program, involving approximately $300,000 in new buildings and equipment, has just been completed at the gypsum plaster mill and mine of the United States Gypsum Company at Arden, Nev., it was disclosed yesterday by W. J. Monahan, division production manager of the concern. The installation of additional machinery and the remodeling of the plant buildings was necessary because of the increased demand for the company's products in Southern California, Mr. Monahan stated.

Every sack of plaster, produced at the mill, is inspected and tested in a research laboratory, which has just been established. Samples from each sack are forwarded to the main laboratory of the United States Gypsum Company in Chicago. The operating power of the mill has been increased 300 per cent by the installation of a 750 horsepower. Lentz engine and three 300 horsepower fire tube boilers, equipped with superheaters. The addition of new mining equipment, a new Deisel engine and Ingersol air compressors has increased the power at the mine 100 per cent, according to Mr. Monahan.

National Red Top Week, opening tomorrow for a period of six days, will be celebrated by material dealers and members of the plastering craft in many parts of the United States. The event was launched by the United States Gypsum Company to announce the national distribution of Red Top plaster, which takes its name from the red-topped bags in which it is packed. The local branch of the United States Gypsum Company, which is a member of the Los Angeles Builders' Exchange, has made special preparations in Los Angeles and Southern California to feature the celebration. The product is manufactured at two plants of the concern in Arden, Nev., and Amboy, Cal.

Tire Firm Takes Offices in Hope Street Building

"All Los Angeles moves on tires," was the way B. G. McAbery, manager of the Dawson Tire and Rubber Company, which has just leased the one-story garage type building at 1324 South Hope street through W. Ross Compbell Company, business and industrial property brokers, described the tire situation in Los Angeles this week when commenting upon his company's move into its new quarters the 1st inst.

The removal of the Dawson Tire and Rubber Company from its former location at 624 South Figueroa street was made necessary by the need for larger quarters which will adequately care for increased business. The new location gives a frontage on Hope street of fifty feet and a depth of 190 feet, a total of 9500 square feet. The lessees will remodel the interior. All negotiations for the consummation of this lease were conducted by D. M. Peterson of the W. Ross Campbell Company automotive department.

FLOTATION FIGURES

British new-capital flotations for the first six months of 1924 were about £106,000,000, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner C. E. Lyon at London. If government short-term treasury bills, ways-and-means advances and tap issues are added, the total is increased to about £127,000,000. Four or five estimates on different bases, appear each month, all for different totals, so that the main value to be derived from any statement is through comparison with similar periods in past years.

Alpaugh Cotton Gin Assured for Coming Harvest

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ALPAUGH, Sept. 6.—A cotton gin is to be in operation in Alpaugh this fall to handle the crop from 3000 acres in this section, which is now in bloom and gives every indication of an excellent harvest.

Decision to erect a gin was made at a recent meeting of growers who agreed to finance the cost of $25,000. A plant already erected in Los Angeles is available for use here.

Ordinarily 5000 acres is considered necessary for erection of a gin, but the yield in this district is estimated at an average of two bales an acre as against a general county average of a bale and a half.

The Silent Partner

Business was slack in the general store in Attica, O. The chief clerk, having no aversion to cards, started up a game of solitaire on the yardgoods counter. After a while Bill strolled in. Holding his pipe in midair, he watched the game, with dropped jaw and wide eyes.

"Playing solitaire," the clerk answered without looking up.

"Well, who the dickens you playin' with?" Bill asked in amazement.—[Indianapolis News.

MAZATLAN PORT HOPES AROUSED

Harbor Improvements Seen in Engineer's Visit

American Expert is Sent by President Obregon

Rich Country Inducement to Make Improvements

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

MAZATLAN, Sinaloa (Mexico) Sept. 6.—Renewed hopes for the long-delayed harbor improvements at this port have been brought to this city with the recent arrival here of Guy Roschke, an American engineer, who comes at the direct request of President Obregon. He is making a detailed survey of conditions and obtaining at Mazatlan a thorough understanding of the engineering features necessary for harbor development.

Interest in the improvement of Pacific Coast shipping and harbor facilities is thought to have been aroused by the visit of President Obregon to the West Coast of Mexico, where he inaugurated the opening to commerce of the new Sonora port, Yavaros. The latter port, together with a new railroad connecting it with the Mayo valley, was recently completed under the direction of the Mexican government, and this is aimed particularly as an outlet for the increasing Sonora garbanzo crop.

The construction of port works at Yavaros was directly in charge of Col. Edgar Smoot, noted American engineer, who has had construction of all other important port improvements in Mexico in recent years. At the time of President Obregon's visit Col. Smoot accompanied him, and it is thought that the renewed activity in behalf of Mazatlan resulted from conferences between the President and Smoot.

IMPORTANCE STRESSED

In an interview at the time of President Obregon's visit, Col. Smoot, although not divulging news of contemplated early port building here, made the following pertinent statements. He declared that both naturally and strategically Mazatlan offered the greatest harbor-building opportunity present on the Pacific Coast between the United States and the Panama Canal. He declared that the richness of the West Coast regions, with their destined agricultural, mining and manufacturing developments, alone will justify at Mazatlan a modern port.

In addition, he declared that the opening up of interior Mexico through the completion of the present railroad-building project under President H. B. Titcomb of the Southern Pacific of Mexico, whereby that system will unite by rail the West Coast with the heart of the republic, will also administer greatly to the prestige of Mazatlan as a harbor. The recent sale of the Kansas City Mexico and Orient Railroad, whose uncompleted lines leading from the central portion of the United States to their present tidewater terminus at Topolobambo, Sinaloa, also will doubtless be pushed to early completion at the hands of its new owners. He believes that this system, instead of retaining their harbor terminus at Topolobambo, will build on south to Mazatlan because of more convenient harbor facilities awaiting here. Other railroad projects planned via the State of Durango with tidewater terminus at Mazatlan, will still more increase its port prestige.

HARBOR NATURAL

The present harbor of Mazatlan is a natural one in which protection is largely afforded by surrounding islands. A splendid though shallow inner harbor, amply protected, now exists for smaller craft. By the plans already approved by the Mexican government, a system of breakwaters and fills will be constructed to enlarge and better protect the outer harbor, while the inner harbor, formed by the outlet of an extensive lagoon will be dredged and adjoining lands reclaimed. Modern wharfage, warehouse and railroad facilities also are contemplated.

At the present time freight destined for Mazatlan must be unloaded upon lighters in the outer harbor and towed into the more protected waters of the bay and landed. This necessitates double handling of freight, which not only retards the movements of vessels in their schedules, but adds much to the expense of handling. Nor are any railroad facilities available at the present Mazatlan dockage. With the new plans for harbor improvement, vessels will be able to unload at wharf side, directly onto railroad cars or into warehouses, as at any other modern shipping center.

CIRCLES AROUND MOON

Circles around the moon are caused by moisture in the atmosphere. It frequently happens that the sunlight reflected from the moon to the earth is so refracted by the atmospheric moisture that a ring or circle is formed. The more moisture there is in the atmosphere the smaller the circle will appear. The form and size of the ring will depend entirely upon the particular condition and quantity of moisture in the air.—[Exchange.

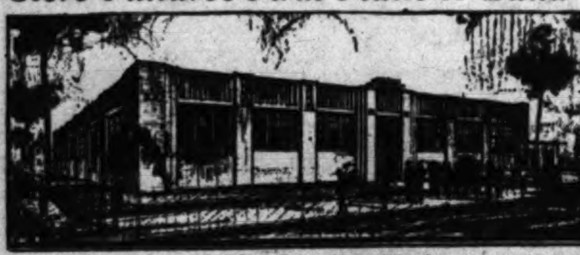
TEMPORARY FACTORY SECURED

Store Fixtures Firm Plans to Build



Proposed Manufacturing Works

Announcement of the selection of a new location for their factory and arrangements for temporary manufacturing space at 4915 East Forty-eighth street, Central Manufacturing District, pending the completion of a factory building of their own on land recently acquired in the same industrial section, was made yesterday by I. A. Pelzer, president and general manager of the Angelus Store Fixture Company.

Mr. Pelzer is enthusiastic about Los Angeles and the advantages it offers to manufacturers, stating that during the past eight months the Angelus Store Fixture Company has outgrown quarters on Florence avenue and the present location at 3817 Central avenue.

The Angelus Store Fixture Company specializes in store, office and bank fixtures and partitions. J. A. Pelzer, who is in active charge of operations, has had long experience in the fixture business in Los Angeles prior to the organization of the Angelus Store Fixture Company. Z. Wirt, who will have charge of sales, has been identified for a good many years with one of the leading fixture factories in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Plans for their proposed factory building have been completed and call for the construction of a one-story brick and concrete modern factory building, arranged to allow for necessary expansion as their business continues to increase. This new building will be fitted with ventilating steel sash to give ample light and air and will be equipped with the most modern machinery and every facility to provide ideal working conditions for the employees.

The new factory for the Angelus Store Fixture Company will be located on spur tracks of the Los Angeles Junction Railway and will have a loading platform along one entire side to facilitate receipt and dispatch of shipments.

Return Annually of $30,000,000 to Local Retail Trade Told at Commerce Club Luncheon

How $30,000,000 annually could be turned back into local retail trade was pointed out this week by Henry W. Louis of Brownstein-Louis at the first of a series of luncheons given by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in an effort to effect a more general patronage of local industries.

The luncheon this week was given at the Alexandria and was attended by retail merchants, their buyers and the local wearing apparel manufacturers. President William Lacy of the Chamber, who presided at the meeting, appeared in a suit made locally of wool grown in the West and fabricated in a mill in the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

"The apparel industry in Los Angeles," declared Mr. Louis, "has grown in twenty-five years from nothing to an industry which today operates in the aggregate, 20,000 power machines. Each power machine, it is estimated, requires one and one-half persons to operate it.

"Assuming that each person in the apparel industry makes on an average of $20 per week during the fifty weeks out of each year, we find that Los Angeles has an annual pay roll in this line of industry of $30,000,000, a large portion of which is turned back into retail trade.

"In order to maintain this flow of money in local trade channels, it will be necessary for retail merchants to give local manufacturers big orders like those they place with Eastern plants and not depend upon us only for small orders which they want filled quickly. They must be brought to realize that orders placed with Eastern plants serve only to maintain in those centers, enormous pay rolls of which not a single penny is spent locally."

President Lacy in his opening remarks, pointed out the moral obligation which merchants owe to the thousands who have come here, purchased homes and are educating their children to be useful citizens in the community. These, he declared, must be given employment in order that they may continue to live here. He was followed by R. D. Sangster, assistant manager of the industrial department of the Chamber, and former industrial commissioner for the St. Louis Chamber, who has had many years of experience in conducting "buy-locally made" products campaigns in St. Louis and Kansas City.

Other speakers were J. G. Bullock of Bullock's, Arthur Strassburger of the Broadway Department Store, Charles Hobbs of the May Company, V. Bell of the Army and Navy stores, and A. McCourquodale of the Fifth Street Store.

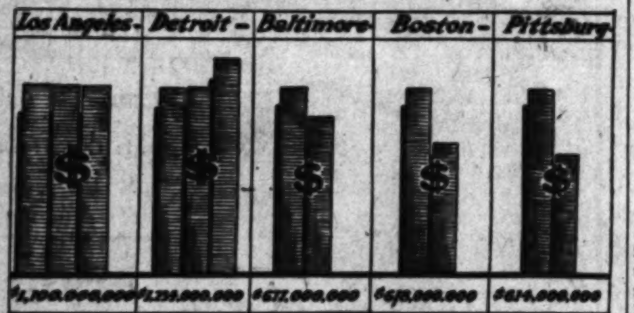
LOS ANGELES OUTPUT COMPARED

Detroit Manufacturing Has Small Lead



Janss Investment Company Chart

"WHAT d'ye mean Los Angeles is a big industrial city?" says the average newcomer from an eastern manufacturing center as he steps off the train. "I haven't seen any smoke." To him, used to associating manufacturing with smoke and smokestacks, the absence of it in Los Angeles belies the fact that last year Los Angeles manufactories turned out $1,100,000,000 worth of products.

"It generally takes him a little while to learn that our smokestacks are hydroelectric generators," states Harold Janss of the Janss Investment Company, subdividers of Westwood.

"Clean, cheap power is only one of the reasons for the great strides which our city has taken in an industrial way during the past few years.

"Our statistical department has gathered together some comparative reports of manufacturing output of American centers. These reports, from newspapers and the Chamber of Commerce provide some very interesting food for thought for the man who wants to prosper with the growth of Los Angeles.

"Detroit shows a total annual output of $1,234,000,000, according to these reports. Yet Los Angeles, whose future as a manufacturing center has just begun, shows a production for 1923 of $1,100,000,000.

"Wise men are those who realize that Los Angeles is not a boom city where profits are made and dropped in overnight inflation and deflation."

CITY SUITED FOR CARPET MAKING

Raw Materials Produced in Near-by Territory

Ample Fuel and Climate Aid to Conditions

Eleven Western States Spend Millions for Goods

Enough carpets, rugs and other floor coverings to cover 2500 acres of floor space, are purchased annually in the eleven Western States, according to figures contained in the carpet and rug supplement of the wool survey prepared by the industrial department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

A total of $26,345,000 is spent annually for floor coverings in the West, the survey also shows. The review is one of a series prepared by experts employed by the chamber out of its "Balanced Prosperity" campaign, inaugurated at the instance of A. G. Arnoll, manager of the industrial department.

That Los Angeles is better suited as a rug and carpet manufacturing center than any other city in the country, is proved conclusively by the survey, which is the product of weeks of effort on the part of Thomas F. Bomar, textile expert of the M. H. Merrill Company, engineering firm of Boston, which has opened offices in Los Angeles and which has been employed by the chamber to prepare the survey of textiles.

WOOL GROWN

The wool, cotton, jute and grasses used in the manufacture of carpets, are produced in closer proximity to Los Angeles than to eastern centers, while cheap power and fuel, contented labor and ideal climate encourage efficient weavers, the report shows. In addition to these salient features, Los Angeles is the logical distributing point for the eleven Western States. The consumption is distributed as follows:

	Square yards.
Axminster	2,000,000	$6,000,000
Wilton	1,000,000	5,000,000
Brussels	1,200,000	3,240,000
Velvet	1,000,000	3,750,000
Ingrain art squares	180,000	180,000
Smyrna	64,000	80,000
Jute	16,000	15,000
Rag	800,000	800,000
Wool fiber	600,000	700,000
Grass fiber	520,000	520,000
Fiber matting	60,000	60,000
Linoleum	4,500,000	6,000,000

The Pacific Coast market differs in some ways from that of the East and Middle West in that the demand here for mattings and fiber carpets is not so great as the eastern demand for these goods. On the other hand, there is an unusually strong demand here for Axminsters, Wiltons, velvets and linoleums.

DISTRIBUTION POINT

As a distributing point, Los Angeles is closer by from two to ten days to Atlantic Coast markets than any other Pacific Coast port. As a port of entry for raw materials, it also has distinct advantages. Carpet wools are produced chiefly by the "unimproved" sheep of China, India and the Balkans. China produces 50,000,000 pounds and India 60,000,000 pounds of such wools yearly. Of the low-grade cotton used in mixture with wool in the carpet industry, 15,000 bales are produced in China, and 38,000 bales in Peru. Jute, ramie and coir are produced in India and the Philippines.

Considerable carpet wool is produced in the Western States and large quantities of jute are grown in California. Cotton is produced in ever-increasing quantities in California and Arizona. The proximity of raw material sources with the subsequent saving in freight rates, makes this a logical carpet manufacturing center, the survey reveals.

INTEREST IN EXPOSITION IS GROWING

San Fernando Industrial Display Opens Tuesday at Burbank

Throughout San Fernando Valley today all interest is centered in the San Fernando Valley industrial exposition, which has its formal opening Tuesday morning. Manufacturing concerns in Los Angeles whose plants are situated in the valley are busy with the installation of displays.

Other resources of the district as reflected in fruit, grain and vegetable products will be exhibited by the Chambers of Commerce of the seventeen communities whose civic organizations have affiliation with the Associated Chambers of Commerce of San Fernando Valley, which has given its unqualified indorsement and pledge of support to this fall festival.

Similar encouraging action was taken by the Greater San Fernando Valley Association, which represents practically the same cities and large interests. All transportation companies and newspapers in the district are co-operating in an effort to make the show the biggest thing of the kind ever held in the valley, and, as it is not a money-making scheme, but rather a valley promotion enterprise, the public-at-large is uniting in an endeavor to make the gathering memorable in the annals of San Fernando history.

The Burbank Chamber of Commerce is responsible for the exposition, and in undertaking it had no other thought in view than that of bringing all sections of the community into closer relations for mutual advantage in the common cause of industrial development and natural expansion.

The morning hours of the opening day are to be devoted to the parade of decorated automobiles and the afternoon program of that day will feature the crowning of the queen.

SPAIN'S FINANCES FAVORABLE

The financial situation of the Spanish government continues comparatively favorable, according to a cable to the Department of Commerce by Assistant Trade Commissioner J. G. Burke at Madrid. The credit balance of the government in the Bank of Spain amounted to 289,000,000 pesetas on August 2, last, a decrease of over 100,000,000 pesetas since May, due to advances to the railroads and to the provinces for highway construction.

Remodel Lemon Packing House Near Whittier

The Leffingwell Rancho Lemon Association has begun work on the enlarging and remodeling of its lemon-packing house at Leffingwell Station, near Whittier. Hamm & Grant, Inc., industrial engineers, 607 Ferguson Building, Los Angeles, prepared the plans for this work, and are carrying out the construction for the owners. Approximately 21,000 square feet of floor space will be added to increase the capacity of the washing room and storage space.

The main building, 190x255 feet, will be raised three feet, and a concrete basement with fourteen feet head room will be constructed under the entire structure. The new floor system will be carried on steel beams. The columns in the basement will be spaced to permit economical stacking of lemon boxes in uniform aisles for ventilation and inspection. The spur track of the Pacific Electric will be raised three feet to correspond with the new floor level.

Approximately 600 feet of reinforced concrete retaining wall will be constructed to support the fill for this track. The lemon washing room will be enlarged by the addition of 2300 square feet of floor space, of frame construction, with wood roof trusses to correspond with the present structure. Additional elevating and conveying equipment will be added to serve the enlarged capacity of the packing-house.

OXYGEN PLANT AMONG LEADERS

Expansion Due to Building Increase

Linde Air Products Company-Pacific Coast

Los Angeles now has one of the three largest oxygen-producing plants in the United States, according to A. G. Arnoll, manager of the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce, who gives as a reason for the great development here in that line of manufacture the rapid rise of the city as a steel and metal-working center.

The plant, which has placed Los Angeles among the three leading oxygen-producing centers is that of the Linde Air Products Company-Pacific Coast, and is located at Mission Road and Johnson street. When established in 1916 it was the smallest commercial producing unit in the world, but sufficient to meet the demands for that product locally.

Oxygen is used principally in oxy-acetylene welding and cutting, and with the development of the oil industry here, the demand increased greatly. Welding by this process is utilized on all the trunk pipe lines which transport oil from field to dock, and its superiority over the ordinary coupler has become an established fact, due to the minimizing of maintenance expenses. The Linde company, which is nationally known, is now the largest producer of oxygen in the world.

To Save the Fern

Three hundred cocoanut palms are to be shipped immediately to Bird Key, one of the Tortugas Islands off the southwest coast of Florida, to protect the noddy fern from extinction, according to Dr. Paul Batrsch, of the Smithsonian Institution. This tiny island is the only place under the American flag where this species of gull-like birds breed. Several years ago a tropical hurricane swept across the island and destroyed the trees in which they used to nest. Now it is planned to grow new trees to provide apartments for these rare ferns.—[Indianapolis News.

JUST 4 SHORT BLOCKS W. OF FIGUEROA. PRICED TO SELL.
$400 a foot buys this choice corner if sale consummated this month. If Los Angeles continues to grow at the rate of 100,000 people per year, then in 3 years this corner will command a price of $1000 a front foot. This is as inevitable as night and day and surely some shrewd investor will step up to the counter and buy this bargain at this time. We have told the owner that with patience until January market is here we can sell this identical corner for $600 a front foot. We challenge investigation of these assertions. 16th st. has a wonderful future. Owner's financial distress makes it possible for us to submit an absolute, legitimate bargain in a commanding business corner. See R. W. WHEELER, Mgr., HOME REALTY CO., for details. DUn. 2310.

You are doubtless aware that density of population, with high purchasing power, makes GOOD BUSINESS PROPERTY.
You also know that it is the desire of every intelligent investor in real estate to eventually own the best business property.

FREE ADVICE
Check up on the vicinity of 7th and Hoover sts. Note the artistic and rapid improvement of this street west of Alvarado.

CONSIDER IMMENSE PURCHASING power tributary to this street and imagine what the $3,000,000 hotel, to be built immediately at Wilshire Boulevard, one block from this property, will add to the present purchasing power.
PROPHECY
There are only five West 7th street lots FOR SALE between Alvarado and Vermont ave. and the five lucky purchasers of these properties will be made independent for life—if they will secure and improve them.
There is one outstanding purchase on the street and if you buy it and KEEP IT it will put you beyond want in your old age. We have it.
YOUR CHANCE

NOTICIAS MUNDIALES DE ULTIMA HORA

En obsequio a nuestros numerosos amigos de habla española, y para beneficio de los lectores americanos de "The Times" que estudien esa lengua, publicamos diariamente esta columna en castellano, con un extracto de las más importantes noticias de última hora.

Buena parte del futuro progreso de Los Angeles, que es la metrópoli de los Estados Unidos que más cercana se halla á territorio latino-americano, habrá de depender de las relaciones que logremos establecer con nuestras hermanas, las repúblicas del sur. Para que lleguen a ser enteramente cordiales, no hay nada tan importante como que nuestros ciudadanos se familiaricen con la lengua castellana. Tan se dan cuenta de este hecho nuestros habitantes, que hay al presente más de 25,000 personas que estudian español en Los Angeles. A ellas les conviene leer todos los días esta columna, en la que encontrarán español correcto y enteramente moderno.

NOTAS TELEGRAFICAS

Los Defensores de Shanghai Cobran Venganza

SHANGHAI, Septiembre 6.—Después de verse obligados ayer a replegarse dos millas, debido a las fuerzas superiores de Kiangsu, comandadas por el general Chi Hsien Yuan, las tropas de Chekiang, a las órdenes del general Lu Yung Hsiang se rehicieron hoy, se abrieron paso combatiendo, y penetraron en territorio de Kiangsu hasta una profundidad de seis millas. Dice el general Lu que ha tenido una victoria aplastante a lo largo de toda la línea, y que ha capturado dos compañías completas de las tropas de Kiangsu, y cuatro oficiales, entre quienes están un comandante de batallón y un capitán.

El ataque de Chekiang fue dirigido hoy por el general Chwang Tse Ping, y esta noche, al cesar el combate, las líneas de Chekiang habían avanzando hasta dos millas de Anting, sobre el ferrocarril de Shanghai a Nanking. En la ciudad de Liuhu duró todo el día el combate, y afirma Chekiang que también allí logró la victoria. Pero las últimas noticias hablan de la llegada de grandes refuerzos para las tropas de Kiangsu y de la reanudación de la batalla esta noche en ese importante sector, que es realmente un punto vital para proteger a Shanghai de la invasión.

Advertencias para los que se Van a Vivir a Méjico

CIUDAD DE MEJICO, Septiembre 6.—La persona que viene a Méjico, ya para hacerse cargo de algún puesto, o para establecerse en algún negocio, tiene que hacer frente desde luego al problema del mobiliario. ¿Le conviene traerse sus muebles a Méjico, o será mejor que compre nuevos muebles al llegar aquí?

Algunos se deciden a traerlos, pagando el embalaje, el trasporte por carro a la salida y a la llegada, el flete de ferrocarril, y sufriendo a menudo pérdidas por ruptura. Pero, enfin, logran tener en Méjico sus antiguos y cómodos muebles, a los que están apegados sentimentalmente.

Otros dejan su mobiliario en los Estados Unidos y compran nuevo al llegar aquí, ya sea de manufactura doméstica o extranjera.

Los que se traen el suyo tienen que cumplir con ciertas formalidades. Tienen que hacer un certificado en el que se describan los muebles, se fije su valor y se exprese el tiempo que tienen de uso, certificado que debe visar el cónsul americano de la ciudad a la que vaya el mobiliario, o aquel que radique más cerca del sitio a que estén destinados los repetidos muebles.

Se llevará dicho certificado a la Secretaría de Hacienda, para su aprobación, recabada la cual, esa dependencia gubernativa libra sus órdenes al punto o puerto de la frontera por donde vayan a entrar los muebles, a efecto de que los empleados aduanales los dejen pasar libres de derechos. Esta es la rutina, pero tiene uno que dar cada paso con todo cuidado, llenando en forma todos los requisitos.

Se tropezará con dificultades cuando quiera uno hacer venir con sus muebles, su vajilla de plata, pues surge la sospecha de que la vajilla sea nueva y no forme realmente parte de los efectos domésticos del inmigrante. La Secretaría de Hacienda exige pruebas a ese respecto. Si el valor de la plata no guarda proporción con el del mobiliario, se exigirá el pago de derechos. No se le permitirá a uno, por ejemplo, pasar libres una cama, seis sillas, una mesa de comedor y un juego de vajilla de plata que valga mil dólares.

NOTAS LOCALES

Terrible Huracán Cerca de Riverside

Comunican de Riverside que ayer mañana temprano cayó una manga de agua y sopló una tormenta en las cercanías del rancho de Ed Bailiss, a cinco millas al sur de Cabezón, y arrasó completamente el rancho, causando pérdidas materiales que montan a millares de dólares.

La tormenta se desató la mañana de ayer, como a las 5. El viento, que azotaba con furia aterradora, barrió con todas los edificios del rancho, inclusive la casa, las trojes, el molino de viento, y varios millares de pies de madera, que se iba a utilizar en la fabricación de una nueva casa.

Los edificios quedaron convertidos en astillas por la tempestad, y fueron arrastrados a varios centenares de pies del sitio que ocupaban. El viento los hizo rodar hasta demolerlos por completo.

La furia del vendaval era tal, que arrancó del suelo, y torció como si fueran de caramelo, varios miles de pies de cañería, en el rancho de Bailiss y en otros adyacentes.

Por fortuna no se hallaba en casa ningún miembro de la familia Bailiss cuando se abatieron sobre el rancho la tormenta y la tromba de agua, y de ello dependió que no se registraran desgracias personales.

Abarcó la tormenta un área como de cuatro millas cuadradas, según se dice. En Banning, que es la población más cercana por el oeste, se sintió fuerte viento y una tormenta de polvo, y sólo cayó una llovizna.

Cinco Lastimados en un Choque de Tranvía y Automóvil

Ayer tarde, a última hora, chocó un tranvía de Los Angeles con un automóvil, en la esquina de la calle de Pico y el Bulevar Crenshaw. De la colisión resultaron lesionados dos hombres y tres mujeres que viajaban en el auto; uno de los heridos lo está quizá mortalmente.

Llámase este ultimo L. H. Driver, de la calle Connecticut, número 3259. Resultó con el pecho magullado y probablemente con lesiones internas. Su estado es grave. El doctor F. S. Kellenberg, de 37 años de edad, y residente en Visalia, recibió fuertes cortaduras y erosiones. Su esposa, la del señor Driver, y la señora Cromwell Thompson salieron también con cortaduras y erosiones, aunque leves.

El doctor Kellenberg iba guiando el automóvil, y según dicen los testigos oculares, el auto y el tranvía se encontraron en el centro del crucero de las citadas vías públicas.

Perfect Fruit on Family Tree of the Grimes's

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Andrew Grimes is a firm believer in the old precept: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." She succeeded fairly well with her first fourteen children, but Angelina, the fifteenth, according to the records of the Chicago Carnival and Industrial Exposition, is rated as 98.8 per cent perfect.

"And I was one of a family of twelve children," said Mrs. Grimes, as she beamed upon the judges, "and Angelina's father was one of fourteen."

Angelina, who is nearing 4 years of age, was slightly outclassed by a boy baby named Little More Perfect, which is really his name. His father is More Perfect, and the family came here from Cleveland three months ago, establishing a home on the Desplaines River.

State's Record of Fatalities in Industry Drops

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—A decrease of thirty-four was noted in the industrial fatalities in California for the first six months of 1924 as compared with the same period in 1923, it was announced today by the State Industrial Accident Commission. The total for the 1924 period was 307, as compared with 341 for the 1923 period.

A stricter observance of the safety rules of the commission was given as the chief reason for the decrease.

FOREIGN SURVEY SHOWS HEAVY DEMAND FOR AMERICAN-MADE MOTORCARS

ALERS HOT FOR OUR CARS

ity of Yankee Motors is Leading Factor

Plant to Run at Full Speed This Winter

Cleveland, Dodge and Jewett Busy

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ROIT, Sept. 6.—The industry enters the month of the third quarter with a steady conservative pace that will be maintained to the end of the year. Some of the plants which have been feeling their way during the summer are operating on full time again and conditions point to an excellent fall and winter trade. Improvement in the European situation promises to be an important factor. Europe will buy more cars than ever before in the opinion of Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a complete survey of the situation abroad.

"More than 400,000 American cars and trucks will go to foreign countries before the end of the year," said Mr. Reeves. "Hundreds of dealers attend the automobile shows at Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, London and Brussels this fall to contract for American cars.

"Most of the European automobile manufacturers aside from Germany have enjoyed a prosperous year in other countries as well as their own but the low prices and high quality of American cars insure a favorable reception for our products everywhere."

Henry Ford's statement that his factories will run through the winter without reducing his big staff of men, furnishes concrete evidence of the optimism that prevails.

Notable improvement in the business of the Peerless Motor Car Company has been reported during the past few days. Officials declare indications for the remainder of the current year provide ample ground to predict a financial statement of

Oakland Plans Big Auto Show for Next Month

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OAKLAND, Sept. 6.—Under the guidance of Auto Show Manager Robert W. Martland, secretary-manager of the California State Automobile Trade Association, plans for the Pacific Auto Show fall showing in Oakland October 4 to 11 at the Oakland million-dollar auditorium, are rapidly being fashioned and at this early date two important matters have been settled. One of these matters is the assurance from San Francisco motor-car distributors, through the official San Francisco Motor Car Dealers' Association, that complete 1925 lines will be shown at the fall event wherever possible, because of the presence of such cars on the Pacific Coast. Another matter pertains to scenics, murals, and attractive settings, and, in this, Martland has the wheels of progress traveling at such a lively rate that right now the decorations are guaranteed to be the best ever used in the capacious auditorium.

That sufficient space will be had by the Oakland motor-car dealers, every member of which body is entering a full line, is an assured fact with the announcement that a great portion of the auditorium theater heretofore closed to automobile shows, will be accessible because of a brand new platform feature of construction which will extend out over the seats in the regular theater space. Thus no annex will be required this year as last year, and at the same time there will be more room for spectators and exhibitors.

ALL EYES FOLLOW THE NEW BEAUTY OF HUPMOBILE

The hit of the avenue! That describes the new beauty of the Hupmobile.

Balloon tires, disc or natural wood wheels, blue or beige Duco finish, nickel radiator, drum lamps—these give you in the Hupmobile a wholly new degree of outward grace and impressiveness.

Balloon tires, of course, add more than their incidental good looks. They make this Hupmobile ride with an ease and softness that, we believe, is not surpassed. They afford an even greater braking effectiveness.

With these new advantages, Hupmobile is, unmistakably, the one car a prospective buyer cannot afford to pass by without careful consideration.

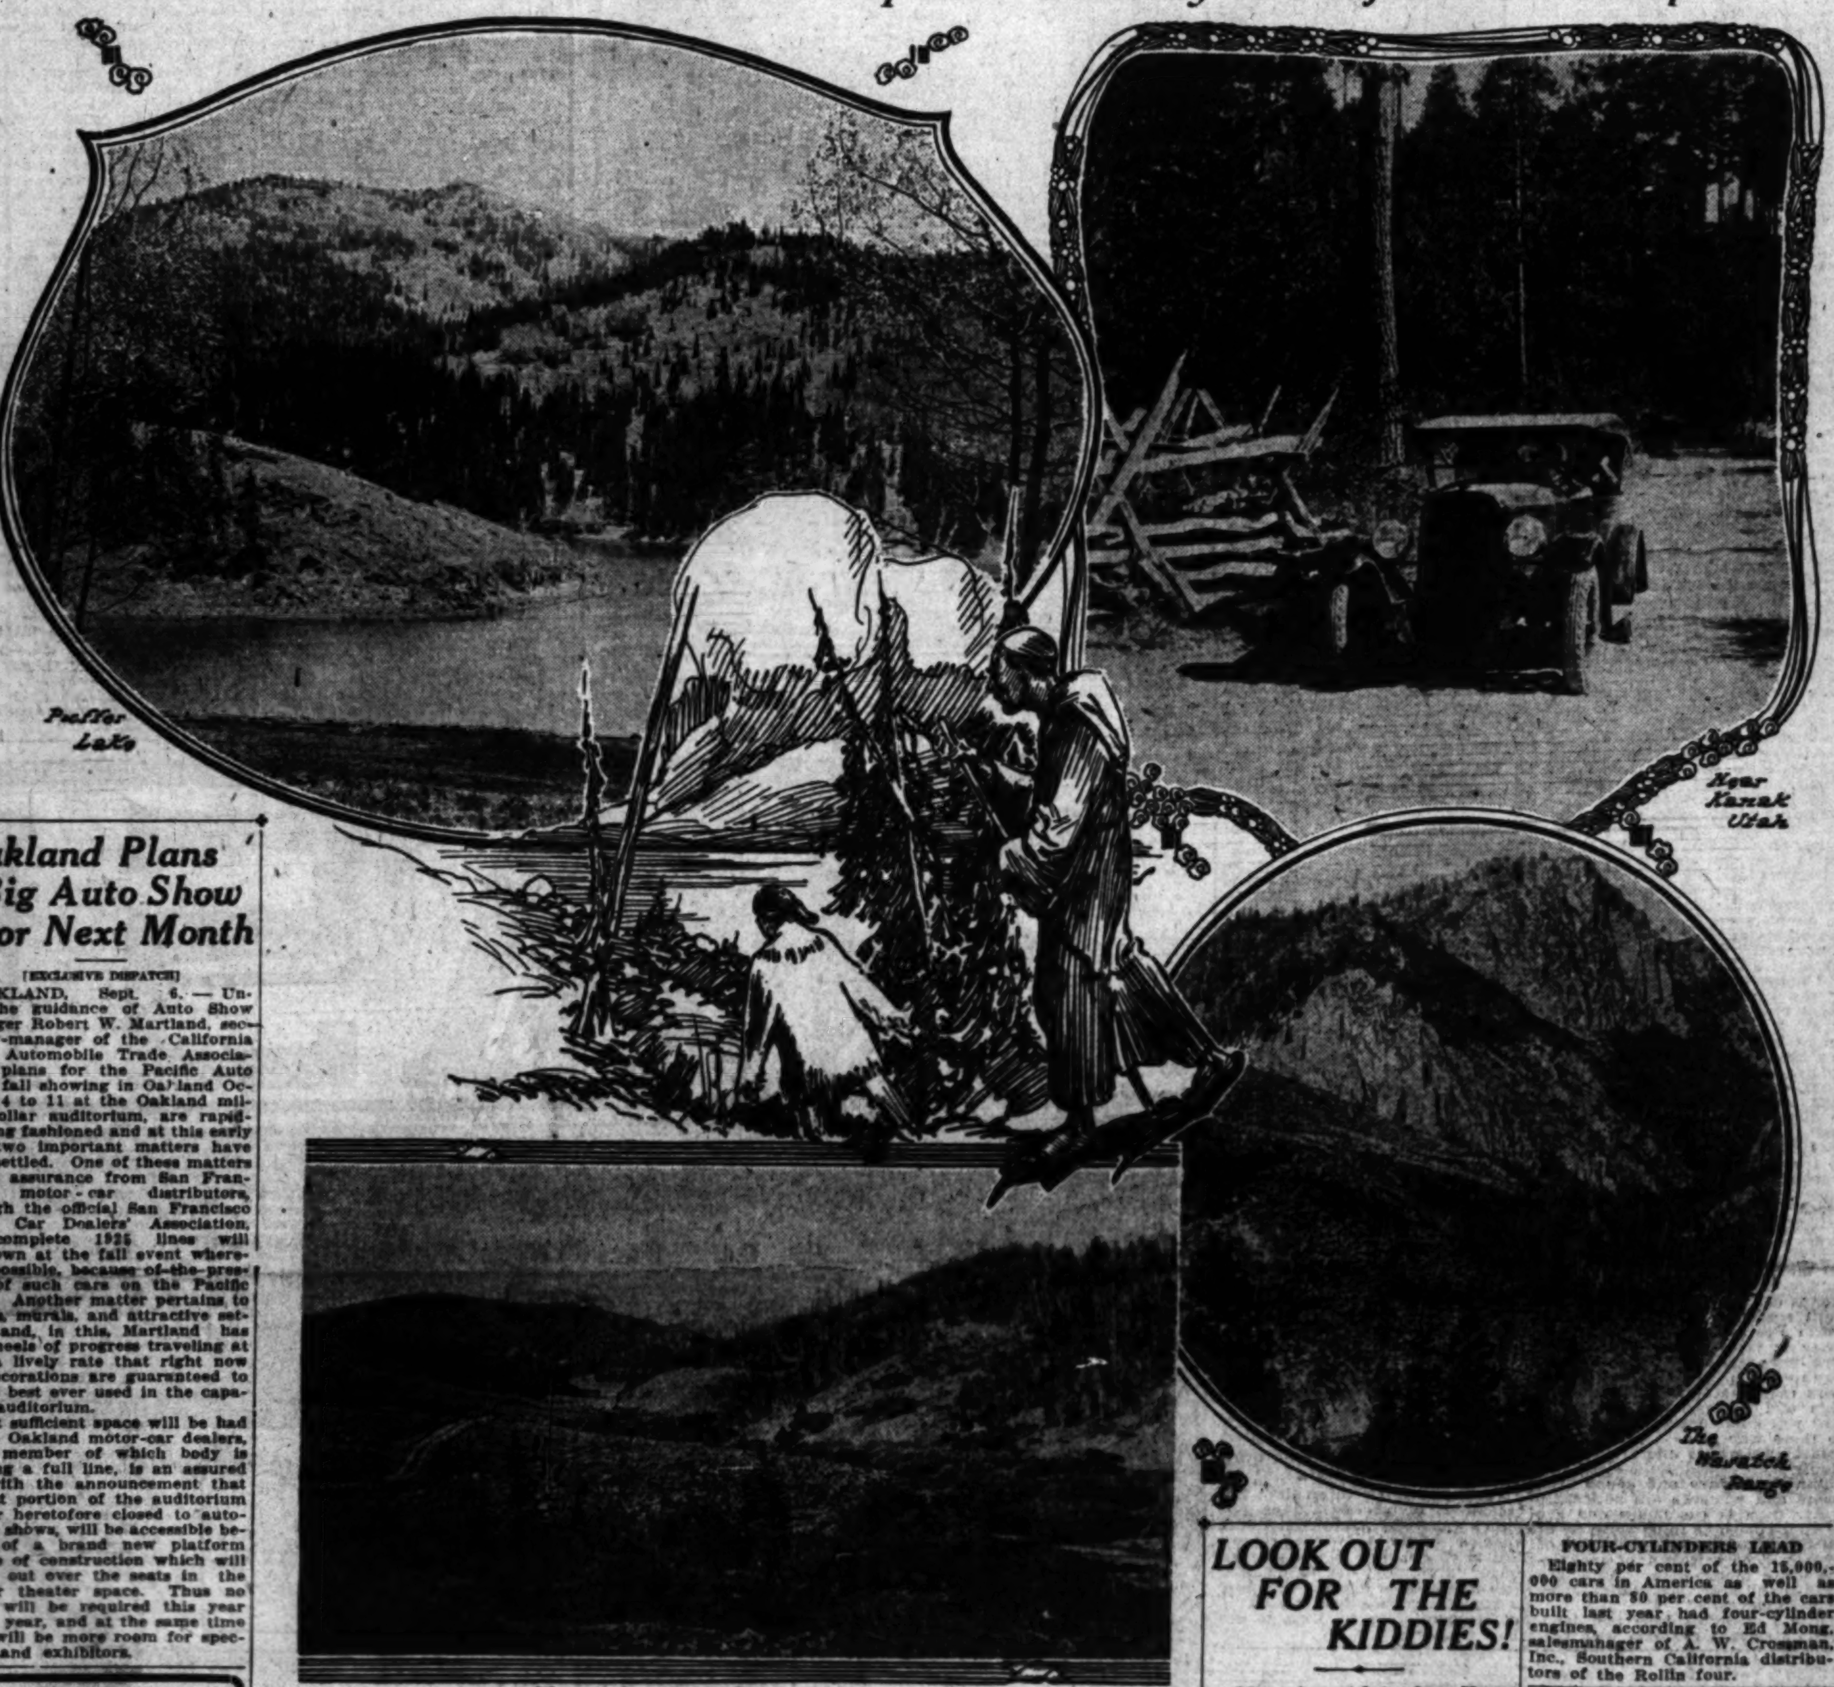
Arrowhead Trail Is Destined to Be Popular Gateway to Majestic Scenic Spots



Extensive Highway Development is Under Way

Pioneered by the Spanish fathers the Arrowhead Trail offers access to such wonder spots as the spectaculular Bryce Canyon, the stupendous Zion National Park and the North Rim of the Grand Canyon. The scenes above are typical of the country. The pictures were brought back by a scout crew from the W. P. Herbert Company, who drove a new 1925 Cleveland into this wonderful country.

ROAD CREWS BUSY ON ARROWHEAD TRAIL

Highway Improvement Will Make This Transcontinental Artery a Wonderful Gateway for Vacationists and Pleasure Seekers

The Arrowhead Trail since 1918 has developed into one of the best traveled of the transcontinental highways, but comparatively few motorists using this route are aware that the genesis of the Arrowhead Trail, so far as the white man is concerned, dates back to the days of the Spanish conquest.

In 1776 the intrepid Padre Escalente started westward from Santa Fe, N. M., seeking a short route to the Bay of Monterey. Lured by the tales of the Indians, Father Escalente pushed out with one white companion to explore and verify the Indian legends of a great gorge and the salt water beyond. It is recorded that in October of the same year the worthy padre crossed the Wasatch range and, so far as is known, was the first white man to view the Great Salt Lake. He believed that he had reached the Pacific, but very shortly learned that the water that he had mistaken for the ocean was an inland sea, while the Indians living adjacent reported the "Father of Waters" as many moons travel farther westward.

COMPLETE ROUND TRIP

Shortage of supplies and the approaching winter determined the worthy father to a southward trek along the shoulder of the Wasatch range. He eventually reached what is now Las Vegas, Nev., thence traveled eastward to Santa Fe; N. M. Thus to a dreamer of empire was given the honor of pioneering the present-day motor highway between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City.

Later on came another dreamer, Brigham Young, who was also an empire builder. He visioned a chain of settlements that would connect Salt Lake City with the ocean at what is now known as Wilmington. The colonists needed iron. A deposit had been discovered near Cedar City and setlers were sent out to develop the iron mountain that has but this year been put into export production ability. A few years later reports were brought to Salt Lake Cityof the fertility of what is now known as the Virgin Valley, par-

MURPHY HITS A STREAK

Local Speed King Wins Three Races in a Row and Swells the Bank Roll; Gossip of the Track

BY PAUL LOWRY

Jimmy Murphy, pride of Los Angeles, seems to have struck a winning streak which should land him the 1924 speedway championship, an honor which he held in 1922 and gave Grandpa Eddie Hearne quite a chase for last year despite a campaign in Europe.

Along with the titular crown, James Anthony bids fair to augment the family bank roll considerably. He has already grabbed off enough first prizes to speed the building of that Wall-street office empòrium in the city of the Angels, and there are a couple of races still on the board bowl program this year that should help the Murphy family fortune.

Coming to a matter of cold statistics, Murphy has won the last three races—the two Altoona events and the Fourth of July flop at Kansas City. Each of these races netted him $9000 in cash prizes, which with the $5000 garnered at Indianapolis for third place and the $800 won at Beverly Hills for seventh place last February, gives him a total winning for the season so far of $32,800.

The October 2 race—the annual Raisin Day classic on Brother Patterson's one-mile Fresno track—and the Thanksgiving Day classic on Brother Young's almost-announced new near-Los Angeles track are the only races left on the board loop schedule to determine the size of J. Murphy's 1924 bank account and the number of points he accumulates toward the 1924 crown.

Off With a Rush

The Western Racing Association, which is English for the A.A.A. dirt tracks, seems to have gotten off with a rush and a bang. Val Haresnape tells me that the race program at San Jose drew a huge crowd last Monday, and the drivers, headed by Ralph De Palma and Eddie Hearne, dished up a dandy brand of activity.

Fortified with a winter of racing on the Ascot dirt track, Ralph De Palma looks to have an edge on all the rest of the boys in the game today. He has his car nicely tuned up and correctly balanced for work on the small dirt ovals, and it will occasion no surprise if his rivals fail to tumble Ralph for some time to come. It will take a clever driver to outgeneral the foxy Italian.

From San Jose the drivers moved on to San Luis Obispo, where they race today, following this with an invasion of Medford, Or., next week-end. Then comes Sacramen-

LOOK OUT FOR THE KIDDIES!

Motorists Advised to Keep Their Eyes Open With the Opening of School

Look out for the kiddies!

With the opening of school for the fall term tens of thousands of youngsters, many of them just starting their school life, will be flocking to the streets, and the danger of accident automatically will be increased many fold over the vacation period.

Motorists are cautioned to watch carefully because of this new influx of child jay-walkers. The public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California is reminding motorists of this fact and urging that they recall safety suggestions of the past, especially not encouraging the youngsters to frequent the streets by giving them free rides.

Many of the children have been playing in the open spaces during the summer and are very apt to forget to "Stop, Look and Listen" before going into the street in pursuit of the elusive ball or in the excitement of a game of tag. Every ice wagon, sand pile or pile of building material serves as a magnet to the children and they may be expected to dart out in the most unexpected manner in the neighborhood of such locations.

The Auto Club says:

"When approaching children do not be afraid to use a horn, but do not depend upon it to blow the children off the street and replace your brake.

"If you see children trying to cross the street give them a chance and wait for them, as you would like to have another motorist wait for someone who is near and dear to you.

"With the observance of these suggestions it is hoped to reduce the unnecessary loss of life among children during the coming year."

MUST TURN FINES OVER TO COUNTIES

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 6.—In a statement issued from the Division of Motor Vehicles by Chief Will H. Marsh, the attention of municipal officers of California was directed to sections of the State law which require that all fines collected by municipal judges from violators of the motor vehicle act arrested by State officers be turned over to the respective counties in which the officers are working.

FOUR-CYLINDERS LEAD

Eighty per cent of the 15,000,000 cars in America as well as more than 80 per cent of the cars built last year had four-cylinder engines, according to Ed Mong, salesmanager of A. W. Crossman, Inc., Southern California distributors of the Rollin four.

OLD TRAILS IS LIKE SPEEDWAY

Barstow-Needles Stretch is Ironed Out

Drags Sent Over it Every Three Days

Road Crews Work at Night to Escape Sunstroke

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 6.—Weeks of work by crews of the California State Highway Commission on the National Old Trails highway between Barstow and Needles have improved the road to such an extent that motorists may negotiate it at a speed of thirty and forty miles an hour.

Since early in January the commission has completed extensive grading projects on the highway, over which more than half of the transcontinental motor tourists enter Southern California. The commission maintains the highway from Victorville to the California-Arizona line, a distance of 231 miles.

DRAGS ARE BUSY

Perhaps the most potent factor in the highway development on the desert is the maintenance work, according to E. Q. Sullivan, engineer in charge of the San Bernardino county division of the commission. Between Victorville and Needles, two drags are located every forty miles and once in every three days the road is dragged with "bump-smoothers." There are twelve drags in use, pulled by tractors.

Explaining the cause of the frequent dragging, the engineer declared that the soil on the desert consists chiefly of volcanic ash and gravel, making continuous attention necessary to maintain a good surface.

As the road is traveled, the engineer said, this volcanic ash is worked to the top of the highway in places, and with a wind blowing over the surface, the finer particles are winnowed, leaving the coarser surface on top. This must be leveled at frequent intervals. In time, of course, the fine ash will be worked off and the surface left hard and unpliable.

The conditioning of the road is

PACKARD

In the Packard Eight, the Packard genius for engineering has achieved more than new ideals in fleetness, flexibility and sustained power, and all-round motoring luxury and exquisite beauty.

It accompanies these results with an actual saving in the cost of operation and upkeep, which is so important as to make the Packard Eight unique among the fine high-powered cars.

Automobile Executive Advocates Routing Through Traffic Around Cities

NOT AN ASSET TO MERCHANTS

Old Idea is Pigeon-Holed by Experts

Wise Ones Want Tourists on Outskirts

Arterial Road System Needs Interlocking

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—By passing automobile "express" by developing turnouts or run-arounds for the motor tourist who is not interested in making a stop-over, and who is thus a liability to the community, is advocated as a civic necessity by Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Company, writing in the September issue of American Motorist, official publication of the American Automobile Association.

Mr. Macauley, speaking as a member of the traffic planning and safety committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, says that because the modern tourist knows where he is going and travels on a schedule which calls for a stop at noon and another at night he is not necessarily a potential customer in every community he traverses, and that heavy through traffic has not been an asset to those merchants and business interests who have insisted on leading it by their doors.

"The laying out of America's State and Federal highways, now rapidly progressing, has a vital influence on city traffic congestion, on the convenience of tourist travel, on freight transport costs and on local business," Mr. Macauley explains. "Proper location of through routes can greatly aid solution of municipal problems in which all motorists are greatly concerned. Civic bodies now deplore that five years ago they demanded interurban traffic through their business centers."

The article stresses the importance of interlocking the arterial road system, as now being laid out, with the routing of through motor travel. It is pointed out that with the corollation of State systems into an interstate system of national benefit State and Federal road authorities have been engaged in laying out roads which will carry over 80 per cent of the highway traffic of the nation, but that despite the vision behind this great national movement very little active co-operation is being had from American cities.

virtually a continuous task throughout the summer when the heat on the desert is terrific, so hot in fact that the road crews are frequently forced to work at night to escape the danger of sunstrokes.

At present, there is being graded a stretch of thirty miles east of Newberry Springs, between Barstow and Needles. Other improvements are under way, principally, however, being grading operations at various points along the highway.

Before the road was improved by the State crews the average driving time between Victorville and Needles was twelve hours, while it may now be covered in from seven to nine hours easily. Thousands of motorists get their first glimpse of California roads—and they are impressive when compared to the rough stretches of Arizona and New Mexico—at Needles after crossing the Colorado River.

NEW BODY TYPES IN SIX HERE

Embracing Seven Models, 1925 Peerless Six Line Now on Display

Embracing seven body types, the 1925 Peerless six will make its western bow today, being shown in the complete line for the first time locally at the Los Angeles, Hollywood and Pasadena showrooms of Stanley W. Smith, Inc., Southern California distributors for Peerless motor cars.

"The Peerless Motor Car Company introduced the new six in April of this year, including but two models in the introductory line, a five-passenger sedan and a five-passenger phaeton, planning to introduce the complete line this fall," explained Stanley Smith, president of the Peerless distribution here, yesterday. "This summer extensive additions have been installed at the factory to make possible the handling of a volume production of the six. With these additions completed, and the plant at Cleveland in volume production, the line in its entirety is now ready.

"The new entrants into the Peerless six line are the two-passenger roadster, the three-passenger special sport roadster, the five-passenger coupe, and the seven-passenger touring phaeton and sedan. The seven-passenger models have a 133-inch wheel base, while the other three new types, and the introductory models are seven inches short of this figure.

"Already the introductory models by virtue of their performance have fully earned the right to take their place as worthy companions of the Peerless eight. Every day owners tell us of some new accomplishment of their sixes. Many have reported eighteen miles to the gallon of gas—a number as high as twenty miles. All have commented on how easy their car handles—how low their maintenance costs have been—how pleased they are with balloon tires. To our knowledge, although a number of our owners have driven their sixes more than 15,000 miles, an original balloon tire has yet to wear out, and all are standing up wonderfully well.

"The general design and construction of the engine is extremely simple, which is reflected in the appearance of the assembled power unit," continued Mr. Smith. "It is of exclusive Peerless design and manufacture, and the product of the genius of the same engineers responsible for the Peerless eight. It delivers more than 70 brake horsepower. The cylinders are three and one-half inch bore by five-inch stroke and the crankshaft, which has seven main bearings, two and three-eighths inches in diameter is exceptionally heavy and so designed and constructed that there is no chance for 'whip' or torsional strain. With light, reciprocating parts balanced to a nicety, smooth, quiet action is assured.

"Balloon tires and Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes are continued as stock equipment on all models.

"The three-passenger sport roadster is one of the snappiest special built roadsters ever shown here," claim Peerless officials. "It is finished in fawn with manila brown striping, special upholstering, Burbank top, black fenders, and nickel bars over the turtle back. In design and performance this roadster will make a particular appeal to those who place a premium on smart appearance and spirited action.

"In the sedans and coupe the doors and windows are noticeably wider than is customary and are so constructed as to be noiseless at all times and through all kinds of driving. The selection of mohair-velours, motor-cloth, hardware fittings and other accessories, show exceptional taste."

The long-wheel base and long, flexible springs combine with balloon tires to bring the riding qualities of the car close to 100 per cent comfort. Extra large shackle bolts of Peerless design and construction also help ward off road shocks and bumps. There are shock absorbers front and rear.

Two Stars Gone

The death of Joe Boyer and Dario Resta both in the same week claimed two of the big heroes of the racing game. Both of them were well known here—Resta for his Peugot victories in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prix races back in 1916 and Boyer for his daredevil racing on old Ascot, as well as his more recent appearances at Beverly and his winning of the Indianapolis race this year.

Both came out of retirement to re-enter a game they loved—Resta to replace a fortune run low as an agent of the Sunbeam car in New York and Boyer, a millionaire, simply to answer the call of the track and win the great Indianapolis classic, then to retire. But the lure was too great and Boyer continued to race to his family's ultimate grief.

Resta was a brother-in-law of Howdy Wilcox, who was killed last year at Altoona, having come out of retirement to drive at Indianapolis and then continuing with the H.C.S. team. Resta made his last appearance here at Beverly in February of 1923, driving one of Cliff Durant's cars, but finished outside the money. He was well educated, a delightful gentleman, and a droll talker who kept his intimates amused wit hhis witticisms.

The loss of Boyer and Resta saddened Val Haresnape, the local A.A.A. representative, particularly for he managed the Packard pit at Indianapolis in 1923 when Boyer, Resta and Ralph De Palma comprised the Packard team.

"Hercules" Is Busy

A. M. (Hercules) Young has his hands full these days with details of the Western Racing Association, the almost-announced new near-speedway and realty deals.

For recreation "Hercules" has become a cash customer of Ley Daro's wrestling palace, and each week one of the toe-twisting scrambles is staged, you can bet your money "Hercules" will be on deck with Al Faulkner and Art Pillsbury and maybe some other cronies.

Making Its Maiden Bow in Los Angeles

BUSY ON BIG ROAD ARTERY

ticular emphasis being placed on the equable and warm climate of this drop-off from the plateau regions. Cotton was a dire need of the early Mormons, so St. George came into being and for many years cotton was grown and thread was spun within 320 miles of Salt Lake City.

So much for the early history of the Arrowhead Trail. In 1912 the motor car was receiving considerable attention by the War Department as a means of transport. A cursory examination for a short line that might serve in time of war was made between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, more or less paralleling the Union Pacific Railroad, but sufficiently removed so that one transport artery might support the other. The line chosen was practically the present route of the Arrowhead Trail. In 1915-16, a co-ordinated movement by the various towns of California, Nevada and Utah brought about actual highway construction. The necessary legislative and publicity machinery was organized and a definite highway plan undertaken which has continued uninterruptedly although spasmodically up to the present time.

Owing to the quarantines established during the foot-and-mouth epidemic, the Arrowhead Trail being the only usable highway to the East, the W. P. Herbert Company decided to investigate the travel conditions along this line and also compile data relative to trade and business conditions. A 1925 Cleveland six that had been sent to the Coast on a test trip, previous to the announcement of the new models, was dispatched on this 2000-mile journey. Among the interesting data compiled is that of volume of travel by motor and highway improvement inaugurated.

From April 26 to June 6, 1924, 4040 automobiles carrying 11,434 passengers were registered at the Utah quarantine station. The 326 miles from St. George to Salt Lake City will be by next spring either paved or graveled the entire distance. The Forest Service is opening twelve to eighteen-foot roads in all directions through and across the Wasatch Mountains. The highway on the floor of Zion Canyon is being rebuilt and extended from the south portal for seven and one-half miles to the Temple of Shiniwava. Two hundred and nineteen thousand dollars is carried in the deficiency appropriation bill for construction from Zion Canyon to connect with the Grand Canyon Highway.

Clark county, Nevada, this year opened a fifty-mile stretch of well-graded and surfaced highway from Las Vegas to the Moapa Valley. From the present terminus of this road near Moapa, contracts have been let and construction is under way for a short line to Bunkerville, Nev. This particular leg of the Arrowhead Trail should be opened next spring and materially shortens the distance from Las Vegas to St. George, and incidentally the gradients are much easier than on the line now in use. A short line is projected from Las Vegas to Barstow and some money is being expended. The date of the opening of this section is problematical and the present route through Searchlight to the National Old Trails will doubtless continue to be used. Reconstruction from Needles to Barstow is converting this piece of California road from the almost impossible to a comfortable travel condition.

Arrowhead Trail must in the future carry the traffic, not alone of the vacationist and pleasure seeker, but with the commencement of actual construction of conservation works on the Colorado River, a load of traffic that will test to the upmost the ability of the natural formations and will undoubtedly serve as a freight carrier of more than passing moment.

After Ten Years--

Ten years ago, Cadillac adopted the V-type eight cylinder motor.

Today, official state license records show that virtually 100 per cent of the V-type 8 cylinder Cadillacs delivered in the United States in the last ten years are still in service.

It is significant, too, to notice that Cadillac retail sales in Los Angeles last month exceeded those of any August in all the twenty years Don Lee has sold Cadillacs.

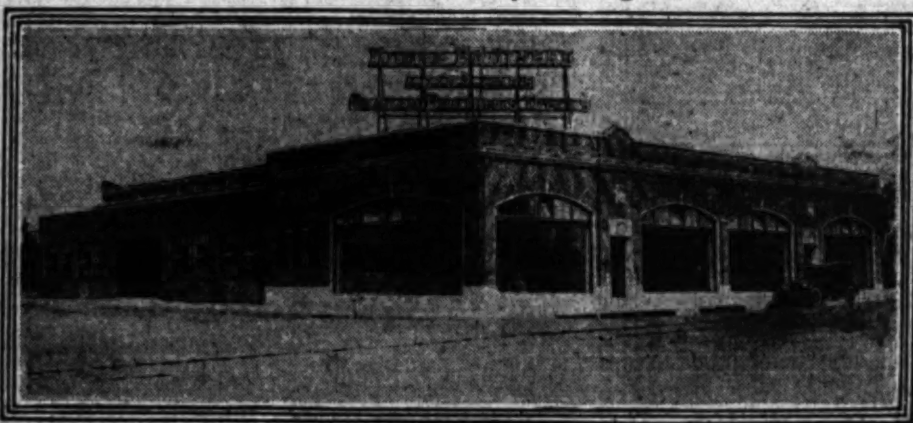
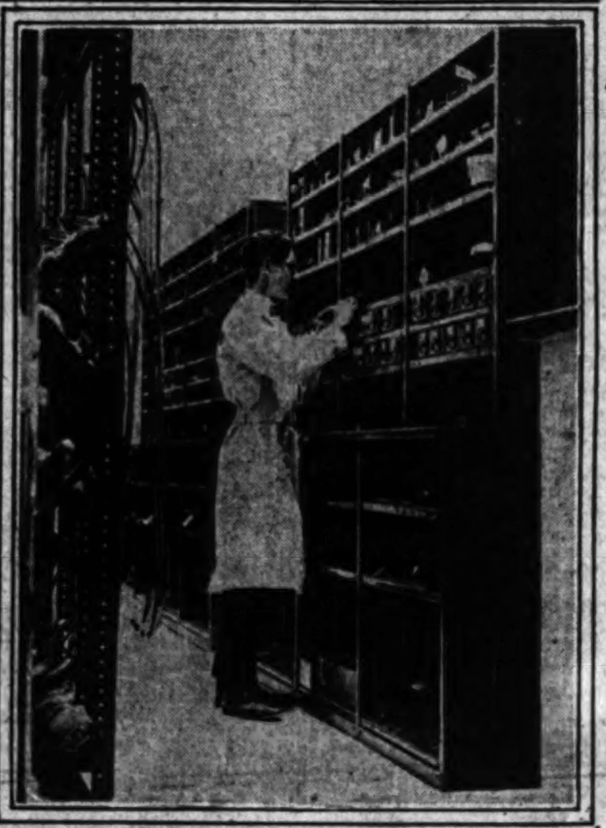
A New Automobile Home for Highland Park





The third branch sales and service structure to be erected by the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity, within the past year. The bottom photo shows a corner in the parts department.

OPEN NEW DODGE BRANCH

Accorded one of the most heavily attended openings in community history by the thousands who attended, the newly built Highland Park branch of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealers for Los Angeles and vicinity, was formally launched into active operation last night.

Centrally located at 5001 Pasadena avenue, this latest addition to Highland Park's "motor row" is the third branch structure to be built by the Albertson Motor Company within the past year. Designed solely as a permanent home for Dodge Brothers cars in this fast-growing suburb, the new structure is similar in general architectural design to those recently erected at Fifth and Vermont and 214 North Pacific Boulevard, Huntington Park. Fronting 100 feet on Pasadena avenue and extending back 125 on Avenue 50, and constructed solidly of rugged brick faced with ornamental art stone, this substantial branch home presents an appearance of simplicity and quiet beauty entirely in keeping with the high character of the motor car it houses. Floor space totaling 12,500 square feet is so divided as to give spacious showroom accommodations and extra large parts room and shop-service facilities.

According to J. R. Berry, former wholesale sales manager for the Albertson Motor Company, and for years connected with Dodge Brothers, Detroit, as factory representative, who has been selected by Fred S. Albertson to head the new Highland Park branch, the new building will be one of the most completely equipped workshops for the repairing of Dodge Brothers cars outside the immediate environs of the city of Los Angeles. Special tools to expedite service work will be installed, and a full stock of parts will be kept on hand at all times so that residents in Highland Park and vicinity can obtain a high character of specialized service. In charge of the service department of the new branch will be M. A. Hill, former service salesman at the Sixteenth and Figueroa street headquarters and well known to thousands of Dodge Brothers owners for his genial personality and expert knowledge of Dodge Brothers cars.

DEALERS HOT FOR OUR CARS

this company at the end of the year will be as good if not better than last year.

Production of the Cleveland Automobile Company has increased 50 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, factory records show. Additional workmen are being placed on the company's pay roll to keep pace with the large volume of business being booked.

Evidence of the demand for Dodge Brothers cars is seen in the fact that sales during the first eight months of the year are far in excess of those of the same period last year. All indications point to a continuance of the demand, which has been one of the features of the year, according to company officials.

Paige-Jewett dealers sold during the month 2400 more new cars than were shipped from the factory, according to President Harry M. Jewett, who declares that the present stocks of cars per dealer is as low as the company has ever had under normal conditions.

G. A. Kissell, president of the Kissell Motor Car Company, announced the resignation of J. F. Lynch, for the past year director of sales for that company. Mr. Lynch has decided to enter partnership with Oscar M. Nelson, the present Kissell distributor in Minneapolis. By this move Mr. Lynch returns to the vicinity of his old stamping ground, as it was in St. Paul, back in 1910, that he first became connected with the Kissell company as branch manager in that territory.

Stewart MacDonald, president of the Moon Motor Car Company of St. Louis, who has been in Detroit several days completing negotiations with the Continental Motors Corporation for his company's requirements for 1925, reports a very decided increase in the business of his company during the past few weeks, and is of the opinion that the last half of the present year will exceed that of 1923, which was one of the banner years of the company.

"Our company shows every indication of being much greater next year than this year has been," said Mr. MacDonald. "Although the last six months of the present year will exceed the same six months of 1923, we have just completed laying out our schedule with the Continental Motors Corporation for our motor requirements for 1925. This will be larger by 25 per cent than our 1924 schedule and personally I cannot see anything but extremely good prospects for business during the next twelve months."

William F. Troescher has resigned from his post with the Roamer Motor Car Company, where he has been doing splendid work. He was formerly assistant sales manager for the Premier Motors, Inc. His future plans have not been announced.

Durant Motors, Inc., announces the opening of a wholesale office in the downtown section of Pittsburg in charge of R. C. Ives. This office will have charge of the whole sales of Star and Durant cars in Western Pennsylvania, Southwestern Ohio and western portion of West Virginia. Mr. Ives was former plant sales manager for Chevrolet Motor Company at St. Louis.

Orders placed by dealers since they received their new Oldsmobiles total three times the dealers' allotment and production schedule set for August, officials of the Lansing company assert. The factory is endeavoring to reach the high production point early last spring, when more than 400 cars were being made a day. Olds Motor Works has broken all previous retail sales records for any twelve months' period. From present indications 1924 not only will be the greatest year in the history of this company, but also may double the best previous year.

L. W. Ward, for the past ten years associated with the sales department of the Chevrolet Motor Company, has been made assistant sales manager of the Gray Motor Car Company, and has started on an extended tour of the country, during which he will meet all factory representatives and dealers.

A factory record for size in bus driveaways was set at the bus plant of the Reo Motor Car Company on August 29, when eleven Reo model W busses started for Chicago in one long line. Eight of the busses were of the sedan type, similar to the one which has just completed the first transcontinental bus tour in the automotive territory. This territorial distribution of these busses after the caravan reached Chicago is interesting. Two of them continued on their way to Denver, cutting a new bus route westward parallel to the route of the coast-to-coast Reo bus. One took the north road to Duluth, while another made its way southwest to St. Louis. Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Peoria and Decatur, Ill., received the remaining units.

California...

California---a Studebaker stronghold ---seems always to have been very much in the minds of Studebaker designers.

Studebaker cars have been designed to meet the existing conditions of this territory, where 50,000 miles a year of motor travel, over highways and byways, is not unusual.

NEW SALES MARK IS ESTABLISHED

Buick Record is Held to be Extraordinary

Banner Month of 1922 is Surpassed

Three-Quarter Million of Cars Sold

In a period considered by authorities to be the most trying one in years for the automobile industry the Howard Automobile Company is accomplishing the extraordinary feat of shattering Buick sales records right and left.

Not content with breaking the July record last month the local Buick distributors hung up a sales mark that goes into the books as the banner one of all time, even including the whopping year of 1922, when there were almost more customers than cars.

According to figures revealed yesterday by H. W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Howard Automobile Company, there were 311 new Buicks sold at retail in Los Angeles during August. By Los Angeles is meant the metropolitan district: Hollywood, Pasadena, Long Beach and other adjacent territory not being included.

This new record demolishes the old one of 305 new cars sold at retail in November of 1922, and it represents in no uncertain way the unbounded popularity of the new 1925 Buicks with their easy steering gear, low-pressure tires and four-wheel brakes.

Combined with the disposal of 262 used cars, also a new record figure, the Buick retail business done by the Howard Automobile Company during the month of August amounted to nearly $750,000, declared Tuttle.

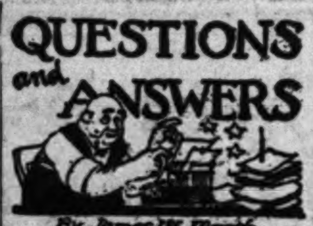
The best previous mark for the sale of used cars was in June, when 228 were sold. This dropped slightly to 204 in July, but August more than made up for the deficiency with the record noted.

The Buick record is more noteworthy, according to Tuttle, because it comes in a trying period when many of the factories in the East have been working on smaller production schedules and in some cases finding it hard to make both ends meet.

"The remarkable record of the Howard Automobile Company during August only emphasizes the hold Buick has on the public pulse in California," Tuttle declared. "In the list of the thirty-two most popular cars in California recently announced by the State Motor Vehicle Department, Buick stands pre-eminent in the six-cylinder field. It is third in the list of the 'high five,' and is surpassed in registrations only by two cheap-priced four-cylinder cars. There are over 90,000 Buicks in the State of California, nearly 30,000 more than the number registered by the next six-cylinder car."

GILA RIVER BRIDGE PLANS ARE DRAWN

PHOENIX, Sept. 6.—State Engineer W. C. Lefebre is drawing plans for a bridge across the Gila River at the Gillespie dam, on the Phoenix-Yuma highway. The structure, which is to be of cantilever type, is to be 1700 feet long and is to cost about $300,000. Funds will be secured from the Federal, State and county governments. At present crossing is on the apron of the dam, passage prevented only by unusually high water.



QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

By James W. Marsh.

The University of California, extension division, wish to call the attention of the public to a course of instruction in "The Use and Care of the Automobile." This work is planned for the automobile owner or prospective owner and is on a nontechnical nature, intended to teach the individual what is in his car and how to take care of and drive it with the least possible trouble and expense. Instruction covers the engine and how it works, the electric system, storage batteries, carburetors and their adjustment, lubrication, cooling, gears, axles and all parts and their functions and care. The class meets in the automobile department of the University of California, room 106, 855 North Vermont avenue, Tuesday afternoons from 4 to 6 o'clock, beginning the 16th inst. The work being given in the shop atmosphere, where all parts and functions of the automobile are demonstrated, makes the instruction comprehensible even to those who have no previous understanding of the subject.

For enrollment or further information apply at the office of the extension division, 815 Junior Orpheum Building, South Hill street. James W. Marsh is the instructor in charge of the work. The public is cordially invited to attend the first class free of charge.

Question: Will two coats of engine enamel on a Ford engine lessen the cooling ability of the car?

G. W. L., Long Beach.

Answer: To a very small extent the cooling will be affected, but not sufficiently to cause any trouble, especially if the enamel is black. Only a very small percentage of the heat is radiated through the outer walls of the waterjacket.

Q.: I am driving a 1919 Hup. Of late, when climbing hills or quick acceleration there is a staccato whistling noise approaching a squeak. The valve stems are somewhat worn. I have examined all gaskets, inspected all parts thoroughly and yet I cannot locate the seat of the sound.

G. S. L., West Seventeenth St.

A.: There are two convenient methods of trying to locate your trouble. Have some one drive the car up a sharp hill while you ride beside the open hood. Another way is to jack up the car, apply the brakes and accelerate. I am satisfied that the worn valve stems are not the cause of the noise, but if your engine does not idle well it may be advisable to put in new intake valves and guides. It may be well to clean and inspect the muffler while doing the job.

Q.: I would like to know how racing cars are entered for races, the piston displacement, gear ratio, etc.

RALPH T.

A.: I believe you can get all necessary information from the Automobile Club of Southern California, 2601 South Figueroa street.

Q.: What do you think constitutes the best automobile lock?

HUMPHREY M., Los Angeles.

A.: Any lock is better than no lock, on the other hand, a professional automobile thief can steal any car which he determined to, no matter how it is locked. Ignition locks are of the least possible value. I consider the lock which forms a pointed projection on the tread of the wheel probably the most effective, but they are not well adapted to use on disc wheels. Transmission locks are effective in preventing the driving away of a a car, but no hindrance to towing it.

Q.: Will you be so kind as to tell me which is the best oil and gasoline for a Ford?

S. J. M., West Sixty-sixth St.

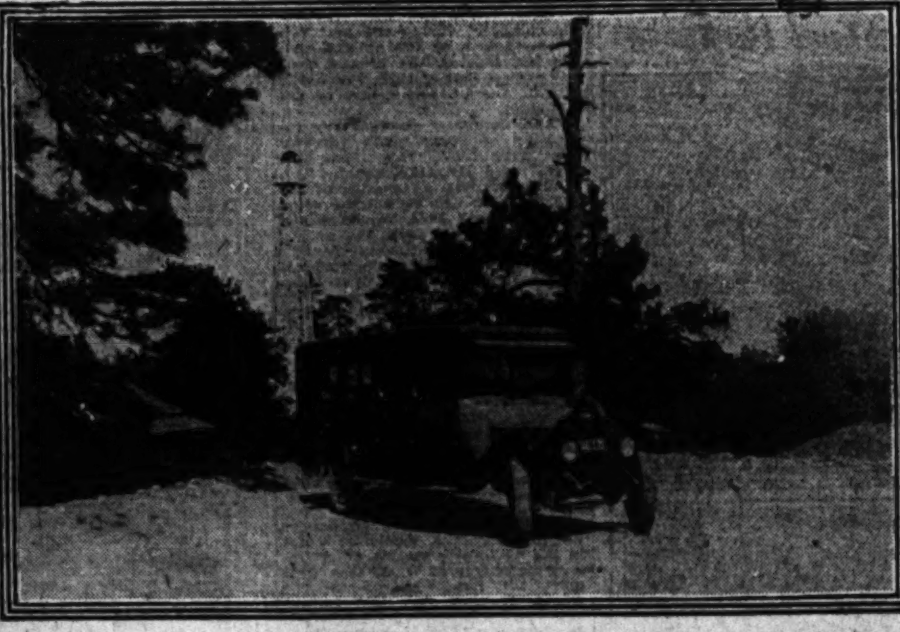
A.: Practically all of the well-known companies handling their own gasolines, inside of the city limits of Los Angeles, are putting out satisfactory gasoline. The City of Los Angeles specifies the quality sold inside of the city. Independent stations may sell good gasoline, but the consumer has no means of knowing whether it is good or not, and the damage which can be done an engine by the continued use of bad gasoline is considerable. For cylinder oil in a Ford I recommend special thin oils which have been developed especially for the Ford. Do not use thick oils. Drain the crankcase every 750 miles. Do not wash out the case with kerosene or flushing oils. Simply drain and refill.

Q.: I have driven by Chevrolet 7000 miles and I cannot keep the oil pressure up. I have put in three sets of pump gears. Would hardened steel gears wear any longer? My use of the car has been largely on the desert. I drain the crankcase frequently. What do you think causes the pressure to drop so badly in my car?

R. K. M., Pasadena.

A.: Your trouble is a peculiar one. I somewhat suspect the pump valves. Look them over carefully. Your description of the erratic action indicates something more than pump gears. Probably the case is as badly worn as the gears, and if you have worn out three sets of gears you certainly need a new case by this time. It is unusual for an oil pump to wear out, if the grit was bad enough to cut the pump it seems to me that all of the bearings would have suffered, too. Hardened steel gears will do no good. I recommend an entire new pump.

Up in the Air With the Pines



One of the eighteen-passenger White stages which make the run to Mt. Wilson from Los Angeles up steep grades and around winding hairpin roads.

HITCH WAGONS TO THE STARS

Although we are only 34,000,000 miles from the planet of Mars, yet Mars is a great deal closer than it has been in a great many moons. However, the recent visit of this celestial body created quite a sensation while it lasted and about all anyone saw of the lemon shaped planet was a lot of clouds, a big wart and a red eye.

Nevertheless thousands of people journeyed up to Mount Wilson to get a squint at this peaceable companion of the earth expecting to see the Martians celebrating their Fourth of July or something.

Several thousand curious folks peeked through one of the large telescopes on Mt. Wilson one night and had a good look at Mars but none were able to tell whether Mars is inhabited or not, so the mystery of Mars is still unsolved.

Mt. Wilson offers a great many things of interest to the visitor. At night some sixty cities can be seen, their lights blinking and twinkling in a most fascinating array 6000 feet below. The sunrise and sunset are particularly gorgeous from this altitude.

The world's largest astronomical center is located on Mt. Wilson. There are seven large telescopes, one a 100-ton giant which is the largest in the world, two sun towers, a museum, snow towers and other astronomical instruments.

The old adage, "hitch your wagon to a star," has been figuratively accomplished by the Mt. Wilson Stage Line which runs stages from the Union Stage Depot at Fifth and Los Angeles streets in Los Angeles to the summit of Mt. Wilson. This line handles some 10,000 people to and from Mt. Wilson during a year.

The "wagon," or wagons, which have been hitched to the stars consists of four "White" stages operated by this stage line and covers some 60,000 car miles during the twelve-monta period.

"I don't believe any other make of bus would prove as satisfactory on this run as do our "White" stages, says N. A. Webb, manager of the Mt. Wilson stage line. The fifty-mile round trip from Los Angeles to the Mt. Wilson Hotel with from fourteen to eighteen passengers, their baggage and supplies to the hotel is made as economically as the ordinary touring car and our grades are from 10 to 18 per cent from the foot of the mountain."

ARIZONA COMMISSION IS UPHELD BY COURT

PHOENIX, Sept. 6.—The right of the Arizona Corporation Commission to control interstate stage lines in their passage through Arizona has been upheld by Federal court decision at Los Angeles. Such stage lines have been operating between Los Angeles and El Paso, carrying Mexican laborers and their families at fares that ranged from $10 to $25 a head. Occasionally the stages broke down en route, leaving the passengers a charge upon the Arizona authorities, while the drivers were declared reckless. The lines now will have to be licensed and bonded, with only certain lines allowed to operate.

The 1925
PEERLESS
IS NOW HERE
in all body types

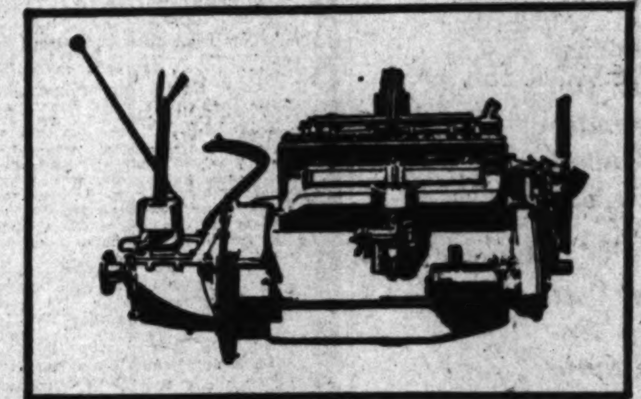
EMBRACING seven body types, the 1925 Peerless Six is now on display! Unparalleled in beauty and with motor powerful, yet surprisingly economical, without vibration, yet flexible and with get-away beyond belief, this Six is a marvel of automotive perfection.

Its burly seven-bearing crankshaft, its four-bearing camshaft, its sturdy 7½-inch frame, its torque arm drive, its nicety and precision of balance, its long semi-elliptical springs, balloon tires and hydraulic four-wheel brakes are a few of the many factors which combine to make this 1925 Peerless Six more than just an ordinary automobile.

First introduced early last Spring, this Six has earned by virtue of performance the right to take its place as a worthy companion of the matchless Peerless eight. Every day owners tell us of some new accomplishment of their Sixes. Many have reported eighteen miles to the gallon of gas—a number as high as twenty miles. All have commented on how easy their car handles—how they would never again drive a car unless equipped with Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes—how low their maintenance costs have been—how pleased they are with balloon tires. To our knowledge, although a number of our owners have driven their Sixes more than 15,000 miles, an original balloon tire has yet to wear out.

Until you have driven this car you have yet to experience the utmost in automotive performance. See this wonderful Six today. Drive it. Judge for yourself its marvelous qualities. Abuse it, ask of it even unreasonable tasks. It will meet your every demand. If you would know the most advanced six on the road today, get acquainted with the 1925 Peerless—its value is a revelation.

We are confident this car will outperform any car you may mention. Ask up to prove it. We can!



Engine—clean, smooth-running and tremendously powerful. Develops over 70 brake H. P. Designed by Peerless. Built entirely in Peerless Shops. Cylinders 3½" bore x 5" stroke. Seven main crank shaft bearings, 2⅜" in diameter. Light, reciprocating parts balanced to a nicety. All bearings accessible on removal of lower pan. A really fine power plant.

A REO Will Get You There—and Back

An 18-Passenger Reo passenger bus arrived in Los Angeles August 29th from New York via Albany, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Fargo (N. D.), Yellowstone Park, Wallace (Idaho), Seattle, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, Fresno, Bakersfield and the Ridge Route. It ran on a definite schedule and came through without trouble or delay.

Last Thursday, after only a brief going over and proper lubrication this big bus left for the East by way of Phoenix, Dallas, El Paso, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis and Indianapolis.

Aside from being the first continuous transcontinental bus trip in history this long and strenuous journey has been a most exacting test of the Reo T-6 motor—identically the same power plant that drives the Reo Touring Car, Sedan, Brougham and Coupe. This bus weighs two and one-half times as much as a Touring Car—Yet there was ample power for every need,—AND NO TROUBLE.

SOME WISE WORDS ON OIL

Public Declared to be Ignorant of Many Facts Concerning Production of Lubricating Fluid

BY THOMAS P. OTT

It is reasonably safe to state that the majority of people are still unaware of the fact that the best lubricating oil does not necessarily come from Pennsylvania. Little thought has been given as to whether Pennsylvania oils are manufactured in that State or from crude produced in that State, but the word "Pennsylvania" seems to have exerted some power over the inadequately informed purchaser, that, in some manner, has inspired a feeling of confidence that oils from that State must necessarily be of the highest possible character.

Undoubtedly, if all the so-called Pennsylvania motor oils were produced from Pennsylvania crude, that State would probably have a crude oil production in excess of that of the State of California instead of the reverse being the case. However, the "oil-consuming" public should not be unduly criticised for this frame of mind, for western oils are comparatively new on the market. The public has been so accustomed to thinking of eastern lubricating oils and using them with success that it views with some doubt the advent of a new lubricant of which it has not heard.

"Eastern" oils have been known for many years and consequently there are even cases where western manufacturers have been placed in the unfortunate position of claiming that their products are "as good, not better." The public usually believes what it is told if it is told often enough and emphatically enough and it has not been adequately informed of the true state of affairs in relation to the controversy of "West versus East."

There are many good lubricating oils manufactured and any refining company with the proper facilities produces such products. How foolish it would be for a large corporation to place on the market oils which would not give satisfaction. What a poor business policy to attempt to force upon the public products that would not work satisfactorily under varied conditions, especially if it were possible to obtain better oils elsewhere.

The points of distinction between lubricating oil are fine ones, and when we consider these five points of distinction, certainly western oils can not be viewed in any light except that of highly superior products. Since the points of distinction are fine ones, it is too often difficult to properly impress an "eastern oil" enthusiast with the force of the evidence, but an unbiased mind which is open to results obtained by proper scientific experimentation and to the opinion of men the character of whose work cannot be properly questioned cannot fail to be impressed when the individual merits of the western products are brought to view.

To the average man, the manufacture of the various commodities from crude oil is a process more or less mysterious and complicated. However, refining processes, though complicated, are exact and the manner in which laboratory tests and chemical research can be correlated to commercial practice allows the assertion to be made, without fear of refutation, that there is practically no lubricating condition that cannot be successfully met by a straight western oil. In fact, it is absolutely true that western oils not only function as well as do eastern oils, but in many cases give superior service.

New Rubber Company is Established

An entirely new plan for manufacturing and selling automobile tires is forecast by the recently organized Mainardy Rubber Company.

This new plan is the combined work of experienced tire manufacturers and expert tire merchandising and advertising men.

The product is represented by several brands of tires. All are of standard qualification and all enjoy large patronage in local fields.

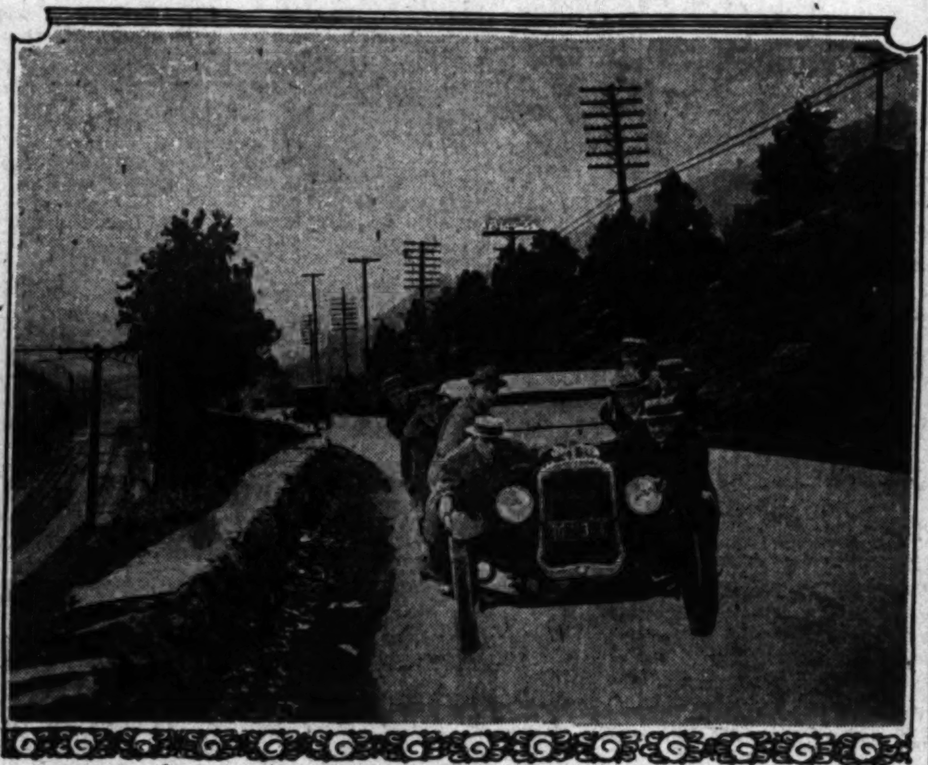
The plan presents many logical and much-needed economies, both in manufacturing and distribution of tires. It promises enormous savings in cost to the consumer.

George E. Mainardy, for many years associated with the American Tobacco Company and one of the best-known merchandising and advertising men in the country, is the president.

Thousands of publishers and publishers' representatives will be interested to know that Mr. Mainardy has embarked in a great business of his own, which will give him a still greater opportunity to express the service ideals, always the basis of his day's work.

Mr. Mainardy is going to do a needed public job in a line of manufacturing which affects the pocketbook of nearly everybody.

Carrying a Load Over Cahuenga Pass



This Oldsmobile six, 1925 model, pulled over Cahuenga Pass the other day carrying twelve men. The test was made in high gear. Picture shows the car at the top of the grade.

CLIMBS CAHUENGA PASS

Loaded down until it looked like a South Main-street street car about 5:15 p.m., a new Oldsmobile six from J. W. Leavitt & Co. tackled Cahuenga Pass early one morning last week and demonstrated its contempt for hills by climbing the Pass from the Hollywood side with the entire Oldsmobile sales force of twelve men aboard. With a standing start from the railroad crossing, the Oldsmobile took its load that figured very close to a full ton, over the hill without apparent effort and crossed the summit at a speed of seventeen miles an hour, and demonstrated a stubborn ability to hang on and pull like a pair of well-trained Missouri mules. Sales-manager Clair R. Savage of the Los Angeles branch of J. W. Leavitt & Co. staged the test and was more than pleased with the way the Oldsmobile performed.

"We tried it first with nine men, and the car romped over the hill so easily that we tried it again with an even dozen," said Savage yesterday. "The twelve men averaged 150 pounds apiece, which gave us a total load of 1800 pounds. For the last 100 yards or so the speed of the car was cut down to about seventeen miles an hour, but it held this pace steadily and the motor pulled as smoothly at this speed as ever.

"The Oldsmobile six motor is by no means a big motor, for its piston displacement is only 169 cubic inches. For a motor of this size to pull such a load over Cahuenga is good evidence of the engineering ability that has gone into its making, and the very real efficiency that has been developed.

"In many cars, a small added weight will make a very great difference in the high-gear performance. This is very evidently not true of the Oldsmobile six, for the handicap of nearly a ton of weight on such a grade as Cahuenga Pass is a considerably more severe test than any ordinary usage would ever demand. In these days, when many people use their cars for camping purposes, and carry heavy loads on their summer trips, this quality which the Oldsmobile possesses is of very great importance."

Did Horseshoe Bring Good Or Terrible Luck

"There's good luck in old shoes," so says a proverb, but Don Coleman, of the Harold L. Arnold organization, is still wondering if that is true. Last Sunday, he was driving his Essex six on the desert near Palmdale, when he saw a striking cloud effect with the sun behind it.

Stopping to take a photograph of the cloud, he heard the dreaded hissing of escaping air. He looked at his right rear tire, and saw it gradually sinking, with part of a horseshoe nailed to it. Having a heavy camping equipment on the car it is doubtful if he would have detected the flat tire until the casing and tube had been ruined.

"Now my problem is this," he said. "Did the horseshoe bring me good luck when I saw the cloud, or did it bring me bad luck by attaching itself to the tire in the first place?"

GRAY GOOSE MAKES NEW TRIP RECORD

Fast Car Races Air Mail From Toledo to Montreal; Lowers All Marks

Racing against time and the United States mail, a Willis Sainte Claire Gray Goose, piloted by Cecil L. Rood, Toledo distributor for the Wills Sainte Claire, established a phenomenal record last week for the international trip from Toledo to Montreal, Que.

According to word received by Sidney A. Briggs, manager of the Western Motors Company, Wills Sainte Claire distributors here, the total distance of 760 miles was covered in the elapsed time of nineteen hours and fifty-nine minutes. The actual driving time was eighteen hours and twenty-seven minutes or better than forty-one miles per hour, which is a greater average than that maintained by C. Harold Wills, president of Wills Sainte Claire, Inc., when he made the sensational run from Detroit to New York several years ago.

"The Wills Sainte Claire left the Toledo postoffice at 12:01 on Thursday night, after mailing a special delivery letter from the Mayor of Toledo to the Mayor of Montreal, and the race was on," said Mr. Briggs in telling of the feat.

"The stock Wills Sainte Claire which made the run had been driven only 780 miles, which made it necessary for Rood to hold down his speed at first, but as soon as Norfold was passed the Gray Goose took up the trip in earnest.

"Four-wheel brakes and balloon tires played their part in this remarkable run, and according to Rood, they never could have succeeded if it had not been for them.

"A. G. Harris, service manager, made the trip as relief driver, but Rood drove the entire distance himself. Mrs. Rood and G. R. Pulford, sporting editor of the Toledo Blade, completed the party. At Montreal, in front of the Mt. Royal Hotel, a large crowd had gathered to welcome the Gray Goose and its arrival was acclaimed by the wildest enthusiasm."

USE HUGE LUMBER CARGO IN PICTURE

A caravan of forty huge lumber trucks and trailers wound its way, phantomlike, across Los Angeles and over Cahuenga Pass to Universal City the other day, when the Hammond Lumber Company delivered 175,000 feet of lumber for the setting of "The Phantom of the Opera," a Universal-Jewel. This is said to be the biggest single delivery of lumber ever made in Los Angeles.

This film will be the chief spectacle production of the year in Carl Laemmle's organization, with Lon Chaney, of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" starring, under the direction of Rupert Julian, maker of "Merry-Go-Round." Most of the sets will be in and around a steel stage, the first all-metal set in films.

The entire caravan of trucks from the Hammond Lumber Company's fleet, which totals more than fifty, all painted blue and white in company colors, presented an unusual sight. The Hammond Lumber Company's representative stated that this seemingly huge feat was just an example of the service they are able to render. All these trucks are safely lubricated by Pennzoil motor oils and grease.

MOON

The Truth

MERE competitive criticism falls by the wayside as Moon moves forward again.

The truth about Moon leadership throughout America and many foreign markets is now a matter of record.

Passing twenty-five motor car manufacturers in volume of sales in four years, and the fact that Moon factory sales have multiplied fourteen times in the same period is not just an accident.

Thousands have turned to Moon in the great motor-wise markets.

Never Before So much for the Price

It is not only in engineering design—in performance—that the good Maxwell now revolutionizes four-cylinder standards.

Never was there a car which gave the owner so much in fine materials and workmanship for anywhere near the price.

We will gladly go over the chassis and body construction with you, as intensively as you may desire, and you can satisfy yourself on that point.

We will particularly emphasize this fact: In every part which wears, or has to do with reliability, the good Maxwell is now actually stronger, pound for pound, than many a car costing four to five times its price.

You can depend upon the good Maxwell to stand up in toughest, day-after-day going—you can drive it with the same assurance you would feel with a costly car.

Indeed, if road conditions are at all possible, you'll never see a Maxwell stopped. Its brute pulling power seems always able to carry it through.

Perhaps the greatest boon to the good Maxwell owner, however, is the consistently carefree service it gives him, day after day and month after month.

There are a host of mechanical reasons why the good Maxwell saves its owners both trouble and expense. Here are a few.

1 Fine bearings, used extensively, eliminate friction. (With one hand you can roll the car on a level floor.)
2 The crankshaft floats on a film of force-feed oil, maintained under pressure in its three over-size bearings. This reduces wear to the point where there is practically no need for bearing replacement.
3 The clutch release or throw-out bearing is positively and automatically lubricated from the transmission.
4 At all vital points the good Maxwell uses the same kinds of alloy and heat-treated steels employed in the costliest cars.
5 The rear axle drive pinion—which bears the burden of propelling the car—is rigidly mounted on ball-bearings which preserve permanent alignment and quiet.
6 The frame side rails are of unusually deep sections which insure great strength and rigidity.

The fact that the good Maxwell motor is practically vibrationless—that vibration in any event is not transmitted to the body—is another long-life feature.

You should ride in the good Maxwell, now that Chrysler engineers are directing its development, and talk with owners and learn their disinterested opinion of good Maxwell performance and economy.

LINCOLN ROUTE IN DANDY SHAPE

Only Fifty Miles in Really Poor Condition

Next Two Years Will See Rough Spots Ironed Out

Field Secretary Gives Out Illuminating Summary

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

OAKLAND, Sept. 3.—With the marked improvement in road building along the Lincoln Highway there is now less than fifty miles of it across the entire United States, from San Francisco to New York, which can be considered in really poor condition. That statement in brief typifies the present condition of America's main motor-traveled street, according to information given out by Gael Hoag, field secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, upon his arrival in Oakland and San Francisco early last week.

Hoag declares his belief that in the next two years there will be no occasion for any kind of criticism from any motorist on the condition of the highway from ocean to ocean for, by that time, he believes all the rough spots will have been ironed out.

The Seiberling cut-off across the Utah desert is in better shape today than it has been in several years, Hoag states, due to valiant volunteer work which was done on it this spring and summer by residents of Gold Hill, Utah, and the Tooele County Supervisors in Utah.

In Nevada, not more than thirty miles of the Lincoln route can be said to be bad, and this distance will be further cut down when new work now under way is finished.

The Lincoln Highway secretary found, along his entire route, a greater interest than ever among prospective tourists who intend driving to the Pacific Coast at some time in the next few years. In his opinion, motor travel westward will soon be measured annually in thousands of cars, rather than in hundreds of cars, as is now the case. In Iowa and Nebraska much work has been done in the past year and is still under way which will bring the Lincoln Highway up to class A standards in road construction.

Hoag was met in Oakland upon his arrival by California State Consul Jim Houlihan. During his stay here Hoag will hold a number of conferences with Automobile Club and Chamber of Commerce officials. He has received numerous invitations to speak before various lunch clubs.

USE ROYAL TIRES

United States royal cord bus tires were used on the Reo transcontinental sedan bus in its recent trip of 6103 miles from Lansing to New York and then to the Pacific Coast. Contact with jagged rocks necessitated replacement of the two rear tires, but the front tires came through with the tread still in excellent shape. The tires are thirty-two by six single all around.

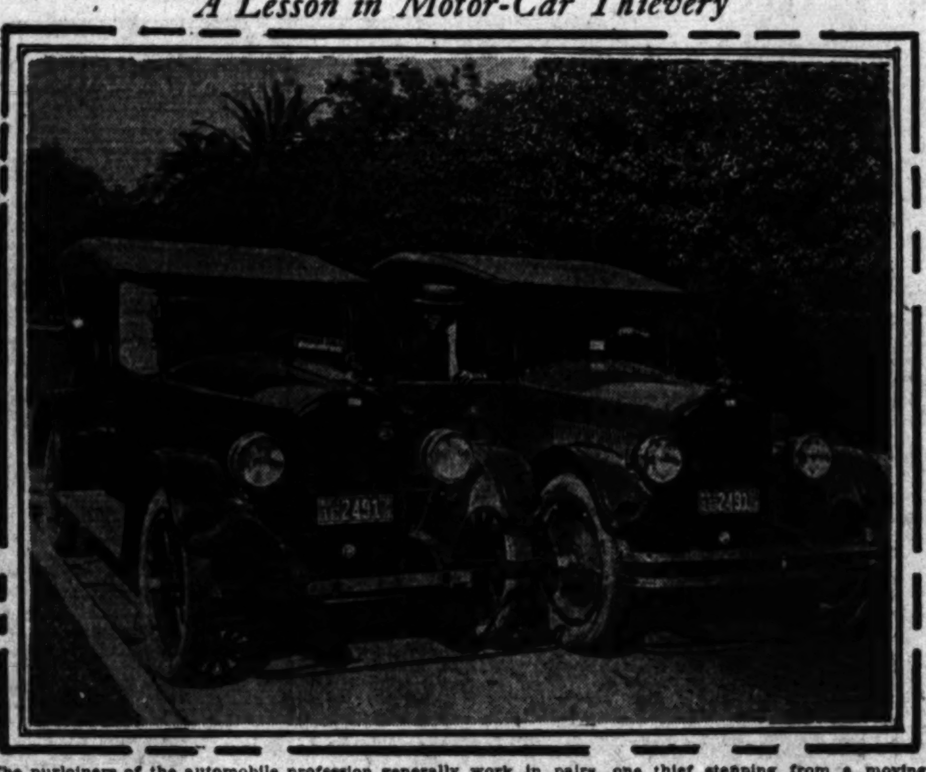
LIMIT SPEED AND WEIGHT

Following an engineering investigation, as required by the Motor Vehicle Act, the California Highway Commission has adopted a resolution fixing the speed limit on the Rincon Causeways in Ventura county at 15 miles per hour and the weight limit of loads which may be moved over them at ten tons.

This has been done as a safety measure, it is announced by State Highway Engineer R. M. Morton. The wooden causeways are about to be replaced by a concrete seawall and fill and extensive repairs at this time would be a waste of funds.

Signs will be placed by the commission giving the new speed and weight limits, after which it will be unlawful to violate the new regulations.

A Lesson in Motor-Car Thievery



The purloiners of the automobile profession generally work in pairs, one thief stepping from a moving car to one parked at the curb and making a getaway. In case he gets caught at the job he has his pal's car to aid him in his escape. A pair of Jewetts were used in the demonstration, and Guy Collins and G. L. Euper, salesmen, are the play thieves.

Resort Notes

Sentinel Hotel Stays Open

The Sentinel Hotel in Yosemite National Park, operated by the Yosemite National Park Company, will remain open throughout the fall and winter months, according to Paul Beemer, Los Angeles representative of that company. Mr. Beemer says this is in accordance with the regular schedule, as the hotel has remained open throughout the winter for a number of years.

The Sentinel Hotel is famous for its excellent meals, and is electrically heated.

The fall and winter months are wonderful months for a visit to this famous park.

Buys More Cottages

G. H. Chittick, manager of Blue Sea Cottages in La Jolla announces the purchase of three completely furnished four-room cottages and one six-room cottage in La Jolla, to be included as a part of the accommodations of his resort. Two of the cottages are one block from the business section of La Jolla, and the other two are one block from the Blue Sea Cottages group, and on the main highway. Mr. Chittick, who with Miss Louise Hugus bought the Blue Sea Cottages in the early spring, reports an excellent summer's business.

Brent's Crags Accessible

Reconstruction work upon the State Highway near Calabasas has been completed, according to word received from Brent's Mountain Crags. It is now possible to reach that popular resort without detouring. The Crags comprise 200 scenic acres, located in the heart of the Santa Monica Mountains, in a delightful wooded canyon, with towering peaks surrounding.

Brent's Mountain Crags are 100 minutes from Broadway, and is reached through Hollywood, over the Cahuenga grade, thence twenty-two miles over the Ventura highway, passing Calabasas. Turn south four miles beyond that town, where large signs at the corner point the way.

Camp Curry Closes Early

Camp Curry in the Yosemite National Park closed last Wednesday, one month earlier than last year, on account of a shortage of electric power and light in the valley, according to J. A. C. Waters, Southern California representative for Camp Curry.

Airplanes as Stage Line

The State Railroad Commission last Tuesday authorized the Big Bear Lake Air Line Company to place in effect a through rate from Los Angeles to Big Bear Lake, using motor stages from Los Angeles to Ontario, and airplanes from Ontario to Big Bear Lake resorts.

This is said to be the first authorization in California for the combination of airplanes with motor busses as a stage line.

Rip Van Winkle in Pageant

There is a world of pathos in the return of Rip Van Winkle to his native town, only to find himself alone and companionless in the very place he used to know so well. One after another he inquires after his old comrades, and receives the same answer, "dead." At last he makes an inquiry about himself and finds that he is almost forgotten; just a name that means almost nothing. In his grief and perplexity he asks the world-wide question, "Are we so soon forgotten when we are dead?"

At last he finds his daughter, grown to womanhood, who still cherishes some love for the shadowy memory of her father. Once more happiness and hope return to him, and he bids her to "Call Schneider for me." Meenie can only tell the obvious truth—"Schneider is dead!" Rip then fully realised the punishment of loneliness he must always bear, the result of careless living in his youth. Schneider, his only true friend whom he had protected from the boys, Schneider his companion in the long tramps across the mountain, is dead!

Rip had really loved Schneider, and the dog was really closer to him than any other living thing, except his children. He had had dreams of Schneider's pleasure upon his master's return. Schneider would be the same, although other things had all changed—and now Schneider was dead.

Probably no dog in history has been more famous in the dramatic world than Rip's dog, Schneider. Those who have seen his mute adoration for his master, and watched his faithful obedience, must know the deep heart sorrow the aged wanderer felt when he found his friend had gone away, forever.

This pageant, so full of humanity, of pathos and truth was staged in the Idyllwild Mountain Resort forests last Saturday, Sunday and Monday, by Garnet Holme, producer of outdoor plays.

C. L. Emerson, president of the Idyllwild Corporation reports a record-breaking crowd at his resort over the Labor Day holidays.

Rain At Oakglen Lodge

A substantial rain fell Wednesday night at Oakglen Lodge in the mountains back of Redlands, according to a telegram received the following day from Miss A. M. Woodford, proprietor of the lodge. A rain at this time of the year in the mountains is doubly welcome, as it not only lays the dust of summer, but it also eliminates all possibilities of fire for a considerable period.

TAKES FIRE TO FIRE STATION

PHOENIX, Sept. 6.—While down town the other day, the owner of a sedan discovered there was fire under the hood of the car. Instead of stopping where he was and looking for an alarm box, he proceeded to drive several blocks to the central fire station. Chemical extinguishers were brought immediately to the rescue as the driver clapped on the brakes and yelled: "Fire! Boys, come and put me out!" It was the first time that a blaze ever was brought to the station.

When You Park Your Car Lock it; It's Cheap

You wouldn't leave your wallet containing $500 or a $1000 parked at the curb, while you went inside to transact business.

In fact, the average person would be likely to consider such carelessness bordering on total insanity. Nine motorists out of every ten, according to statistics, are fully as careless with their cars which often cost considerably more than $500 or a $1000.

"Many motor car owners think nothing of driving their car to the curb and leaving it for long periods without locking it in any way," said J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, Paige and Jewett distributors here. "As a consequence there is little wonder that automobile thieves find Southern California such a profitable field for their work.

"As an example of the manner in which these culprits often work, two Jewett cars were taken out by Guy Collins and George L. Reuper, Paige Company salesmen, to show just how easily a car might disappear. Quite commonly auto thieves work in pairs, and when they see an unlocked car at the curb, they drive another machine alongside the one parked. It is an easy matter to step from one car to the other. In case of detection in the actual act of theft the other car offers a means of escape.

"Often before attempting a theft the car which the thieves intend to take will be shadowed for days. How long the car is left parked is carefully noted. When the right time comes they act swiftly. For this reason the Automobile Club of Southern California stresses the importance of keeping cars well locked. It is the exceptional case when a particular car is spotted. As a rule they take the one that offers the best chance for an easy get-away."

"Do you think the lieutenant will propose to Lucy?"

"Oh, yes, he has several medals for bravery, you know."—[London Opinion.

[illegible] DIRECT WAY [illegible] THE BEACHES

[illegible] Pass Road is Completed by State

[illegible] from San Juan to Pajaro River Bridge

[illegible] is Twenty-four Feet Wide and Easy Grade

[illegible] a new direct route [illegible] San Joaquin Valley to [illegible] beaches of the Santa [illegible] and Monterey coast, besides [illegible] considerable local traffic, [illegible] Chittenden Pass highway [illegible] completed by the California [illegible] Highway Commission and [illegible] to traffic.

[illegible] unit of the State highway [illegible] is 2.84 miles long and [illegible] from the State highway, [illegible] of San Juan, San Benito [illegible] to the Pajaro River bridge [illegible] Chittenden Pass. It is located [illegible] San Benito county and with [illegible] Pacheco Pass highway [illegible] a connection between the [illegible] Joaquin Valley and the im[illegible] highway system of Santa [illegible] county.

[illegible] new road is already being [illegible] extensively by cross-State [illegible] to and from beaches of the [illegible] Bay District, besides pro[illegible] for much local travel between Watsonville and Gilroy, San Juan and Hollister.

The road was declared a State highway by a special act of the Legislature and its improvement was begun under the direction of the Highway Commission last October and completed during August.

A roadbed twenty-four feet wide, with easy grades and good alignment, has taken the place of the old county road. An asphalt macadam surfacing, six inches thick, has been applied and the result is an excellent highway through an attractive district. The cost of the improvement for grading and surfacing was approximately $88,000. It was done under the supervision of L. H. Gibson of Division V headquarters, San Luis Obispo.

ESTABLISH AID STATIONS

Two permanent maintenance stations are being established in the San Bernardino Mountains, Division VIII, on highway under the jurisdiction of the California Highway Commission, it is announced by Commission N. T. Edwards.

The plans have been approved for stations at Newberry Springs near the Cliff House property, and another at Fawn Skin. Trucks, drags, scrapers and other road machinery will be kept at these stations for use on the State highway into the Big Bear Lake country. Comfortable living quarters for maintenance foremen and other employees also will be provided.

By experience over a period of years, the commission has learned that the establishment of permanent maintenance stations is the cheapest way to keep reliable foremen on the job and the roads properly patrolled and kept up.

RENEWS ACQUAINTANCES

Dave F. Fassett, "first string" driver of the Reo transcontinental bus, was kept busy during his brief stay here in renewing acquaintanceships with the many Reo owners he met while service manager of the Los Angeles branch, which position he left last fall to become western service representative for the Lansing factory.

CLOSE PART OF SIERRAS

the limits of the Yosemite National Forest is reached to pass through which one always has to pay the regular $5 fee. There are two designated camp grounds on this road, where campers may stop without the privilege of hunting, fishing or hiking.

In the Tuolomné Meadows near the summit of Tioga Pass there are but few campers at present as the weather has turned cold and the first snow storm of the season has already left a light mantle of white on the high peaks.

The road condition on the Tioga road is good except through the Yosemite Park district where many rought spots are encountered.

The next pass above Tioga, the Sonora, is closed to all traffic on account of the quarantine against the hoof-and-mouth disease. This pass is the most difficult of all of the passes across the Sierras in Eastern-Central California. Next beyond Sonora Pass to the north is Ebbitt's Pass, which also passes through the Stanislaus Forest and while the road is open and in fairly good condition no camping is permitted in the Stanislaus Forest. On the east side of the range in the Mono National Forest there are no restrictions other than the usual ones of obtaining a fire permit and conforming with the regulations always in force.

Kit Carson Pass, from Minden to Stockton, gets its full share of traffic as it passes through a very interesting section with good road conditions but all of that section which lies in the boundaries of the Stanislaus Forest is restricted to campers.

On a vacation trip made by a member of the Paul G. Hoffman Company organization over the high Sierras in a Studebaker big-six the Tioga Pass was crossed to reach the Nevada side of the range. It was an easy two days' run to Tuolomne Meadows, a distance of 405 miles from Los Angeles by way of Merced, Colterville and Buck Meadows.

After a day at Tuolmne Meadows the Studebaker party crossed the pass, stopped for a few minutes at Saddlebag Lakes, two and one-half miles off the main road and then dropped down to Mono Lake by way of the Levining grade.

The party visited Bridgeport to lay in a supply of groceries as this is an excellent point to outfit and a good source of information as to fishing and hunting conditions. Doubling back on the Camino Real for five miles the road to Virginia Lakes was followed to that point, one of the most delightful of the many camp spots on the east side of the range. A group of seven lakes, four of them stocked with trout, and all easy to reach from the end of the road at Little Virginia Lake makes this a favorite spot for those who have been there in spite of the many difficult places in the road between the lakes and the main highway.

GOOD FISHING

Just over the divide lies the Green Creek Canyon, where another group of lakes and a good stream afford the fisherman fine sport and many fine camp sites. The Green Creek road is easier to follow than the Virginia Creek road as it is not so steep or so rough, nor does it attain as high an elevation for the camp at Virginia lies 9400 feet above sea level.

After a week at Virginia Lakes the Studebaker was headed for Bridgeport and then north toward Minden, Nev. At the State line the car was bountifully sprayed with sheep dip. A few miles south of Minden the road to Woodfords was taken and the car headed for the Blue Lakes, a beautiful spot lying near the summit of the ridge at 8000 feet and isolated by a twelve-mile side road full of rough spots, sharp rocks and steep grades. Many light cars are unable to reach Blue Lakes if loaded.

An appropriation has been made to improve an old road running south from Blue Lakes to connect with Ebbitt's Pass road, which will make access to this spot much easier and cut the distance quite a bit when approaching from the west side of the range.

Ebbitt's Pass was found to be in fine condition for the greater part of the way. In the foothill region to the west several miles have been newly graded and the dust is deep which makes travel slow and unpleasant.

TRAVEL IS LIGHT

Travel has been light in the high Sierras this summer on account of the quarantine regulations and on the 1st inst. the Stanislaus National Forest, which is crossed by four of the mountain passes, was closed tight against campers, hikers, fishermen and hunters. The Mono National Forest on the east side of the range has not been restricted. Visitors are subject only to the usual regulations of obtaining camp fire permits and observing the forest rules.

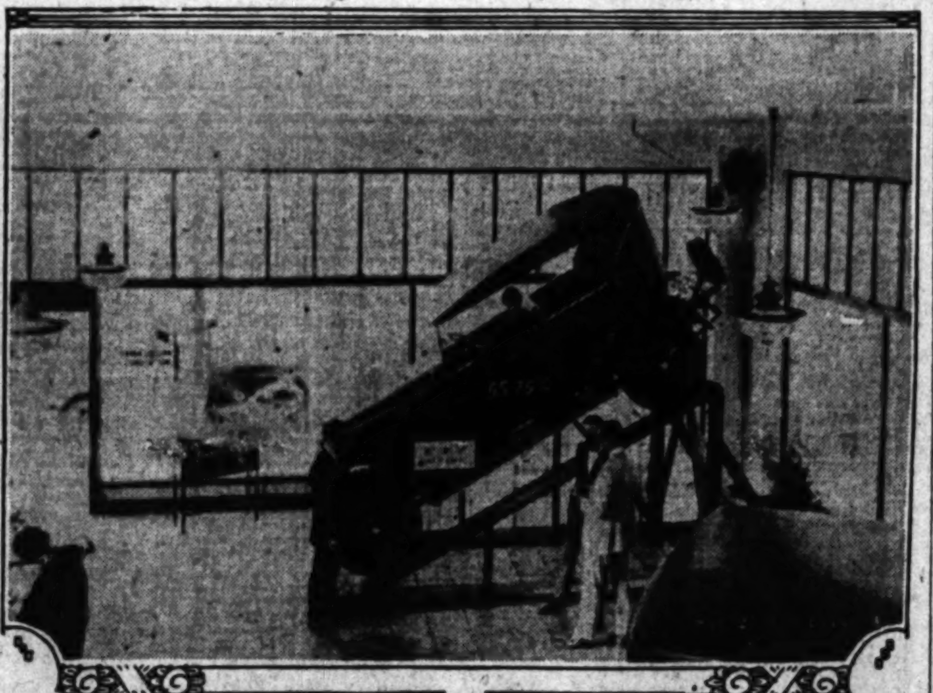
In the 1100 odd miles made by the party the Studebaker big-six covered the mountain roads with no trouble and ample power, although it carried more than the equivalent of a seven-passenger load as a heavy camp outfit was carried. Its odometer already had close to 30,000 miles before the trip and much of this was made doing scout work in the high Sierras. It has made numerous trips into the Yosemite Valley, three trips to Huntington Lake, other trips to Sequoia, Redwood Park and many points in the San Bernardino Mountains and Owens River Valley.

On the return to Los Angeles the fuel average was checked up and it was found that even with the heavy load and large percentage of mountain work the big six had averaged quite close to fifteen miles per gallon.

GET THE "DOPE"

Wholesale representatives of the Reo Motor Car Company of California, Inc., assembled at the Los Angeles branch on Saturday, August 30, to hear a full account of the Reo transcontinental bus trip from the lips of J. C. Brandimore of the factory, who traveled across the country with the big bus.

Defying the Laws of Gravity



C. H. Herod, Cleveland dealer in Hollywood, has hit upon a novel way of showing just what four-wheel brakes will do by erecting an incline and installing a Cleveland thereon with all four brakes locked. The incline has a pitch of 55.75 per cent, which is as close to the 56 per cent named as the last degree on which rubber will stick to wood, that it is painful to contemplate the results if the car should accidentally start rolling.

Six-Cylinder Principle is in Limelight

Exponents of the six-cylinder principles of simplicity, economy and dependability have always pointed to the fact that one of the country's foremost automobiles, Pierce-Arrow, has adhered to six-cylinder design since the early days of the industry.

The performance of Pierce-Arrow's new moderately priced car, it is said, is a revelation of what has been accomplished in the refinement of six-cylinder design. The engine's bore is only three and one-half inches and the stroke is five, but it develops more than seventy horsepower. Its acceleration is so amazing that it is equaled by few, if any, multicylindered cars on the market. Naturally, its performance in traffic and in hill climbing is a delight to the driver.

Series eighty, as Pierce-Arrow's new car is known, was developed to round out Pierce-Arrow's line of products, which now include two types of cars, a complete range of motor trucks, and the six-cylinder motor coach.

Gravity Laws Defied in a Unique Test

It remained for C. N. Herod, the Cleveland and Chandler distributor of Hollywood at 7514 Santa Monica Boulevard, to prove that it was possible with a Cleveland's four-wheel brakes to defy the laws of gravity.

Mr. Herod has built in his salesroom window an incline which measures 55.75 per cent grade, on which he placed a Cleveland sport model touring car equipped with four-wheel brakes. On the setting of the brakes the car remains stationary on the decline. To be fully appreciated, one must realize that loss of traction occurs at 52 per cent, and the greatest angle at which it is possible for rubber to remain on dry wood is 56 per cent. In other words, if this car were started in motion it would slide off the incline with the four wheels locked, it being impossible to place any object on the running board of this car and have it remain there, the laws of gravity being so great that the article so placed will slide to the lower end of the running board.

Haul Hot Oil Mile High to Pave Highway

Big Bear Valley is soon to boast of good paved roads. According to W. G. Juller, manager of road oil department of the Gilmore company, a difficult problem was presented when it was decided to pave the roads up there a mile high and two different factors had to be considered, both of which were successfully solved by Gilmore engineers.

"Flexibility of the pavement up in Big Bear Valley was of prime importance," says Juller. "To withstand the rigors of winter blizzards and summer heat, a pavement must be able to contract and expand without damage to itself Gilmore road oil makes such a highway possible.

"But even greater than this problem was the one of successfully transporting the hot road oil a mile into the air to deliver it on the job at the right temperature to apply it to the road surface. We operate a fleet of specially constructed motor trucks equipped with giant thermos bottles, so to speak, and into which the hot road oil is run at the refinery. It is heated to such a high point that during the several hours required to climb the steep grades into Big Bear it cools to just the proper temperature for application.

"Those who have made Big Bear Valley their summer and winter rendezvous will welcome the use of the new roads which we plan to have completed within the next few months."

LIMIT NUMBER OF FAMILY LIVESTOCK

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Aug. 30.—The City Council has just passed an ordinance prohibiting the keeping within any inclosure in the city, of more than two horses, ponies, mules or cows, without special permit. This is considered a most signal demonstration of the coming of the horseless age. During the late Frontier Days' celebration, difficulty was found in securing stabling for the cow ponies of the stockmen who participated in the steer-tying, and other mounted sports. All the old-time livery stables, once numerous, now are garages.

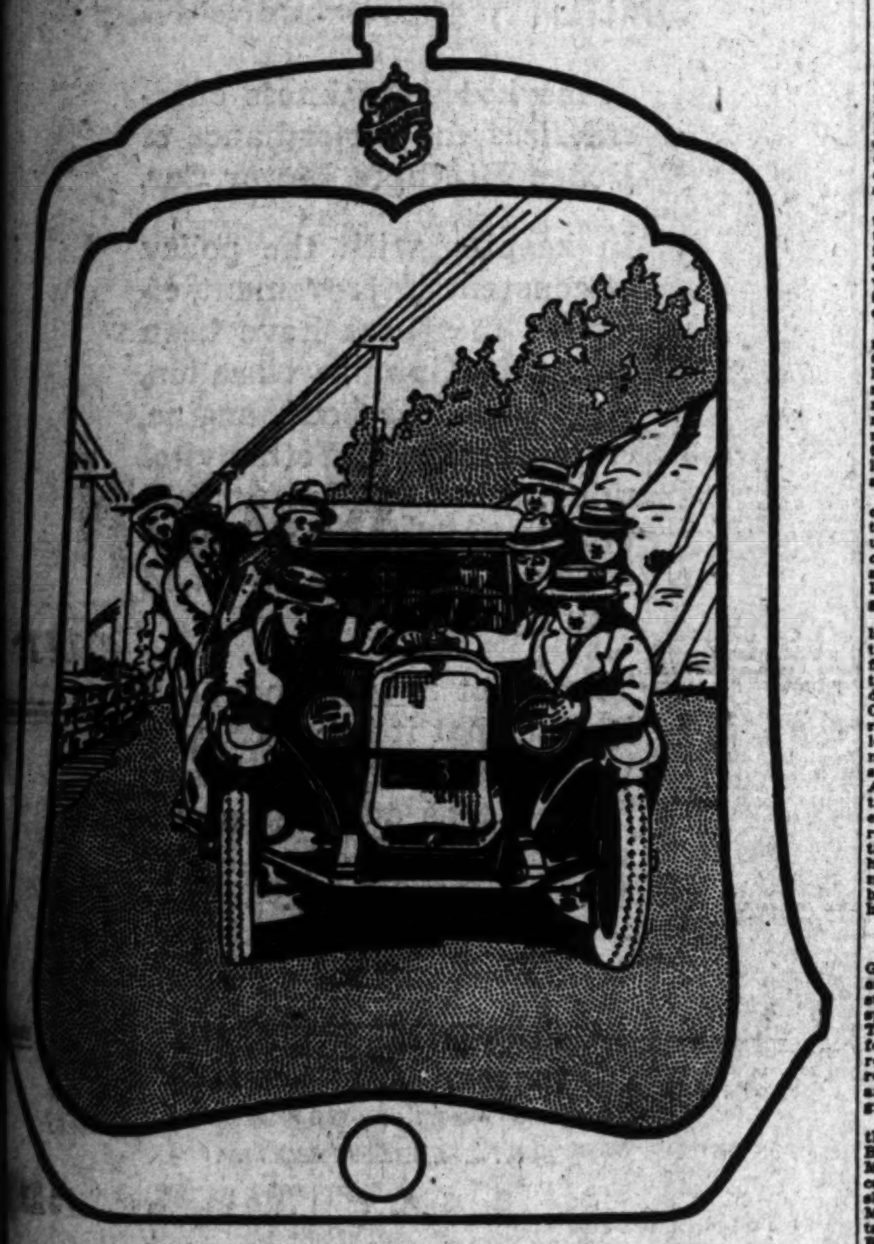
DIGIT JUGGLERS TELL HOW LIFE IS SPENT

Some one has asked how a man 50 years of age divides his life and J. Benjamin Fahy, Ford and Lincoln dealer, in endeavoring to answer the question has brought out some interesting information compiled by a noted statistician.

According to this man of figures, a man 50 years of age has spent 6000 days in sleep, has worked 6500 days, walked 800 days, amused himself 4000 days, spent 1500 days in bed and was ill 500 days.

Furthermore, it is estimated that this man has eaten 17,000 pounds of bread, 16,000 pounds of meat, 4600 of vegetables, eggs and fish and has consumed 7000 gallons of liquid.



The New Oldsmobile Six Carries TWELVE Men Over Cahuenga Pass in HIGH GEAR

There's new ability behind the new radiator of the Oldsmobile Six. From a standing start at the railroad crossing, a new Oldsmobile Six carried TWELVE men over Cahuenga Pass from the Hollywood side, in HIGH GEAR, and topped the summit at 17 miles an hour. It takes power to do that—a motor that doesn't know when to quit. You can be just as proud of Oldsmobile's performance as of its new appearance, heightened hood, new radiator, enduring Duco Satin finish and all the other improvements. Yet the price is low, due to Oldsmobile's participation in the tremendous purchasing facilities of General Motors. It's a quality car throughout. See it today.

"More Miles Per Car"
Ray McNamara's Tips for SUMMER Trips

Proceed Cautiously on Strange Roads

In some sections of the United States a short vacation trip of one or two weeks duration will take the motorist over every conceivable kind of road condition; mountains, valleys or prairie, with sand, dirt or paved roads. Very often on a trip of this kind, a great many motorists who are not seasoned tourists, or who are only used to the paved streets of their home town, or improved suburban routes, meet up with a lot of new conditions that they are not familiar with, and get into trouble on long grades, wet dirt roads, or deep sand. Even in sections where roads in general are paved, obstacles of the above nature are often encountered on detours.

Therefore, it behooves every new car owner or those living in sections free from hills with good paved highways to proceed very cautiously on strange roads, particularly when entering mountainous sections, sandy or wet dirt roads, until you have had enough of this kind of driving to gain confidence in yourself, and familiarize yourself with gear shifting, brake and clutch operation, etc.

LOST IN THE HILLS

As an example of how a motorist, used to flat roads, will become confused in driving over hills, the writer directed a friend, who wanted to know the best road to Chicago from Detroit through a hilly section of Michigan. The hills did not amount to much to any average motorist who has travelled anywhere at all, and knowing that this friend had been driving cars for a number of years and that the Irish hills of southern Michigan, between Saline and Coldwater are of no consequence, the old Chicago road was recommended. A few weeks later this party returned to Detroit via Bryan and Toledo, Ohio, a somewhat roundabout way, in order to miss the Irish hills, and with blood in his eyes he stated that this was the most dangerous road he had ever traveled, in fact he thought it was a frame-up on the writer's part. Wonder how he would feel negotiating Blewett Pass in Washington State, or crossing the Rockies?

Other instances of how slight grades baffle the motorists accustomed to level roads come to my attention every day in Detroit on Grand Boulevard. On the north section of the boulevard, there is a bridge crossing a railroad with approximately 3 per cent grade approaches. During the evening rush hundreds of motors are stalled causing traffic blocks one-half mile long; simply because the drivers do not know how to handle their throttle, clutch, gear shift lever when forced to pick up load from stand still on such a slight grade.

In addition to the grade over railroad, there are one or two other slight grades leading from the river front streets which are used as demonstrating hills. These will not exceed 5 or 6 per cent, but are often referred to as 15 per cent grade by local salesmen. Just recently an account was given in a local paper by an enthusiastic dealer telling how his car climbed the 15 per cent grade (not over 6 per cent) on high.

If you are only used to driving on level roads, you will observe from the above that you must proceed very cautiously when first encountering hills. Remember that when your brakes are in 100 per cent condition, you can stop in approximately 40 feet at 20 miles per hour on a level road with a normal load. Now with a heavily laden touring car, it might, going down a 10 per cent grade, require 100 feet for a stop. Therefore, hold your speed down on grades.

In a tour from New York City to Thousand Islands via Albany and the Adirondack Mountains, the motorists from New York City and surrounding territory will not find anything very new in the line of hills, until he reaches the long mountain grades above Albany, because there are plenty of steep grades on Manhattan Island. However, he may find with his touring equipment and full quota of passengers that his brakes are not as good as he thought they were, if an emergency arises going down a steep grade, also he may find that the motor does not show as much power because of high atmospheric temperatures, heavy load and the consequent higher temperatures in cooling system. Therefore, always give your car a chance when traveling under new conditions. If it won't take the grade on high, don't try to force it. The same applies to second speed. If necessary, use slow speed and reduce your touring schedule. You will save time in the long run, for by forcing a car on high gear, or by excessive speeds in low and second gear, you are liable to damage the motor seriously on the first long grade encountered.

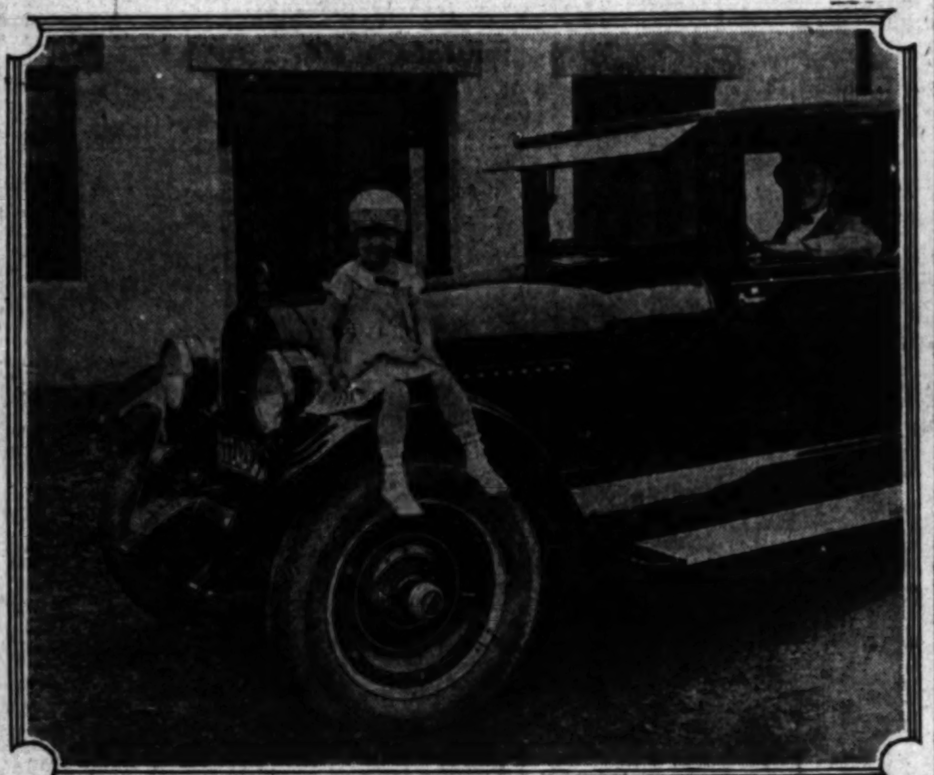
An Armistice-Day Baby



Here she is—Carolyn Monohan. Her parents met in France. Her daddy was a lieutenant and her mother was a nurse. Now they live in Gardena, and they drive a Hudson.

War Romance is Revealed in Gardena

Few people would expect to find love on the battlefields of France, but it was through the war that two Americans met, loved and married. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Monohan of Gardena were the principals in this little drama of life, and their daughter, Carolyn, adds a touch of coincidence by having been born on Armistice Day.

The story was discovered last week by Gail Kreis, dealer in Hudson and Essex motor cars at Moneta. Kreis has been helping the Gardena post of the American Legion to prepare for the grand celebration to take place this week in dedication of their new Post Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Monohan are both members of the post, he having been a lieutenant in the Ninety-first Division, A.E.F., and she a nurse. At the battle of Chateau Thierry, Mr. Monohan was wounded, and it was while lying in a hospital behind the lines that he met Mrs. Monohan. It was largely through her efforts that he was brought back to health, and probably his life would not have been spared had she given up her constant watch.

The Gardena post of the American Legion now has fifty-one members, who financed their building among themselves without once calling upon outside help. The hall just completed would do credit to a city many times larger than Gardena, and the wisdom shown in the selection of a site is responsible for an increase of 50 per cent in the valuation of the property before it was occupied.

In order to celebrate the dedication of the post headquarters, there will be a gala week, commencing today and ending next Saturday. Every evening is to have its special attraction, and no two entertainments will be alike.

Among those whose talent will enliven the week will be: Madam Ahua Real, Spanish prima-donna; Dr. Marion Tracy Whiting, with her incomparable company of merry-makers; Harry AJ James, internationally known monologist; Boy Scout Band No. 1 and entertainers from the Goldwyn studios.

POLICE USE REOS

The police departments of Oakland and Stockton recently placed a number of Reo six-cylinder touring cars in service, and report that they are all giving excellent service under the exacting conditions.

Solid Rubber Tire Hardest on Highways

It is common knowledge, especially among highway engineers, that impact rather than static load results in road destruction. In other words, although a road might conceivably carry a stationary load of 100 tons, the danger to the road is accentuated in proportion to the speed with which it is carried and the amount of protection between the road and the load.

It is generally appreciated that a load may be carried at ten miles an hour on a solid-tired truck without danger to the ordinary improved highway. The same load on the same tires at twenty miles an hour would increase the impact strains on the road at least four times. The speed has only been doubled, while the destructive pounding force has been quadrupled.

One of the government bureaus has gone very carefully into the matter of impact, according to the Miller Rubber Company of California, and finds that even with the best types of solid cushion tires the impact is tremendous compared with the impact of a pneumatic tire.

In one case the road and the load are protected by a large cushion of air; in the other case, by a comparatively small area of hard rubber. One blow might be likened to that of an iron sledge hammer, and the other to a similar blow of a soft rubber hammer.

The State and county governments as well as the national government are beginning to realize that heavily laden speed motor trucks on solid tires are definitely destructive to highways. They are much more liberal in their ideas and regulations regarding trucks on pneumatics, for they reason that a tire that protects the load, also protects the road.

New Make of Truck Gives Satisfaction

"A truck for every need has been the constant call of men in the transportation field for years," according to Benjamin Gotfredson, president of the Gotfredson Truck Corporation, who opened his Pacific Coast distributing plant on August 1.

Gotfredson claims he has answered that call with his special method of producing Gotfredson trucks. He builds five different models, ranging from the one-ton speed truck to a specially powered extra reinforced jumbo freighter for heaviest hauling.

In each of his models his engineers have adapted the motor to the chassis and vice versa, he says.

The speed truck is balanced and built to meet the needs of traffic and rapid transit carrying lighter loads, while the other four models are graduated up to meet the needs of excavators, dump truck operators, steel mill work and every conceivable kind of downright heavy load carrying and are designed to conform to the special work for which each truck is intended.

DETROITERS ON A LOGGING TOUR

Seek Route for a New All-Canadian Highway

To Blaze Trail from the Atlantic to Pacific

Plenty of Grief in Store for Pathfinders

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DETROIT (Mich.) Sept. 2.—Two intrepid Detroiters, E. S. Evans, president of E. S. Evans & Co., Inc., automobile loading experts, and A. F. Bement, vice-president and secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, have left Winnipeg, Manitoba, for Vancouver, British Columbia, in an endeavor to log a route for a new all-Canadian highway, and incidentally, surmount some of the worst passes of the scenic Canadian Northwest.

The trip necessitates conquering by motor a stretch across the high passes of the Canadian Rockies, which no human being has ever conquered other than afoot or on horseback. The distance is estimated as between 1700 and 1800 miles.

TRAIL BLAZERS

If successful, the trip is expected to be the forerunner of plans which eventually will open a through Canadian highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, similar to the transcontinental highways of the United States.

This winning of the Canadian Northwest by motor promises plenty of problems even for these two seasoned pathfinders. While the road development of Southern Alberta, in and about that beautiful region surrounding Lake Louise, has advanced rapidly, and thousands of Americans now make the tour from Spokane or Glacier National Park to the Banff National Park, to Calgary and Edmonton, no route has ever been opened west of Banff or Invermere through the high and rugged passes of the Canadian Rockies into British Columbia, connecting with the Pacific.

Evans is one of the founders of the Lincoln Highway Association, which is co-operating with the Canadian Highways Association in the effort to find and log a feasible route. He has devoted his vacation for several years to exploring the little-known byways and trails of the sparsely populated West and Southwest, seeking out new alignments and feasible connections in the furtherance of good roads, which are his hobby.

EXPECT GRIEF

The two expect plenty of grief, but they also expect to reach the Pacific and qualify for the gold medal which the Canadian Highways Association has offered for the first car to log, under its own power, an all-Canadian route from Winnepeg to Vancouver. The car being used is a Packard six, the official Lincoln Highway car.

If successful in getting through, the two expect to motor from Vancouver through Washington and Oregon, where Evans has several large mills in operation. Evans is generally accredited by the automotive industry with having saved more than $50,000,000 to American motorists in the last eight years through improved methods of automobile shipment.

Evans will also devote the latter part of his trip to business for the Bassick-Alemite Corporation, of which he is vice-president and supervisor of sales. He expects to return to Detroit by the last of September.

BACK FROM VACATION

George Neefus, manager of the parts department of the Reo Los Angeles branch, returned from his vacation last week after two weeks in the high Sierras.

Official Pike's Peak Champion

OTT LOESCHE
AL CLINE

Ott Loesche, who smashed all records, and Al Cline, his team-mate, in September-1 classic at Colorado Springs. Both drove Lexingtons and both piled up points which won the Penrose Trophy for keeps.

LEXINGTON COPS AGAIN

Sweeping all past records into the discard, the Lexington special, No. 7, driven by Ott Loesche, veteran hill climber, won the Labor-Day classic staged under A.A.A. observation on Pike's Peak, according to a wire received here by Chester H. Beaumont and W. F. Seal, now in charge of the local Lexington factory branch.

Loesche's time was 18m. 15s, breaking the record for the tortuous twelve and one-half mile climb set in 1916 by Ralph Mulford when he reached the summit, two and one-half miles above sea level, in 18m. 24.7s.

Loesche drove the last three miles, including a part of the famous "W" curve with a badly bent axle, caused when he left the road on one of the sharp turns and struck a rock.

Snow, hail and fog along the upper reaches of the sky-line course made fast driving impossible for those who failed to get leading positions in the drawing, it was reported.

The Lexington team, consisting of Loesche, Al Cline, Lawton and Rudd, carried off first honors all around. The Lexingtons finished one, two, three in their class and took first, fourth and fifth places in the free-for-all, piling up an overwhelming majority of points which gave them permanent possession of the handsome $10,000 Penrose Trophy, wrought of Colorado gold and silver and mounted on an Italian onyx base by a famous sculptor.

Rudd threw both rear tires about half way up the Peak and had to quit, although he was not injured; but Loesche, Cline and Lawton went roaring through to the top. All but three of the sixteen cars entered reached the summit.

As a result of this last win, which makes six for Lexington, it was proclaimed "Official Pike's Peak Champion."

Race Drivers All Fall for Tough Casings

The wonderful showing that Ralph De Palma made Sunday, August 17 at Culver City Speedway against such drivers as Eddie Hearne, Freddie Frame, and Babe Stapp, was made possible not only by the great driving ability of the famed Italian, but his car was equipped with Century cord tires. "Smithy," the local distributor, is very busy spreading the news along auto row and filling orders as fast as his factory can supply the sudden demand.

This is not the first time that Century have carried these fast cars to victory as well-known drivers like Fred Horey, Fred Lecklider, Sig Haugdahl, Jack Petticord, Fred Frame and Babe Stapp drove their speedy mounts on these tires all last season at Ascot. The low price of Centuries is within the reach of all who desire a tire that will stand up the maximum under all conditions, being oversize and built by a group of engineers who have made a careful study of what tires are subjected to in this country.

De Palma has laid in a stock of Centuries to equip his cream-colored racer for a very busy season not only on the dirt tracks but the speedways as well.

TIRE BUSINESS REPORTED GOOD

"The tire business has never been better for us," states C. Fred Thompson, McClaren tire distributor here. "All during August we as well as every McClaren distributor on the Pacific Coast, have been frantically wiring each other to rush various sizes of McClaren tires to one another. When in turn we could not procure them near at hand we all sent the McClaren factory S.O.S. wires to express more tires. Yet this month, the combined orders of the McClaren dealers on the Pacific Coast totaled far more than they have ever asked for to date."

ROAD TESTS STILL USED BY THE PAIGE

Although road tests have been abandoned by many motor car manufacturers, Paige still follows this system and every Paige car turned out is given over to an expert for whom a test body has been built on the chassis, according to word received by J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California. He drives the car for about thirty miles into the country and watches carefully for weaknesses. It is stated, however, that they seldom find anything more than minor discrepancies since the cars' bodies have all previously been subjected to the block tests.

WINNING DRIVERS LAUD GAS

Speedway Kings Sing Praises of Richfield Eau de Vie, Made in California

Some of the first gasoline to be turned out by the special equipment and special processes of distillation perfected by the Richfield Oil Company in their newly completed $2,000,000 refinery at Hynes, Cal., was shipped to Altoona for the 250-mile Labor Day classic, and won high honors in the cars of Jimmy Murphy, Tommy Milton and Fred Comer, who won the first three places against a field of the greatest racing drivers in America.

The new Richfield gasoline is claimed by C. M. Fuller, president of the Richfield Oil Company, to be as nearly perfect for the requirements of the modern automobile motor as is possible in commercial operation, and is the result of a process of continuous rectification and fractionation in which the gasoline is redistilled some thirty times, eliminating all acids and impurities and giving an almost perfect chain of boiling points.

The Richfield company has been highly complimented on the new gasoline by every driver who has tried it and Fuller received the following wire from Murphy immediately after the Altoona race: "C. M. Fuller, Richfield Oil Company, Los Angeles. Richfield gasoline carried me to victory here today, making three straight victories for me on Richfield. Averaged 114.6 miles per hour for 250 miles. Congratulations on wonderful product.

"JIMMY MURPHY."

Odd Name is the Property of Champions

"Some one asked the question, 'What's in a name?' The name referred to is Jay-Eye-See, which was selected for the 1925 model Case cars. This name has been applied to three successive champions in various methods of rapid motion—a champion race horse, a champion car and a champion speedboat," says Gail Vandenbraak, Case distributor here.

"The name of Jay-Eye-See was derived from the initials of the founder of the J. I. Case Company, Jerome I. Case. It was first applied to the famous old race horse, who held two world's championships at the same time, the world's trotting record for a mile in 2:10 and the world's pacing record at 2:6¼.

"When all types of automobile racing was at its height, the Case company maintained a racing team. Some of the cars were called the Case Bullet, the Case White Streak and the Jay-Eye-See, which will be recalled by automobile racing fans as the fastest cars of their day. The Jay-Eye-See was the world's largest racing car having a 300-horse power engine. It held numerous records and raced on tracks from coast to coast.

"The latest use of the famous name in connection with speed boats is the motor owned by Otto Wadernitz of Racine. This speedboat is seventeen and a half feet long, has a 100 horse-power motor. In a recent race held in New Orleans she did a mile in one minute and twenty seconds, which is some fast going in water. Since the Jay-Eye-See speedboat has been racing she has failed one once to come in 'in the money,'" concluded Mr. Vandenbraak.

POWER RATES RIGHT ALONG WITH ECONOMY

ONE HORSEPOWER FOR EACH FORTY-FIVE POUNDS IN OAKLAND

Economy has always been the keynote of Oakland six performances, according to H. E. Franklin, manager of the California Oakland Motor Company, and so successfully has the car lived up to its economy reputation that few people think of this automobile as a powerful vehicle.

"We have always talked economy when speaking of the Oakland," says Franklin. "Power has always been forgotten, when as a matter of fact the Oakland has always been a very powerful car. And the new series of the popular 6-54 has proven that it has even more power than any of its predecessors.

"The engine in the Oakland develops 55 horsepower, yet it rates at only 20 horsepower. That is why it operates at such economy and at the same time develops great power.

"Unlike most engines, the Oakland develops its power at all speeds, giving what is known as flexible power. This insures maximum ease in traffic driving.

"A comparison of the Oakland power plant with that of other cars in its price class in relation to the weight of the cars, shows why the Oakland performs so wonderfully on hills. The touring car of the Oakland line weighs 2485 pounds, and the engine develops 55 horsepower. This means that there is one horsepower to every 45 pounds of weight. Compare this relative power and you will understand the reason for Oakland's hill-climbing ability."

SEVEN SPEEDS GIVE TRUCK A BIG EDGE

"What truck men want to know is what the truck will do on the job, day in and day out," says G. O. Fries, manager of the local factory branch of the Gotfredson Truck Corporation.

"That is where the Gotfredson, built in five models with seven speeds forward and two reverse, shows its superiority.

"The Gotfredson not only develops more power, but its tremendous reserve power is smooth, more controlable, more adaptable.

"Exactly twice as much power is delivered to the wheels in low gear as is possible in a truck with the usual four speeds. The leverage in low gear is so great that the wheels barely turn while every ounce of the strength of the tenacious motor is concentrated on lifting the load out of a hole or pulling it up a tough grade."

Superior Design
Eliminates Motor Vibration—

Gotfredson motor design reduces to a minimum vibration which is the cause of 75% of repair bills on a motor.

Success in eliminating vibration is made possible because Gotfredson motors are counter-balanced, and microscopic machining makes for greater accuracy of all reciprocating parts. Bearings are larger, and improved positive feed lubrication insures unfailing performance.

Gotfredson engines are the most powerful and economical made. They stand up under unusually hard conditions of service, and have a reputation for delivering long years of economical use. Accessibility makes adjustments easy and quick.

There are five Gotfredson models, 1, 1½, 2½, 4 and 5 tons.

TROMPS ON GAS PEDAL WITH GUSTO

[illegible] Covers 2393 Miles in Eight Days and Sees All the Sights

When A. M. Leonard of the [illegible] Garage, Los Angeles, wants to go anywhere he drives his motor car—doesn't depend on trains. For A. M. Leonard is one of those heavy-footed drivers who "tromp" on a car so steadily on a long grind that their general average [illegible] makes a mere locomotive's speed appear sort of weak and [illegible].

This was the conclusion reached [illegible] last week by officials of the Troy Motor Sales Company following a detailed report made of a [illegible] and economy trip just completed by Mr. Leonard between Los Angeles and Crater Lake, Or., and [illegible].

A total of 2393 miles in precisely eight days and with plenty of time out for sleeping and eating!

Such was the extraordinary trip made by Mr. Leonard in his Nash touring car, a last year's model purchased some time ago from the local distributors. But the most important part of this owner's trip, in the belief of Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, was the unusual economy attained, though the garage man declares he made no special effort to do anything but cover the mileage in fast time.

[illegible] water, one gallon of oil, an average of fifteen miles to the gallon of gasoline, total of 5 cents [illegible] bills, being a speedometer [illegible].

Mr. Leonard, accompanied by [illegible], left Los Angeles on the morning of August 12 at 5:30 [illegible]. That night he reached [illegible] and left there at 6 [illegible] August 13, making his night [illegible] at Hornbrook on the Oregon [illegible]. On August 14 he drove to Crater Lake. The rest of his itinerary follows:

August 15, Oregon Caves; August 16, Crescent City; August 17, Eureka; August 18, reached San Francisco at 3 p.m. and left at 7 p.m.; August 19, arrived Los Angeles at 7 a.m., exactly twelve hours from San Francisco.

RACE DRIVERS WIN ON CENTURY TIRES

Ralph De Palma and Frank Lockhart's sensational wins Labor Day once more prove the worth and wonderful durability of the Century cord tires, according to the local distributor. Ralph, at San Jose, won with his masterful driving mounted on the tire of maximum mileage. Before a crowd of northern fans De Palma showed the way to a fast field of entries including Eddie Hearne, Babe Stapp, Fred Frame, Jerry Wonderlich and a host of fast cars from the bay district.

While Ralph was carrying off the honors at San Jose, down at Riverside, on the Fairmont Park track, Frank Lockhart, the boy wonder, drove his freak No. 27 Ford into the hearts of the speed fans in that locality. Frank's Ford is also equipped with Century cords and the exceedingly short wheel base of this fast car makes it one of the most difficult on the tracks to drive.

Contract for Coast Highway Unit Awarded

Announcement is made by Commissioner N. T. Edwards that the California Highway Commission on August 22 awarded a contract to W. D. McCray of Los Angeles for the grading of five and two-tenth miles of the Coast Boulevard in Orange county between Corona Del Mar and Laguna Beach. McCray's bid was $108,310, against an engineer's estimate of $159,089.55. Twenty-two firms submitted bids on the job.

This is one of the last large contracts to be awarded by the commission from its bond funds pending the receipt of additional payments of Federal aid, it is announced.

The unit in question is a part of the Oxnard-San Juan Capistrano highway authorized by the 1919 Bond Act.

CLEVELAND ADOPTS

The new 1925 Cleveland six is the first car to adopt automatic chassis lubrication. It is known as the "one shot" system. Those in authority predict that the introduction of this system heralds the era of automatic chassis lubrication. Every car owner appreciates being relieved of the task of manual lubrication.

WILD WEST IS NO MORE

Reo Bus Transcontinentalists Encounter Very Few Uninhabited Stretches; Find Indians Are Tame

The successful journey entirely across the United States of a big de luxe motor coach just completed last week in Los Angeles has aroused interest throughout the entire country, not only among street car and stage-line operators but the general public as well. Especially in the East and Middle West has this been the case, according to J. C. Brandimore of the Reo Motor Car Company of Lansing, Mich., who was a passenger in the big bus during its entire trip from Lansing to New York and back again across country to Los Angeles by way of Yellowstone Park, Seattle and San Francisco.

"The Far West has traveled entirely too fast for people east of the Mississippi," said Brandimore in talking of his 6000-mile journey. "They still think back there—many of them, at least—that there are Indians everywhere on the plains and in the mountains; that there are cowboys, trappers, gold-hunters and 'bad men' galore everywhere west of the Missouri or Mississippi. We have been asked about our 'wildest' experiences on our recent cross-country trip. We didn't have any. The roads were supposed to be 'terrible.' More than half of our journey was on paved highways, and the remainder over roads that were seldom bad and then only for very short stretches.

ONLY TAME ONES

"We saw very few Indians and these were palpably very 'tame.' In Yellowstone Park we were delayed perhaps half an hour by a family of big bears. Traffic both ways was tied up while we all got out and coaxed the family off the highway. The bears were so accustomed to people that they wouldn't pay any attention to us. In fact, we saw no wild animals other than rabbits, squirrels, etc., except in the park where they are protected.

"There are very few stretches along the entire route we followed where we were out of sight of a ranch house, or at least cultivated land. Instead of hunters, trappers, wild buffalo, deer and Indians in the Dakotas, Idaho, Wyoming and Montana, we found cultivated farms. Even the great stock ranches of former days are fast disappearing and the 'cowpuncher' of today rides his range in a motor car and carries his branding outfit to the round-up in a speed-wagon.

"From a scenic standpoint the people who say 'See America First' know whereof they speak. The valleys of the Missouri, the Platte, the Snake and the Columbia, provide views that would give the artists of the world material for a lifetime of painting. The photographer can snap his lens from morning to night almost anywhere without moving more than a mile or two, and still fill his album with 'scenics' that would grace a London or Paris salon.

"I discussed road conditions with Mr. Don Doig, head of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, a few days ago, and he told me motorists usually expressed signs of timidity when high elevations were mentioned. We reached our highest elevation for the trip in Yellowstone National Park, at 8700 feet in Dunraven Pass, and much of our travel in the park was at high elevations, yet we made the entire circuit of the park in two days, going in by way of Gardner entrance and visiting Mammoth Hot Springs, the Golden Gate, Norris Geyser Basin, Upper Geyser Basin, Yellowstone Lake Camp, Canyon Hotel on the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, Dunraven Pass, Tower Falls, and then out by the same entrance by which we came in—a total of 251 miles, including stops at all the points of interest.

"The object of the Reo Motor Car Company in sending out this big six-cylinder de luxe sedan bus was to obtain data on gasoline and oil consumption, tire mileage, flexibility of control and steering on mountain grades and curves, reliability with respect to maintaining definite schedules and the absence of trouble of all kinds for sustained trips of this sort.

FEW ADJUSTMENTS

"Messrs. Fassett and Griffith of our engineering department, alternated at the wheel during the trip of 6103 miles from Lansing to New York, and then to Los Angeles, and were called upon on but few occasions to make any adjustments or repairs and then only such as the average touring motorist would be able to make himself without the recourse to a garage. The nearest approach to trouble was a minor repair to the gasoline connection at the vacuum tank and changing tires on two occasions when we cut them up badly on sharp rocks and again for two punctures, and the replacing of a fan belt.

"In spite of our long wheel-base—176 inches—we only had to back up once to get around a curve and that was made necessary by heavy traffic which compelled us to hug the inside of the road. Grades up to 20 per cent were taken easily in spite of the fact that most grades come in high mountain travel where the rarified atmosphere reduces the pulling power of a gasoline motor.

"All in all, this trip of ours demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that long-distance, sight-seeing travel by motor bus is not only feasible but certain to be an established fact within a very short period of time. Such travel on regular schedule permits stopping each night at high-class hotels and yet gives the tourist an opportunity of visiting points of interest without stop-overs or transferring from vehicle to vehicle."

REO GETS REQUESTS

Announcement of the Reo transcontinental sedan bus trip brought many requests for tickets and information from all over the country, according to word just received from the Reo factory at Lansing. Members of the bus crew report that people approach them at almost every stop asking for information regarding fares, schedules, etc., indicating that this method of sightseeing will soon become a most popular one.

NONSTOP CAR NEARS 20,000-MILE FIGURE

Traveling the equivalent of two years' running in thirty-five days, the Willys-Knight nonstop car, started on a 20,000-mile run July 30, by the Willys-Overland dealers, is nearing its goal first set.

Mileage up to Wednesday morning last week totaled 18,242 miles. Total gasoline used amounted to 937 gallons, an average of 19.4 miles to the gallon. Total oil used was sixteen quarts, an average of 4560 miles to the gallon. Ten pints of water had been used to that time.

R. E. Starkey, service manager of the Willys-Overland-Pacific Company, said he was not yet sure whether the run would be continued beyond the 20,000-mile mark or not.

He said the car in its present condition operated as if it could keep on running indefinitely, as it is getting better all the time.

Six Thousand Mile Tour is Finished Here

With his family he traveled exactly 6772 miles in his Hupmobile to reach Los Angeles, and now that they are here they intend to remain, Don Ferguson, formerly of Toronto, Can., informed the Greer-Robbins Company, State Hupmobile distributors. "Hard luck propaganda that we heard along the way had no effect upon us," he averred. "We only became all the more determined." He intends going into business here.

As their mileage indicates, the party toured extensively before they arrived here. Their route first took them through Montreal, then to Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Starting westward, they toured through Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver and the Pike's Peak region. From Denver they toured to Salt Lake City and then struck out for the Northwest, including Portland, Seattle and scenic points in that section. Driving southward, they visited the main points of interest, including the Yosemite.

Ferguson states that the total cost of operation, including repairs, was $239.79. He used 355 gallons of gas and thirty-five quarts of oil. His gasoline average, he states, was 24.9 miles per gallon. He purchased a new fan belt, had his valves ground and brakes relined. "These were the only repairs made, even though the car has now been driven a total of 18,247 miles," he said. "Hupmobile has a record of long standing for consistent performance, and I can assure you that it was fully maintained in this instance."

Results never before known, which you can count on the Chrysler Six delivering, bear upon every phase of performance. None of these surprising accomplishments is more remarkable, or more acceptable, than the elimination of side-sway.

This is due to the adoption of an entirely new practice in spring suspension. In the Chrysler Six the rear springs are mounted at right angles to the axle, close to and parallel to the rear wheels—instead of at an angle to conform to the taper of the frame.

As soon as you can, take a ride in the Chrysler Six. Try it out on a turn and note how securely it takes it, without the slightest suggestion of disagreeable or alarming side-sway. And while you are in the car, try it out also on a cobbled street or rutted road. You'll find you can ride in comfort at 60 miles an hour.

Rushing the EXTRAS to the newsies—

Probably the only type of automotive equipment that is driven harder than a fire engine is the truck or auto that delivers the papers to the newsies and newsstands.

It's worth noting that Zerolene "stands up" in this sort of service as well as in all others. The Business Manager of the "Spokesman-Review," of Spokane, Wash., writes as follows:

"For more than ten years we have continued to use Zerolene oils and greases in our sixteen cars and trucks and three motorcycles. These carry our papers every day in the year over all sorts of roads in all kinds of weather, and may be classed as very hard service."

Why pay tribute to the superstition that "eastern" oil is "better" just because it costs more? Zerolene, made by our patented high-vacuum process from selected Western Naphthenic Base Crude, deposits less carbon, increases the gasoline mileage of your car, and lengthens its working life.

Insist on Zerolene — a better oil — even if it does cost less.

Is your motor truck an orphan?

THERE are thousands of orphan trucks in the hands of owners. No distributor or dealer is interested in their deeds or misdeeds. No one is interested in healing their wounds. No redress is available to the owners for their shortcomings. No value is in them at resale. They cannot even be cast forth as charges on the community. They are soon junk—most of these thousands of orphans.

But there are other trucks—sound trucks, with sound makers—safe investments. And the facts to guide your selection are easily obtained.

There are thousands of White Trucks in the hands of owners. They are at work each day—all over the world. Ten, eleven, twelve years old—hundreds of them have traveled 100,000, 200,000, 300,000 miles and more. But even the oldest can still get attention—skilled and immediate—should misfortunes of the road stop their wheels. Old Whites and new go on paying dividends to their owners day after day by giving the most money-earning miles.

The purchase of a White Truck is assurance of continuous, sustained transportation of your goods at low cost over the greatest number of miles and years. And The White Company will be in business tomorrow and next year and the next, as it has been during the past twenty-three years.

Automobile Is Featured in "Oh, Doctor"

Reginald Denny's new starring vehicle, "Oh, Doctor," stresses the motor car, and several scenes of the film were shot in the salesrooms of the Overfield-Sheafe Motor Company. The Stutz Speesway Six is in the background.

Film Features Sale of Motor on Local 'Row'

A forthcoming moving picture of special interest to lovers of fine motor cars is the Universal release to be made in the early winter of the film version from Harry Leon Wilson's Saturday Evening Post story "Oh, Doctor," with a star of no less film personage than Reginald Denny, who sprang to fame through his work in the "Leather Pushers," a series of pictures released through Universal Exchanges, and the hero also in "The Abysmal Brute," and "Sporting Youth."

The story, as almost everyone knows, has to do with a rich young man who thought himself sick, in fact, dying—an opinion in which his heirs concurred and a consummation by them devoutly to be wished for.

As the story runs, finally a nurse, attractive, of course, persuades him that he is not the dying man his imagination has made him believe, and he steps out with a new thought that he is not only going to live after all, but that he will buy for himself the finest and fastest motor car money can procure.

With his mind fixed on this new quest, the action of the picture shifts to the Stutz show rooms where the car is demonstrated, decided upon and purchased, the filming of these scenes being made in the sales-room of a Coast Stutz dealer. And from then, the famous Stutz Bearcat becomes the center of every rapidly moving scene.

Lanchester Balancer's Elucidated

"When news of the adoption of the Lanchester balancer as stock equipment on all Willys-Knight motors was broadcast here we began to receive a flood of inquiries from all over Southern California," said L. J. McCracken yesterday.

"The chief feature, of course, we tried to explain. It eliminates vibration. But the people wanted to know more. Just about that time O. P. Kilbourn, assistant general salesmanager from Toledo, returned to the city and literally came to our rescue, for we had almost reached the point where we were talking in bunches.

"Kilbourn was on the ground when the Lanchester balancer was first installed on a Willys-Knight motor for exhaustive test at the factory, so he knows all about it. We'll let him explain it his way."

"The Lanchester balancer is based upon purely scientific deduction with reference to the causes of vibration in the motor, and is applied in such a manner as to counteract this vibration at all speeds. It is a simple, corrective device of small gears attached to the center main bearing, driven in opposite directions by a third and larger gear at twice engine speed. The third gear is part of the crankshaft. This rotation of the smaller gears, which are drilled in order to distribute their weight unevenly, gives equivalent, though opposite motion to the mass of pistons, neutralizing the vibration which these develop."

Golden State Leads Country in Auto Camps

Some idea of the extent and growth of automobile camping in the United States was revealed here recently when the 1924-25 Official Camping and Camp Site Manual, issued by the national headquarters of the American Automobile Association, was received by O. R. Fuller, president of the White Auto Company, Southern California Auburn distributors.

The new manual lists close to 2000 camp sites, many of which are equipped with every facility for the motor tourists' comfort and convenience.

California tops the list in the number of camps for a single state while Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, and Iowa, run a close race for second place.

"The publicly owned motor camp site has opened an entirely new chapter in the history of modern motoring," said Fuller, "and the results of the new touring will be to decentralize tourist business and recreational activity.

"There are thousands of small towns which could not possibly support a first-class hotel and maintain it as a paying investment, but which are able to provide suitable camping grounds, and thus make a strong bid for their share of the tourist patronage, which formerly escaped them altogether."

CONTRACT FOR A FOUR-WHEEL-BRAKE SERVICE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LOUIS, Sept. 6.—For the benefit of thousands of motorists whose cars now carry hydraulic four-wheel-brake equipment, the Hydraulic Brake Company, owning and controlling the patents of Lockheed hydraulic brakes, has entered into a contract placing the servicing of Lockheed four-wheel brake equipment in the competent hands of the Wagner Electric Corporation of St. Louis.

Under this arrangement, the chain of Wagner service stations stretching across the country will offer expert assistance in maintaining Lockheed brakes at their full efficiency. LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME

Glasgow.

The following analysis by L. S. Ginsberg is taken from an old issue of the New York Tribune Farmer. In contributing this analysis to the Tribune, Mr. Ginsberg wrote: "I am sending you some play on the Glasgow, an opening which has supposed to have been pumped dry. Criticism is invited, as it is all original play except two or three variations copied from the B. D. P."

a—This is a sound line, but not popular with the present-day players, who prefer to take the beaten path by 22-18, etc.

b—The B.D.P. plays 17-13 at this stage; though not a strong move, 23-19 is sound and tricky, for if Black does not force White, as in the trunk line, White has the stronger game.

c—29-25 also draws, but 14-18 followed by 7-11 in reply to the 29-25 move, forces White to play very carefully to avoid disaster.

d—If 14-18, then proceed thus:

17-14	32-27	20-16	19-10	6- 2
10-17	7-10	6-10	12-26	23-25

e—A quite plausible looking move at this stage is 20-16, but it loses thus:

Lincoln Gear-Shift for Fords

NEW INVENTION WILL SAVE $100 ON ANY FORD CAR

by eliminating the need of $85 extra transmission, $9 special brakes, $7 water pumps, $4 special oil system. Its installation positively saves brakes and clutch bands from burning out, and makes a Ford pull 100 per cent better in mud, snow, sand and mountains. When driving in low it stops all transmission friction and keeps the Ford motor cooler on long, hard pulls. The Gear-Shift acts perfectly as a second emergency brake and makes all mountain travel safe and easy in a Ford. The Gear-Shift has a neutral point for the Ford clutch. This feature meets the immediate approval of every Ford driver, as it prevents stalling when backing, rests the foot in traffic, eliminates the long reach for the hand brake at every stop, and does away with the hand brake's obstruction when entering or leaving the left door of the Ford. The Gear-Shift not only saves you $100 in accessories, but it is a great money-saver in bands, bearings, gas and oil.

BUMPERS SAVE FENDERS IN MANY A CAR SMASH

"Few motorists realize the true advantage of bumpers on their cars until it saves them the cost of smashed fenders when the car in front stops suddenly or the machine behind runs into them," says Maurice Copeland, president of the Globe Auto Supply Corporation, which operates a chain of auto-supply stores up and down the Pacific Coast and in Chicago, with headquarters in Los Angeles, at 1036 South Grand avenue. Bumpers save several times their cost each year, not alone from accidents that happen on the road, but while cars are parked. This is when the most damage occurs. They are a tremendous protection from careless drivers who are apt to bump their cars, either when trying to get out of or into a parking space."

WHERE ARE THE "HICK

REDLANDS, Sept. 6. — What has become of the "hick towns?" is the question that motorists want answered.

For they say that the hick towns, way out in the sticks, have changed to the quick towns, quick to nab the slumbering speeder, quick to nick the bankroll of the traffic violator, quick to demand that the motorist hesitate long enough to look them over at least.

And the unwary motorist has paid for many pavements and street lights at the four corners where there is perhaps a garage, a house or two and an auto camp. These hick towns, or quick towns, welcome the motorist, but they also are metropolitan enough to demand that he obey the law, according to the word brought back by Redlands travelers.

One Redlands man cently from a trip southern part of the was rolling along miles per hour one saw a couple of that was all. He had a mile when he heard a spick and span waved him to the side of

"What's the through our town asked.

"Town, town," bewildered motorist. any town."

"Well, that cost you $25 bail spick and span officer lands man paid kept a careful and for cross-roads.

And that is the over this fair travelers say.

...Pelargoniums...

If ever there was a plant that deserves a prominent place in the garden it is the Pelargonium, or Martha Washington geranium, as it is called. The new collection that we offer is comprised of the finest varieties in cultivation. The color blending in these flowers is so rich and varied that they are fair rivals of the Rhododendron and Azalea, although they differ greatly from these subjects in point of culture, thriving and blooming through the hottest summer months.

There is nothing better for mass planting along the base of walls or porches or narrow places along drives where a hedge effect of color is desired. They are not, essentially speaking, cut flower subjects, but where flowers are required to last but a short time PELARGONIUMS are excellent, their soft shades of coloring being in harmony with the interior decorations that are now in vogue.

We Offer the Following Varieties:

BALKONIGEN: An immense flowered, light rose-colored variety. Very fine. Price each, 25c.

J. TOPFER: Compact growing variety. Flower red, outer edges of petals white. Price each, 25c.

FRAU KRUMB: Pale soft rose, upper petals blotched with deep purplish red. Price, each, 25c.

DUCHESS OF WESTMINSTER: Pink and white with crimson blotches. Price each, 25c.

LORD CLYDE: White veined and flushed with light purple. Price each, 25c.

MABLE: Upper petals maroon, lower ones bright rose. Price each, 25c.

MISS SAUNDERS: Snowy white with upper petals blotched with purple crimson. Price each, 25c.

PROFESSOR CORRENS: Deep rose blotched with black. Very large flowers. Price each, 25c.

DUCHESS OF CORNWALL: Large flowered, deep purple maroon. Price each, 25c.

MONTPELIER: Beautiful fiery red. One of the best. Price each, 25c.

DOROTHY: Lovely shade of light pink. Price each, 25c.

MAUD HOOPER: Very free flowering pink. Very fine. Price each, 25c.

Full Collection $2.50

DR. CLAYTON E. WHEELER and his Los Angeles clinic at 698 South Berendo street; and his San Francisco clinic at 535 Powell street.

(Accepting the challenge of an internationally known reviewer of current happenings, who stated recently, "America never takes up anything new in science until it becomes stale in Europe," the following article is the result of a staff investigator for the Medical Research syndicate.

Mr. D'Gee spent considerable time at the Los Angeles and the San Francisco clinics of Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, noted ductless gland expert and former clinical instructor, Stanford University; closely observed many of the nearly 4000 men and women who underwent operations, interviewed them at stated times and drew his own conclusions.)

WHERE is the average man or woman of nearing 40, or well above, who has taken a personal introspection of self but who longs for the magic wand by which the hands of life's clock may be turned backward?

It has been one of the fairest dreams of mankind to retain and reclaim youth.

The folk-lore of all nations since history has been recorded is full of this longing for eternal youth—full of yearning for resurrection and immortality.

Whoever reads this article and concludes that age can be transformed into sprightly adolescence will be disappointed. Yet, while it is impossible to create a young man out of an old one, present day scientists have provided ample proof that it is well within bounds of accomplishment to extend our period of youthfulness by twenty years. The Dr. Osler theory of a decade back that the average man might as well be chloroformed at forty is an absurdity today, and men at three score and ten no longer view themselves as being obsolete. With proper care plus the aid of the new science, man may now live a useful life never dreamed possible a few years back.

In spite of all attacks from their own ranks, valiant scientists have striven and even enjoyed astonishment by the fruits of their own labors while other scientists are striving to forge ahead toward the seductive goal of Ponce de Leon's vision.

Dating back to the time when Dr. Arnold Lorand of Vienna in his address before the Brussels Royal Society of Medical and Natural Sciences startled the world with his theses that old age is a chronic disease due to degeneration of the glands with internal secretions—the thyroid, the sexual glands and the adrenals in particular, and that this degeneration was amenable to treatment, intensive effort was put forth through clinical and laboratory experiments to sustain his statements of facts. Scientific literature on old age being very scarce it was necessary to devote the most careful study to the subject, anatomically, histologically, experimentally and clinically.

Almost Unbelievable Results

First observing a group of 62 males and females, the youngest of whom was 10 and the eldest 82 years of age, on whom Dr. Wheeler had operated, the first result manifested itself in a growing appetite with a definite feeling of well-being and vivaciousness. Each patient stated that there was a marked absence for rich or especially appetizing dishes. While this result for improved capacity for assimilating food became apparent almost immediately after the operation, fat did not manifest itself, but a normal weight was attained and maintained.

GENERAL RESULTS OBTAINED

CHRONIC cases gave favorable reaction immediately in some cases, bordering on the miraculous.

"Human efficiency is prolonged by improving physical strength and by the restoration of mental activity.

"The acuity of senses is regained and improved."

"Hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure are alleviated.

"Premature old age or actual senility is deferred.

"Mental depression is removed.

"Life's clock is turned back a number of years.

"Unmistakable evidence that healthy and active ductless glands impart a strong vitality and best chances for long life are found in the cases of some people who have reached extraordinarily old ages, from 120 to 160."

In scores of other cases interrogated the net consensus was while before the operation physical exertions quickly brought about a condition of exhaustion, afterward there developed a decided feeling of strength and endurance. Another decided symptom of returning strength was voiced by numerous ones as a general improvement of the nervous system, a clearing of the mind and a greater capacity for work.

From the files of record cards turned over to me by Dr. Wheeler, I took 100 of men ranging from 65 to 70 years of age—men who had not worked from one to four years previous—85 per cent of them are back on payroll today.

Where Rejuvenation Showed Itself First

Rejuvenation showed itself first on the skin. The epidermis of an aged individual, usually dry, withered, scaling off, bleached-like or bluish-red, gradually was replaced by a fresh, healthy skin, while wrinkles were greatly diminished, and in some instances disappeared entirely. With the improved functioning of the glandular system, the whole body is more quickly and thoroughly freed from poisons than before. By alleviating hardening of the arteries—calcium imbedded in the walls of the blood vessels—and high blood pressure, one of the most frequent evidences of old age, the red corpuscles of the blood increase, likewise the quality of haemoglobin, the element that gives color to the blood.

Why People Die Prematurely

Most people grow old and die before their physiological time because the avenues of life within the body—the channels that carry nourishment or eliminate waste—are prematurely clogged. It is not the brain that grows old; it is not the ganglions that break down; it is the hormones, the internal secretions, that cease to function properly. The deadly concentration of living matter brings life to a standstill and hardening of the arteries takes place—the great foe of modern civilization.

IT IS AN ACCEPTED FACT BY THE BEST AUTHORITIES ON THE SUBJECT THAT THE PHYSIOLOGICAL DIFFERENCE BETWEEN YOUNG AND THE AGED IS THE CONDITION OF THE NOURISHMENT SUPPLIED BY DUCTLESS GLAND SECRETIONS, THEREFORE "PREMATURE" OLD AGE, AND ITS ATTENDANT ILLS, MAY BE DEFERRED BY SUPPLYING THE DEFICIENCY.

Dr. Wheeler rendered me every possible assistance in making a thorough investigation, and to that end permitted me to go over his extensive card system without restriction—histories of his hundreds of cases (all numbered and catalogued by names, which he holds private.) I also read scores of the hundreds of letters of commendation sent him by grateful men and women from all parts of the country—such letters as are possible only when writen from the heart. In every one of these letters men and women gave appreciation for the wonderful recoveries that they had made following the operations.

Twenty Doctors Among Those Who Are Grateful

To me one of the really surprising elements in going over the unsolicited letters were those from physicians of considerable note, several of whom, Dr. Wheeler stated, had previously berated and scoffed at it.

"What was the outcome?" queried the Doctor, "well, you can see for yourself in this volume of letters of introduction from these same physicians brought me by numerous chronic patients, all of whom had operations performed."

Chronic Diseases Cured

I learned that many diseases which had become chronic had been helped, and in many cases they had been cured where they had not gone too far. I saw that old age itself is a disease, and that, where formerly it had been considered incurable, it is now conceded there is a remedy for it. Disease has been wearing out our organs because they could not resist such attacks and because, of their own energies, they do not recuperate. Now, with the aid of implanted glands, the organs are able to get a fresh start and so defy and resist the creeping old age.

Astounding Reaction

Especially interesting were the cases, other than the ones primarily desirous of rejuvenation, where the records indicated the predominant ailment to be any of the following: asthma and pulmonary diseases, hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, kidney affections, rheumatism and epilepsy.

Favorable reaction ensued within 24 hours in most of the cases, and almost unbelievable results were enjoyed within 10 days in the most chronic instances.

According to Dr. Wheeler, "the allotted three score years and ten" is far too low for the average "old-aged" person. There is no reason why he should not live to be 90 to 100, or even more when glandular operations become universal, he says.

Operations Are Easily Performed

Dr. Wheeler explained that the glandular operation is given through injection in the walls of the abdomen of the gland needed. In accordance with the disease of the patient are the glands selected from the goat, a combination of different glands being used in some cases. In certain cases the patients' glands are exposed to the X-ray to stimulate internal secretions; in others certain ducts are ligated. The patient suffers no pain or inconvenience before or after the operation, which takes only a few minutes, Dr. Wheeler states.

Outstanding Character In Picture

Progressing with the investigation which is far beyond the ordinary sphere of medical practice, the outstanding character in the picture is the surgeon, Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler.

Though still a young man, comparatively, he has enjoyed the highest standing in the medical profession in California. Dr. Wheeler was formerly Stanford house surgeon at San Francisco hospital; clinical instructor, Stanford University, and assistant gynecologist, San Francisco hospital.

It follows quite naturally that since his radical departure in ductless gland surgery and gland transplantation, his accomplishments would be widely discussed, and it is not an extravagance of speech to state that he today is unquestionably the busiest and most popular physician-surgeon in America.

Just recently a newspaper correspondent of world-wide fame wrote him, "What Luther Burbank is to the creation and evolution of plant life, Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler is to the study and longevity of human life. While he enjoys a widespread and lucrative practice, he has never permitted the dollar mark to blind him to the cause of humanity. His clinics are the shrine of rich and worthy poor alike, who come in great numbers from all parts of the land for treatment."

Whereby he might extend the scope of his usefulness, Dr. Wheeler divides his time almost equally between Los Angeles and San Francisco. In the two cities something like 4000 men and women have been operated on by him. Hundreds of these patients claim almost miraculous benefits and have written letters by the score expressing gratitude for their return to health and happiness.

The Reaction I Got

After days of intensive investigation, in no way—either directly or indirectly—influenced by Dr. Wheeler, I left the clinic feeling that I had met a surgeon doing more for the benefit of chronic sufferers and suffering humanity as well, than I believed it possible for any one man to do.

MISADVENTURE

tear away; the thumb, plunging blindly, took him squarely in the mouth.

Then, reaching down the ages with a ghostly hand, some feral ancestor, some remote progenitor far back in the scale of evolution, nudged into action what may—who can tell?—have been a family trait of the neolithic Guiscards. As the thumb, hard and hurtful, hit him on the lips he opened his mouth and received it, clamped down his teeth upon it and held on.

"Let go!" yelled the thief. He had not uttered a sound, save the two inprintable words, up till then. "Let go! Aaow! Help! Let go! H-e-e-elp!"

He, at any rate, was not uttering feeble, windy yelps; he screamed like a woman. "H-E-E-ELP!" he howled in a high, piercing treble; and Guiscard, coming to himself with this encouragement to his prowess, held on the tighter. The howls bore him testimony.

Then, it seemed to him, there were other sounds—squeaks and wails! Out of a corner of one eye he was aware of Lucille, newly returned to her domesticity, staring at the arrangement on her salon floor with eyes of crazy amazemnt. And on the heels of her there came the help which no one desired more than the thief.

And presently, after explanations and congratulations, the police led the sobbing prisoner away. And Lucille—

"To think," she said tearfully, "that I should have reproached thee for thy weakness. O, Achille!"

It was very little after the hour of that triumphant reconciliation that Bates, having climbed into his bed, drew the sheets up round his neck and promptly threw them off again.

"Now what the—" he began, and completed the phrase as with one hand he rubbed his neck where the poet's pin had lacerated it and with the other detached the note which it held attached to the bedclothes.

He read it through twice, arose, went into his sitting room, and verified the absence of the revolver. Then he grinned and returned to bed.

At a decent hour next morning he presented himself at Guiscard's door. Lucille, clad for the street, opened to his ring.

"Hul-lo!" exclaimed Bates. "You here, Lucille? What are you doing here at this time in the morning?"

Lucille gave him the cold, supercilious look of the entrenched official who replies to a mere member of the public. She was a plump, gold hued little thing, kissable as a baby, and her manner of austerity sat on her strangely.

"Me?" she answered coldly. "I look after our poor brave one here. I go forth to obtain fresh dressings for his wounds!"

"Eh?" Bates gaped at her with astonishment. "Wounds, did you say? But—"

From within came the voice of the poet, directing that Bates should be admitted. "But at once, my heart!" called Lucille in answer, and to Bates: "You are to go in, he says. Do not excite him."

The poet was in bed, propped up on a structure of carefully arranged pillows. A bedside table had flowers and two medicine bottles on it and a breakfast tray. The everyday disorder of the room had been violently repaired; from den and a home it had been transformed into a sickroom of the most approved and sanitary bleakness. But it was not at this miracle that Bates, halting abruptly in the door, stared in amaze.

"But how—" he began to ask.

It was as though the little face of Guiscard looked at him through an intricate lattice, so liberally was it criss-crossed with strips of sticking plaster. A bandage crossed his forehead diagonally and blotted out one eye; the other stared at the visitor as through a peephole. A thumb that had been clinched in an inexpert fist was now secured in a hand splint and a sling. And yet something like a restrained but rebellious smirk seemed to trickle through the wreck of the features and play about the scaffolding of plaster that upheld them.

"You must have loaded it with a keg of nails," said Bates. "Or—did it burst or what? You aren't dying, are you, Guiscard?"

Lucille replied with outcries. "Dying! What a thing to say! Of course, he is not dying, the poor little heroic one!"

"Well," said Bates, when presently he was able to speak, "when I found your note—by the pin you made it fast with!—I didn't worry. I never dreamed you'd go and load the thing. Didn't imagine you ever knew how to do it. What happened, anyhow?"

"There was—" the poet struggled for fluency through the meshes of the sticking plaster—"there was, in effect, a little change of program. Since it appeared finally that Lucille here was not wholly indifferent to me—"

"My heart—my little brave only adored—" Lucille corroborated with outcries and kisses upon the islands of face that dotted the sea of plaster.

And presently Bates, alternately agape and strangling with suppressed laughter, got the story. It was a duet, changing from narrative mumbles through the lattice on the poet's face to the voluble and inaccurate details of Lucille.

"Well," said the American at last, "you've come out of it well, Guiscard. And if Lucille's satisfied I guess you think it was worth your while. Still—" he grinned at the grotesque wreck on the pillow.

That running gleam of satisfaction played again upon Guiscard's countenance.

"The man," he said as carelessly as he could, "the thief was well known to the police, it seems."

"No doubt," said Bates.

The poet heaved an invalid sigh and commenced to turn over upon his side. Lucille hastened to aid him. But his unbandaged eye continued to rest upon Bates.

"And there was," he murmured weakly. "I am informed—this morning—there was a certain reward for his capture."

He laid his battered head upon his pillow contentedly.

"You must go now," whispered Lucille.

And Bates went.

SECRET WORTH MONEY

had been sent upon its fateful journey with a sharp rattle.

The pretty Anita, who had a bundle of thousand-franc notes ready, stretched out her arm and placed them en plein on number twenty-eight.

"Vingt-huit!" cried the croupier sharply, and again the young woman had won a maximum.

She received her winnings quite carelessly, without troubling to count them, and stuffed the four handfuls of notes into her capacious purse, while all at the table gasped at her good fortune.

At the next coup the number twenty-eight was well covered, but Anita Marchetti did not play. She knew that the plungers would lose—and they did.

Half an hour later, at a signal from old Vasquez, she took out a handful of notes which she had previously counted, and gave them to the croupier to place on Zero.

A dozen other players, watching closely, followed her with more modest stakes.

"Zero!" cried the croupier, with that peculiar roll of the "r" which the habitue of Monte Carlo knows so well, and while most of the players saw their stakes swept into the bank, the cashier began to count out a quantity of thousand-franc notes as the girl's winnings, as well as paying those who followed her.

"You are right," whispered the president of the company as we strolled away together to further discuss the situation. "We have never seen such sensational play in the whole history of the Casino. They never lose!"

Back in my office we sat and discussed the matter very seriously, for we all saw that if such play continued all our profits would disappear and the company must eventually be ruined. At last I was deputed to approach the young lady after they had finished playing that night.

Just before 11 o'clock word came to me that the trio had risen from the table. I instantly sent them a message inviting them up to see me.

I was alone in my room when they were ushered in, all three radiant and happy.

"Well, Signorina and gentlemen," I said, offering them seats, "I must first congratulate you upon your extraordinary good fortune. But, truth to tell, the object I have in asking you to come and see me is to suggest that we compromise."

"Ah!" laughed the girl saucily. "You are ready to purchase our secret, Monsieur Jacquin—eh? Did I not tell you that you would regret your refusal a few weeks ago?"

"The administration are ready to consider your terms mademoiselle," I said, with dignity.

To my surprise, however, she said:

"We have no terms to offer. You refused, so we shall continue to play. Therefore the matter does not admit of further discussion."

"But surely you and your friends are open to reason?" I cried. "We are prepared to pay a big sum for your secret."

"And we have a syndicate formed in London which is equally ready to purchase our secret and set themselves out to ruin the company altogether," Grant replied.

I confess that, not being prepared for this, I was entirely nonplussed.

They went out, and a few minutes later I saw Destruge, who said:

"At all hazards we must buy their secret, Jacquin. This cannot go further. If we forbade their entrance they would only give the secret to others. We don't want that! Therefore we must exercise the most delicate diplomacy, and we must pay whatever exorbitant price they ask, I leave it entirely to you."

The position now became a most anxious one. If I failed, then it might mean the closing of the establishment.

Next day it was reported to me that they had made three coups, and had banked a further £17,500 between them.

An hour later I had a private chat with Grant, and told him in guarded language that we were prepared to pay as high a price for the secret as his London syndicate would do, and further, I put it to him that if he intended to marry Anita—as I presumed he did—then the sale of the secret would make them both rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

In an instant I saw that the young fellow's whole ambition was to marry the pretty Italian. Therefore, we had a long and confidential chat.

The result was that next day at noon Grant brought his two companions into my office, but, to my chagrin, the pretty Anita was still defiant, utterly refusing to give away the secret which it now appeared had been imparted to her by old Signora Bertelli just prior to her death.

For a full hour I tried to prevail upon her to make us an offer, but she only laughed, repeating that we having refused on a previous occasion, she and her friends had no intention of considering the matter further.

From the outset I had seen that she was a very hard-headed little woman, and, further, that the old Spaniard was advising her not to entertain any offer.

"We have discovered the secret of winning at Monte Carlo, Monsieur Jacquin," the old fellow said calmly: "Why should we not continue to win?"

"Because we are prepared to buy your secret," was my reply. "If you know a certain mode of winning others may get to know it, and then the administration would be compelled to close its doors!"

"It probably will!" laughed Anita triumphantly. A further three weeks passed. Grant had gone to London, probably to consult the syndicate who were preparing for operations against us on a very big scale. Meanwhile, Anita and old Vasquez remained, but they only played on four occasions, yet each time they did not fail to win. Monsieur Destruge and his codirectors existed in a state of eager apprehension as to what was to be the outcome of it all.

To us money was no object so long as we obtained the secret by which the bank could be beaten at will.

At last Archie Grant returned. His radiant appearance at once filled me with grave fears.

That evening, about 9 o'clock, one of the croupiers came to inform me that Mr. Grant desired to speak with me in private. Instantly I went to my room, and a few moments later the trio were shown in.

Grant was the first to speak.

"I have at last prevailed upon the Signorina Anita to reconsider her decision, Monsieur Jacquin. But if we sell, I warn you that the price must be a very high one, for we have also to settle with our London syndicate."

My heart gave a bound.

"Your syndicate has no knowledge of the secret?" I asked anxiously.

"None whatever. We have entered into an agreement to sell in case you forbid us to play further, that is all."

I called Monsieur Destruge and his codirectors, and for an hour or more we all sat discussing the price, and bargaining in sums of hundreds of thousands of francs.

At last, after much shrewd dealing, a price was fixed, a check was drawn—the largest check ever drawn by the administration—and handed over to the young lady, who signed a receipt

It was then agreed that when the rooms were closed at midnight, and the public excluded, she was to give to us the secret.

So when the game was over and the great crowd of visitors had departed the table was reopened with a fresh supply of money, while Anita and the Spaniard took seats opposite each other.

Though the wheel was spun ten times they made no attempt to play.

At the eleventh coup the Spaniard nodded just after croupier had spun the disc, whereupon the girl placed the maximum upon twelve, which won.

"Amazing!" cried Destruge. "How is it done?"

But she only laughed, and after six more coups again staked, and again won.

"Now," she said, "here is the simple truth, which my aunt learned after sitting and watching daily at this table for years. When the number eleven upon the wheel is exactly opposite the croupier as he spins it, then the ball will fall into twenty-eight. When thirty-six is opposite twenty-nine will win! And there are other numbers, too."

"Ah!" I cried instantly. "Then there is a slight inequality in the die as it revolves!"

"Exactly, m'sieur," replied the girl. "My aunt discovered it, and disclosed the secret to Senor Vasquez and myself. It is only at this table, for all the other discs run true."

The disc was that night destroyed, and from that moment all discs have been tested each night after play, and are never used upon the same table twice in succession.

Grant, who married Anita Marchetti, now lives in London, but they have built themselves a beautiful villa among the trees at Cap Martin, in full view of the Casino, which they so nearly brought to ruin.

rying exit of Pussy Purr-Mew.

"Now turn off that sob stuff! Fat lot of good that'll do! Come on in and act like you had some sense."

Trying to hide her tear-reddened face, Helen rose, stumbled over the trousers, then stooped to pick them up.

"Eh, what's the matter with your wrist? Burn it?"

"I—I just touched against the hot iron," quiveringly.

"Here, let's see!"

Whirling her around with a firm grip on her bare arm, he gazed down at the cruel burn, the inflamed redness like a deep gash across the white flesh.

"Bad burn! What've you put on it?"

"Nothing," she winced, trying to draw away.

"Where's the olive oil?" he demanded.

'In the ice-box—that quart tin. No, dear, on the other side—way back."

"Now some flour," briskly. "There!" when the burn was well coated with the air-excluding paste. 'Hurt much?"

Though brutally callous to her mental distress, he was always concerned over her slightest physical hurt.

"Oh, I don't mind the pain—I don't mind anything but your ruined suit! A hundred and ten dollars!" she anguished.

"Not quite as bad at that," violating kitchen etiquette by wiping his hands on thé tea-towel. "Guess I can get separate trousers. You can match black broadcloth—not like a fancy weave."

"Oh, you can? You won't have to get a whole suit?" with gasping relief. "How much will just the trousers be?"

"Not much—not more'n thirty."

"But, dear, what about those invisible mending places?" eagerly. "We didn't think of that! Mr. Stevens burnt his overcoat—his cigarette—and they wove it in so you'd never know."

"Well, that's no cigarette hole—you can put your fist through that. Come on, why park out here all night? Shed your jazz rags and let's have the rest of the evening in peace."

Switching on the light, he swung her through the kitchen door.

"Worth a pair of trousers to get out of that screech-owl party!"

"But Mrs. Stevens's expecting us," faltered Helen. "I'll have to call her up. Dear, what shall I tell her?"

"Say I was dead set on coming to her blowout. Mighty sorry to miss the musicale," he chuckled, "but my wardrobe's indisposed. Tell her you cooked my trousers—and I couldn't show up in my porus lingerie!"

The Happy Home-Coming of Don Juan

THERE awhile back, one blessed Sabbath morning, what did we do but hitch up our little Henry and go traipsing to the country of the Camarillos.

Now, in the old times when people rode in ox-carts in California, or even when they rode on the backs of fleet-footed horses, it would have been quite a jog from the green Verdugo Hills to the country of the Camarillos. But for Henry it was a journey hardly worth talking about, as far as journeys go. In no time, as you might say, Henry had eaten up the long road through the San Fernando Valley, had climbed the Santa Susanna grade and was down in the lovely little valley of the Simi. And from there it was not more than a hop, skip and a jump to the country of the Camarillos.

The reason we went was to join with more than a thousand of his other friends to welcome Don Juan Camarillo home after a long absence. More than eight years ago Don Juan packed a bag, threw it over his shoulder and struck out to see the world. Leaving his homeland and the spot where he was born behind him he took the trails into the outlands, across seas and oceans, and went everywhere, we guess, that a white man had ever gone before.

Far beyond the Azores and the Pillars of Hercules did the wander trails lead Don Juan. He talked to the Sphinx, and as a dutiful son of the Church, he kissed the Fisherman's ring of the Pope in the Eternal City of Rome. Nabobs and princes did Don Juan see, and at length he pitched his tent amid the glamour of the wonder city of Buenos Aires, where the music of his own Castilian tongue sounded pleasantly in his ears. And in Buenos Aires he lingered a long time.

But at long last, his heart turned again to home—to the country of the Camarillos where he was born and where his fathers before him helped with their strong, brown arms to drive the stakes of the Commonwealth and to rear the rafters of the State.

In the alien places, glamourous though they were to his eyes, Don Juan's heart kept saying to him always, "East or West, home is best."

So, upon this blessed Sabbath morning that we are speaking about Don Juan stepped from a railroad train in the pleasant little village that bears his family name. And down upon which from a high hill looks the Church of Mary Magdalene which Don Juan builded from his own pocket—a beautiful church with a penciled spire pointing to the stars.

And a brass band was at the station and all Don Juan's friends from far and near. And they all went up into the beautiful Church of Mary Magdalene, and Padre James O'Neill, who was the tall sycamore of Glendale, chanted a Mass of thanksgiving.

And after that everybody went to the rancho of Don Adolfo Camarillo, where he and his beautiful Senora had spread a great feast to welcome the wanderer home. And it was all like it used to be in the old days when California was the most hospitable land in the world and the happiest. And there were feasting and music and song and dances. And there were speeches. And John Mott, who is to the manner born, and whose silvery tongue has a music that no other has, made the great oration. And after that the thoroughbred horses of the country of the Camarillos came with their skilled riders decked with their silver-mounted saddles and bridles to show their beauty and skill and speed and strength for the assembled multitude.

To us it was as though the clock of time had turned back a hundred years and we were living again in the old California that used to be when every door was open for every wanderer who came along the King's Highway. It was a day so well to be remembered that we shall not forget though we were to live a thousand years. And we thought that all who sit in our far-flung synagogue this blessed Sabbath morning would like us to tell them about it.

An Old Subject Comes Again to Mind

WE WERE the mellowed witness, lately, of the passing of Camulos Rancho from the possession of the historic del Valle family into alien hands.

This famous landmark of California history, as everybody knows, was where Helen Hunt Jackson laid the scenes of the early chapters of her immortal story of Ramona.

The new owner is a fine type of the Americano, and all that, and he will deal lovingly and reverently with Camulos. But, even so, it will never be the same. The music of the Castilian tongue will no longer be there. Memories will depart from it, never to come again.

Now, all this brings again to mind an old subject. All who sit under the far-flung rafters of the synagogue have heard us rave, time and time again, because Jackson A. Graves continues to neglect his high task of writing his great book, "The Passing of the Dominant Race."

If you will go into his big bank in the roaring town you will find Jackson Graves there frittering away his time with financiers, fussing over the changeful tides of trade and traffic, matching wits with the wizards of the marts, making cities already too big to grow larger.

Which is all very fine in its way. But, he is the only man who can write the book. No other man has stored in his brain the same knowledge of that great race, once dominant here, and that gave way to the newer peoples.

And still his magic pen lies idle. And it is a thing to be deplored.

Some day Jackson Graves will find himself too old to write the book, and then it will never be written. There ought to be some way to make him do it.

The Common Ground the World Must Reach

A GENEROUS and a loving friend recently presented us with a copy of John Morley's "Recollections"—a wonderful book. And we were reading it, the other night, in our little high house in the hills.

We were especially interested in Viscount Morley's reflections on the career of Daniel O'Connell, whom Ireland to this day fondly calls the "Liberator," and of whom even "Britannica" speaks as "A remarkable man in every sense of the word."

Morley recalled to us what O'Connell once said concerning religion. "Every religion is good," he said; "every religion is true—to him, who in his due caution and conscience believes it. There is but one bad religion, that of a man who professes a faith which he does not believe; but the good religion may be, and often is, corrupted by the wretched and wicked prejudices which admit a difference of opinion as a cause of hatred."

Would you not say that this utterance constitutes pure Christianity?

Here is the common ground which must be reached before the world can ever hope to be happy. O'Connell said it well. And it was said still better by a Wanderer who walked the dusty roads of Galilee two thousand years ago, and who was crucified on a Cross of Calvary.

Doubt and Joy

Up from the tomb of time the ghost of Doubt
Rose like the spectre of an evil thought
And wandered, lonely, through the world of men
Until at last, beholding radiant Joy,
He crept into her heart and spoke of death.
Hope not for heaven after while, he said.
Your future in the darkness lies entombed,
And yesterday, however dear, is dead;
Why trust the present which must also die?

Truth tells me otherwise, sweet Joy replied.
Truth tells me I have lived eternally—
That I was never born and shall not die.
All lies are shadows and all shadows lies.
I live in light, and light alone endures.
All bright tomorrow and glad yesterdays
Are mine today, within this present hour.

JAMES M. WARNACK.

A Letter That Roused the Wanderlust

ALWAYS it seems to happen this way, that when we are settled down at home and saying to ourself that there is no place like it, a letter will come along, or some one will come holding up two fingers, bidding us to put on our wander shoes and our gypsy cap of green, say good-by to everybody, and go traipsing over the hills and far away.

And it is very hard at a time like that to know that your feet are tethered, and that your poor nose is hopelessly tied against the grindstone.

Which was exactly the way we felt, there awhile back—a couple of weeks ago, or maybe three.

The cause of it all being a letter in the mail sack which came from Sharlot Hall, a poet mentioned by us now and then in the synagogue, very lovingly, on blessed Sabbath mornings.

And all who sit in the synagogue will remember that once we printed on this page Sharlot Hall's poem "In Old Tucson," and that we proclaimed it as our favorite among all the poems in our English tongue. And certainly it is the great American short poem—nothing less.

Well, to get back to our story, what does Sharlot Hall do in her letter but put the wander itch in the soles of our feet. And make it hard for us to stay at home. And not to fret at the tethers. And to let the grindstone go as far as it likes with our nose.

"Come down to Arizona—to the shining mountains beyond Prescott," says the letter. "And I will meet you with the Ark, an ancient Studebaker as fleet as your Henry," she says. "And I will take you around a dead beautiful volcano, and down across a sweeping mesa to a ranch under a hill where poetry and pears and peacocks and guineas and turkeys and all sorts of chickens, to say nothing of roasting ears and mocking birds and quails and parrots, grow right along together—and the poetry lady makes the biscuits and fries the chicken Maryland the very way that Fernand Lungren, great painter of deserts, did it."

That's what the letter said. And heaven help any man who gets such a letter when his feet are tied with tethers, and his nose is on the weary grindstone of slavish toil.

Kind of heart as any woman ever was is Sharlot Hall—the hearts of all poets are kind. And it was meaning to be kind that she wrote the letter—not knowing that time was made for slaves.

But, we will keep a dream warm in our heart, and our gypsy cap on a peg on the wall, and our wanderer's staff of sloe in a dusty corner. And we will pray to get a loan from God.

And when all this comes true let the poetry lady on the ranch under that bright hill of Arizona prepare to roll up her sleeves to make oodles of biscuits and steaming pans of chicken Maryland.

Thomas Speed Mosby Comes Bearing a Book

WHO do you think came into the synagogue to have a talk with us one blessed Sabbath morning not long ago? Well, sir, we think maybe you would never guess even if we were to give you one thousand and one chances.

So, we will tell you who it was without further delay. And it was no less a person than Thomas Speed Mosby all the way from Jefferson City, Mo. And he came bearing a book in his hands. And with him was our old friend, the man who writes with pictures. And the man who writes with pictures had a tobacco box with him that he made for us with his own hands out of Missouri cedar. And, as Thomas Speed Mosby and the man who writes with pictures entered the synagogue they made the peace sign which is done by holding up both your hands with the palms outward.

As though when two men hail you, one with a book and the other with a tobacco box, you would need any other evidence that they came in peace. But what we want to tell you about is the book—a book that brought into the synagogue the ghosts of the immortal dreamers whose names will never die. Old Homer and Aristotle, Plato and Pindar and the great palm-crowned company of the Greeks; Horace and Virgil and Marcus Aurelius and the flower of Rome; Dante, Lope de Vega, Racine, Goethe, Shakespeare and Walter Scott. Down from high Parnassus came these and all the rest who made golden the voice of human speech, and whose dreams are forever in the human heart—in they came, one and all, in the book, to sit with us for company under the far-flung, shadowy eaves of the synagogue.

But, the best of it all is that the book was made by Thomas Speed Mosby, himself. Out of the witchery of his brain he made it. And it was fine of him to make a gift of it in the synagogue on a blessed Sabbath morning to the Conductor of this poor blundering page.

CARE OF THE BODY

up sufficient will power and courage to go on a forty-eight-hour fast he would clearly prove my contention.

I have done this again and again with patients. I have asked them for a list of their choicest and most delicious foods. Then at the close of forty-eight hours of an absolute fast, drinking water only, I have had placed before them some of these foods.

The various results are astonishing. Some have turned away indifferently; others express that the food is repulsive to them; and to still others the viands which were formerly so delicious make them nauseous and sickish by their very presence.

You who have great difficulty in controlling your appetites, try a fast of forty-eight hours. It invariably will do you naught but good; at least it may help you to distinguish between these two subtle terms—hunger and appetite.

"Los Angeles,
"August 18, 1924.

"Dear Dr. Lovell:

"To give proof to 'The Origin of Diseases' in the Times Magazine, August 17, I wish to state: For the last fifteen years I lived on unfired food and fruits, have every-day exercise and air baths. About five years ago, I contracted syphilis, and as it just was in time when the grapes are on the market, I started in (instinctive) and ate from two to four pounds grapes every day and nothing else, except a few crackers. Besides this I put on a truss every night and had three times the week Kneipp Guss (the writer probably means one of Father Kneipp's therapeutic treatments.)

"So I was waiting for the time when that terrible disease called syphilis get me by the throat and eat me up, piece for piece—but nothing happened. After four weeks passed, little pimples come up on some part of the body but they disappeared in three to five days. That was the healing process—and few months after the inflammation of the eye, the blood rushes, and that copper red pimples—all gone.

"The king of all diseases departed without losing any time, because he can not find the soil, where he can grow on.

"Respectfully,
"FRITZ ——"

Notwithstanding that this letter is not very grammatical, the writer has vastly more intelligence than grammatical ability. My purpose in inserting this in the column is primarily because popular psychology believes that that dread disease called syphilis is curable only by salvarsan or 606.

The experience of the writer of this letter is but a small bit of evidence in the vast ensemble of evidence of natural therapeutics proving that this disease, like all other germ diseases, yields readily to sane, sensible treatment.

I do not necessarily agree with the writer that grapes constitute a cure for this disease. In his case it unquestionably was of immense benefit, but his partial fast was undoubtedly of greater help.

Physiology of Digestion

I WILL still remain in the realm of abnormal physiology, or as I explained previously, the physiology which we call pathology.

In the peculiar inflammations that are characterized by stomach inflammation, the condition popularly known as "sour stomach" is perhaps one of the commonest.

One of these days when I am humorously inclined, I propose to make a glossary of popular medical terms and include in it the term "sour stomach." As Artemus Ward would say—"There ain't no such animal" as sour stomach.

If one were to remove the stomach of an individual who complained of this sourness, it would show no signs of sourness.

In reality, sour stomach is the transmission to the nerves of sense going to the brain conveying the impression of sourness. This sourness is generally an acid fermentation due to one of multiple causes, such as insufficient hydrochloric acid, diluted digestive juices, overloading and overtaxing the stomach's capacity—hence inflammation sets in.

The food, especially the animal proteins and animal by-products, instead of going through the usual digestive process, rots and decays. These oppressive gases that arise from the decay, striking against the sensitive mucus membrane walls of the stomach, convey the sense of sourness.

When these same gases are being liberated through mouth belching, it is the substance known as hydrogen sulphide—any of you who have studied chemistry know that hydrogen sulphide is gas smelling like rotten eggs—which creates the sourness and the burning sensation as it passes through the esophagus.

Hydrogen sulphide, in particular, being a gas that is liberated through protein, faulty digestion, is responsible for the burning sensation because it has avid affinity for water, extracting the water from the mucus membrane walls as it proceeds outward.

Summing up, sour stomach is a result of stomach inflammation, faulty and inadequate digestion, irritation from foul gases, and retention of food.

Care of the Baby

IN THIS issue I want to again take up some of the problems connected with nursing technique.

Even though the filling of the breast comes as a natural sequence of childbirth, yet the infrequency of successful nursing through the entire period of baby's early infancy indicates that preliminary care and attention are absolutely necessary.

The breast begins to secrete milk shortly after baby's birth, but the functioning of the glands has commenced considerably before the birth of the child.

During the later months of pregnancy, especially, the breasts undergo considerable enlargement and secrete a kind of yellowish substance called colostrom, which resembles milk but slightly.

It is the forerunner of the future breast milk.

It is during this period that proper care and attention to the breast will frequently determine whether or not the mother will be able to nurse baby.

If her life has been sedentary and inactive, with little or no exposure, the breast should be kept warm on practically all occasions.

Instead of this, we find the low-cut waist so often used by women, irrespective of the fact that they are about to become mothers.

This form of waist chills the exposed portion of the breast gland and leaves the nipple and under surface protected. It would have been far better, scientifically speaking, to expose the entire breast, rather than a part, for it is because of the uneven temperatures on different portions of the body that colds occur.

Next we find the popular binders which most women wear, pregnant or otherwise.

Supposing you were to bind your hands with the same pressure that some women bind their breasts. How much activity would your hands be capable of, were you to continue this practice during all the waking hours and sometimes during sleep. It is self-evident that such a practice would injure the hands.

You can then conceive how much more injurious such pressure would be to the sensitive, delicate, secreting breast glands.

No structure can grow and attain the normal physiological development necessary for normal function when it is tightly bound.

I have seen, in my practice, women who bind their breasts so tightly as to completely deform themselves for the nursing function and also for later life.

Even those women who deprecate the nursing function and are willing that the cow assume the foster-mother functions for them, would undoubtedly do away with the breast-binding habit, were they to realize the later possibilities of malformations, such as pendulous breast, sunken nipples, tumorous growths, etc.

The savage, uncivilized woman does not bind her breasts during pregnancy, and, consequently, succeeds in nursing her children sometimes for two years.

Auxiliary feeding is relatively unknown to her and she frequently has sufficient milk not only for her own but considerable to spare.

There is a direct relationship between the breast hygiene and the success of baby's nursing.

There is also undoubtedly a direct connection between this hygiene and the ever-increasing number of breast tumors and cancers that are occurring among the mothers of today.

MISADVENTURE

BY PERCIVAL GIBBON

Lovely Lucille Scorned Little Guiscard—"a Weakling!" She Scoffed. Bravely Guiscard Made Ready to Die; and Then the Apache in Her Room, the Battle, the Grip of Death, and—Her Hero!

FROM where he watched upon the opposite side of the street Guiscard, with his black cloak folded romantically about him and his slouched hat pulled low, marked the lights at last go out in the top floor windows where Bates had his rooms. He sighed with the patient relief of a man who sees a long vigil draw to its close; he had been watching for fully a quarter of an hour. He waited yet to give Bates time to descend the five flights of stairs, and stepped back to the ambush of a doorway as at length that American citizen came forth from the house and swung away down the street. Three minutes later Guiscard crossed the road and entered the building.

"Good evening, madame!" It was the concierge he addressed, knitting by candlelight in her tiny room, vast in her wooden armchair and motionless as a lay figure but for her flitting fingers. "Monsieur Bates—is he at home?"

The fat, slow woman lifted her tyrannous and arrogant eyes at his cloak draped figure and thin, conciliatory face.

"Gone out!" she replied, in tones harsh as a curse, and turned again to her knitting

"Oh!" Guiscard "registered" disappointment; he had rehearsed this. "What a pity!" He seemed to ponder; then: "It is something I particularly wish him to receive tonight. You think, madame, I might just run up to his rooms and scribble a little note for him?"

The large woman gave him again her glance of cruel power. From her coffin of a room beside the stair foot she ruled the tenants of the house as peoples rule their kings, capriciously and absolutely. But Bates, the American, had fashions of his own, and Guiscard had been there before.

"Please yourself!" she grated, and moved a huge shoulder in a shrug of disdainful indifference.

"Thanks, madame; thanks!" returned Guiscard, and got himself away to the stairs out of range of her scorn and hostility.

"And now," he said half aloud, as he pushed open Bates' never locked door, "and now the final act commences."

He was a smallish young man, meager in the body, with a face under the wide raked brim of his hat that flickered like a candle in the changing wind of his moods. He presented himself to himself, and to all who would see with his eyes, as a poet—not merely a manufacturer of verses but a poet on that grander, vaguer scale where genius starves and only mediocrity feeds full; and it was actually by verses, helped out by odds and ends of more prosaic journalism, that he contrived to live and maintain his posture. Actually he showed to the indifference of the Paris streets and cafes a cloaked and slouch hatted figure, with a thin, self conscious face and a promising beard, something like a reproduction in miniature of a bravo of melodrama.

He found the switch of the light, and Bates' untidy sitting room sprang into view. The poet gazed round upon its comfortable disorder—the basket chairs with their tumbled cushions around the stove, the books that lay everywhere, the pipes and the litter of tobacco ash and the like. It was all familiar to him, for Bates was a hospitable soul; but now it merely required from him an attitude. He looked upon its details gravely, seeming to salute each one with his eyes, then lifted his head suddenly to the windows and the deepening evening beyond them. A pale star seemed to regard him with attention across the chimney scape. He addressed it:

"Have patience!" he said. "I come!"

He had no difficulty in finding what he wanted; visitors to Bates' rooms soon learned their way about them. The third drawer which he opened in the ramshackle bureau contained it—the big, blued steel .45 Colt revolver which he knew Bates would not willingly have lent him. He had seen it once before when Bates had been searching through his thronged drawers for something and had picked it up, fascinated by its heavy compactness of shape and the associations it suggested. To his mind it was the one truly American thing about Bates. He had flourished it, aiming and grimacing at himself in the mirror.

"Here!" Bates had turned to him. "Careful with that thing, will you? You'll murder the lot of us!"

And he had taken it away from him and tossed it back into the drawer.

Now, under the electric light he had it to himself. He weighed it in his hands and was conscious of a curious thrill at the weight and mass of it. He lifted it so that the muzzle touched his forehead, and composed his face for the inspection of the mirror to a fitting tensity. Then he lowered it again.

"Not here!" he said. "Not here!"

He cleared himself a space among the books and papers on the table and sat down to gain a fresh emotion by writing the note to Bates. He threw back his cloak from his shoulders with the fine gesture of one who clears his sword arm for an encounter, thrust his hat from his forehead, and sat to his writing.

"My friend Bates," he began in his minute decorative handwriting, "the hour is at hand, the hour of my release. How vain for you to mourn, since I do not mourn; rather, with clear eyes that begin to pierce already the mists that hem us in, I exult, I press on in haste; I am impatient to be one with my sisters, the stars, and my brother, the wind."

The last was a quotation from a poem of his own which had netted him twenty-one francs—foot rule rates—only a week before.

"Briefly," he resumed, "it is that once again this life, this solitude in the peopled world which is my existence and the home sickness which overcomes me for Nirvana, that native land of my spirit, have prevailed. I am a stranger among you; I go;

The Foolscap

ALMOST every baby during its early infancy has an eruptive outbreak on its scalp.

Grandmothers call this "baby's foolscap" and consider it something which comes to every baby.

It generally consists of a scaly formation on top of the scalp. Of itself it is harmless and if sufficient patience is exercised it will inevitably disappear. But mother love is not patient when something goes wrong with baby. "Do something" is the request to nurse or doctor, and logically, the doctor being paid, does something.

He prescribes a metallic ointment or salve, and presto—the trouble disappears. Then perhaps three or four or six months later, baby is taken down with a fever and mother wonders why it is that Providence has visited this upon her little infant.

She can see no casual relationship between the suppression of an eliminative eruption and the fever subsequently induced.

The toxic wastes which nature attempted to eliminate have been drawn deeper into the system by means of the suppressive salves.

As I have stated, practically all of these scalp eruptions disappear as calmly and quietly as they came. At the best, all that is necessary is for mother to soften the scaly formation by rubbing some olive oil over the scalp.

When baby has a tendency to scratch and possibly cause bleeding, the placing of a cloth, dampened in water, invariably will ease the itch.

A little olive oil, a cool cloth, and a mixture of common sense is the prescription generally needed for "baby's foolscap."

Exploiting the Cancer Sufferer

THE Journal of the American Medical Association prints the following article concerning the much-heralded cancer cures.

For this time this department stands with the expressions of the A.M.A. 100 per cent in accord with their views:

"The week of the annual session of the American Medical Association was chosen as a propitious time to resurrect two discredited 'cancer cures.' At the beginning of the week, a Philadelphia paper announced that the cause of cancer had been discovered and that a treatment for the disease had been evolved that was producing remarkable results.

"This particular piece of publicity dealt with the alleged cancer serum of Dr. T. J. Glover of Toronto. Glover's 'serum' and its method of commercial exploitation were the subject of two or three articles that appeared in the Journal in the early part of 1921. It was there shown that a special committee appointed by the council of the Academy of Medicine of Toronto had investigated the Glover serum and reported that it was unable to find any evidence to show that the serum had produced a cure in any case definitely established as cancer.

"About the same time, Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of cancer research at Columbia University, reported that he had subjected the Glover cancer serum to tests and had found not the slightest evidence that the product had any effect on the growth rate of tumors, nor had it cured any tumor.

"The second 'cancer cure' to be exploited last week was that of Dr. William F. Koch of Detroit. Koch's nostrum was brought to the attention of the newspapers of the country by one C. Everett Field in a statement made before the 'American Association for the Study and Cure of Cancer,' a newly formed organization that must not be confused with the well established American Society for the Control of Cancer.

"Koch's cancer 'cure' was dealt with in two articles that appeared in the Journal during February, 1921. It was there brought out that Dr. Koch announced his alleged 'cure' less than a year after he was graduated in medicine. The committee appointed by the local medical society at that time made two reports, both unfavorable to the 'cure.'

"Since the committee reported, the Koch 'cure' has been exploited by a 'sanatorium' of which Koch is the 'medical director.' The 'sanatorium' sends out to the public a typical 'cancer cure' advertising booklet; statements derogatory to the treatment of cancer by surgery, radium and Roentgen rays; quotations (at least one of which is fictitious) from alleged authorities to support Koch's thesis; a statement of Koch's theory regarding cancer and some noninformative statements about the remedy; finally, the usual farrago of alleged case reports.

"The publicity just given to these two discredited 'cures' is producing the usual effect. Sufferers from cancer both directly and through their physicians are frantically trying to learn whether there is any warrant for the claims so carelessly broadcast. There may be things more heartless than that of exploiting the sufferers from so dreaded a disease as cancer, but at this time we do not think of them.

"The most pernicious feature connected with such exploitation is that of awakening false hopes in the minds of the sufferers.

"The mental anguish thus caused is just as great whether the 'cure' is fraudulent in both its inception and its exploitation, or put forward by honest but misguided enthusiasts. So far as the 'cures' of William F. Koch and T. J. Glover are concerned, it cannot be too earnestly asserted that neither one is in any sense established as either scientific or reliable."

Henna for the Hair

RECENTLY a prominent dermatologist (skin specialist) stated that women were becoming chronic victims of scalp diseases. One of the causes he assigned was the prevalent use of hair dyes by women in their search for youth and beauty.

Woman has a right to seek the everlasting charm of youth and the appearance of beauty, but to do so at the price of her health is certainly neither sane nor desirable.

Dyestuffs for the hair, no matter how verbose and alluring the advertising matter may be, can do naught but harm.

The scalp with its content of hair follicles, sooner or later, begins to absorb the henna or other dye stuffs. The attempt toward natural restoration is smothered and the eliminative glands of the scalp which protect the hair follicles become clogged and overworked.

Frequently scalp eruptions appear, but more frequently the hair is lost.

When the hair begins to gray and the scalp becomes diseased, henna is a poor remedy to use. It cannot substitute for air, sunshine, proper food, freedom from worry, and adequate control of excesses.

Hunger and Appetite

"MY, BUT I'm hungry—I could eat a house!"

Who has not heard or said this at some time or other

Though practically all of us eat three meals a day, seven days a week, and fifty-two weeks a year, hunger is a thing that is so foreign to the daily lives of most of us, so rare in its genuine form, that it is the exception rather than the rule to find real hunger.

Please do not confuse hunger with appetite or desire.

Hunger is a body necessity for food, a craving that is demanded by requirement of the cells to replace the tissues that have wasted. Appetite or desire is merely a stimulation of the different glands of the mouth and stomach, and a mental desire frequently completely dissociated from body requirement.

You can have an appetite for many things which taste good and look good, but the true test of whether hunger and appetite are one and the same is determined by an equal relish of unflavored and unspiced foods.

I would not be extreme in saying that genuine hunger is a sensation that is not felt by more than one in a thousand. Where food is so plentiful and procuring it so easy, hunger is indeed something that is rarely found.

Most of us eat because it is a habit, because it is lunch time, because we are invited out, or because mother or wife has dinner ready and it would not do to waste it.

The quantity of food which we consume is not determined by the quantity our body needs but is determined by how much is served to us at home or in the restaurant.

Genuine hunger is something we cannot experience until most of the accumulated toxic poisons have been eliminated from the system.

Time after time I am compelled to enter into controversy with patients who claim hunger and use this desire as a wedge toward becoming more lax in their eating habits. But when every body indication points out that food is not necessary and yet the tremendous desire for food remains, I invariably tell the patient that it is a mental hunger and not a physical need. I explain to him that if he were to summon

How Is Your Health?

"Have Their Tonsils Out"

Has the school nurse sent your children home with this demand? She soon will.

Tonsils are Guards

placed in the throat at the entrance to the Respiratory and Digestive Tracts to repel invasion by germs, and make no mistake about it, they are there for a purpose other than providing a nice fee for the surgeon.

Two Kinds of Tissue

The tonsils consist of two distinct kinds of tissue—Fibrous and Lymphoid. Fibrous tissue is tough and inelastic, forms the sheath or capsule of the tonsil and never becomes infected while the Lymphoid or glandular tissue which fills the capsule is soft and spongy and easily infected.

Unfortunately when surgery is resorted to for relieving the sore throat there is no alternative but to remove the protective and not infected fibrous tissue together with the offending glandular tissue. The paratonsillar or surrounding tissue and the glands at the root of the tongue are many times also infected and it is impossible to remove these surgically.

Tonsils Gone and Still Sore Throat

For the reasons stated above many children still have their sore throats even after the tonsils have been extirpated and the guardians of infections in other parts of the body destroyed.

What Ought to be Done

Have the tonsils treated and the infection destroyed at the California Clinorium with the Actinic Ray and the X-Ray.

Large and expensive apparatus is used for producing these beneficent and health-giving rays and special quartz applicators localize these rays in the throat.

These rays have the power to reduce the superabundant glandular tissue while not harming in the least the protective fibrous tissue. The swelling, pain and infection is removed, the throat is not sore and the tonsils, the guardians, are still there.

No anaesthetic, no hospital bills, no dangerous hemorrhage, no pain and no inconvenience and not only the tonsils but the entire throat is cleared up and will stay so.

The Nightingale

BY RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

The Strength of Love—the Menace of Death—Drama—Suspense—Action

A YOUNG man, with a young woman clinging to his arm, walked slowly toward the end of the pier. A shadow, grotesque, silent, menacing through the moon-silvered mists which hung above the shore line of the deserted summer estate had followed them to the point where the pier joined the rocks and where a clump of rare junipers had been planted by the landscape architect, and there this skulking figure, lean, cat-like, unseen, crouched low.

The fog had brought its suggestion of mystery and terror; the cold made the young man disengage the arm held so tightly by the young woman, so that he might fasten the topmost button of his coat.

"We oughtn't to come out here," the girl said. "Listen, Denny!"

"'S'all right; that's the tide shaking the pier. We got to go somewhere for a walk. That's what you came way out here to East Harbor for—so's we both could get outdoors sometimes. Maybe he ain't thinking of us, anyhow."

"When did you hear?"

"I saw it in the Bulletin. I called you up at the office the first I heard of it, and they said you was taking dictation. He went outside just a week ago. I wished I'd never seen his face! I wished I'd never been up there with him!"

The girl, whose slight figure seemed insufficient to carry as much golden hair as filled her jaunty hat, glanced up quickly at the sound of desperate fear and hate in her lover's voice.

"Don't talk so," she pleaded, with a sympathy in her tone which comes from few who have not suffered the agonies of the soul. "Denny, you've got me! Everything's all right, Denny. Let's sit down here. You've lived it down, Denny. We ought to be thankful—your good job, your future. Nobody can say anything against you to me. Only, Denny—listen: Let's get married—let's get married tomorrow."

The man was taller than she. He put one of his nervous hands on her slight shoulder, and she smiled.

"I thought it was you who said we'd better wait until we could send word to your mother out in Dakota. You told her the whole story. That was the plan. Then, if anything came up and it was known that I had served my eighteen months up there, where—"

"Don't say it!" she exclaimed, with passion. "We promised not to mention anything of that, Denny."

"You're not sorry—now?" he asked fiercely.

"Sorry! Me sorry? Why, Denny, I was glad—gladder than I ever was in my life when you said you loved me. At the bottom, you were so good—the best man I ever knew. And then these two years that made us both grow so much, Denny—like plants that found the sunlight. And these two years wiped out all the past. Sorry? Me sorry? Why, I only wanted you, Denny—good or bad—I wanted you."

He drew in a long breath and put his arm about her, holding her to him closely. He turned her face upward, and kissed her responsive lips.

"What's that, Denny—that hard thing in your pocket?" she cried out.

"I won't have him wipe me out like a dog, Alice. I bought it. He'd kill. He has it bred in his bone. When they caught him—it was for burglary—he jumped from the platform of an elevated station on to an electric sign, and he left an inspector and a ticket chopper waiting for the ambulance."

"He was such a nice-appearing boy!" she exclaimed. "Manners and all! Jennie Boyden and I never knew about the truth. I wouldn't have believed it. There he was, standing at the bottom of the steps where I boarded, and telling me that no girl ever meant anything to him but me. And saying he could be a different man if I loved him—if I'd only say so. He thought I did love him. He said he'd rather die than not to have me love him. Oh, what would I have done if I'd known the kind of man he was! And I said, 'Well, you come for me Thursday.' But I never knew. I never heard a word till you—"

"Brought word from him," finished Denny. "But you didn't love him—at all?"

"No, no, no!"

"Well, that's it," he said. "There's something about him that tricks everybody—some power. It was that way up there. The warden had a quartet made up from the boys."

"Don't, Denny!"

"Yes, I will. I want to tell you. I've heard this man sing in that quartet. The bass was a bank teller, 45, with ten more years to go. And this man, always lean and clean and white, and a body slender and like a cat, and a tenor voice—what a tenor voice!—sweet, beautiful, and terrible. He was like a snake with a bird's voice. They called him 'the Nightingale.'"

"'The Nightingale,'" repeated Alice, with a shudder.

There was a long silence, in which they sat side by side, looking out into the silver-frosted mist over the salt water.

"It's cold, Denny," said the girl suddenly.

He started, but he neglected her statement. He said:

"He will kill." Terror came into her eyes. "Yes; he will kill," Denny repeated, with his square jaw set firmly. "He said to me: 'Take this message to her. She would have loved me. That is life to me—all the life there's left. You're going out. You tell her the truth. She don't know it. But tell her I say to wait for me. Tell her I'll go straight.' Then when—"

"We've loved each other, haven't we, Denny?" she interrupted sharply. "I never cared a thing for him. But you!"

He felt for her gloved hand and squeezed it.

"But he'll come, and he'll come to kill. That's like his kind—their white, long fingers and all strung with nerves. He was eating his heart out for you. He'll come. He'll kill if he can. Didn't he write, 'I give you notice?' That's like him."

The girl suddenly threw back her head and addressed the high vault of heaven. "What have we done to deserve this? Haven't we been good? Haven't we earned our happiness? What have we done?"

"Or I'll kill him," said Denny, the rows of his even white teeth clicking together. "I'd kill him, and then they'd send me back."

"No, no, no!" she whimpered. "He won't come—maybe. Maybe he'll die. Something will happen. I'll ask help."

"Where?" said Denny. "From the police? Then I'd be known again—I'd lose the job. Then where's the living-down the one big mistake? I'd rather have him get me, Alice. I'd rather have him wipe me out."

"Denny!" she gasped, clinging to his arm and looking up into his brown eyes. "Don't you worry, Denny. I love you. Whatever could happen, I'd love you, Denny. I'm so cold now. Let's go back to the village. I'm so cold now. Let's go back to the village. I'm so cold."

"Gee—cold!' exclaimed the man. "All right; let's go back."

They jumped up and started toward the shore end of the long pier. A rowboat, swung by the tide, bumped the piles behind them, and the mists over the salt bay swayed in the faint stir of the penetrating winter wind.

"I've been making curtains for the living-room," Alice said suddenly. "I left the ends so that we could fix them for any length of window. Denny, we—"

Far away there sounded across the cold night air the first plaintive bars of "Annie Laurie" in a tenor as fine and clear as the song of some little bird, sweet, yet sharp and needle-like—horrible in its sweetness. The man caught the girl's wrist. Both of them stopped as if suddenly a precipice had

Our Unbiologic Life

THE following article is an apt, well-written argument for normal dietetics that appeared as an editorial in the Good Health Magazine this month:

"There is probably no other animal that includes in its dietary so large a variety of substances as does man. In fact, the human race, taken as a whole, exploits the bills-of-fare of the entire animal world. There can be found scarcely a plant, a bird, a beast, a fish or a reptile eaten by any animal that is not also eaten in some form by some man. In addition, man has produced a great number of artificial foods some of which are denatured to such a degree as to make them unacceptable to many intelligent members of the animal kingdom. There are, indeed, few if any animals that could be induced to eat a spiced pickle or any one of a dozen common dishes which might be named.

"And man essays this complex and varied bill of fare without a digestive apparatus adapted to so complicated and difficult a task. Like the man-like apes, the chimpanzee and the orang-outang, he has a simple digestive machine adapted to the digestion of fruits, nuts, soft grains, juicy roots, eggs and milk. His digestive system includes no mechanism corresponding to the gizzard of the barnyard fowl, the quadruple stomach of the bovine, or the seven-gastric-power digestive machine of the whale. He has only the simple, rather feeble stomach of the primate, the aristocrat of the animal kingdom, adapted to the digestion of the choicest and most delicate of nature's tidbits, to dine on the top shelf of Mother Nature's pantry, so to speak, and yet, with this delicate simian stomach, he does not hesitate to tackle the world's bill of fare, to do gastronomic stunts from which the hardiest beast of the forest might well recoil.

"Under such treatment, it is no wonder that the human gastric machine has broken down, and that dyspepsia, constipation, and peristaltic woes of various description have become universal in civilized lands. Dinner pills and post-prandial sousings of mineral water have become a part of the national regimen, but even the stout odors of the modern perfumer cannot hide the disgusting flavor of my lady's breath, which makes loud advertisement of the fact that there is an embargo in the large intestine with an unsavory accumulation of decaying food residues.

"A return to biologic living is the most pressing economic as well as the most necessary physiologic reform required at the present time.

"To eat biologically is simply to eat scientifically, to eat normally. This the average man seldom does for two reasons: First, he does not know how to do so, having lost largely his nutritive instinct, so that he has no safe guide, such as even the humblest of the lower animals possesses; and second, because wholesome food is in many places almost unattainable on account of the ignorance of cooks and caterers.

"George Bernard Shaw, famous English author, playwright and vegetarian, says, 'I look my age. It is the other people who look older than they are. What can you expect from people who eat corpses and drink spirits?'"

Diet and the Individual

IN MY correspondence I am asked over and over again to prescribe a definite diet for such and such a disease. All the information that is given to me is that they are suffering from such a disease and would I prescribe a diet.

Orthodox medicine has built up a system of treatment in which each medicine is specifically prescribed for a definite disease.

Unfortunately, natural therapeutics cannot do this.

We do not treat the disease but we do prescribe diets and hygiene for individuals who have the disease.

If you will but remember that the human being is not composed only of an intestinal tract, or a pair of kidneys or lungs, but is a complete functioning unit, you will readily see why any one condition of itself cannot be treated.

Before one can prescribe a diet for a definite condition, one must know many other associate factors.

To illustrate—a patient asks for a diet to overcome constipation. There are many kinds of constipation. The constipation induced by excessive food, wrong food, muscular paralysis, fatty degeneration, etc. The mere fact that one is constipated is not sufficient. One must know the cause of the constipation and other associated conditions such as height, weight, kind of work, muscular development, habits, previous diseases, and considerable more information, which virtually constitutes a case history.

Therefore, readers of this column, please do not ask for a diet to cover one condition without giving adequate information concerning yourself.

The editor is indeed very glad to be of assistance to you, but a diet, like everything else, must fit the individual and no two individuals are alike.

School "Exams" and Nervous System

THE health bulletin issued by the local health department makes the following most interesting contribution. School teachers and mothers should be vitally interested in this question. Educators have hammered away at it for decades, yet this archaic, vicious system of nerve-wracking, nerve-straining tests and examinations remains as strongly entrenched as ever.

Every once in a while an occasional suicide because of examination worries or failures dramatically brings this to our attention, then, like all other thrills to which we are now thoroughly accustomed, public consciousness lapses into the same self-satisfied inertia.

"For many years the late Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia was one of the most outstanding and most highly recognized authorities on this continent on diseases of the nervous system. In an address delivered to the combined Teachers' Association, held in Philadelphia, nearly twenty years ago, Dr. Mitchell drew special attention to the dangers of the so-called test examinations, claiming that he had made careful study for some years in regard to one particular disease, which he used as a test, the disease known as chorea, or St. Vitus' dance.

"His observation had been that there was always an abrupt upward curve or increase at the approach of these examinations and during the entire period of the examinations.

"He also noted other nervous symptoms as being much more prevalent at these periods. For instance, the child would cry more easily, was much more irritable, was restless at night, starting up in its sleep, not infrequently dreaming about examinations.

"Fortunately, however, these so-called test examinations have in a large measure been abolished. However, they are still in evidence to a regrettable extent. In fact, all authorities on the nervous system are agreed as to the ill effects, especially on children of a nervous temperament, of the intense nervous strain under which these so-called test examinations place them. Coming as they usually do at the end of the session, the children are all fairly well exhausted and the nervous system of many of them has already been taxed to the extreme.

"We refer to these as so-called test examinations, knowing well that in many cases they are more a test of the nervous endurance of the pupil than of his actual fund of knowledge. Furthermore, the principle of examinations, either annual or semi-annual, whether it be as a basis for the issuing of certificates or diplomas, or the granting of degrees; only has a tendency to foster the abominable system of cramming for examinations at the end of the term.

"It is well to bear in mind that there is a vast difference between the crammed brain and the developed, intelligent and disciplined mind.

"What the individual requires and what the nation requires is the latter and not the former. Therefore, every week, every month and every day should see its work done, line upon line and precept upon precept.

"Prof. Barker of Johns Hopkins, when asked concerning these examinations, some years ago, said: 'Competition is dangerous to the nervous child. The ambitious parents who desire their children to head the class are oft-times responsible for serious injuries to their health. One only requires to look back over one's own experiences and those of their friends to recall many instances in which a boy or girl, a young man or young woman, has received his or her scholarship and gold medal at the expense

The Secret Worth Half

BY WILLIAM LE QUEUX

(Illustrated by Ralph C. Criswell)

How Would You Like to Possess the System That Could Break the Bank at Monte Carlo? Read This and See What Happened

AN INTERESTING secret unknown to the public concerns the Societe Anonyme des Bains de Mer de Monaco, which, in plain English, is the Casino at Monte Carlo.

Fortunes have been, and are still, lost and won upon the green-covered tables of those gorgeously-gilded salons where Vice rubs shoulders with Avarice, and where the monde is upon equality with the demi-monde. But the world has remained in ignorance of a series of exciting circumstances which I think the reader will agree to be quite remarkable.

As one who has spent many winters on the Riviera, and who has risked his golden louis upon the tapis vert with varying fortune—for the gambling spirit is so contagious that the visitor cannot help placing a modest stake upon the rouge or noir, or upon a transversale or a cheval—I am on friendly terms with many of the staff of the beautiful establishment beside the sapphire sea.

One day, while making some observations for the purpose of writing a novel with a background of Monte Carlo life, I sat in the office of Monsieur Henri Jacquin, the bald-headed, affable director of the Casino, and asked him to relate to me any secret concerning the greatest gambling concern in the world.

The story he related to me I give in his own way, for I shall transcribe it from the notes I took at the time.

At first, Monbier Jacquin was rather disinclined to reveal the facts. Indeed, he admitted to me that his hesitation was due to doubt whether the public ought really to be let into the secret. Naturally, I pressed him to disclose the truth, and at last he did so.

I well recollect that bright sunny afternoon. Through the long windows of his comfortable office I could see through the palms the Mediterranean, of that intense deep blue which those who have been to "Monty" know so well. Ever and anon came the pop-pop of the tir aux pigeons, while sometimes, as he revealed the secret, men dressed in somber black came with slips of paper for him to sign, and departed without a word—receipts for further supplies of money to the various tables.

The great secret of Monte Carlo was discovered about three years ago by an old Italian woman named Laura Bertelli. This woman, a widow, who was an habituee, and, indeed, earned her living in the Rooms, was a native of Bologna. You will, he said, wonder how she earned her living. Well, briefly, each day when the roulette tables opened, she secured one of the best seats, pretended to play with pieces of cent sous, and then, when the crowd came in the afternoon, she sold her seat for twenty francs to one of the visitors.

We have a dozen such old women who do this regularly seven days each week, and on seven louis per week live quite well, I assure you.

Old Signora Bertelli had done this for a number of years, and had become one of the best known characters in the Rooms, seated each day at the same table, noting the winning numbers upon her card, and though she risked but little, she was nevertheless an adept player at roulette.

She had sometimes with her a niece, a very handsome dark-eyed young Italian girl named Anita Marchetti, whose beauty was much remarked by the visitors, but the only friend she appeared to have, save her aunt, was a tall, well-set-up Englishman whose name was Archibald Grant. I noticed the pair in the Rooms on one or two occasions, sometimes eagerly watching the table at which Signora Bertelli played—the first table on the right as you enter the Rooms.

Suddenly, all three were missed from their usual spot. After a week the head croupier of the table in question inquired of a friend of the Signora, an old French woman named Pierret, and learned that the widow had besen taken very unwell and had gone back to Bologna, with her niece, and that Archie Grant had returned to London.

Nearly three months went by, when there reappeared at the table the pretty Anita, with her English admirer, together with an elderly, bald-headed Spaniard, whose name we learned was Jose Vasquez, a man plainly dressed, who had the air of a deputy.

For several days they were merely onlookers, the old man seated opposite the girl, carefully registering the numbers from one to thirty-six as they came up at each coup.

The girl lived expensively at the Hotel de Paris, while the elderly man had taken up his quarters at the Metropole with young Grant. At first they attracted no attention. Our department of surveillance is usually very alert, but there was nothing unusual about them, save the girl's extraordinary beauty.

One afternoon, however, as the pair were seated as usual confronting each other, the man—just as the croupier turned the wheel—gave a signal to the girl behind whose chair young Grant was standing, whereupon she produced a bundle of banknotes from a capacious purse and placed the maximum of 6000 francs en plein upon number twenty-eight.

About two hundred people were around the table and instantly everyone was filled with excitement. It is not often that the maximum is staked upon a single number without anything to guard against loss.

"Rien ne va plus!" the croupier cried, and gave the little ivory ball a flick with finger and thumb, and sent it flying round the outer edge of the bowl in the opposite direction to which the wheel revolved.

The girl held her breath until, of a sudden, the ball fell with a sharp click into one of the little compartments in the wheel.

For a second there was an eager hush. Then the croupier's strident voice cried in French:

"Twenty-eight! Vingt-huit! Noir!—Pair et passe!"

The stake the young woman had placed was en plein on number twenty-eight, but other players had staked a cheval on the numbers twenty-fize and twenty-eight, and on twenty-eight and thirty-one, and twenty-eight and twenty-nine, as well as transversales on twenty-eight, twenty-nine and thirty.

Those crowding around the table stood as the croupier, rapidly reckoning the winnings, counted out a great bundle of 500-franc notes, and in four handfuls pushed them toward the lucky winner upon the end of his wooden rake.

Then without the slightest emotion, and quite unconcerned, he glanced up and down the table and cried again:

"Messieurs, faites vos jeux!"

In an instant the crowd, among whom were many wealthy Americans and Russians—those people who haunt Monte Carlo year in and year out—began to follow the lucky young woman. On all sides five-franc pieces, golden louis, and 100 franc bank notes were being placed around the number twenty-eight.

But the handsome Italian girl, having screwed up her big bundle of notes into her purse, did not make a further stake. She simply sat there, amused.

She smiled across to the old man, and just before the next throw of the ball upon the revolving wheel, young Grant, who was dressed in light gray, bent and whispered some words into her ear.

She smiled and nodded assent.

Then the wheel was turned, the ball fell, and all who had staked on twenty-eight and its surrounding numbers lost entirely—for zero turned up!

The crowd at that particular table, excited by the pretty Italian girl's winning of the maximum, played coup after coup, but on each occasion they lost, while the dark-eyed siren seated there amidst them, with the old Spaniard opposite her and the young Englishman standing behind her, did not venture to play again.

All three, however, watched eagerly. The eyes of each were fixed on the wheel of fortune. The Chief of the Party, who, in other words, is chief of the table and who sits in his high chair behind the chief croupier watching that the play is fair—and here let me say that no games of chance are fairer than those played at Monte Carlo—hardly noticed what was in progress.

That somebody should win the maximum was in the ordinary course of events. As against those few who win there are so many who lose, and who at last apply to the bureau for their viatique—their fare, third-class, to their home, be it Peterborough or Petrograd, New York or New Zealand.

On the day following the coup of the hardsome Italian girl, she made, about 7 o'clock in the evening—when nearly everyone had gone to dinner—another coup which brought her nearly £2800.

And she had not lost one sou!

Disregarding dinner, she sat in the same seat, the old man in front of her, the young Englishman standing behind her.

Few people were around the table at that hour, for from 6:30 to 8:30 the rooms are always practically deserted. At 9 o'clock the eager crowds surge in again through those gilded salons in which the degenerates of the world assemble.

Just before 8 Anita played again suddenly upon number twelve, placing the maximum upon the number, and upon all the numbers around, namely, the numbers from seven to twelve, on twelve and fifteen, decomposition of tissue, it follows that the initial action of salvarsan upon the syphilized system and general pathological condition of the patient must at first be very gratifying.

CARE OF THE BODY

"But the improvement, in the very nature of things, can of course only be temporary; for the action of salvarsan does not exhaust itself in its attack upon the albumen in the syphilitic field, but imparts its destructive influence to every tissue and viscera that holds albumin in its structure.

"Hence the cerebral disturbance that plays such havoc with the majority of the patients that submit to the salvarsan treatment, and the nervous breakdown which is always expected by the physician, and medicated against. For the arsenic of the salvarsan compound extends its affinity to the iron of the blood with the subsequent rupture of its red blood corpuscles.

"It is this action that gives rise to the bio-chemical disturbance which constitutes another characteristic reaction attending salvarsan serum-therapy. And, furthermore, it is this fact that lies back of the distressful symptoms of cerebral congestion that the patient experiences, and the oedema, or accumulation of serum in the body cells, which may lead to gangrenous conditions of the tissues.

"Late reports from Rhode Island's Infirmary give at hand that gangrene and general tissue mortification are so frequent afflictions amongst the salvarsan patients that they are recognized as characteristic to the treatment. Furthermore, the amputations made necessary through these pernicious changes are very hazardous, owing to the fact that the adjacent tissues, through the destruction of the red blood corpuscles, are more or less demoralized.

"Not long ago a report from the Royal Infirmary of Hull, Eng., described the after effects of salvarsan upon patients so serious that further treatments have been ruled out by the hospital physician.

"The epileptic attacks and convulsions, which are other clinical symptoms characteristic to the treatment, indicate the morbid influence salvarsan holds over the sympathetic nervous system.

"Again the continuous loss of albumen to the system, caused by the arsenical affinity of salvarsan, makes the patient subject to albuminuria and recurrent disturbances of structures, extremely vital to his existence, as, for instance, the suprarenal capsule; while on the other hand the dehemolizing of the red blood cell through its loss of iron, threatens him with such grave conditions as systemic necrosis, dilation of the vessels, cyanosis, hemiplegia, rigor mortis, convulsions, and a score of other abnormalities."

The Specter of Old Age

ELMER E. CAREY presents an interesting bit of psychology on the spector of old age.

We are constantly running across people who are young at 80 and an immense number who are old at 20.

What is old age?

I believe you will find Mr. Carey's psychological presentation of it quite interesting.

"Old age is delusion. Many are old because they think they are old. Many are old because they have had a certain number of birthdays. Three score and ten is popularly suposed to reresent the limit of earthly existence. If you believe three score and ten will end your years of usefulness, so be it unto you. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

"Hundreds of centenarians the world over, refute the theory that the dead line has been drawn at seventy years. Los Angeles has a Centenarian Club, composed of men and women who are twenty and thirty years over the imaginary 'dead line;' two of the members are active in the business world at 102 and 104 years of age respectively.

UNIVERSAL LONGEVITY POSSIBLE

"If one person can live in three centuries, there is no reason why a large portion of the population can not do the same. To reach the age of 100 years with active mind and body is possible for thousands. Here are the essentials to make centenarians as common as flivvers:

(1.) Right mental attitude and environment.

(2.) Certain simply hygienic requirements.

THE CURSE OF BIRTHDAYS

"Forget birthdays and free the mind from old age gloom.

"Anyone is old who thinks he is old; anyone will grow old who expects to grow old; anyone will become decrepit who holds mental pictures of premature old age and decrepitude. If you exect old age, you will not be disappointed. If you draw a dead line in years, you will crumple and collapse when the line is reached.

PHYSICAL CAUSE OF OLD AGE

"Turning to the physical aspects of old age, let us ask a question.

"'What is the basic difference between a young child and the so-called old person? What is the physical cause of old age?

"'The answer is—dirt, debris, mineral refuse.

"There is no rocky, limey, earthy debris in the cellular structure of an infant; the body of the average 'old person' is literally filled with earthy debris and refuse. The bodily structure, instead of being composed of organized, living cellular tissue, is permeated with cementlike deposits; the life cells, necessary to the growth, vigor and vitality of the individual are partially made up of inorganic elements—alkali, silica and various limelike deposits. Cell reproduction is greatly reduced. Here we find the basis cause of old age."

How Long, Indeed?

Night Study

IF I HAD my say in school jurisdiction and management I believe I would be exceedingly popular, with the school kiddies. I would so limit and curtail home study that Johnny or Mary would never have to take a licking for "not studying."

For the kiddies who get home from school at 4 or 5 o'clock, with evening but an hour or two away, this means much.

I am not opposed to cultural development, but I am vigorously opposed to this sort of development at the price of physical good health.

Parents especially are perhaps the greatest sinners in this direction. They are so proud of the precociousness of their kiddies that they often encourage excessive study, sometimes far into the night.

The human animal is not a nocturnal animal. It is only because of our so-called civilization that we indulge in night life of any kind.

Observe the infant. He sleeps from sunset to sunrise; that is, during the night hours.

If we lived with the simplicity of nature, those would be the hours of sleep. But even though we cannot conform to these rules, what we can do with our children is to avoid the strain of artificial light at night.

The eye is one of the most sensitive structures of the body.

His Hearing Restored

The invisible ear drum invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York City. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. KILLS CATARRH GERMS IN THREE MINUTES

Wonderful French Discovery succeeds After Everything Else Has Failed

Thousands who have suffered from catarrh, head noises, difficult breathing, hawking, etc., and who have tried everything without success, say that the famous new scientific discovery, Lavex, rid them of their troubles in a few days. Many say they had no further trouble after the first three minutes of treatment.

Lavex is a French discovery, easily used by simply inhaling a pleasant, harmless powder, which tends to kill the catarrh germs almost instantly. Lavex reaches every part of the breathing passages, which cannot be done with ordinary salves, ointments, sprays, etc. The results are astonishing in their rapidity. For instance, Rev. J. F. Stephens, a widely known preacher, says, "I had suffered from catarrh for years and my doctor said there was no cure. Had to quit preaching as a Methodist Minister. After using Lavex I can sleep and eat well, voice is clear, can walk or run or work as well as I could twenty years ago and I am now sixty-nine."

So confident is W. R. Smith, 1003 Lavex Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., American distributor of Lavex, that it will rid you of all your catarrh troubles, in no time at all, that he generously offers to send a treatment on free trial. No obligation, no cost, comes to you in plain wrapper, postpaid. If it cures you, you can repay the favor by telling your friends, if not, the loss is Mr. Smith's, therefore you should accept this liberal offer today by simply sending your name and address to Mr. Smith and prove you can be rid of catarrh.—[Advertisement.

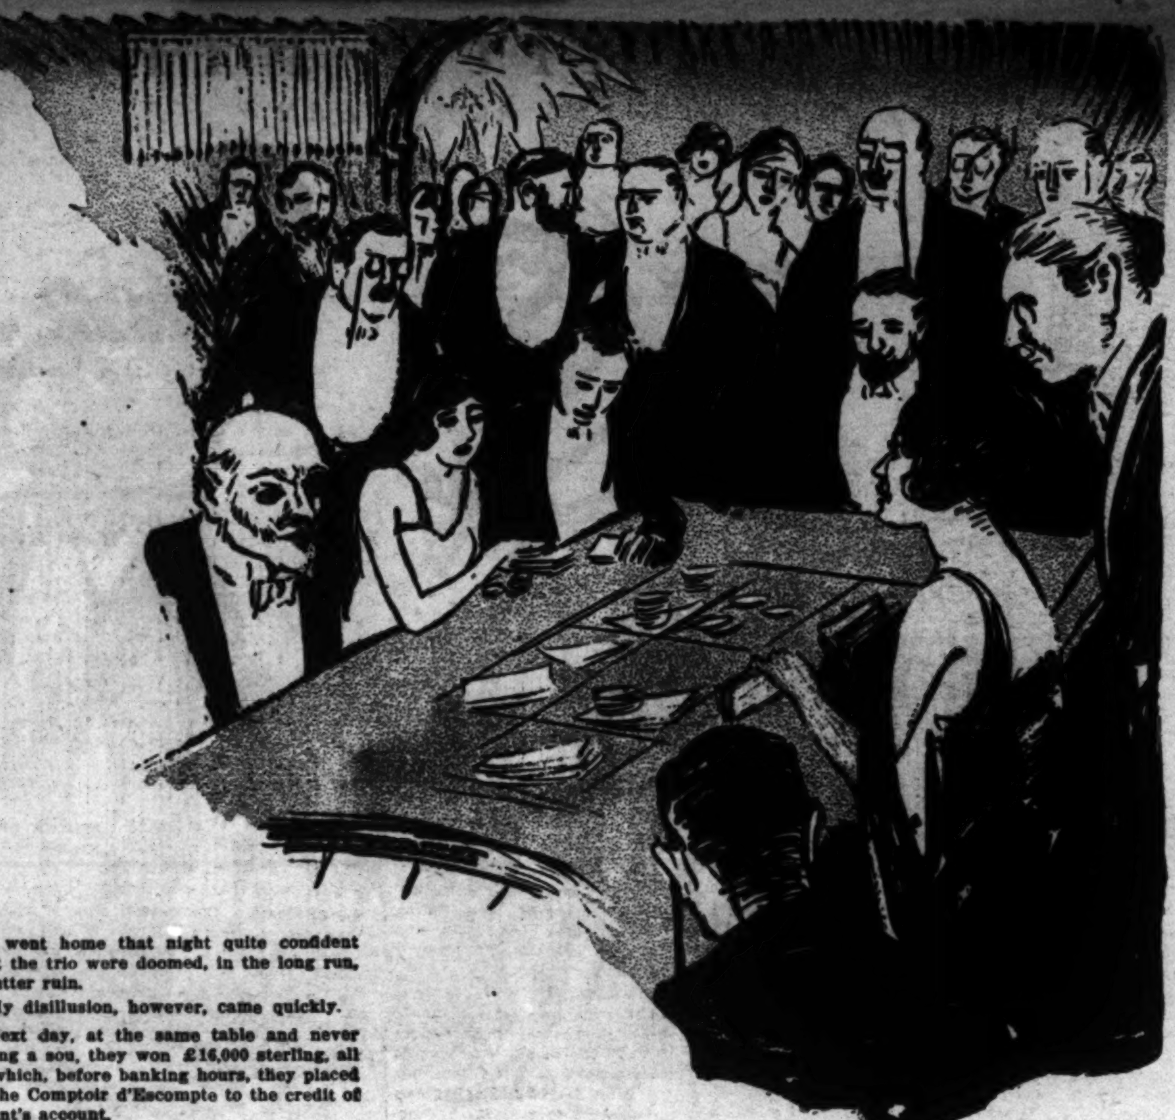
a Million



twelve and nine, and twelve and eleven, as well as upon the red.

The wheel was spun. Again she won! It was the curious fact that she had not staked a single sou since her last win that first aroused the curiosity of the automatic officials at the table.

Having won again, she took her winnings, and, laughing merrily, went out with the young Englishman.

They stolled across to the Hotel de Paris, where they both dined expensively, paying the equivalent of £4 sterling for their dinner.

Yet the girl was not in the least excited. Her attitude of confidence was of a person who knew she had all to gain and nothing to lose.

Indeed, later on at a quarter to ten that night—she won still another 14,000 francs, and smiled as calmly as though she had only won a couple of louis.

After the close of play the matter was reported to me by Paul Camolet, chief of our surveillance department, which looks after those who are lucky, and also those who are so unlucky as to apply for the viatique or take their lives, the big fools—for fools commit suicide.

Camolet came to my room at midnight and related to me what I have just disclosed.

I dismissed it, saying:

"Oh, the,'ll lose it all, my dear Paul. Have we not often seen others win big sums, but they always lose it again in the long run."

"Yes," he replied, rather hesitatingly, "but in this case the girl and her friends are so entirely confident, I have discovered today that old Signora Bertelli, whom we have all known for years, died two months ago in Bologna. Why should her niece and her lover return here with this Spaniard?"

"Strange that she should win each time she decides to play," I said. Then, laughing, I added: "Well, let them continue. They will come to ruin sooner or later. To win always is, as you know, quite impossible. Those who break the bank return again and give us back all they have taken —with one or two exceptions."

"Darnborough took £90,000 from us not long ago," he remarked.

"True. A lucky chance. But this young woman will soon pay us back all she has taken—and more. Never fear!"

I went home that night quite confident that the trio were doomed, in the long run, to utter ruin.

My disillusion, however, came quickly.

Next day, at the same table and never losing a sou, they won £16,000 sterling, all of which, before banking hours, they placed in the Comptoir d'Escompte to the credit of Grant's account.

Before doing so they smiled at the Chief of the Play and at the croupiers, and went forth.

As they passed through the atrium on their way out the pretty Anita, espying me, crossed and exclaimed in French:

"Well, m'sieur, you know that we can win always now. What will the administration give us for the secret of our system, eh?" and her dark eyes danced mischievously.

"Mademoiselle," I replied flippantly, "we give nothing. No system will ever be able to break the bank entirely."

"Except ours," she laughed. "I will call at your office tomorrow morning and give you an opportunity to place my offer before the administration."

"I fear your time would be thrown away, mademoiselle," I laughed. "You may, perhaps, employ it to better advantage at the table."

"Then you refuse to negotiate in a friendly spirit, eh?" she asked in her quick Italian way.

"Yes. I am sorry to be impolite, but I do," and I bowed.

"Very well," she replied, rather piqued. "Soon you will regret that you did not negotiate, I assure you. We win when we wish, and we shall continue to do so. Watch us and see!" And she laughed merrily, and rejoined her lover.

One point was certain. The trio were absolutely confident that their system—if it were a system—was infallible.

Now at "Charley's Mount" we have heard of systems for years. We know, however, that there is no system which will ever get the better of the bank. Hence, if a player wins methodically we put it down to some new system, well knowing that in the end all systems fail.

So we put down the conquest of the pretty Anita to a system, one to which her purse must, sooner or later, succumb.

But the problem presented to us was that whenever the dark-haired, handsome girl played, she always won. She never lost a single coup!

Day by day she sat in that same chair, the third from the end nearest the door, playing just as she decided, perhaps only half-a-dozen times or less in twelve hours, yet whenever she placed a stake on the table the young Englishman and the old Spaniard followed her example, and they would win thousands of pounds.

I watched and saw that it was no wild attempt to break the bank. The trio played with most exquisite caution, and were plainly out, with confidence, to win big money.

I confess I regretted my words to her in the atrium when she had offered to negotiate. That they had a perfect system was apparent, but its nature both Camolet and myself, indeed all the staff of the administration, failed utterly to establish.

Archie Grant was a typical British officer in mufti, tall, with a monocle and wristlet watch. He was evidently a gentleman. I gave Camolet orders to instruct his agents to watch the trio and report to me daily. All his secret agents are ex-officers of the Paris Surete, hence they are expert, alive, and reliable. Possibly no department of surveillance in all the world is so complete, or so well supplied with funds, as ours of Monte Carlo.

The tentacles of our famous Camolet extend to every city. Many visitors to Monte Carlo who play for high stakes are quite unconscious that inquiries are being made concerning them at their own homes for, as you know, all those who receive the yellow ticket of admission to the Cercle des Etrangers are required to furnish their home addresses. Camolet's work also includes the hushing up of any unfortunate cases of suicide through ruin, of which we sometimes have many. The latter come in cycles, the reason of which I have yet never been able to understand for the viatique is always ready for those unfortunates who apply for it.

Well, Anita Marchetti, young Grant, and the old Spaniard continued their operations day after day, always at the same table. For four days, though they sat there patiently, they refrained from playing. Such was the report which Camolet presented to me.

On the fifth day, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, they won 60,000 francs on the first twelve numbers, and again before dinner a second 60,000 francs upon the last dozen.

That night Guilbert, the chief of the staff at the table in question, came into my room in a state of great excitement, declaring:

"That Italian girl has a system! She has discovered a means of winning always. She and her friends have never lost—not one single coup!"

"But how?" I asked. "Have you watched?"

"Watched!" he echoed. "I have watched day after day—but it is a complete mystery. They win coup upon coup. They wait for hours—whole days, and never play. Yet when they do play they never fail to win!"

"But this system?" I asked of the official, a reliable man who had grown gray in our service. "What is it?"

"M'sieur, I cannot tell! All I can say is that they have discovered an infallible mode of winning at roulette such as we have never yet seen. It is none of the ordinary system of numbers and series of numbers—all of which must, in the end, go to the wall."

"And the pretty Italian girl will go to the wall ere long, Guilbert, depend upon it," I laughed. "No one has ever successfully stood against our bank. There is an evil fortune which always equalizes a player's good fortune. They will experience it very soon, never fear!"

And I dismissed him.

Next evening it was reported to me that assert, that white bread is absorbed in less time than whole-wheat bread. This fact, they say, is proof of the superior digestibility of white bread.

"But water requires less time for absorption than white bread and it follows, therefore, that water should be preferred to bread of any kind.

"The time required in the digestion of any natural food is not a factor to be reckoned with. Time has nothing to do with physiological balance. Not time, but health, growth, strength and resistance to disease should constitute the standard of measurement. Whole-wheat bread, including the bran and germ, gives to the body elements that the body needs.

"In a truly 'balanced diet' in which the alkalines more than offset the acids, one may eat anything that appetite suggests, provided the selection is made from whole, unrefined food, fully matured, preferably in season than out of season, and with full consideration of the important essentials summed up under the heading of mineral salts found in wholesome milk, whole grains, greens, vegetables, and ripe fuit."

Spinal Lesions and the Automobile

BOTH the osteopathic and chiropractic philosophies are built on the assumption that disease is caused by pressure upon the nerves emerging from the spinal cord through the openings of the spine.

Due to muscular contraction the bones slide upon one another, narrowing the opening through which the nerve emerges, and consequently creating nerve pressure.

How these bones get out of place is a subject of much theorizing and discussion. That they do, is beyond doubt or question. Almost everyone has had osteopathic or chiropractic treatment. To hear the vertebra snap back into place with an audible click will convince one that they do get out of place.

The fine results achieved through this form of adjustment are further evidence of its value.

Bear in mind that bones are moved by muscles.

One of the ways in which these spinal bones are abnormally shifted is through the inactive tenseness induced by the modern automobile habit. We sit in a car with muscles tensed against the jolting motion. Flexibility of movement becomes the stiffness of inadequate exercise.

To spend the day on a 150 or 200-mile drive, which constitutes the average automobile owner's Sunday recreation, is a crime against one's spinal column and spinal nerves.

We cannot do away with the automobile. It is here to stay. But what we can do is to mitigate some of its attendant evils. Obedience to just a few of the following rules will prevent a great many of the spinal malpositions that the auto induces.

Rule 1. Never slouch or sit on your spine while driving or sitting in a moving car.

Rule 2. Don't overdrive. If you must make a long auto journey, try to do it in stages and shifts. A 100-mile drive per day should be the maximum.

Rule 3. Shock absorbers and good springs pay for themselves in health dividends besides comfort.

Rule 4. If you must take a long drive, get out of the car frequently and take a short walk. A five-minute walk every forty or fifty miles will work wonders in preventing the feeling of extreme fatigue which long drives produce.

Rule 5. Driving is not a muscular exercise. It is rather a nervous strain. If you must drive long distances, eat a minimum quantity of food.

These common-sense rules will prevent much of the sluggishness and spinal lesions created by the jolting and bouncing of the family chariot.

Deeper Meaning of Salavarsan Experiment

THE following has been extracted from Dr. Axel Emil Gibson's book "Blood and Nerve Diseases."

"Until recently the classic medical treatment of syphilis has consisted of mercury, modified and alternated with the potassium-iodide compound. The partial destruction and demoralization, however, of the vital and structural constitution of patients thus treated has been a source of stimulation to the scientific imagination of the doctors to discover some more reliable remedy with less disastrous reactions to the 'cured.'

"Finally, Prof. Ehrlich of Germany, as the crowning result of his series of 606 clinical experiments, introduced a new remedy through which the syphilitic world is to receive its lasting salvation. The very name 'salvarsan' is a derivative from the Latin word salvare, which means salvation, and indicates plainly the faith the doctor himself placed in his prospective cures. That the remedy, however, did not bear out the bold prophecy of its name is demonstrating itself with disastrous surety in the constantly increasing numbers of its ominous mistakes. The long trail of human sufferers with their lives hopelessly wrecked through the ravages of unforeseen reactions from the arsenical serum treatment, is comparable only to the similar effects that followed the tuberculosis cures of the once famous but now obsolete Dr. Freidman discovery.

"Now salvarsan, though a highly complex agent, has its main curative value in the 25 per cent arsenic which enters its compound. Its power of affecting syphilis lies in the affinity between the arsenic atom and the albuminous accumulations in the syphilis-invaded tissues. And, as it is these albuminous deposits in the syphilitic field that cause the blockade of the involved lymph-spaces and capillaries, which in its turn leads to vascular stagnation and

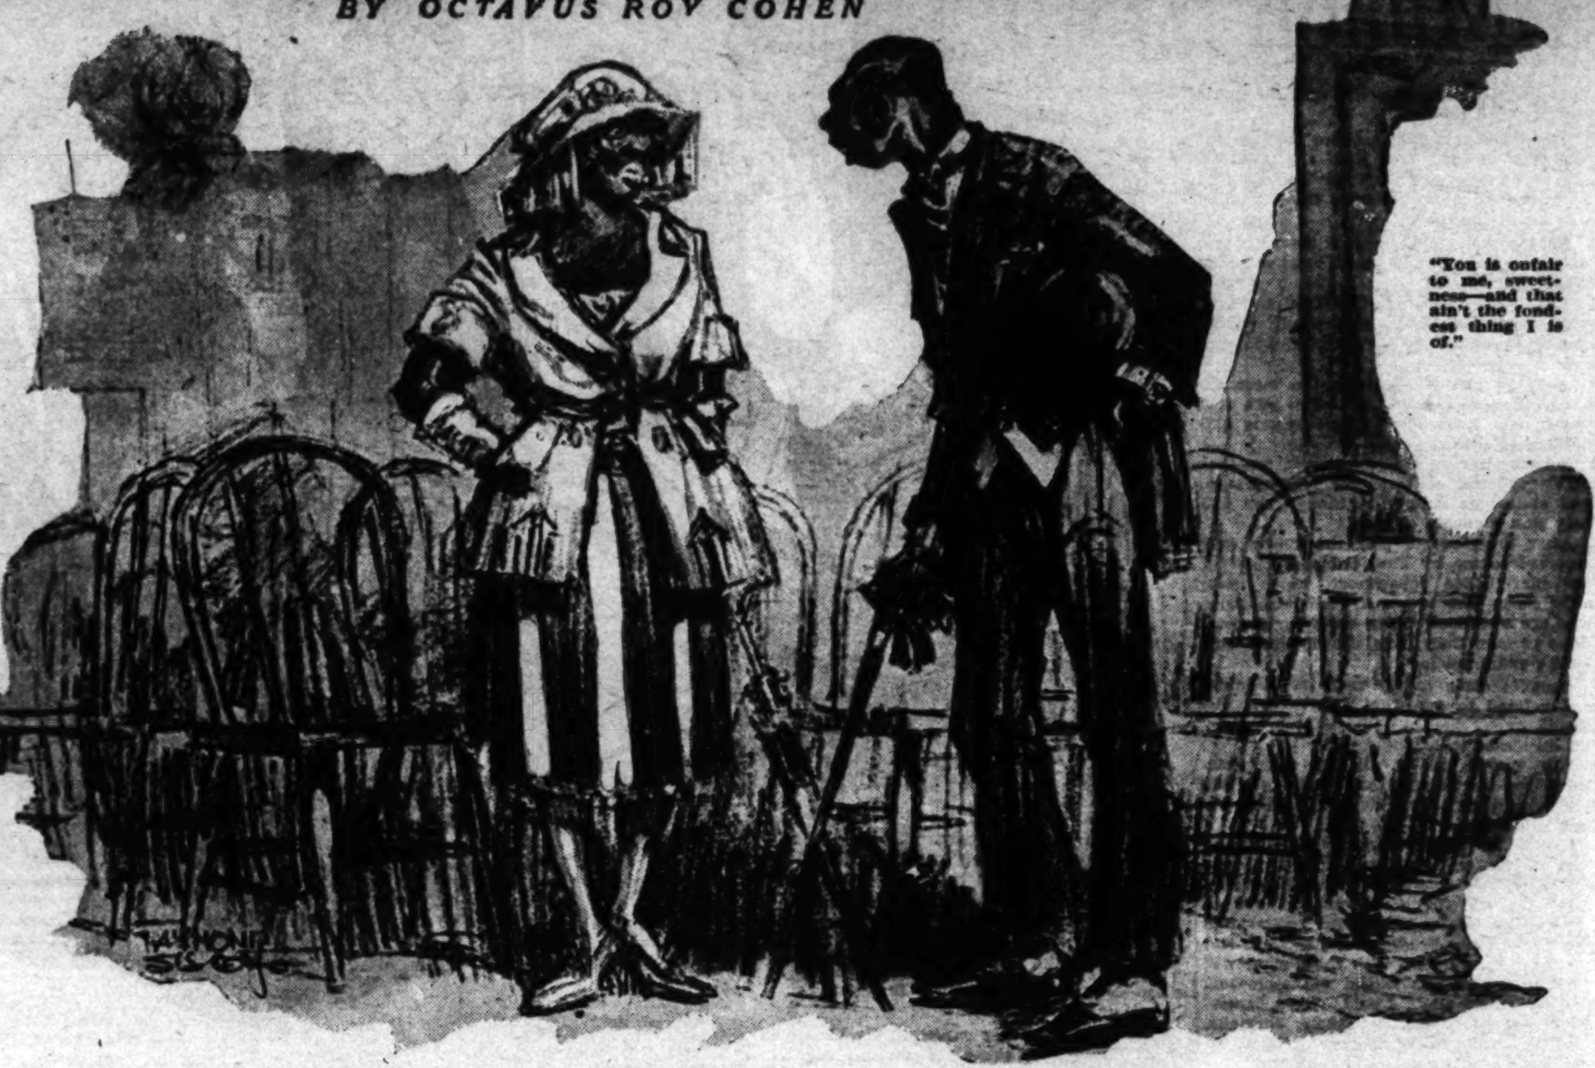
Fifty-Fifty-Fifty

BY OCTAVUS ROY COHEN



"You is onfair to me, sweetness—and that ain't the fondest thing I is of."

In the Classic Words of Mr. Sidney Skigg to Miss Maudlin Weskit, "Is We Is, or Is We Ain't?"

SIDNEY SKIGG majestically trod the rostrum and oozed oratory.

This was the organization meeting of the Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies, and Sidney Skigg was the inspired organizer. As he gazed the length and breadth of the hall upon the sea of eager, feminine Afro-American faces he knew that his project could not fail, that once more in a rather hectic career he was to be made affluent as the result of an inspiration. His fervid voice rolled sonorously over the gathering:

"An' so, my dear Sister'n, I says to you that us is gwine come into our own—an' also somebody else's own. It's like the poeck says: 'T'gether we stan's an' diwided we ain't worth nothin'.' Also, 'In unions there is strength,' an' what we is gwine be is the mostest pow'ful union which is, on account the white folks ain't gwine know nothin' 'bout us bein' unioned.

"So I says to you now: All of you ladies is got jobs. Some of you is cooks an' some of you is nusses, an' some of you jes' wuks. But they ain't ary one of you which ain't willin' to git mo' money than what you now gits fo' doin' the same 'mount of wuk. An' the 'Malgamated Order of Laborin' Ladies is gwine see to it that you does that same.

"What you does is this: You jines up heah t'night. It don cos' you 'ary cent—not now n'r never. You signs up an' you takes a solemn oath which you won't never go to heavom if'n you busts it. An' that oath says that at the end of th'ee months ev'y one of you goes to the white lady which you wuks fo' an' says you is gwine quit yo' job!"

He paused impressively. There was a startled, unbelieving gasp from the enthralled assemblage, a nervous twisting in chairs. Withholding momentarily the bombshell he was about to explode, Sidney Skigg's eyes sought the dusky face of the fair Maudlin Weskit, who was seated on the aisle four rows back from the rostrum. Sidney dumbly pleaded with Maudlin to take note of his greatness. But Maudlin discouraged him with a stern stare of intransigeant disapproval. Yet she was interested, they were all interested, and nearly 800 pairs of eyes focused upon the face of the dapper orator and tensely waited his further explanations.

"Now lis'en at me close. Th'ee months fum t'night ev'y one of you says to yo' white folks that you is quittin'. You says that—an' tha's all what you says. By that time we is gwine have a thousan' members, ev'y one of 'em fine cullud ladies, which wuks on'y fo' quality folks. An' what you reckon happens when all them cullud ladies prognosticates to quit? What you reckons happens, huh? I asts you!"

He hesitated dramatically, then waved his muscular arms wildly.

"I'se tellin' you wha's gwine happen. is that 'bout th'ee or fo' hund'ed of them white ladies ain't gwine let you quit. They ain't gwine 'low it. An' when they says you ha'n't ought to quit an' why is you quittin' you says, 'Jes quitten,' tha's all!' An' then they asts you will you keep yo' job if'n they gives you a dollar a week raise!"

Came a tentative handclapping. The audience was beginning to catch the drift of Mr. Skigg's scheme.

"An' so," continued the spellbinder enthusiastically. "Mebbe two hund'ed, th'ee hun'ed, gits a dollar a week raise, an' you is jes' that much better off. An' them which the white folks lets quit, they comes down to the office of the 'Malgamated Order of Laborin' Ladies an' reports that they ain't got no job. An' tha's where I comes in. On account I keeps a record of all jobs an' the wages which each cullud lady gits in said job. So happens it that one five-dollar-a-week cook is 'lowed to quit, I sen's her to a lady which also she let a five-dollar-a-week cook quit, an' that white lady gits her another girl at the same price. In other words, them two gals jes swaps jobs, an' not neither one of 'em loses mo'n a day's wuk, an' they gits a heap of spe'ience tryin' out new jobs. An', Sister'n, I'se tellin' you, sooner or later ev'y white lady is gwine git her a gal under this plan, which she is gwine give her a raise instid of losin' her!

"So it seems to me that we not on'y is doin' you cullud ladies a favor, but we is also doin' the white folks a favor on account of 'wentually ev'y white lady gits her a gal which she jes nachelly likes so much she cain't let her go. An' that means that ev'y one of you cullud gals is gwine be gittin' mo' money than what you is now, you ain't never gwine be 'thouht no jobs—an' times is gwine be less harder'n what they now is!"

He stepped back, smiling triumphantly. For a few seconds silence held—then came a wild, tumultuous outburst of applause. And Sidney Skigg knew that he had won.

"An' now I reckon you-all desiahs to know where I comes in at, on account I thunk of this idee rightouten my own haid an' does all the wuk. Sister'n, I is a flanthropist. I asts no money—not none a tall. It don' cos' you one single penny to jine up. You jines an' you takes the swear-oath an' all what I gets out of it is a share in them raises which you gits fum the white folks. At the end of th'ee months ev'y Sister which gits a raise pays me twenty-five pussent of that raise s'long's she gits it. In other words she pays me twenty-five cents out of ev'y dollar she gits mo' than what she got befo.' An' then ev'y dollar raise she gits after that fust raise, she pays me on'y ten cents. Jes' one lil thin, measly dime. Rememberin' this, Sisters—you ain't payin' me outen yo' wages—you is payin' me exclusive outen the profits I gits fo' you! An' now, the lis's is open. I asts you to fawm on the right an' come hence to sign yo' names an' take them oaths. Come one—come all!"

They came. They fought to inscribe their names on the list. Here was something new, something which guaranteed profit and exacted toll only from that profit. It never occurred to them that this was a very good thing indeed for the astute Mr. Sidney Skigg. The fact that at the end of three months he stood to derive an enormous weekly income did not bother them. In the first place, that was three months in the future. And there wasn't a woman present who was not willing to join any society which exacted no payment in advance.

At midnight only a half-dozen women were left in the hall. And the last one to sign was Miss Maudlin Weskit. She appeared on the list as the 761st member.

Sidney Skigg had wilted visibly under the strain. He was slumped in a chair, with only the fire of exaltation in his eyes giving evidence of his triumph. For awhile he had forgotten Maudlin, but now as she reached for the pen and muttered the oath of fealty he rose and stood beside her.

"I'se pow'ful glad you has jined up, Maudlin."

Her nose became slightly elevated. "I ain't jinin' up cause'n you is the organizer, Mistuh Skigg. I'se jinin' up on account all my frin's is done so."

He gazed at her with worshipful eyes. And then, assuring himself that they were alone in the hall, his hand covered hers.

"Honey."

Her hand was removed suddenly and completely. "You honey yo' ownse'f."

"But sweetness."

"When you talks to me, Mistah Skigg, I reques' that you addresses me polite."

"But Maudlin—ain't we engage'?"

"I ain't said we ain't."

"But you ain't sayin' we is."

"I ain't sayin' nothin'."

"Well," desperately, "is we is, or is we ain't?"

"I reckon you should ought to know, Mistuh Skigg. If'n you mean, was we engage', I answers that we was."

"But, honeybunch—ain't us gwine an' bought furniture t'gether to put in our house when we gits one?"

"Huh!" She injected a world of scorn into the exclamation. "Says which?"

"Says ain't we bought furniture t'gether? Fo' hund'ed dollars' worth?"

"No!" She bit off the word violently. "Says we stahted to buy furniture, but ever sence you paid them fust fifty dollars—I sifted, bolted or exhausted with respect to the quantity of mineral salts found in them before such treatment, are capable of furnishing all the mineral salts that health demands.'

CARE OF THE BODY

"The stupidity of this conclusion should be obvious even to the most thoughtless.

"Mineral salts do appear in the waste matter thrown off by the body during a refined-food diet, not because they are not required by the body, but because the work that nature intended them to perform has been performed.

"Even in starvation mineral salts are thrown off by the body. In tuberculosis more calcium is found in the body's waste than is consumed in the food, showing that the body is actually draining its own resources in its search for this essential mineral.

"Any child can understand the fact that the captain, mate, engineer and crew all get off the ship at the completion of its voyage. Certainly the act of disembarking does not mean that their services were not essential to the movement of the vessel during its voyage.

"Many experimenters have succeeded in establishing the folly of the absurd conclusions to the contrary, and men and women in search of health should never lose sight of the fact that although references to the truth rarely appear in popular literature, the truth is none the less a conclusive matter of record.

"Bunge, for instance, has demonstrated the value of the mineral salts of the bran of wheat in promoting the growth of young animals, as compared with the deficiency of refined white bread in this respect. Bunge's experiments have been repeated in New York City during the last two years fully a hundred times.

"Whether two and two be added at Coney Island or at the North Pole, the results are always the same. What Bunge demonstrated as professor of physiological chemistry at Bale University is just as true in Hoboken or Sioux City as it has been true throughout the world and always will be.

"He divided eight young albino rats of the same litter and approximately of the same size, as measured by their weight in grams, into two groups of four rats each. One group was fed on white bread, the mineral salt content of which had been reduced to .0015 per cent iron, .045 per cent calcium and .28 per cent phosphorus.

"These mineral salts derived from the refined white bread consumed by the rats were found in the waste thrown off by them. The other group was fed on whole-wheat bread which contained .0055 per cent iron, .077 per cent calcium and .90 per cent phosphorus.

"If you will take a second look at the two groups of figures noted above you will observe that the rats fed on the whole-wheat bread found in their diet nearly four times as much iron as was found by the white-bread rats, nearly twice as much calcium, and more than three times as much phosphorus.

"The rats that ate the whole-wheat bread were not only more lively than those fed on the white bread, but they grew more rapidly.

"Their blood at the end of the experiment contained a larger quantity and a higher percentage of hemoglobin. In other words, not only was their blood richer in hemoglobin, but it was of better quality.

"Hemoglobin is the red coloring matter of the blood, the lack of which is described as anemia.

"It was quite clear to Bunge, and to everybody else who has followed his experiments, that the tissue-sweetening and growth-promoting properties of the outer layers of the whole wheat were utilized by the rats in the production of bone, muscle and blood.

"It was also quite clear that the rats fed on the whole-wheat bread which contained all of the wheat were much better nourished than those fed on the white bread from which three-fourths of the original mineral salts are sifted and bolted out.

"It will be remembered that at the beginning of the experiment all the rats were equally well nourished. The loss of the mineral salts and of the vitamines with which the mineral salts are always associated in natural food was of such great importance to the rats, as it is of great importance to guinea pigs, rabbits, pigeons, chickens, monkeys and human beings, that its evil results were conspicuous in less than three weeks from the beginning of the experiment.

"Yet the sophists persist in saying: 'We are still convinced that because the rats discarded mineral salts in the daily waste excreted by them during a white-bread diet there were, therefore, more mineral salts present in the white bread than the rats really needed.'

"How about their health? How about their growth? They evidently needed more health and more growth than they got. They certainly needed more health and more growth than the white bread gave them.

"What did the whole-wheat bread contain that was missing in the white bread? Go back to those two tables of figures referred to above, and you will see what the whole-wheat bread contained.

"There is no mystery about this; no hocus pocus. The elements sifted and bolted out of the white bread were not sifted and bolted out of the whole-wheat bread. In the case of the white bread the sifting and bolting wasn't confined to the bread. The health and growth were sifted and bolted out of the rats.

"Not so much with the whole-wheat bread, from which nothing was bolted and sifted. The iron, calcium and phosphorus were left in. The health and growth of the rats were not disturbed. Other experiments, carried further along than Bunge carried his, prove that on the whole-wheat bread the rats thrive long after the white-flour bread rats are dead.

"Obviously there isn't a very wide margin of safety in a white-bread diet. The rats didn't find any in the Bunge experiment. They have never found any in our own laboratory.

"The refined dietary of many American families is characterized by a margin of safety just as narrow. This simple fact, which anybody can understand, though it is never considered in the so-called 'balanced-diet' philosophy, should inspire parents to include in the breadstuffs consumed by their children as much as possible of those parts of the grain rich in the elements of life, notwithstanding the practice of modern civilization in removing such elements.

"The presence of these elements which mean so much to the health of rats is of far more importance where the diet of children is concerned, for the reason that the effects produced on rats are precisely those produced on children.

"In the face of this truth it is impossible to ignore with feelings of comfort or safety the willful waste of a national milling system that takes 100 pounds of whole wheat, and, after bolting through grits gauze and sifting through silk cloths, reduces it to seventy pounds of refined white flour.

"The same hundred pounds of whole wheat will yield thirty pounds more of flour equal in nutritive value, pound for pound, if the tissue-sweetening mineral salts are ignored altogether, and a hundredfold superior if the tissue-sweetening salts are considered as they should be considered.

"It is indeed true, as some professors

VPO

—What do You Think of This One?

—This example of Radiant Health—ladies and gentlemen—is Duncan McNeil, Jr., of 3235 East 2nd Street, Los Angeles.

—Duncan has been a user of V P O since October 1923, when he was a near-victim of Poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), and, not being able to spell the word correctly his condition was considered very serious indeed.

—However, his mother, Mrs. Grace McNeil, with whom Duncan is making his home for the present, had heard about V P O, and succeeded in inducing him to try it, in conjunction with the natural food diet, with marvelous results.

—Interviewed by a V P O representative, young McNeil had nothing but praise for V P O, and, having a penchant for poetic expression, said—

"VPO,—VPO—Cured my toe!"

—Asked as to his views on the political situation, Mr. McNeil intimated that all parties were good—so long as he was invited, and got a second helping. There is a possibility that later Mr. McNeil will be a contender for the highest office in the land—perhaps as leader of the V P O party. If not, he has given some serious thought to embarking in the giant-hunting business, in which he claims to have achieved remarkable proficiency.

—Mr. McNeil, in spite of the fact that he is already three years old, still displays a filial respect and fondness for his parents, which appears to be mutual. He is shown in the accompanying photograph in an attitude of utter disregard to the threat by Mrs. W. S. Wilke that she would "eat 'm up."

—Certainly, V P O is good for children; and what is more, they like it! It's no longer necessary, mother, to force your kiddie to swallow some nasty, nauseating stuff against which the child's natural instinct causes it to rebel. When little tummies get out of order and need something out of a teaspoon to set them right, a little V P O will do the work—quickly—gently—effectively. And remember, mother, that V P O is just a simple, natural compound of herbs, scientifically blended, and equally good for the ailments of big and little folks.

Teacher's Pet

BY ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

A Story of the Age of Chivalry—A Somewhat Different Tale by a Famous Writer

"SHOULDER ARMS! 'Ten-shun! Forward, march! Halt! Fix bayonets!"

For a moment the leader of the gallant company stood in thoughtful silence. Hopelessly outnumbered, with certain destruction awaiting his forces should he lead them into the dreadful ambuscade, there was no thought of faltering in the multitude of his mental processes. But a man who is saying farewell to life may be pardoned if he snatches one moment from death to think upon his loved ones at home. Thank heaven that he had had a furlough only a month ago! The knowledge that they worshiped him as a hero nerved him now. Then, too, there were his general's words when he had sent the young officer on this forlorn hope:

"Capt. Dory, the United States of America will always remember that you volunteered like a hero to save this army. The rebels are hidden in yonder ravine. While they are killing you we'll sneak up behind them and will win the battle. They won't be expecting us. And I give you my personal word, Capt. Dory, that you will have the biggest funeral any Union man has ever had."

We can forgive him that he brushed away a tear as he thought of how those serried Union ranks burst into cheers as he strode away at the head of his little band of devoted followers. We can forgive him the swagger of his shoulders as he turned toward the waiting foemen and gave the order to charge. In his baggy Zouave breeches, with his hat pulled down over his eyes, and his sword aloft, he was, he felt, an inspiring figure, in his own personality representing the great ideal of freedom that had founded this mighty nation. To the group of girls who came around the corner he was just a boy.

"Oh, look at the soldier!" said one of them. She shrank close to her companions and her voice was raised in a tremolo of fear. "He's all bloody," she cried. "I bet he's killed a million rebels already this afternoon."

She left the sheltering embrace of her giggling companions and walked to the curbstone. She stretched out her arms appealingly.

"'Shoot if you must this old gray head, but spare your country's flag,'" she said.

The fictitious gore with which she had smeared him could have made the young warrior's cheeks no redder than they were now. His sword-arm dropped to his side and his shoulders seemed to shrink together. "Aw, you think you're smart, Eloise Dennison."

Careless that she might ruin her stockings, the young girl now knelt upon the sidewalk. She stretched her arms wider and tossed her head back. "Have pity on a lone woman," she cried.

Twelve is a sensitive age. Roderick Dory could have endured mere insults and jibes from the black-haired beauty who taunted him, and would have been able to think up retorts that soon would have reduced her to tears and sent her away from the field of battle in shameful defeat. But this was a subtle form of insult new to his experience, and he found himself unable to cope with it. "I wish you was my sister," was all he could say.

The voice of Eloise became soft and cooing. "I wish you was my little baby brother," she said. "I'd get you some nice doll soldiers, and I'd dress you up—oh, so pretty that all the girls would want to kiss you—"

"I'd like to see 'em try," growled Roderick.

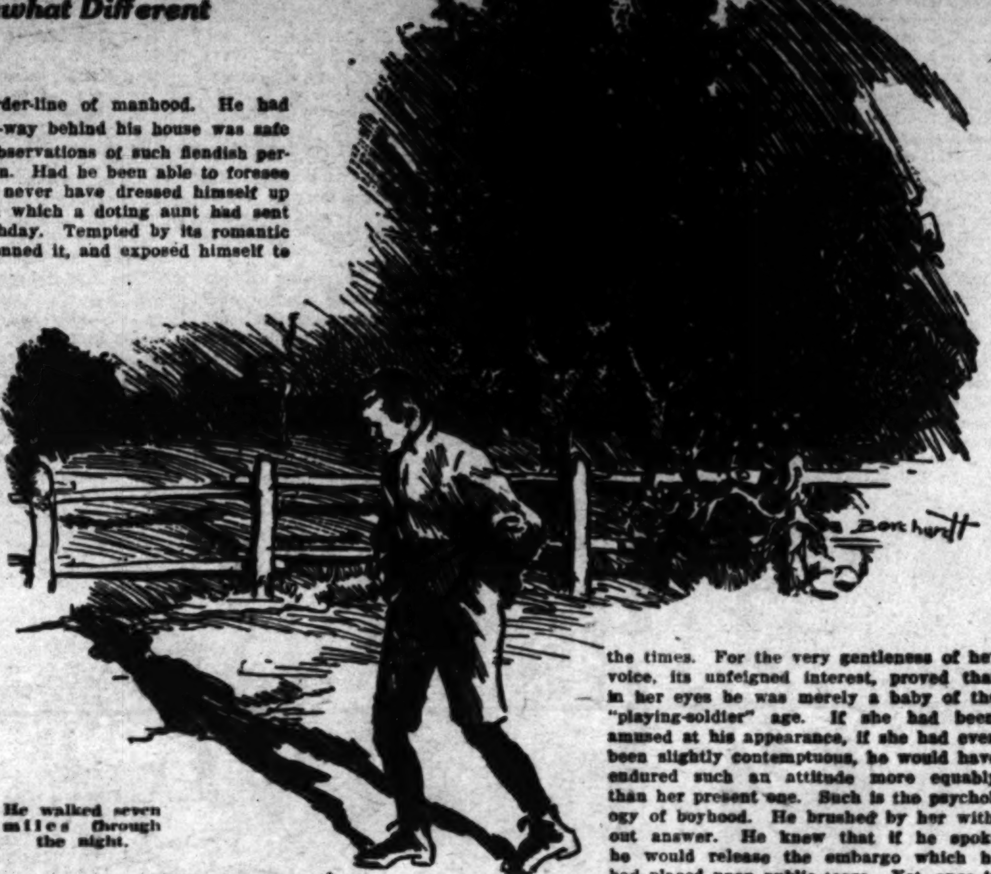
Eloise, still kneeling, turned her lissom body at the waist. In tones that were now thrillingly deep she spoke to her companions. "He wants us to kiss him," she said. "Let's!"

Roderick looked over his shoulder. The imaginary company which he had been about to lead to slaughter no longer existed. He was just a self-conscious little boy who had been reading of the landing of troops in Cuba, and who knew that he really was too old to dress up as a soldier. Twelve is on the border-line of manhood. He had thought that this alley-way behind his house was safe from the desecrating observations of such fiendish persons as Eloise Dennison. Had he been able to foresee her coming, he would never have dressed himself up in the Zouave uniform which a doting aunt had sent him on his recent birthday. Tempted by its romantic possibilities, he had donned it, and exposed himself to the humiliaiton which now he endured. "I just wish you was a boy," he cried.

Eloise's eyebrows lifted. "Why, Roddy dear, if I was a boy I wouldn't play with babies."

The quickness and certainty of her wit drove him to the verge of madness. Because there are certain rudenesses one can't be guilty of to a girl, one must suffer. Impotent, choking, fiery red, he stared at the giggling group.

"Spare me," cried Eloise. Once again she faced him with her arms spread.



He walked seven miles through the night.

A group of women came around the corner; they stopped and burst into laughter at the scene of burlesque emotion which met their eyes. Roddy looked at them; if there had been real enemies lurking in a real ravine, he would have leaped upon their bayonets with joy. For these ladies were teachers in the school which he and the girls attended. He knew that grown-ups could make a boy's life infinitely more unendurable than even his fellows.

What a chamber of torment his classroom would be converted into if these ladies, if Miss Tennant especially, chose! Now Mildred Tennant had a little brother of her own. She was one of those rare adults who understand how soul-crushing are the humiliations of childhood. She forced back her own mirth.

"Why, Roddy, what a wonderful uniform!" She turned to the other teachers. "I think that when our country is at war, it is glorious to know that even our young boys think of themselves as soldiers and are prepared to fight for their flag." She turned to Eloise. "Playing actress?" she asked.

That was all; smiling, she walked on, and the other teachers followed. They were not so quick as Miss Tennant, but they followed her more perceptive lead. It was a little thing that she had done, yet it had restored manhood to Roddy and had made Eloise a little girl. The boy stared after her with adoration in his eyes. Then he turned to Eloise. "Move on, you kids," he said gruffly. "Can't you see I'm busy?"

Mildred Tennant's casual manner had been impressive. She had not seemed to note that Eloise was making fun of Roddy. Eloise somehow felt that she was the absurd one, not Roddy. The girls "moved on."

He waited until the girls were out of sight. He even went half-heartedly through the pretense of leading a charge against the hidden rebels in the mythical ravine. But the fire had gone from his play. He knew that he was too old for this sort of thing. Only an extreme pride enabled him to continue even for a moment. A boy must save his face, even to himself. In such ways we save our souls.

But when he reached the gate that led into his own back yard, he turned and ran swiftly into the house. On the landing, one flight up, he encountered his mother.

"Well, how many of the enemy did my little hero kill today?" she asked.

She was just the finest mother in all the world, but there were times when he felt that he and she were spiritually as far apart as the poles. This was one of the times. For the very gentleness of her voice, its unfeigned interest, proved that in her eyes he was merely a baby of the "playing-soldier" age. If she had been amused at his appearance, if she had even been slightly contemptuous, he would have endured such an attitude more equably than her present one. Such is the psychology of boyhood. He brushed by her without answer. He knew that if he spoke he would release the embargo which he had placed upon public tears. Yet, once in his own room, he gave himself unreservedly to the sobs of shame.

He stripped the offending uniform from his body and threw himself upon his bed. Years later he would remember this scene and smile with pitying understanding. For in those later years he would come to understand that no man ever ceases to play soldier. He would know that in the mind of every adult is a picture of himself, or herself vastly different from the image which presents itself to the world. For there is no failure so complete but that he imagines a quick turn of circumstances which will make him a world figure.

Roddy, lying upon the bed, slowly ceased his sobbing. He had had a miraculous escape from gross and public humiliation. An angel had come down from heaven itself and with certain magic words routed his foes. For certainly Miss Mildred Tennant was nothing less than an angel. Up to now he had looked at her with that healthy feeling of enmity with which every normal boy looks at the guardians of the school room.

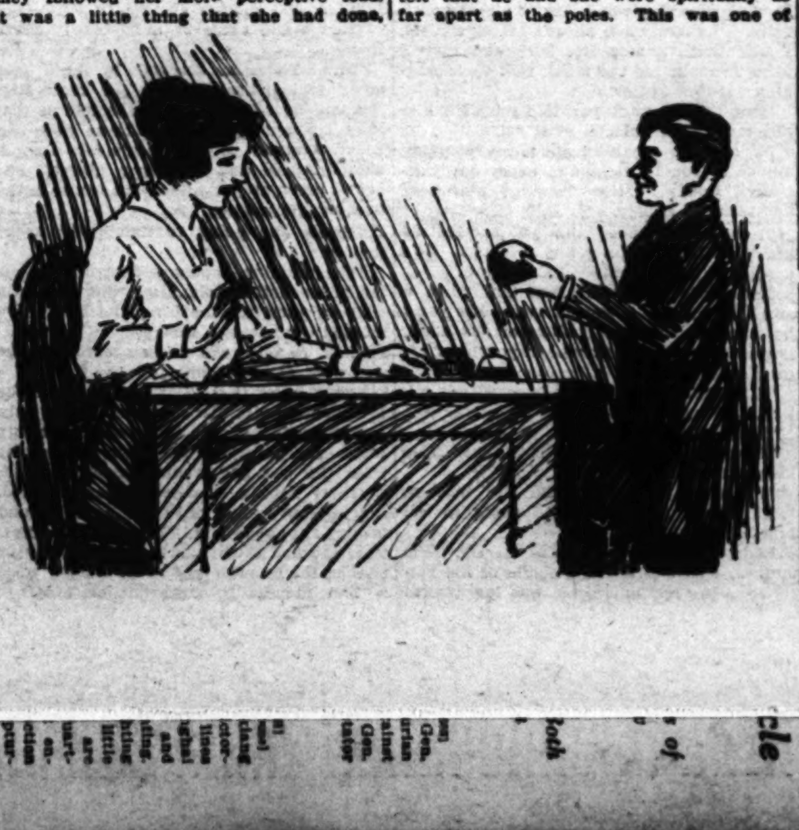
He and she were opponents; not from choice but through circumstance. Had anyone an hour ago told Roddy Dory that he had within him those elements which made up a teacher's pet he would have resented the statement with all possible vigor of mind and body. Yet now, as he lay upon his bed, he gave himself over entirely to degradation.

Funny that it had never occurred to him before that Miss Tennant was very beautiful. He was at the age when only grotesque ugliness attracted his attention. Persons who were not freaks impressed themselves upon his imagination not at all. Of course he had always known dimly that Eloise was extremely pretty. But his regard for her, of which he was hardly conscious, was based more upon her masculine qualities than upon her femininity. Eloise, until the last year or so, had been able to meet Roddy himself upon almost equal terms.

Like every other male of the species he believed in his ability to hide the fact of his devotion to one of the other sex. Thus, next morning, he swaggered with a great assumption of carelessness up to Miss Tennant's desk.

"Had an extra apple today; dunno how it got in my lunch box; Nora musta put it there by mistake; she oughta know I never eat two apples; you might as well have it as anyone else."

He placed the apple on her desk and



CARE OF THE BODY

BY PHILIP M. LOVELL, N.D.

Tuberculosis

I STATED in a recent issue that I would write on tuberculin. What is tuberculin?

I gave you a definition several issues ago in which I explained that tuberculin is a beef-broth culture of bacillus tuberculosis.

For you to understand tuberculin more fully it will be necessary to go a bit more elaborately into the technique of the bacteriological laboratory.

It is a relatively easy task to grow germs.

Like the animal, given an environment of proper temperature, moisture, and adequate good supply, they thrive and flourish.

An immense amount of experiment in the laboratory has demonstrated that most of the diseased germs flourish at about body temperature if given nutrition of beef bouillon or milk. These two fluids constitute the best medium of growth for laboratory cultures of germs.

In the case of tuberculin, to secure the original culture, the doctor swabs the patient's throat with sterile cotton and dips the secretion taken from the throat into a bouillon broth. He grows this for several days. Some bacteria multiply every twenty minutes, so you can see that within forty-eight hours or thereabouts, where he originally had a few germs, he now has an immense number.

By other means of technique which do not interest us at present, he separates all other germs from the tuberculosis bacteria, leaving what is known as a pure culture.

The number of these germs present in a few drops of the bouillon runs into the billions.

When the bouillon is thoroughly saturated with these tiny microscopic scavengers, the doctor has a good bouillon culture suitable for the manufacture of tuberculin.

Heating this beyond the bacterial death point, he changes the living germs into dead ones.

Disregarding a few negligible minor points in its manufacture, this almost saturated solution of the dead bodies of billions of tuberculosis germs in a few drops of bouillon constitutes tuberculin.

Tuberculin is used by orthodox medicine for two general purposes, diagnostic and in treatment.

Fortunately, its use in treatment is fast disappearing, as most reputable, thinking physicians no longer use it.

For diagnostic purposes it is still prevalent in the determination of a tubercular condition in dairy cattle, but even here its diagnostic accuracy is uncertain and unsettled.

If the doctor wanted to determine whether a patient was tubercular or not he would take about one-fourth of a cubic centimeter of tuberculin and inject it into the skin.

If no reaction occurred, and the patient had neither fever nor the formation of a hard lump at the point of inoculation, then the diagnosis was negligible, that is, no tuberculosis.

If fever occurred and a hard little tubercular nodule formed at the spot of the injection, the diagnosis was positive, that is, there was a tubercular condition present.

What is the medical theory behind tuberculin treatment?

Why is it that tens of thousands of physicians have fallen to the lures of its hypothetical deductions

All bacteriological practices in medicine are based upon what seems at first evidence to be fairly plausible theory.

A great deal of medical research and experimentation has established a theory that certain anti-bodies or protecting substances form in the blood when bacteria enter the body.

The theory goes on to state that these protecting substances destroy bacteria; that they are specific in nature. By this is meant, new kind of anti-bodies are formed to combat each different kind of germ entering the body.

To make the mental picture plainer, tubercular anti-bodies are formed to fight bacillus tuberculosis, typhoid anti-bodies to fight bacillus typhosus, diphtheria anti-bodies to fight bacillus diphthericus, etc., for each and every germ existing in living nature.

This theory would of itself be relatively harmless because at the best it is a splendid piece of imagination, but it was necessary that practical usage be made of it and the theory was enlarged so that it could be put to practical use.

After this hypothesis orthodox medicine busied itself with the problem of how to increase the number and strength of these anti-bodies so as to make the body resistant to invading bacteria.

They took the blood of animals and human beings, placed it in test tubes, and measured the ability of this test-tube blood to destroy bacteria.

This was measured in definite units, calling it the opsonic index, which, in layman's language, means the relative capacity of the blood to destroy bacteria.

If the blood quickly destroyed the bacteria, the opsonic index was high. If, however, it destroyed the bacteria slowly, the opsonic index was low.

Understand, this was all test-tube experiment!

Then they proceeded to inoculate animals, then human beings, with the germs of tuberculosis.

They took the blood of the animals and human beings who had been inoculated. In the test tube they found that those animals and human beings who had received inoculations of germs had a higher opsonic index than those who had not been inoculated.

This in essence is the theoretical foundation upon which is based the tuberculin treatment. To be clear, according to this theory, if we inject dead or living germs into our blood stream, the opsonic index or disease-fighting power of the blood is increased.

In the book I am writing I am going into considerable length to show the fallacy of this belief. But suffice to say that tremendous human experimentation in private practice, in clinics, and in the large sanatoriums has proved this treatment harmful and health-destroying.

Let us consider a few of the more self-evident phases of the inoculation treatment.

If we were to grant "for discussion's sake only" the medical hypothesis that germs are responsible for disease, the theory of tuberculin must fall flat. Tuberculin is nothing more than a culture of germs.

If germs cause disease, why inject germs into a healthy blood stream?

If poison is a poison, it acts as a poison in large and small quantities, the only difference being in its relative potency and injurious effects.

Tuberculin is the injection of small doses of the germ, and if large doses destroy life, small doses are most assuredly injurious.

Medical logic reasons otherwise.

It states that when large quantities of germs enter the body, tuberculosis results, but if we inject small quantities a cure results.

Can anything be more illogical!

It would be just as sensible to state that the best way to cure a whisky toper would be to give him small glassfuls instead of large tumblerfuls.

From the hygienic viewpoint the cure of tuberculosis must lie in an absolutely clean blood stream. A blood stream which is loaded with bacillus tuberculosis, whether it is caused by tuberculin injections or general infection, must clean itself before healing can take place.

There must be no germs in the blood stream to accomplish a cure, and it seems to me out of reason to place germs of tuberculosis in a blood stream that we want to keep clean.

Growth and Strength Through Food

IF YOU were to ask me for the name of an individual who has accomplished more for the pure-food and good-health move- the pure food and good health movement ment than any other individual in this country, I would unhesitatingly say Alfred W. McCann of New York City.

Together with Dr. Harvey Wiley he has wielded an influence on the pure-food movement that shows itself in a tremendous reformation of modern food industry as contrasted with food manufacture of twenty years ago.

His books are masterpieces of pure-food literature and to those of you who are interested in this question, I give my sincere indorsement to his works.

The article following, written by him, was published in a magazine called Strength.

"Individuals who are brought to their senses through illness and who, therefore, begin to substitute thoughtful consideration for careless indifference in all matters relating to health, find little difficulty in grasping the full significance of the value of natural foods.

"By the phrase 'natural foods' they learn that what is meant is nothing more than foods containing the mineral salts with which Nature herself endows them.

"Individuals whose interest in 'natural foods' has not been aroused through pain or physical infirmity are prone to go on in their neglect of the importance of the phrase, and of the still greater importance of applying its significance to the selection of their daily diet.

"They frequently see in print the assertion that 'no one need bother about the mineral salts of food for the reason that everybody gets all the mineral salts that have ever been needed or ever will be needed from ordinary food and water.'

"Such assertions are sometimes fortified by references to laboratory experiments in which it is shown that no matter what kind of food is consumed, mineral salts are thrown off in the waste products of the body thus 'proving' that the quantity taken into the body even in the consumption of refined food is actually more than the body needs, otherwise mineral salts wouldn't be thrown off by the body at all.

"The absurdity of these conclusions, and the dangerous results that follow in the wake of the misleading principles to which they give rise ought to arouse indignation of physicians and hospital authorities all over the world.

"The worthlessness of the experiments upon which such conclusions are founded is indicated by the fact that they are intended to demonstrate the difference between the absorption of the body of phosphorus, iron and calcium salts from genuine whole-grain bread, and the absorption of the same mineral salts from the same quantity of refined white-flour bread.

"The experimenters collect the waste matter thrown off by the body during a white-flour diet and show in it the presence of mineral salts.

"'Now you see,' they assert, 'that these mineral salts would not be present if the body could have used them all up. The very fact that they have been rejected and thrown off by the body indicates that, however necessary they may be to the maintenance of health, they nevertheless are found even in refined food in larger quantity than the body actually needs.

"'For this reason,' they conclude, 'it is quite positive that refined foods, however

For answer, Roddy walked down the steps and advanced upon the school bully.

walked off, still swaggering. He thought this swagger and the gruff speech would deceive. He was oblivious to the glances and whispered comments of the other pupils. Love is not merely blind; it is deaf. But deafness is relative. A boy in love may be deaf to whispers; he cannot be deaf to shrieks that split the atmosphere. At recess-time Roddy emerged from the schoolhouse to find awaiting him a group of children. In the van were Eloise and his sister Angela. Eloise had pulled her scant skirts about her in imitation of the lady of that period. Before her, in an attitude that proved that Eloise was not the only potential emotional actress of the neighborhood, stood Angela.

"Miss Tennant, I ado-ah you-ah," shrieked Angela.

Eloise extended a kindly hand and patted the smaller girl upon the head. "I ado-ah you-ah, Roddy darling," said Eloise. "To-morrow you may bring a bunch of grapes."

It was the supreme height of juvenile wit which Angela and Eloise had attained. Shrieks of delight, of joy too poignant almost to be borne, greeted their burlesque.

As one turned to stone, Roddy stood upon the schoolhouse steps and stared at them. What an utter fool he had been to think that he could keep from the keen eyes of Eloise the secret of his shame! If he could only leap upon these two feminine friends and strangle them. . . . Out of the shrieks that came from the throats of eighty children he suddenly was able to distinguish one.

"Roddy Dory is a teacher's pet, teacher's pet, teacher's pet!"

It was Jimmy Higgins who chanted the infamous accusation. He was 14 years old and hulkingly overgrown. His voice had "changed" in the last few months, and its bass qualities drowned all other voices. The children turned delightedly to him; they took up the chant and cried it in, it seemed to Roddy, every possible note of the scale. Desperate needs require desperate remedies. Jimmy Higgins was the undisputed bully of the school. Only a few weeks ago, in a moment of petulance he had slapped Roddy's face until the younger lads ears rang. Meekly he had taken a thrashing, and it had never entered into his head to defend himself against such hopelessly overwhelming odds.

But now he knew, with an embryonic flash of that genius, which would in later life make him a personage of consequence, that, unless he gave his fellows something more thrilling to talk about, the hateful cry of "teacher's pet" would would resound in his ears for months to come. As in a later day he would control a hostile audience, so now he controlled this one. He held up his hand and the boys and girls were silent.

"I can lick any boy in this school that calls me a teacher's pet," he announced.

Eighty pairs of eyes widened; then, as though set upon one neck, they turned and stared at Jimmy Higgins. That youth responded to the challenge. "Does that mean me?" he asked.

For answer Roddy walked down the steps and advanced upon the school bully. He wasted no precious breath in words; he struck with all his might.

It was Miss Tennant herself, drawn to the scene by the shrieks of four-score children, who separated the gladiators. Jimmy Higgins was entirely too big for Roddy. But he was winning the sort of victory which is so costly that one does not care to achieve several of them. For while Roddy's left eye was purple and puffed, and his lips were cut, Jimmy's nose was bleeding, and it was swollen most alarmingly. Also the bigger boy's right cheek was marked. He would never invite Roddy Dory to battle again. There is no fun or profit in whipping a boy who does not know when he is whipped.

Aching, bruised and bleeding, Roddy Dory was happy. He knew that Jimmy Higgins would not call him a teacher's pet again, and that no other boy would utter words that the school bully refused to speak. As for the girls—he didn't care about them. He had proved his manhood to the boys and that was enough.

From the weeping Eloise, who had summoned her to the scene of battle, Miss Tennant had learned the cause of the fight. Jimmy Higgins could be left to his own teacher to be dealt with; Miss Tennant had no control over him. But she kept Roddy Dory after school. "I'm not going to punish you, Roddy," she told him. "In fact, I think that you were very brave to fight a boy so much bigger than yourself."

The boy beamed upon her. He had made no mistake when he had given his love to this glorious woman who understood. "Aw, he ain't anything wonderful," he said boastfully. "I guess while he was gettin' a meal, I was takin a mouthful here and there." Miss Tennant hid the mirth that such bragging aroused in her.

"But I don't want you to fight with him any more," she said.

"If he says anything about my bringing apples to you I'll fight him every day," declared Roddy. Miss Tennant stared at her youthful adorer.

"I think," she said, "that you are just as brave as the man I'm going to marry. He's a soldier; he's fighting in Cuba now."

Now it is a peculiar fact that when a small boy loves a woman twice his years he is not in the least jealous of any adult, however envious he may be of youths of his own generation.

"A soldier!" said Roddy in awed admiration. "What's the name?"

"Lieut. Albert Connors."

"I bet he'll be a general if the war lasts long enough," said Roddy.

"I bet he will too,' said the teacher. "And in my next letter I'm going to tell him all about you."

Roddy Dory walked home on air. His mother, who had heard the tale of his battle from the lips of Angela, was too wise to rebuke him, although her heart ached at sight of his battered countenance. And at the table that night his father had great difficulty in concealing his warm admiration for his son.

"Fighting is very wrong," said Mr. Dory. "I'm dead against it, Roddy. I understand that this Higgins boy is a lot bigger than you."

"He's 14, and two inches taller," said Roddy.

"And I understand that you were still going strong when the teacher stopped you," said Mr. Dory.

Mrs. Dory frowned at her husband. "Fighting isn't nice," she said. Her rebuke was addressed to her husband and that gentleman colored becomingly. He changed the subject hastily.

"Well, we licked the Spaniards again yesterday," he said. "Evening paper says our boys killed three hundred of them; we lost fifty men. Two officers among them: Capt. Blakeney and Lieut. Connors."

Roddy stiffened in his chair. "What was Lieut. Connors's first name?"

"Why, was he a friend of yours?"

Roddy swallowed painfully. "Miss Tennant is going to marry a soldier named Lieut. Albert Connors."

Mr. Dory's memory had been accurate. There it was in the evening paper, the name of Miss Tennant's fiance under the caption, "Killed in action."

As though some one of his own family had been killed, Roddy received this verification. He could not finish his supper. He rose from the table and went to his own room. There a little later his mother came to him.

"Don't feel badly, Roddy dear," she said. "There may be some mistake, after all." What a wise mother she was!

"How could there be a mistake?" asked Roddy.

"Mrs. Thurston stopped by here just now," replied his mother. "You know Miss Tennant boards with her. She told us that Miss Tennant told her that there were two Lieut. Connors in the regiment. One is named Alfred and the other Albert. She hadn't given up yet, although she's seen the evening papers, too."

"How's she going to find out?" asked Roddy.

"The morning papers will give more detail," his mother told him. "She can only wait for them and hope for the best. You mustn't cry about it, Roddy."

Then, because she was as tactful as she was wise, she left him.

Roddy knew that Miss Tennant must be broken-hearted; his boy's mind vaguely comprehended the tortures of uncertainty which she must be undergoing. He rose from the bed and went downstairs. But, save for Angela, the house was deserted. It was Nora's night off, and his mother and father had gone out. He did not know where to find them, and he was rather glad of that, for he preferred to do himself what he had intended to suggest to his father.

It was 11 o'clock that night when a tired, footsore boy walked into the building that housed the Star newspaper. A stubborn office boy gave way, finally, when threatened with assault. The black eye and swollen lips of Roddy seemed to indicate that here was one who would back up words with deeds. He led Roddy to a man at a desk.

"I wanta know if you got any late news about which Lieut. Connors was killed in Cuba," said Roddy.

"Why? Relative of yours?" asked the man at the desk.

Roddy sat down. He had walked seven miles in three hours, and his eyes were heavy with sleep. Laboriously he explained why he asked the question. The man at the desk was kindly, he showed a great interest. Roddy did not understand what he meant when he said to another man, "Peach of a human-interest story," nor did he understand why a flashlight picture of himself should be taken. He only knew that finally he was informed that dispatches had come through from Cuba stating that neither Lieut. Connors had been killed, but that Alfred had been slightly wounded. He was too sleepy to understand why one of the men in the office not merely took him to the trolley car, but rode home with him. And long before he arrived home he was sound asleep. He was awakened in the morning, not by his mother or Nora but by his father. Mr. Dory had a newspaper in his hand. It was folded back so that Roddy saw his own picture.

"Well, young man," said his father, "you gave us all a scare last night. Your mother was terribly frightened. But I'm not going to scold you. When the rest of us were too dumb to do anything to spare that poor girl a night of horror, you did the only thing. She went to sleep last night knowing that the man she loved was safe. Doggone if I don't think there'd be sense in some one out here getting one of those telephones put in. I know they cost a lot, but they come in mighty handy."

But Roddy didn't hear him. He was immersed in reading the highly colored account of the young boy who, having no carfare, had walked seven miles through the night, over unfamiliar roads, to save a young woman a night of uncertainty. It was not a very heroic thing that he had done, but the newspaper reporter had chosen to think it so. He forgot Miss Tennant completely.

What would Eloise have to say about that? What other boy of Eloise's acquaintance had ever had his pictures in the paper? He guessed that ought to show her!

Lucille, too, recognizes me as a foreigner."

He paused and reflected; Lucille, who sang at a cafe chantant and had served to inspire much of his most esteemed work, had fallen foul of him the day before because of his failure to carry a trunk up three flights of stairs. Her manner of expressing herself had not been one that would fit into such a letter as this.

"For her I lack the qualities that are familiar in men; those which I possess, when they do not elude her, are alien and unprofitable. I carry them back with me to my own country this night.

"For the precious loan of your revolver (not finding you at home I discovered for myself the weapon you would not have refused me) I thank you. You can recover it in the morning.

"My friend Bates, hail and farewell!"

He read the letter through again and approved it; he would have been hurt if any one had told him he was enjoying himself. The last time he had decided on self-destruction Lucille had dissuaded him, with tears and entreaties, most satisfactorily. If anything now chilled at all his pleasure in the situation it was the dim inward sense, persistent through all his attitudinizing, that this time there was no one to interfere with him.

He folded the letter, and, passing into the adjoining bedroom, pinned it to the turnover of the sheet. Then, pocketing the big revolver—it went with difficulty into his jacket pocket under the black cloak—he turned out the lights and departed.

The concierge, still knitting, glanced at him from her box as he passed out. To her indignant surprise he gave her a gentle, a comprehending, almost a tender smile of good-by.

That dim inward sense of apprehension was still as he passed upon his way through the easy evening traffic of the streets; it was swamped and drownd out of his consciusness by a new impression. The folk who passed him unregarding, the big prosperous men who jostled him, and the women whose eyes passed him over indifferently, how they would have stopped and turned and stared, how their voices would have ceased while he went by to break out behind him in a cackle of excitement and wonder, if they had known the truth. The big revolver was under his elbow as he went; the weight and the touch of it gave him a sense of a vast superiority over these people who were content to go on living. They were the laity of the intellect; he was the initiate.

At the door of the cafe he was wont to frequent—one of the cafes, that is—he paused and reconnoitered. He saw that several of his acquaintances were there and among them—yes!—the lean figure and long, shaven, horse face of Bates! His new humor was irresistible; he must pass a final five minutes with these good people. Afterwards they would remember it and be humble. He swung his cloak into position and entered.

At a near-by table two men looked up and nodded and went on with their talk. Bates was one of a group of three and Guiscard went across to them. Bates, a leathery cosmopolitan of thirty, nodded carelessly likewise, till something in the little poet's gait and manner, a complacency that was almost pompous, took his eye and he broke into a slow grin.

"See who arrives," he said to his companions.

The poet stood over them. He, too, was smiling, with something of banter and condescension in his manner.

"Good evening, messieurs," he greeted them. "You permit that I share your table for the brief time I have—which I have to spare!"

It was incense to him, their noncomprehension of his inner, his secret meaning; he shared it like a confidence with the big iron means of death that knocked against his elbow as he held his cloak about him.

Bates was obtuse; he did not see that exquisite shade which the poet conveyed, that shade of one on the brink of the here and the hereafter.

"Naturally," he said, his long man of the earth's face widening in another infuriating grin. "Sit here for ten years, if you like, Gaston! We're leaving pretty soon."

The poet smiled again. "Me, too!" he said, as he chose a chair. "Sooner perhaps, than you!"

He sat. "Have a drink?" invited Bates.

"A drink—why not? A stirrup cup," replied Guiscard enthusiastically, his eyes rapt upon his host's face "Me—I will pour out this libation to your friendship, dear Bates. I will drink—yes. An absinthe, then!"

Bates gazed at him doubtfully. "You've had one or two already, haven't you?" he remarked. He beckoned the large blonde waiter and gave the order.

The poet sat above the aparatus of the drink, blissful, magnificent of spirit, superb in his secret knowledge of the brief future. It was charming to exhibit for the last time his proficiency in the exquisite art of the mixture—the arrangement of the filter spoon above the tumbler with the flat tabloid of beetroot sugar in it, and then the drip, drip, drip of the cold water from the carafe, changing the cold stone green of the absinthe below to shimmering hues of opalescence. In this art, too, there is scope for the soul of a poet, and he did it supremely, conscious that they watched him.

"They will remember," he boasted inwardly.

Bates, his long face dimly lit with the humor and kindliness within, had to speak.

"You strike me, Guiscard," he said—his French failing a little as he translated literally the idioms of his thought—"you strike me, when you fix your drink, like a man practicing the grip of the thirty-third degree. Why in hell don't you just dump the water in or else drink the dope straight or else drink something that gives you less trouble?"

The poet concluded his alchemy and smiled again. Smiles came easily to him just then—wan, remote smiles whereof that suggestion found a repercussion in his vanity.

"Henceforth," he said complacently, "what I do will give me less trouble."

But Bates had the gross immediate mind. "What's the matter with you tonight?" he inquired crudely. "Grinning an' giggling like a girl! Have you got a job—or what?"

His two companions, a sculptor of sorts and a decorative painter, laughed. Guiscard laughed also and sipped from his now completed glass.

"I have an employment, it is true," he answered. Their eyes were on him, curious and amused; he was like a man who has prepared a deft, practical joke. He relished their puzzlement, their doubt; the dim, inward sense was stilled. "I am provided for—yes; you will see!"

He drank again. The jewel lined poison ran like rich blood through his arteries. The sculptor of sorts—he was really an architect of tombstones with a salary from the administration of Pere-la-Chaise—turned to Bates.

"The animal has written a play," he said.

The eyes of the three of them turned with new interest on the poet. He, lifting his glass hither and thither, delighting in the play of lights through the swimming opal tints of the liquor, was aware of their regard.

"You been doing anything like that, Guiscard?" demanded Bates coarsely.

Guiscard made a motion with his glass equivalent to a hand which one waves. Everything was coming his way.

"Something like that,' he replied, in gentle, equable tones and with the unusual smile which his companions found unbearable. "There is—yes, there is a drama in question, it is true. But do not question me now, my friends, for I must not speak. You will hear of it in the morning. You will assuredly hear!"

He was no longer aware of the big iron gun upon his hip, for his elbows were on the table. He had his mood , and all about him was propitious to it; and the absinthe stood minister to his pose.

"Gosh!' said Bates, in the tongue of his native Massachusetts; and added in French: "The pig is too proud for us already. Look at him smirking there!"

The poet had finished his drink; he rose and collected the slack of his cloak with a flourish.

"Proud!" He laughed—a strange, unfamiliar laugh. "I am proud, yes; but I am pitiful, too. I leave you, my friends; I leave you here, slaves to those small and ephemeral matters which engage and enchain you. But as for me, I go from your petty and squalid world. I renounce it."

He delivered himself of a gesture, wide, sweeping in its character, which should wipe their world away. They misunderstood it.

"Tiens!" exclaimed Bates disgustedly. "They've advanced him money. He's going to live on the Right Bank.'

The others were of the same opinion.

"C'est evident! Cochon!"

Guiscard disdained to reply. There was a large mirror upon the wall opposite to him, and he caught sight of himself, cloak wrapped, hat slouched over one eye, faint, indulgent smile caught upon his pale, curved lips.

"Good luck to you," he said tenderly.

"Oh, go to hell!" replied Bates sincerely.

Guiscard passed to the door, pacing soberly. He was happy, though he did not know it. He was happy as a tragedian is happy who totters from the stage, weeping with his feigned sorrows while the audience thunders its applause behind him. At the exit his gait of sober dignity caused him to fumble with the swinging doors; and the big revolver in his jacket pocket hit him on the funnybone. He came forth to the pavement reeling, with his right elbow passionately clutched in his left hand.

A couple of minutes sufficed to restore him. He hesitated, standing close to a brilliant shop window to let the pavement throng flow past him. His appetite was whetted by the encounter in the cafe; but the impact of the revolver butt upon his sensitive elbow had reawakened that dismal, dim, inward sense. He needed at least one more effective audience. His mind pawed the air resourcefully. The idea came "Of course!" He nearly said it aloud—it was so obvious. "Lucille—a last slow significant glance; she merits that—in spite of all! A souvenir I leave her—I who depart to—er—to the eternal harmony of the spheres!"

It heartened like another artistically combined absinthe; he flourished his cloak again across his bosom and his shoulder, he resettled his hat at a considered angle, and, with a dark and dominating look upon those human worms who shared the street with him, he strode in the direction of the abode of Lucille.

"Five minutes with her—perhaps ten—whatever she says—for tomorrow the news will shatter her. And then—"

His thoughts halted, brought up short by the stone wall of reality. He pondered.

"She's a good child," he reflected. "She'll see reason!" He brooded doubtfully upon that. "She must! Or else, damn it, I'll have to do it!"

He was a little subdued as he came to the large apartment-house, a honeycomb of tiny flats, in which Lucille had her dwelling. The front door was already shut, which made it easier, upon the Paris system, for him to gain admission. He passed the concierge's lair with a growl that might have been the name of a tenant and ascended the long, narrow stairs with the gait of a man in deep thought.

There was a tiny, parsimonious light upon each landing, and upon reaching the desired landing, where two prim front doors faced each other across ten feet of space, he was able to note at once that Lucille's door was not shut.

"At all events," he said, "she is at home!"

The door stood open for the width of a hand. What was strange was that no light shone through it from within. With a hand uplifted and a thumb poised over the bell push, Guiscard paused to listen. It seemed to him—but he could not be sure—that some one moved within. He thought he detected a sound of light feet; then came unmistakably the noise of a piece of furniture knocked against and shifting. Then silence.

The poet reflected. "She is at home," he concluded, "since the door is open. But the light is out. Is she walking in her sleep then? Or—is it another, some usurper of my place, who awaits her in the dark? We will see into this!"

He waited only to fling his cloak into place, to drag his hat brim formidably over his brow, then, pushing the door gently open, he entered the little hallway. It seemed to him, as he did so, that feet moved swiftly in the little salon at the other end of it and as suddenly were still. With three strides he was across the hall; his intimate hand, reaching around the pillar of the half open door, touched the electric light switch; the cluster of lamps in the ceiling blazed; and, beetling his brows, setting his mouth to the shape of tired and tolerant irony, he stepped within.

"Sacr—' he got no further. The showy oath upon his lips tailed off to a weak scream as the other occupant of the room hustled towards him like a shell from a gun. He had only time to see it and recognize, in heart stopping horror, the character and quality of it—the light waisted, hasty tempered, livid face "Apache," the murderous house robbing vermin of the banlieue—and the knife in his lifted hand. His swiftly apprehending eyes took in the drug bleached face. The lips red as a wound, the cold snake's eyes of the creature even while it rushed famished for murder, with the thirty blade fore thrust for the plunge. All this he saw in a horrid fraction of an instant, as a man might see the lightning flash that blasts him; the taste of death was salt on his lips; and then—

There was a rug in the middle of the waxed parquet floor; the robber's second bound carried him to the center of it; his third should have brought him to the grapple. But, instead, the rug slid under him; there was a marvelous second in which he seemed to the paralyzed poet to exhibit the combined qualities of a contortionist and an acrobat; he curled like a shaving planed from a board; and, with a skull jarring thump, he landed on his back and came skidding to Guiscard's feet. The feet departed from under Guiscard and he fell—literally and quite involuntarily fell—upon the robber. The long, lean knife, jarred loose from the hand that grasped it, went skating across the glass smooth floor.

The thief uttered two quite unprintable words in tones of mild remonstrance and surprise, but there was nothing mild in the manner in which he grappled with the poet. From a living projectile, he turned without a moment's interval to a human octopus, all tentacles and venom. He was as flimsy as a paper doll, as stanch as a piece of string; there was nothing to him but desperation and dope; and he fought like a pronged snake. His horrible hands, that seemed as great as shovel blades upon his pipestem wrists, tore and gouged and struck; he battled with his feet like a wildcat that strikes to eviscerate; the poet saw his blood red lips writhe back over his teeth as he wormed in towards the neck to bite and worry. He was vile and dangerous and shuddersome as a venomous reptile.

Guiscard, every nerve outraged and unstrung, was scarcely aware that he fought; he only knew that he screamed. He tried to decant his forces and his terror into yells, into articulate shrieks that should arouse the quartier and bring help. His brain rang with the noise he thought he was making, but actually he uttered only occasional gasping yelps, while all that was instinctively resistant in him, all the atrophied battle capacity of his body, was surging at his plunging, writhing antagonist. He had fallen squarely on top of the other and thereby squelched most of his wind out of him like a trodden bladder at the first onset; doubtless it was to that, in the first place, that he owed his salvation. And then, though there was not much of him, there was actually less of the thief; and as he squirmed and slapped he chanced upon a telling blow or two.

The thief's dreadful hands, with fingers hard as claws, were forever snatching about his neck and face. A stiff thumb jabbed about his cheeks, groping for his eyes; he knew in terror what it felt for as the cruel nail of it tore and scratched his skin. Still windmilling with all four limbs, he tried to

A MORO PLAN FOR SOLVING THE INDEPENDENCE PROBLEM WHICH PROPOSES THAT EACH RELIGION FLOCK BY ITSELF

A Nation of Christian Filipinos and an American Territory of Pagans and Mohammedans—Why the Moros Fear Extermination—Homesteading Their Islands—Striking Possibilities of Mindanao, Palawan, and the Sulu Archipelago Rubber and Rope as Vital War Problems

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER

Frank G. Carpenter

ZAMBOANGA (P. I.) For the past few weeks I have been traveling in the far south of the Philippine Islands, moving about through Mindanao and the great Sulu Archipelago, inhabited by the Moros. These southern islands have been their homes for hundreds of years. Before we Americans came these people had here an empire of their own from where their piratical leaders started forth in their war vessels and levied tribute on the Filipino settlements farther north. The Spaniards attempted to conquer them, but the pirates carried their raids even to the gates of Manila and in those days the Filipino settlements of this part of the world were confined to small stations such as that here at Zamboanga, and the walled town of Jolo on the Island of Sulu. The walls of Manila were built chiefly as a defense against the Moros. When the Americans came in they were subdued, and although they have caused us considerable trouble they have at last come to look upon us as their friends, and like the Indians are most satisfied to call Uncle Sam their Great Father.

At least this was the case until the agitation for independence became intense, and Congress was asked to cut the Philippines absolutely free of American rule. The Jones Act followed, and the management of all things in the southern islands was practically given over to the Christian Filipinos. The Moros saw their ancient authority in their own land on the decline and themselves practically in the hands of those whom they formerly considered their enemies.

Under American officials they had been promised protection, and with that understanding had surrendered their arms. They gave up fighting as an occupation and gradually were becoming a people of peace rather than war. They abandoned all thought of combination and organization. Now they find that the American troops have been largely withdrawn and that their territories are policed by the Filipino Constabulary, a body of most efficient sharpshooters armed with the latest of weapons, trained after modern methods of warfare and of such numbers that even should the Moros desire to resist they would be practically powerless.

The old dattos and sultans and the young men who have the welfare of their country at heart are greatly alarmed. Some of them think that the withdrawal of the Americans from the islands means the extermination of their people, and they do not hesitate to say that they will die rather than submit to Filipino rule.

Calling the other day on the commander of the American army post at Zamboanga in front of whose house is a tall staff from which flies the Stars and Stripes, two influential Mohammedan dattos came in. They were straight, tall, serious looking men with bright eyes and strong features, gorgeously clad in turbans and silks, with red sashes and gold buttons as big around as a walnut running down the front of their shirts. With the commander interpreting, I asked what they thought of the possibility of the Americans leaving. They replied:

"It will mean death to our people. We would rather cut our throats"—and here one drew his hand significantly across his neck—"rather than endure the rule we know we should have in that case. We acknowledge only one flag, and we love it." He thereupon pointed to Old Glory which was floating above the cocoanut trees in the breeze from the ocean.

Discussing the matter further, the datto said they hoped that if independence was granted to any part of the archipelago there might be a division of the islands and the territory belonging to the Moros be cut off and held in the possession of the United States. I have heard this same view expressed by many other prominent Moros. It is held by the Sultan of Sulu, with whom I have talked, and also by Rajah Muda, the Crown Prince, who is a much stronger man. It has been recommended as an alternative to the Secretary of War by former American governors of the Moro province, and by some of our military officers who have been in charge of these territories. It is a live question, and one that will surely come up whenever the American people decide that the Christian Filipinos are ready to govern themselves.

The Christian Filipinos will probably object to any such division, but the scheme is a most interesting one and its possibilities will have to be threshed out with care and with due regard to the engagements the United States has made with the Moros and consideration for the good of both peoples. If you will take your map of the archipelago and consider the population which inhabits it, you may get some understanding of how such a division might work out to our benefit, and possibly to that of the Filipinos themselves.

Roughly speaking, the archipelago measures north and south more than a thousand miles. More than two thirds of its area is made up of the islands which would be independent and form the new Philippine nation. These include Luzon, which is as big as Ohio and has 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 people; Samar, which is one-eighth the size of Kentucky with a population equal to that of Indianapolis; Negros, almost as large with more than 600,000 people; and Panay, which is one-tenth the size of Pennsylvania and has more people than St. Louis, Baltimore, or Boston. It would take in Cebu and Bohol, smaller islands but more densely populated, and other islands, the whole having a population considerably more than ten elevenths of all the Philippine peoples, with most of the cities and towns, most of the public roads and railways, and, in fact, the bulk of the development in the Philippines.

Making hats is almost a household industry in the Philippines. Hats woven here are durable and as beautiful as those made in Panama.

Haltering the Mule

NOW look again at your map of the Philippines. If you view the outlines of the archipelago as a whole you will see that it forms the almost perfect head of a mule, whose neck springs out from the great island of Borneo, whose nose and open mothu are Mindanao, and whose defiant right ear, Luzon, is lost in the channel of Formosa. I have before me the map accompanying the Wood-Forbes report of the investigation of the Philippines, and the mule's head stands out as though drawn by an artist. I have taken my pencil and blackened one of the islands which serves as an eye, and drawn two lines from the top of Palawan across the Sulu Sea to Mindanao and joined them there with two other lines which run eastward through the Mindanao Sea to the Pacific. These lines look just like a halter or bridle and they perfectly outline the division of the archipelago which the Moros want. I have entitled the map "Haltering the mule."

The nose or lower part of the face takes in Mindanao, the back of the neck is Palawan, and the throat is made up of the Zamboanga province and the Sulu Archipelago. This includes the whole of Mohammedan-land.

Above the rein and nose-strap of the halter are the lands of the Christian Filipinos, including about eleven-twelfths of the people, with railroads, truck routes, and cities and towns. This part is producing today practically all of the receipts from the islands.

Mindanao, in the proposed Moro territory, is as large as Indiana and together with Palawan and the Sulu Archipelago, including scores of coral and volcanic islands, the land below the halter comprise perhaps one-third of the whole archipelago This territory, the neck and nose of the mule, would be scattered over a width of ocean as wide as from New York to Columbus, O., and roughly speaking as long north and south as from Dallas to New Orleans. It is inhabited by scattering peoples who altogether do not number as many as there are souls in the city of Washington. Of these four-fifths are Moro Mohammedans. Among the others are some few Christian Filipinos, and pagans who are so savage that they need a great power like ours to protect and civilize them.

The areas and population of the islands above mentioned are, roughly speaking, as follows: Mindanao has 36,000 square miles, with a third of a million inhabitants; Palawan has 4000 square miles, with 27,000 Moros and pagans and about 3000 Christians.

The territory seems small, and the population most scanty, but that is what Uncle Sam would have at the start if he took over the country as the proposed unorganized territory.

But looking at the islands in the light of their resources, he would have a land of enormous possibilities, and one that would solve many of the military problems now confronting him in the possible great wars of the future.

The Island of Mindanao is one of the richest on earth. It is more than seven-tenths as large as Java, which has a population of 37,000,000. Java had only 6,000,000 when the Dutch began to rule there, and the population has increased more than 600 per cent. With good rule and American capital to develop the island, there is no reason why Mindanao should not support something like 25,000,000. The Sulu Archipelago and Palawan would support many thousands.

The wars of the future will be fought largely on rubber. The automobiles and motor trucks travel upon it, and it enters into the construction of all kinds of army equipment. Today we are absolutely dependent upon the rubber plantations of Malaysia and Ceylon, and it is not long since that the British who own the plantations there proposed a restriction of output which would have added more than $100,000,000 a year to the cost of the rubber goods we consume. In case of war we should have a fighting chance only at the rubber forests of the Amazon Valley, and the production there is so disorganized and uncertain that it would be of little value in war. This proposed Moro territory is potentially the greatest rubber land of the world. It has just the right soil and climate and it is outside the zone of typhoons, which might destroy the trees. There are hundreds of thousands of acres on Mindanao that might be planted to this crop, and it is said that the little Island of Basilan, not half as large as Rhode Island, could grow enough rubber to supply all our needs for all time to come.

As regard our wheat crop, Uncle Sam sits at the table of the nations in the same situation. For our binder twine we are relying upon the Philippine Islands, the jute of India, the sisal of Mexico, and certain other fibres largely controlled by John Bull or his ships. Shut off these resources, and we shall be practically helpless to harvest our crops. The Philippines raise enough hemp to furnish rope and twine for the world; and Mindanao has undeveloped hemp lands which would more than supply all that will ever be needed by us. Giving up the Philippines, we might be practically helpless, but retaining Mindanao, the horsehair of Damocles becomes a rope of steel which no sword can cut. That island has the best hemp lands on earth, and since our occupation millions have been made by Americans, Japanese, and Filipinos in the hemp plantations which now surround the Gulf of Davao.

[NOTE: In his next letter "Shall Uncle Sam Raise His Own Rubber," Mr. Carpenter tells of his visit to the great rubber plantations on Basilan Island and shows that our Moro possessions will grow all that we need. He also gives like news information that affects the pockets and life of every man in our country.—Editor.]

sure. What's over there?" He pointed with his left hand through the fog at the blurred mass of shadow which was at the shore across the bay. "That's where the State road runs, ain't it? Well, let's look."

A long box built of heavy boards rested along the top of the pier; the Nightingale, standing over it, braced his legs, pulled upward, and, with a shriek, the staple which held the padlock came out of the wood. He lifted the hinged cover and, glancing over his shoulder so that his victims might not spring on him from behind, he felt around in the interior.

"Here they are," he exclaimed, "the oars! Ha, ha, Denny, if you'd only had these; you and your girl could have made your getaway! You could have taken a little row when you heard me singing. Well, Denny, now it's you and me will take a little row—a cold little row."

The girl uttered a cry.

"What's the matter?" protested the Nightingale. "You ain't going to object to his going for a little row with an old friend? You ain't going to object if I don't shoot him down like a dog?"

"I'll go, too," Alice begged.

But the Nightingale shook his head.

"'Tisn't safe for three. Two's enough. We'll take our little row, and then—"

"Then?"

"Why, one of us will come back for you, little girl. You wait here. One of us will come back—that's what I hope."

Denny stepped forward.

"You got a gun," he said accusingly.

"That's so!" the Nightingale said, with mock astonishment, glancing down at the weapon in his hand. "What will we do about that, I wonder? Suppose I throw it over after we've started? How'd that be? The gun won't be any use to me, anyhow—after this beautiful night. I meant to shoot you with it, but that's rough work. So, Denny, you climb down and sit in the seat in the stern. I'm going to row. Denny. We'll start fair."

He threw back his head and laughed heartily. The girl's lover took a deep breath; he shrugged his shoulders and clenched his hands.

"I'll go," he said.

"No, no, no!" sobbed Alice.

The Nightingale's face twisted about in one of those spasms of expression which characterized him.

"Say, what's the matter?" he asked, in his evil whine. "You didn't love me, and you loved him. What was wrong with that? You two are planning to get married and go straight. What's wrong with that? I gnawed out the lining of my mouth. But what's that? That's nothing. I don't count —I'm nobody. And then, little girl, you just said there was some good in me. That ought to make a hit with me, hadn't it? And I loved you and still love you, don't I? So why not let your Denny go for a little row with me?" He coughed. "It's better than seeing him drop on this pier and go crawling and scratching around on the boards, isn't it?"

The muff dropped from her limp hands.

"Denny!" she gasped.

He put his arms about her.

"It's a chance," he whispered.

"Just a little row," whined the Nightingale. "Come!"

Denny uttered a growl, and dropped over the edge of the pier into the bottom of the little craft.

"Well," said the Nightingale, "it certainly is a beautiful night."

He sat down on the edge of the pier, facing the man below, the revolver still in his hand.

"Wait!" came the voice of the Nightingale. "One of us will come for you. I said I'd throw this thing away. Listen!"

"Alice!" It was the voice of her lover now, sounding over the water.

She raised her head and saw that the fog had nearly shut off the sight of the craft in which the two men sat, as impersonal to the vision as two bags of meal upon the seats.

"Go back to the village!" Denny called to her. "For the love of heaven, don't wait—don't wait!"

Clack-clack; clack-clack! The oarlocks, moving monotonously under the human hands, sounded like some monstrous clock of eternity. Clack-clack; clack-clack! Fainter and fainter. She could hear the little waves again lapping at the piles below her. The cold crept down her neck and up her sleeves, but it was not as cruel as the cold within. At 4 that afternoon she had been copying mail orders on her typewriting machine, beside a radiator which had hissed; this seemed many centuries ago. The sound of the oars was now barely audible. Alice threw herself down on her knees and stared out into the gray blank from which there now came no sight, no sound, nothing but the salty cold breath of the sea.

"Denny!" she called. "Denny!"

The fog absorbed her cry. The moon stared down.

Far off, from across the narrow bay, beyond the ridge of summer estates on the farther shore, there sounded faintly the strokes of the great clock in the village tower. It was 9. The little stenographer took her knuckles between her white teeth. She stared into the fog, which answered nothing. Her aching eyes asked it questions; her yearning ears asked it questions, but the fog answered nothing.

"Denny!" she called. "Denny!"

There was no answer. Denny had gone with the Nightingale. She was alone. Denny had warned her to go back; the mystery of the fog held her there, at the edge of Fothergill's pier, twisting her cold wrists in the grip of her cold hands, under the moon.

Now and then she raised her gaze to this wintry moon upon which there advanced a thousand little clouds, dragging after them across the sky a great black mass of obscurity. The little clouds slid over the moon's face, turning the fog from silver to thick gray. Alice could see the black mass of storm clouds behind them moving on ponderously. These clouds would smother the moon; Alice wondered vaguely why the moon did not run away across the sky and elude them. As she gazed up, strands of her own golden hair were slapped across her face by the freshening breeze coming over the black water. The fog was running past her now, as if it had seen a terrible sight from which it fled.

"Denny!" she called.

The wind stuffed the name of her lover back into her mouth, but it brought another sound through the black night—sound of oarlocks again.

Clack-clack; clack-clack!

Alice did not dare to call again.

The boat was coming back. Clack-clack; clack-clack! The sound was nearer; the strokes were faster now.

She wanted to call out during these terrible minutes, but something within her pleaded with her not to do so. Instead, she crawled to the edge of the pier and stared down at the smothering blackness.

The clack of the oarlocks was almost beneath her at last.

The moon struggled to break through some thin place in the somber blanket which had covered her; a last suffusion of her radiance came down upon the sea. There was only one man in the boat. His form, sitting in the rower's seat, was as impersonal as a bag of meal.

Alice did not dare to call out. Something said to her—

The boat bumped the piles below her.

"Alice!" the voice of her lover called.

"Denny!"

"Here; take this." He reached above him, holding something toward her until he felt her hand close about it. "He sent it to you. It's that white rose he wore."

Denny lifted himself on to the edge of the pier, and, reaching forward and taking her into his arms, he stared out across the waters as if he were in a dream.

"Denny!" she said. "Denny, speak to me! There's no blood on your head?"

"Listen!" he commanded.

Far away from the opposite shore a bird-like tenor voice filled the air with a tremulous melody, sweet yet terrible—the opening bars of "Annie Laurie."

"Listen!" he cried, clasping her close to him. "Listen! It's the Nightingale!"

"SOMETHING TO THEIR ADVANTAGE"

pox!' Got the address? We may as well be off," he added nonchalantly.

"A little generalship from Jane would be useful," quoth Jane, briskly. "My brother's a dear, but they saved on the gray matter when they put him together, didn't they, Dudley, old thing?"

Dudley retained his lazy good-humor. "Go ahead," was his reply.

"We'll travel up to town together. Thyme and Terry and I don't want to be quite left out of this. I'll take 'em home with me, to our wee Bloomsbury flat. We'll wait for you there. Bring back the jewels in a taxi; but if you can't, kidnap Wu Fung, to deal with him at our leisure. Always more powerful on your own hearthrug. We three frail and helpless maidens can swot up our pidgin English to pass the time till you arrive. Mistless Telly no velly well savvy mit my plans aglee?"

"Me aglee," replied Terry.

"We oughtn't to have let them go," cried Thyme, her nerves taut from long waiting at Jane's flat.

But at this moment the taxi was seen to drive up.

"They're both there—and the Chinaman! But no treasure, unless it's in their pockets."

Dudley explained breathlessly, in the hall: "The beggar was sullen, and wouldn't tell us a word, so we brought him along. No use losing sight of him now."

"Then it is Wu Fung!"

The Chinaman looked up at the sound of his name spoken by Jane, and suddenly beamed all over his face. "Me muchy pleased!" he exclaimed.

Jane replied, not to be outdone: "The pleasure is velly also mine." Then, in a hasty aside to her brother: "Look here Dudley, is he a mandarin of the Order of the Golden Pom-Pom, or just an ordinary Chink? Because of asking him into the kitchen. I'm sure he's dying for a cup of tea, or a whiff of opium."

"Or some puppy-soup, or blanc-mange a la bird's-nest," suggested Terry, who had overheard.

"Oh, the kitchen will do him all right. He'll probably get off with Sarah."

But in the kitchen occurred immediate crisis. Sarah declared, pale with passion, that sooner than stay another minute breathing the same air as "a heathen Chinaman," she would leave on the spot. Jane, who in her own way was equally quick-tempered and autocratic, snapped back that Sarah might consider herself free to depart that very moment, and go and learn courtesy to foreigners elsewhere.

"Foreigners is bad enough," said Sarah, "but when it comes to the man-eating Chinamen—And you'll please to send my box after me to my sister's at Walthamstow, where you know the address as well as I do, because stay and pack it I won't; with him poisoning the air."

And that was the last of Sarah.

Wu Fung sat, still cherubically smiling, at the kitchen table, while Thyme and Terry and Jane, assisted by Dudley and the doctor scuttled about and prepared his tea. They seemed to consider, in a foolish sort of fashion, that tea would unloosen his inscrutable oriental tongue. Wu Fung obligingly drank it, and to his credit, went on smiling.

"And now," said Jane, the spokesman, "tell us where the treasure is—I mean, you tellee where Chinaman hide treasure."

Wu Fung's smile began to fade. "No tleasure," he said; "me poor man."

Jane produced the paper which they had found in the lacquer cabinet. "Have you ever seen this before?"

Wu Fung shook his head. "Me no lead English."

"But you know where the treasure is?" Jane persisted. "We shall find out, you see, so it's no use trying to hide it from us. You've been betrayed—betlayed, I mean—I say, one of you might go on with this. It's an awful strain."

But Wu Fung would answer questions from nobody but Jane. He liked Jane. But he repeated monotonously: "No savvy tleasure," till his interrogators lost patience.

The front door bell rang, and Dudley went to open it.

There was a sound of male voices in the hall. Presently he returned, rather pale. "I say, Jane, it's Fred Melbourne. Your film-manager chap. He's in the sitting-room. Did—didn't you invite him to dinner to-night?"

Jane had collapsed at mention of the name, the water-jug shattered at her feet, and its contents lapping Dr. Roper's boots. "I did. But I'd forgotten. This treasure-hunt—Oh, Lord!" She went on to explain to the others. "I meant to give him such a thrilling dinner that he'd draw me up a contract for 'Velvet Fingers' on the spot. It's my super film story, and it was going to make my fortune."

Her cousin Terry did not improve matters by remarking pleasantly: "You seem to have lost two fortunes in one swoop."

"Darn Sarah!" muttered Jane. And then, in desperation: "Look here, can't any of you cook?"

"Me cook!" said Wu Fung, thus creating the sensation of his life.

To describe, in crude terms of food, the dinner which he subsequently dished up to them, would be an insult.

It had been feverish work for Jane and Dudley and Thyme to keep Fred Melbourne entertained for an hour and a half, while the other two dashed about in a taxi, buying Wu Fung the ingredients he demanded. But after dinner saw the film manager lulled into such a state of melting, beatific well-being that he accepted the synopsis of "Velvet Fingers" with dazed enthusiasm; and assented, on paper, too, to such terms as Jane had never anticipated in her wildest hopes.

"We'll make a good thing out of it, between us," he promised her on parting. "Good-bye, Miss Leigh-Stanton. And, I say, don't let anyone get hold of that cook of yours. He's a treasure!" and the door slammed behind him.

Into Jane's eyes flashed a great light of revelation. She reeled slightly: "Dudley, Thyme, Terry—I've got it! It's come to me quite suddenly! Look here, wasn't our grandfather a notorious gourmet?"

"He was jolly keen on his food, I believe. Oh, yes, and he wrote one or two books about it—I remember now the pater telling me. Travelled a lot in the East, and picked up queer recipes—greedy old gobbler! Why?"

"Don't you see? Wu Fung—himself—is—the—treasure. There is no other treasure at all. It was Fred Melbourne put it into my head: he used the same words: 'Don't let anyone get hold of—' What geese we were not to understand! Grandfather has left us his marvelous Chinese cook as a legacy. Original, I grant you, but quite a pretty thought."

"But why should he have popped his cook into the cabinet till we were found? Why all the hugger-mugger and the foozalum?" queried Dudley, bewildered.

One of their cousins suggested: "Have him in and ask him?"

A few flowery compliments passed between the diners and their benefactor; and then Jane blurted out: "Were you in the service of my grandfather, Ambrose Pickering Leigh-Stanton?"

"Twenty-tlee years. Him velly good master. Little missy muchee like him in face." Wu Fung's imperturbability was all broken up now into gracious smiles and creases and twinkles.

"That's why you were the favorite, Jane," in an aside from Terry.

"Savvy if any one else try to get hold of you when my grandfather died?"

"Colonel Meridith Palmer, him plentee much likee good eat, too. Him dine with your grandfather, many often; and plaise me; and Mr. Pickeling Leigh-Stanton, him say: 'Wu Fung, that beggar him only waitee till I'm dead to glab you,' him say."

Of course, Colonel Meridith Palmer, that other famous epicure! "Don't let—Palmer —get hold of him," the missing word in the message was filled in now. No wonder the fortunate owner of Wu Fung desired to pass on the treasure to his grandchildren rather than let a rival enjoy him. No wonder he took elaborate steps to hide the Chinaman's whereabouts till the missing twins had been traced.

And when, with the beautiful symmetry of the last act of a musical comedy, Dudley paired off with Thyme, and Dr. Roper with Terry, Jane became almost as famous and successful for the super-film scenarios she wrote, as for the wonderful little lunches and dinners she gave. Her Celestial Treasure was besieged with many offers; Jane, secure in his placid devotion, used to enjoy interviewing the suitors:—

"Er—if you felt like parting with your treasure of a cook at any time, Miss Leigh-Stanton—"

Wu Fung is still with Jane.

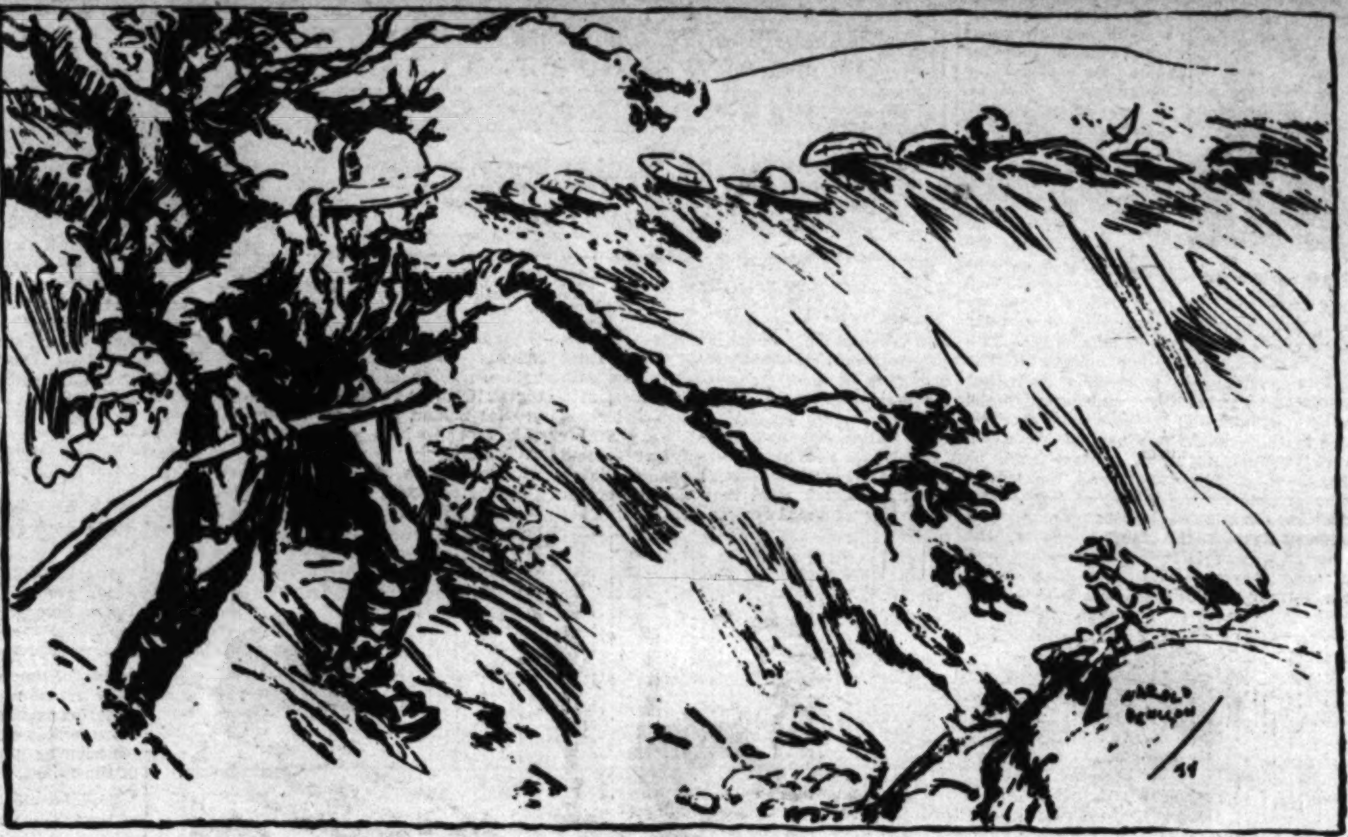
A Dash for Life From Brigands

BY

D'ARCY WEATHERBE

Illustrated by Harold Denison

Desperate Attempt of English Engineer, Held for Million Dollar Ransom in a Wild Region of China



[NOTE: Returning from his birthplace in England to Peking, where he is well-known in business and social circles, Mr. Weatherbe determined to carry out an ambition of years—to follow the overland route through a wild and mountainous region of China to its capital. As told in a preceding article, after traveling more than 100 miles northward, he found the road closed by bandits and was forced to retrace his steps.

On his southward journey, he was seized with his retinue by a band of a thousand brigands, led by a brutal youth with six fingers on one hand, named Yung Yu-lin, and was held while a demand for a ransom of $1,000,000 was made to the Chinese government. A time limit of two months was placed upon his life. For several weeks before the events narrated in this article, Mr. Weatherbe, dangerously ill, was forced to accompany the brigands, undergoing excruciating hardships and witnessing scenes of inhuman torture. —Editor.]

AS THE brigands had received no answer to the demands made upon the Chinese government, they persuaded Pere Degeneve, a Catholic missionary whom they respected, to go into Talifu to treat with the authorities for my release on certain conditions being fulfilled. As I have already mentioned, I learned that while demanding $1,000,000 for my release, as an alternative they were dickering for an amnesty for themselves and other robber bands.

I still had with me five mule-loads of my baggage, which were a great nuisance to the muleteers and other members of the band because I frequently wanted to get things from the loads. They seemed only too pleased to allow me to send to Talifu with Pere Degeneve everything that I did not actually require for my immediate personal use.

It was a great relief to me, for this made my plans for escaping much easier; and I would have few regrets for losing the articles I retained. I handed over, therefore, two mule loads of my most valuable baggage to Pere Degeneve to Pere Savin, who had come up from Talifu to help in arranging my ransom.

Owing to the fact that I was very ill and weak, and as I might—as far as I knew—remain in the hands of the brigands for months, I did not select for transmittal to Talifu nearly as much as I should have done otherwise. Although my heart was set on escaping from my captors, I did not anticipate an early freedom. I was very closely watched all the time, and I had few chances of getting away, even if I had been in full possession of my normal physical strength.

Before Pere Degeneve's departure for Talifu with my spare baggage, I had made attempts to escape from my captors; but on each occasion circumstances had been too strong for me, and I had failed. Once, on a very dark night, when it was raining hard, the unexpected appearance of an unusually zealous sentry put an abrupt stop to my ambition to obtain freedom; and on the second occasion I was cut off by a fire in the streets of Fong Yu. After these two failures, I had begun to despair, chiefly on account of my very weak condition; but I was always on the lookout for a favorable opportunity.

At length—having lain in camp for several days together—I had obtained a certain amount of rest. The fever had abated considerably; but I had lost a great deal of weight and I was still totally unfit for a long march across country should a favorable chance to escape present itself.

I was beginning now to think that my guards had become less captious. Probably they thought that, after all this time and in my weakened condition, I would not make any attempt to escape. During the comparatively slack days in camp, while waiting for the government to answer their letter of terms for my release, opium smoking, drinking, and gambling had much increased; and there was altogether much less watchfulness than when on the march. I had, for obvious reasons, kept possession of my compass and a general map of the region. I always kept these two priceless possessions in my pocket; and, notwithstanding my weak state, had always made careful observations and had even made a rough sketch map of our route as we went along.

In these latter days, during our shorter marches, and while in camp, I had, so far as I was able, mentally reconnoitered the immediate neighborhood. I was still planning to flee from the insufferable conditions which, if continued much longer, would soon become altogether insupportable.

My determination to escape was strengthened by the increasing nervousness and bad temper of the leaders of the band, especially the Chief, Yang Yulin. He was a ferocious tyrant. One afternoon he had deliberately cut off with his own knife the lips of an offending messenger to his camp. This had taken place only a few yards from my bed, where I lay weak from the effects of my long illness.

One night I made a trial effort and found that a somewhat prolonged absence from my little lean-to shanty, formed of a tarpaulin and a ground sheet, passed quite unnoticed by my guards. The next afternoon I got Chao, my Chinese cook, to make me a strong stew of chicken, rice, Chinese onions, and potatoes; and that night I had a bowl of arrowroot with a drop or two of brandy in it. Then at midnight I prepared my blankets so as to make them appear as if I was still covered by them. An hour later I set out on my great adventure.

I religiously abstained from taking any unnecessary weight. I had in my pockets only my compass, a map, a notebook, two tins of Brand's Essence, and three small bottles containing "Forced March Tabloids," some cocaine tablets, and malted milk tabloids. I was dressed in my disgracefully old and rain-soaked sun-helmet, my old and torn waterproof, and a pair of very worn boots. I carried in my hand my trusty ash-plant stick, which I had carried with me all the way from Mesopotamia.

The camp lay scattered down a wooded cleft, which carried its only water supply in a tiny stream. On the opposite side of this stream was a very steep and wooded hill, apparently rising to about 1000 feet above the camp. Beyond this hill, so far as I could see, was an open and grassy valley, and across its narrow floor rose a wooded limestone ridge. The top of this ridge, which seemed to provide cover and a view for miles around, was my objective. I hoped to reach it before daylight.

On leaving my "tent," I walked as quietly and as swiftly as I could. Never looking back, safely I passed the last tent, which was far up the stream, although I almost ran into it, for the fire was out. But the occupants were either asleep or else drugged with opium—in fact, a solitary opium-lamp inside of it was my only guide.

Absence Discovered

I CROSSED the steep little ravine above this tent, and immediately came on to the face of the precipitous bank which, to my consternation, was covered with a dense growth of stout rhododendron bushes. Slowly, and using my arms almost more than my legs, I gradually worked my way diagonally up the hill; but it was such slow and painful work, that it did not seem possible I could ever reach the summit.

Several times, as I toiled painfully upward, I thought I heard a loud hue and cry in the camp below me. I could plainly see the camp fires sparkling through the trees. But in each case these noises seemed to die down. They were most probably accounted for by late drinking and gambling parties in the outlying guard-tents of the camp.

Finally, I reached the top of the hill, about 1000 feet above the tents, and there hoped to get some sort of a view, in the darkness, of the grassy valley below. My disappointment was very great to find that, directly beyond, lay another hill. As far as I could judge by its dim outlines against the sky-line, it was steeper and more thickly wooded than even the one I had just climbed. My heart was filled with deep dejection and despair.

Fortunately the night was fine and starlit; but it had rained very heavily on the previous afternoon, and I was drenched to the skin and my old boots were like pulp from the soaking foliage through which I had so laboriously crawled. However, excitement, lack of signs of immediate pursuit, the prospect of more easy going, and a glimmer of hope of freedom had all combined to keep me keyed up to the great effort until that moment; but now only desperation was left as an incentive.

It was lucky that the way lay downhill, as the intense strain on my heart and lungs was, to some extent, relieved; and I slid and scrambled down the slope which, on this side, was only clothed with coarse grass and small bushes. At the bottom, as far as I could see, was a precipice—these terraces being peculiar to the limestone formation hills hereabouts—and above the cliff was a sandy slope, so steep that I could only just move along it on my side, without slipping down, by the exercise of the greatest care.

I worked up this ravine between the hills until I thought that I might try to cross over the edge of the sandy cliff. I selected a point where, by straining the eyes, I thought I could see the black tops of trees or bushes which must be growing at the bottom. I let myself down on the soft face of the slope to the edge; and then, without further hesitation, I dropped down. For all I knew it might have been fifty to a hundred feet to the bottom, but it was only ten feet at most. I collapsed on the soft, moist turf at the base, where I lay for some time completely exhausted.

A Second Obstacle

REALIZING, suddenly, that the dawn would soon be upon me, I clambered out of the narrow ditch. I found that there was yet another hill in front of me, almost similar to the first and equally steep, if not steeper, with the same almost impenetrable jungle of rhododendrons. I also found great boulders, around whose perpendicular faces it was necessary to work my way very slowly and carefully.

At that moment I would have given a

THE NIGHTINGALE

yawned before them.

"He's come!" Denny said, in a hoarse whisper.

"The Nightingale?"

"It's him. It's just like him. He's a fiend, I tell you. Stand up, Alice. Stand up, dear. He's followed us. Maybe—this—is the end. Stand up, Alice. Be a brave girl."

The bird-like song ceased suddenly with a sharp high note.

"Remember this—Alice," Denny whispered hoarsely: "I've loved you—just you. You wouldn't forget that, would you?"

From her throat there came a wordless sound of fear and grief. But immediately she said:

"I'm not a coward, Denny; I'm a woman. I'm your Alice."

The silence seemed to pulsate. The little stenographer, facing the crisis, did her best to think and her best to pray.

"The boat—the rowboat, Denny!" she whispered.

"No oars," he said.

His hand was on the weapon in his pocket.

"Oh, he has me cornered," he went on. "He don't mind the risk of it. What he wants is the torture of it. He wants it to be me, but he don't care if it's him. That's the Nightingale."

"Denny!"

"What is it?"

"You mustn't—you mustn't kill." She clutched at his shoulders. "It would leave me alone just the same—alone in life—all, all alone. You—'thou shalt not kill!'"

Again the tenor voice, thin, penetrating, issued forth from the Nightingale's lips. The song went on, piping upward; it came toward them where they stood outlined against the silvery light.

"He could kill me, but I can't place him," Denny said hoarsely. "It's all shadows—all dark there. And the dark is filled with song—filled with song."

"'Thou shalt not kill,'" Alice said again. "Denny—listen. Denny!"

"I hear, little girl," he answered.

"Do you love me? Give it to me."

The song from the dark ceased suddenly.

"It's like him," said Denny, breathing hard. "He knows there is no escape for me. He can see us. His song—it's like him—just like him."

The girl had thrown one arm about her man, with the fingers of the other hand she was clutching, clutching, clutching. Her fingers moved like things of separate intelligence—insinuating, restless, persistent personalities. They crept into the hand which grasped the newly purchased revolver ;they loosened the strong fingers.

"Denny!"

"What?"

"Give it to me."

He yielded like a man dazed. With a quick motion of her hand, she flung the chilly weapon over the edge of the pier. It fell into the water with a splash—a startling interruption of the still night.

"What have you done?" her lover gasped.

"Oh, now, Denny, you'll always belong to me," she said. "Even if he kills you—maybe some time we'll be together once more. You're my Denny."

The man dropped his hands limp at his thighs. The voice of the Nightingale took up the melody again. Out into the cold air came the needle-like sweetness.

"Through his thin red lips," said Denny.

"Nearer now!" gasped Alice, staring at the misty darkness till her eyes burned.

The song ceased. The moon, low in the sky, appeared to brighten behind them, the shadows fell away ,and out of the smother of dark, like a figure developing upon a photographic plate, came the outline of the Nightingale.

The girl threw herself in front of her lover.

"Well, here I am," whined the Nightingale, sliding toward them. "You expected me, Denny?" The other man did not speak. "You know what I come for, eh? You two! And me three years—gnawing on the lining of my own mouth—sometimes till it bled—up there. Nice moonlight, eh? No shadows of bars on the floor here—eh? Get out from in front of that man, Alice Goran."

"I won't!"

"Plenty of time," replied the Nightingale, with a sneer.

His voice broke out again to a little flight of terrible melody, and, as he sang, he came nearer until Alice could see that his arms were crossed, and the gleam of a revolver barrel, resting easily in the curve of one elbow, became visible—and nearer, until the moonlight fell upon his lean face.

The Nightingale was still young, but the penitentiary had turned his skin a ghastly, pasty color upon which the thin lines of his lips were vivid and the shadows of his nostrils and his heavy eyebrows were grotesquely emphasized. His corded neck gave some indication of his wiry, cat-like strength, and this neck was eternally twisting; the shoulders beneath were ever restless under their covering.

He had trailed his victim unwilling to strike until the dramatic moment. That was like him. He was dressed almost jauntily in a suit of dark brown which was none too full to conceal the fact that he was powerful in shoulders and thighs, and spare of flesh where less sinewy men carry useless weight. For warmth he wore a sweater, the edges of which showed from under his waistcoat. There were gloves on his hands—old gloves, to be sure, borrowed from some pal who had "welcomed him out" of the penitentiary, and in his buttonhole he wore a rose so white that it appeared as a symbol of the moon and the cold and of bloodless things. It was all quite like him—quite like the Nightingale.

The frightened eyes of the young woman stared at the white-petaled rosebud there in his buttonhole.

"We can talk—us three for a while," said the discharged convict. "Don't cling to him so—it makes me sick. You ain't saving him. I could kill you both, couldn't I? What's the odds? Listen! I've been thinking. I used to think at night. Denny, old skyrocket, you ought to know. You've been there. I thought on my cot, and I thought in the chapel, and I thought all around everywhere behind the bloody stones and the concrete. Believe me, I've become a philosopher, and the first thing a philosopher has got to do is not to care what happens to him. One or two lives ain't anything more or less. Let it go at that. Only, of course, I've waited for this evening a long while. There was a time when I liked to feel red and lash out; now I want to take it all easy. I got my wish, Denny—you and me is face to face. There ain't any hurry. I like to taste it all. I like to smell it and touch it to my lips and taste a little of it. Then comes a big swallow. Gee, won't I love it!"

The other man stared at the sneering, curled thin lips through which these words came, but he did not flinch. Alice waited for the tremor which the darting tongue of a snake with the voice of a bird might bring, but none came.

"Denny!" she said.

"Let him kill me," her lover answered, in a deep, clear voice.

"Why don't you beg, Denny? That's what a man does who double-crosses his friend. I might let you off. I might give you a chance to pull the gun you carry. Why didn't you pull it when I sang up to you, Denny? Because you knew you'd have to go back—up there—inside—for life. That's the best they'd give you, Denny—manslaughter. There wasn't much for you to do but hope I wouldn't kill you. Well—"

"Well, what?"

"Why don't you beg?"

"I ain't going to beg," replied the other, disengaging himself from the girl's clinging arms. "Go to it. Shoot!"

Suddenly the higher voice of Alice rang out.

"What's he going to beg for? He never did anything to you!"

"He took you—after promising to speak for me. He took you—didn't he?—when I was up there. I wanted to square it with you, so I told him to tell you the truth about me. But he and you—took everything—everything I had—plans and hopes—all I ever wanted! Pah! I can't wait. I know what I came for." He snapped the gun up into the air and swung it downward.

"I never loved you!"

Alice almost shouted the words. The Nightingale turned toward her.

"I told him so. If you want to kill anybody—kill me," she said.

"You would have loved me. I'd have made you love me," the Nightingale replied, in a vicious whisper. "There never was anything like you to make me—good."

"Good! You—good!" exclaimed the girl.

"You don't believe there's anything good in me?"

He came closer to her and peered at her, as if suddenly he was imitating a man in fear.

"No—nothing," she said defiantly; "not even your love. Even that was bad—it was all for you. Not even your love was good."

The Nightingale stared at her as if he were dazed.

"Listen," he said, after a second: "You mean that? Say it slow—you mean that?"

The girl stared at him, her mouth twisting.

"No," she said, at last.

"No—what?"

"No; I don't mean that," she said slowly. "I didn't mean it."

"He's playing with you!" Denny exclaimed. "Don't believe in him."

"I'm not going to blacken my heart with that lie," she answered stubbornly. "Before God, I believe there's something good in him!"

An explosive noise came from the Nightingale's throat.

"I oughta been an actor," he said, after a pause, with a coarseness in his voice which, after the silence, shocked them both. "Never mind. There was months of torture. Well, this night will pay for it. Listen! Answer me this: Why didn't you pull your gun, Denny?"

"I haven't any gun."

"You lie!"

"No," said Alice, "that's the truth."

The Nightingale stepped toward her and, with a quick motion of his gloved hand, caught her chin and turned her face into the moonlight.

"You'd believe me, wouldn't you?" she said, meeting his gaze.

"Yes."

"Well, when we heard you, I flung it into the water. That was the splash."

"The poor fool let you do that, did he?"

"It was my idea," said Alice, through chattering teeth. "I'd rather have him dead than—"

She choked. He released her chin at the moment that the other man had crouched to spring at him.

"You love him a lot!" sneered the Nightingale, looking from her to the man. "Oh, I know all about both of you. He's got a job and a salary, and has covered his tracks. He's going straight. Maybe he and you want to get married right away. Don't I know all that? Don't I? Didn't I think of that myself? Didn't I? I've got this here gun in my hand. Why don't you beg, Denny? Why don't you run?"

Denny gave a growl of rage.

"I'd kill him, wouldn't I, Alice?" asked the Nightingale.

"Don't you answer," said her lover. "Can't you see he's playing with us like a cat that's got a pair of mice."

The Nightingale laughed. He threw back his head and, through his thin lips, his voice issued forth again, sweet but terrible, simulating joyousness but horrible in its needle-like quality.

Suddenly he clipped off a note and whirled about toward the girl.

"Why wouldn't I kill him? They'd get me for it—but what's that to me? You love each other, eh? That means I get you both with one shot, maybe—all in one shot, maybe—all in one shot, eh? Gee, but ain't it a beautiful night! Look at them mists!"

A cloud passed over the moon. Far away beyond the inlet, on the waters of the Sound, a steamer behind the fog lifted its voice in a tremulous bass note. The rowboat was bumping against the pier; the little waves lapped at the piles. Again the Nightingale spoke.

"Denny, you was always a good feller—up there. I learned to like you, Denny. Do one more thing for me. And then—maybe—"

"What do you want?" the other asked sullenly.

"Let me kiss your girl—just once, Denny."

The answer was a growl.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" asked the Nightingale.

He was sliding over toward her; suddenly he made a dart of his head and shoulders. He seized her arm.

Denny was too quick for him; the girl's lover leaped forward, he struck the Nightingale a crashing impact in the face. The discharged convict staggered back, clawing at the air with his left hand.

"Now kill!" roared Denny. "You've got the gun. Do it!"

The Nightingale, however, began to laugh.

"Not yet, Denny," he gurgled, looking down at the gleaming weapon in his hand. "Ho, ho, ho! Not yet! We ain't begun our little play. Maybe you're right and Alice is wrong, Denny. I'm all bad, eh? So what can you expect from me, eh? Something nice? Something interesting? So let's look around."

He backed away toward the end of the pier and, with a quick thrust of his pointed chin, looked over the edge. He was humming to himself a little quiet tune which was almost like a whispered soprano.

"Hello—a rowboat—a rowboat, and no oars!" he exclaimed. "No oars! Maybe somebody uses this boat and has hid the great deal to have been quietly transported back to the brigands' camp, could it have been effected without effort and without discovery. In fact, I did actually consider, for a time, the possibility of returning there. Fortunately, I realised that this was utterly impossible, or else I might have made the attempt— strange as this admission may seem. In my weak condition, at that moment of huge disappointment, it did not seem humanly possible to go on with my effort to escape.

After a brief rest, and taking some more cocaine and milk tablets, I started off to climb this second obstacle. The height of that hill could not have been more than 700 or 800 feet; and, finally, I found myself at the top—almost before I realized the fact.

Gray light appeared through the bushes, and then I saw that I was standing on a narrow, flat ledge. A few steps along this showed me, in the growing light of day, that I was really on a goat track leading around the face and the point of the hill, and keeping practically level all the way. The relief was so great that I broke into a kind of staggering trot. The path led around through thinning woods until it came out on the grass land; and below me lay the little open valley that I had seen from camp.

I went down that smooth and steep hillside at great speed, often being on my back for fifty yards or more at a stretch. How I escaped serious injury, I cannot tell; but I reached the bottom bruised and sore. I saw a yellowish-pink band in the sky across the head of the valley, and realised that sunrise was due in an hour.

In all of this region, which was a special retreat for this band of brigands, the people enjoy a certain immunity from pillage and abuse, so I dared not show myself near a hut or my presence would have been immediately proclaimed by the wretched native dogs; and then I should have been betrayed to the brigands. Thus, I had to work around these open spaces.

A Rude Shock

I HAD evidently become a bit careless; for, on looking backward across a native path which I had just crossed, my weak nerves received a rude shock. Bobbing along the path was a line of enormous villagers' hats such as were used by many of the brigands in lieu of umbrellas.

I dived into the nearest patch of cover and lay still, scarcely daring to breathe. I must have lain there, in the same cramped position, for nearly an hour. Being soaked to the skin, I had become cramped and stiff, although the sun was very hot.

I was continually hearing, in imagination, some one creeping toward me and breaking the underbrush as he came; but, as nothing happened, after a time I sat up and peered cautiously through the bushes. After another half hour of hiding, I made my way, by crawling, to a point about a mile from my first position.

I selected a place for hiding where I could stretch my horribly cramped legs, and waited. Once or twice I heard very distant shouts; but as they did not come any nearer, I made my way along a faint path and found an ideal place to lie hidden. Feeling in my pockets, I discovered that the bottles of "Brand's Essence" had evidently disappeared in my midnight scramble, so I had to content myself with some milk tablets. At intervals I thought I could hear shouts, but these sounds possibly came from laborers in the fields.

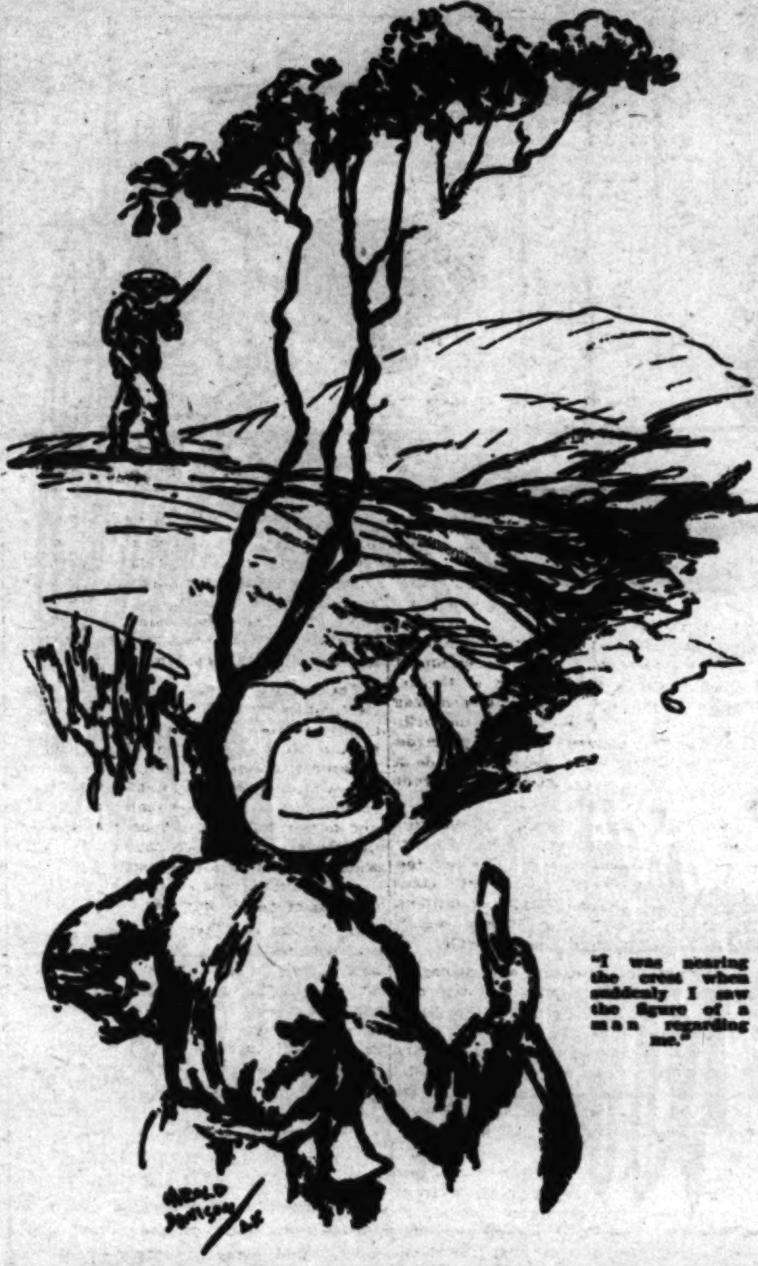
About midday I pushed on to the crest: but, as the hillside was fairly open and as the brigands probably had watchers on the hills, it was nervous work. It took me half an hour to reach this spot, and from the summit I could see, stretching away to the eastward into the haze, the Upper Yangtze valley with the river shining like a silver band in its midst. I could hear the far-off beating of gongs, such as were used by the muleteers on the march, and I came to the conclusion that the brigands must have started moving again.

For another hour, I kept a careful lookout, but could see no living thing. Crossing over the ridge, I set a southwesterly course, and made the best time I could along the steep and thickly-covered hillside. At 5 o'clock I dropped down hill to a little hamlet, some thousand feet below a precipitous gorge: but in this operation I lost my last tabloids.

In a hut in this hamlet I found two Mingchao women, who could speak no Chinese, but I managed to make them understand my signs and procured from them a few eggs, which they cooked for me in a filthy and broken iron pot the only cooking utensil in this miserable hovel.

It was nearing sunset when I pushed onward; and by dusk I had reached another tiny collection of huts. The people here were also Mingchao, and not very friendly; but I secured three more eggs from them and drank the hot water in which they had been boiled. Having procured some straw, I lay down to sleep. Though utterly exhausted, my nerves kept me constantly alert; and I spent a miserable sleepless night in consequence, my discomfort being accentuated both by the vermin, with which I was infested, and by clouds of ravenous mosquitoes.

Finally, at 3 o'clock in the morning, I could stand it no longer and set off by starlight, striving vainly to stick to the narrow path across the paddy fields in the darkness. I must have fallen fully a dozen times; and on several occasions remained where I had fallen for a rest, as I was simply dead tired.



"I was nearing the crest when suddenly I saw the figure of a man regarding me."

Daylight came mercifully a little after 5 o'clock, and I soon reached a small half Chinese village. My voice, I found, had nearly left me; and I rested in a house here for a couple of hours. With great difficulty, owing to the suspicions of the villagers, I secured the services of a small boy as a guide to Hsia Kuan. I could not obtain a mule or a donkey to ride.

We set out for Pingchuan, over 120 li (roughly forty-two miles) away. After weighing all the chances of the various routes open to me, I had decided to strike a middle course across the hills toward the southern end of Lake Talifu and thence toward Hsia Kuan. This road lay fairly level for some three hours, and then a steep hill confronted us. My guide, who could speak Chinese, informed me that from the summit the roads branched to Pingchuan and Hsia Kuan. Although I just managed to drag myself along at the rate of about two miles an hour on the level, I could barely negotiate the hills with the full aid of my stick.

Toiling wearily up this last steep hill, with frequent rests—my guide had dawdled behind to pick mushrooms—I was nearing the crest, when suddenly I saw the figure of a man to the left of the track who was regarding me curiously. Though I dared not look a second time at him, I had realised that he had a rifle in his hands.

What attracted me most was his round, blue-lined straw hat; and as I looked again, in a side-long way, it was with a distinct sense of nausea that I recognized, I felt sure, a certain pock-marked brigand who had guarded me almost constantly while I was a captive. He had always been a cheerful individual, but now a sardonic smile wreathed his lips as much as to say: "Well, you have taken a lot of trouble to rejoin us!"

Besides intense chagrin, my chief feeling was one of wonder that, after all my remarkable exertions, the brigands had found it possible to reach this exact spot in time to head me off from escape. I now observed that the man made no threatening motion nor did he move his rifle, which was not pointing in my direction; and he appeared to be talking over his shoulder with some one behind him whom I could not see.

Overcome by Weariness

HAVING gained the crest of the hill, I halted, as I was out of breath; and there, just before me, was a little tent with half a dozen or more armed men, obviously soldiers or brigands. Most of them wore uniforms. The first man now joined this group, and I then perceived, with sudden but only partial relief, that he was not my erstwhile cheerful and pock-marked guard in the brigand's camp. I took the bull by the horns and walked slowly toward them.

As I reached them, I asked if they belonged to the Pingchuan garrison; and they answered me in the affirmative. After giving me some water, which I drank down greedily, they led me down to a small village where the main patrol was billeted. Here I was received in open arms by a Chinese noncommissioned officer who was in command of these troops. He readily acquiesced in my request to proceed at once, and even volunteered to provide me with an animal to ride. This was lucky, as I could not have walked much farther.

Instead of making direct for Hsia Kuan, as I had intended, they said that I must accompany them to Pingchuan, which was their headquarters. I was not, even then—nor, in fact, for most of that afternoon—absolutely certain that they were not deserters turned bandits or soldiers in league with the brigands from whom I had just escaped. But I was far too weary mentally and phsically to labor the point; and we set out on our march immediately.

Twice I had to halt and dismount so that I could rest in the shade of a tree, and I only just managed to sit on my sorry mount until we reached, about 5 o'clock that afternoon, the village of Lo Kuan Ying, some three hours' march from Pingchuan. My food for the past forty-eight hours had consisted of a few eggs and tabloids; but here I managed to get some Chinese cakes and quantities of weak Chinese tea. I consumed the latter as fast as it cooled, as I lay on a bench in a tea house surrounded by the entire population of the village.

Deserted by Litter-Bearers

THE escort of soldiers were all for pushing on and obtained a new horse for my use; but I protested that I was unable to move. Eventually they procured a two-man litter, and in this I was carried into Pingchuan, reaching the Yamen in that town at about 9 o'clock that night. I was most hospitably received by the Chinese magistrate and his friends, and given hot milk, eggs and fruit. They wanted me to rest there for a few days, but I insisted on pushing on. I left Pingchuan at 6 o'clock next morning in a huakon (litter) and with an escort of twenty-five soldiers.

Half way to Hsia Kuan, my litter bearers bolted; and the goat herds impressed to substitute for them were so poor at their task that I had to walk most of the way thereafter. I think that the last thirty li (about ten and a half miles) into Hsia Kuan was physically the most trying experience I had ever had. Assisted by a soldier on one side and my stout ash plant stick on the other, I staggered into Hsia Kuan at midnight, just seventy-one hours after my escape from the brigands' camp.

I was again given food, and rested for a wonderful night on a real bed at the British-American Tobacco Company's establishment. For the first time in more than a month I reveled in a bath.

The following morning I was carried on a mountain-chair into Talifu, where I rested and recuperated in the most hospitable mission house for fifteen days before continuing my journey to Yunnanfu—the last stage of a most ill-fated journey. I had lost over thirty pounds in weight while a captive of the brigands, and badly needed the rest and medical attention given to me at Talifu.

A Battle With Brigands

IN COMPANY with the British Consul at Tengyueh, Mr. O. R. Coles, and two missionaries, we then left Talifu. We had an escort of ninety soldiers, provided by the Chinese General commanding at Talifu; but about fifty of these troops were always about half a day behind us looking after their own baggage mules. On the way our escort gave battle to a band of brigands and, after several hours' fighting in which the soldiers fired off 300 rounds of ammunition and killed three brigands, the rest were driven off.

It was with an enormous sense of relief that I finally passed under the western gate of the city of Yunnanfu. My adventurous and ill-starred journey was ended. I should not now be able to reach Peking overland, as I had always hoped to do.

Afterward I learned that the brigands were furious at my escape and at once sent out 200 men to scour the country for me. They had also offered a reward of $200—a large sum to them—for my recapture, dead or alive.

And then I learned with relief that the brigands from whom I had escaped were engaged in battle by Chinese soldiers and completely dispersed. Forty or more of them were killed. Among these was their leader, and the world was well rid of a thorough scoundrel.

NEXT WEEK: "With a Prince Among the Pygmies" by Prince William of Sweden

"Suppose I raise your wages?"

"Sho'nuff, ma'am. Reckon I mought stay on if'n you was to do that."

So it was that 320 domestic servants—members of The Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies—received an average salary increase of $1 per week.

They did not renege on the share due Sidney Skigg. Such an idea never occurred to them. And at the end of the first week of the new dispensation Mr. Skigg found himself possessed of $80 and some cents in cash money.

As soon as the pressure of work lifted Mr. Skigg set out violently for Sally Crouch's Cozy Home Hotel. He negotiated the first block in ten flat and the balance of the distance in a trifle less than nothing at all. He summoned the overstout proprietress of that colored hostelry and ordered the finest meal she had ever prepared, price no object.

Two hours later he shoved his chair back from the table. Within him there was a beatific sensation of unutterable fullness. For the first time in a month he was emancipated from the gnawing pangs of hunger. He sent out for a 25-cent cigar. And then, beneath its cloak of fragrant smoke, he inspected his cash.

Eighty dollars! Eighty dollars this week and next week and the week after that! Confronted by the physical presence of the cash, Mr. Skigg was stunned. He knew himself now for a super-Napoleon of finance, beside whom all other Napoleons were raw amateurs. In his hand was $80 in cash—and $80 in cash is many times more important than $80 in written figures. And the glory of it was that this first payment stamped The Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies with success. Of course, Sidney knew that eventually the society would disintegrate. But that calamity was far in the future, and meanwhile he was to become wealthy beyond all dreams of avarice.

Meanwhile, Maudlin Weskit was plumbing the nadir of misery. She knew from current gossip that the Order had been impressed with the seal of success and that Sidney Skigg was wallowing in affluence and destined to continue wallowing. She did not love him any more for it, but certainly she did not love him any less.

For a brief instant Maudlin considered going to Sidney and making a clean breast of it. That idea was discarded almost as soon as born. It would never do—for no man of Sidney Skigg's code of honor would tolerate for a moment the thought of another man's financial contribution to his own set of household furniture.

Nor could Maudlin break off her engagement to Zekiel Binion, for Zekiel was equitably part owner of the horrible furniture. And she was pledged to marry him. Should she cease to be engaged to Mr. Binion, that gentleman would emit a howl which would be heard from one end of Birmingham to the other, and this howl would inevitably come to the ears of Mr. Sidney Skigg—which would make Maudlin's status not at all enviable.

Also, Maudlin was confronted by an additional problem. Being a girl of keen perception, she was well aware of the fact that her status in the household where she was employed was none too good. Should she abide by the laws of The Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies and announce her intention of leaving, her mistress would bid her godspeed. She was not so poor a nurse as to be discharged; she was yet too poor a one to become the recipient of a raise in wages.

That afforded a loophole, of course. Yet Maudlin stood in terror of Zekiel Binion. She was afraid to allow that ponderous, egoistic gentleman out of her sight. It, therefore, behooved her to remain at her present place of employment. So that she reluctantly drew 25 cents from her weekly $8 and carried it down to the office of the Order. She placed the money on the desk of Mr. Sidney Skigg.

"I gotten me a dollar raise. Heah's yo' two bits.

He tried to return it. "Aw—Maudlin, I don't want to take money fum you."

"You is got to take it, Mistuh Skigg. Tha's the oath which I done swore at."

"But, honeybunch . . ."

The stark tragedy of the situation well nigh wrecked her resolve. Tears hovered close to the border. Here was the desirable Sidney Skigg still consumed with love of her . . . and she bound—ethically and financially—to Zekiel Binion.

"Ain't you gwine make ma'iage with me, Maudlin?"

She shook her head.

"Don' you love me no mo'?"

"Love ain't got nothin' to do with it, Sidney. Not nothin' a tall."

"Well," hopefully. "I've got money now. [illegible]—$80 [illegible] one week. An' I'se gwine have $80 or mo' comin' in ev'y week fum now on henceforthward. Eighty dollars Maudlin. Us c'n be the swellest cullud folks in Bummin'ham. Please."

"O-o-o-oh! Sidney," she wailed, speeding for the door lest her affections should overcome her. "Even fo' $800 I couldn't do it!"

He stared mournfully after her. In his new-found wealth he was more miserable than ever. Before, he had been convinced that her objections were purely economic. But now . . .

Yet unegotistical as he was in matters of the heart, he had seen an anguished flare in Maudlin Weskit's eyes which told him that something was wrong with her: that her decision was more than half dictated by circumstances of which he was ignorant.

In the days which followed misery dwelt soggily with all three of them; with the melancholy Sidney Skigg, with the wracked Maudlin Weskit, and with the entirely bewildered Zekiel Binion. Once—and only once—Mr. Binion made the tactical error of chiding Maudlin.

"Seems like that you ain't happy 'bout bein' engage' to a fine feller like'n to what I is."

"Seems like ain't is."

"It's most is. 'Cause if'n it seems like is to me, then so far as I is concerned at—it is is."

She flung around angrily. "Ev'y time you open yo' mouth, Zekiel Binion, nothin' comes out!"

"But Maudlin—"

"Zekiel Binion—you ha'n't better ast me no mo' questions. 'Cause if'n you does I is libel to tell you what I rilly thinks. An' if'n I does that same Zekiel—you is gwine be mo' unhappier than what you now is!"

And for once in his self-centered life, Mr. Binion saw the handwriting on the wall, deciphered it—and was wisely silent.

But he was not silent for long. Sensing that something was radically wrong with Maudlin—in a way affecting his matrimonial chances, he insinuated himself upon her with every opportunity. He begged and pleaded. Since they were to be married eventually—he couldn't understand why not now. Her procrastination was wearing on his nerves—and temper. He couldn't assert himself. Nor would she even allow the making public of their engagement.

And meanwhile Sidney Skigg was doing the heaviest thinking of a brilliantly thoughtful career. The money was coming in weekly. Eighty-four dollars the second week; eighty-six the third; nearly ninety the fourth. Money, money everywhere and nary a woman to spend it on.

The Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies was a sensational triumph. Female domestics clamored for membership and Sidney became captious. Only the best was his rule now—only members with a prospect of returning dividends. No second-class cooks or nurses or maids allowed on his roster.

Sidney's glory was empty and Sidney was desolate. In some inexplicable way he had mortally offended the only woman whom he desired to wed. Not only that, but he had offended her when they had more than half paid for a magnificent suite of household furniture.

Suddenly the long, wide feet of Mr. Sidney Skigg came down to the floor with a bang! For a few seconds he sat rigid, jaw drooping, eyes popped open. Then he rose and paced the room in a frenzy of thought. And finally he executed a hand stand and kicked his heels together in the air. It was the ultimate gesture of triumph. Once again mind bade fair to rise supreme above mere matter.

Sidney Skigg was nothing if not a man of action. His inspirational scheme was desperate, hazardous, demanded that he take a gambler's chance, but Sidney was in a mood and financial condition to balk at nothing.

Within two hours he had rented a cozy bungalow on Avenue G. It was a little gem of a place with radishes and lettuce growing in the front yard, rose vines curling above a neat veranda, and four elegantly papered rooms within. In the rear there was a chicken run and a place for more vegetables.

But Sidney did not stop there. From his battered old trunk he rescued the original furniture contract, and immediately made speed to the store.

"That furniture I was buyin' down heah, Boss-Man: how much money is owin' on it now?"

A consultation with the bookkeeper elicited information which tore at the heart-strings of Sidney Skigg. "One hundred and twenty-eight dollars!" Sidney was sad—yet elated: sad over the fact that Maudlin had stayed to keep up the installments—elated because there must have been good reason for so doing.

"If'n I was to pay you all them hund'ed an' twen'y-eight dollars in cash money, Boss-Man, could you deliver them furnitures down to my house on Avenue G right away?"

The furniture man agreed and Sidney Skigg paid over to him $128, taking therefor a receipt in full. Then he signed a new contract, paid down $20 additional, and added to the delivery order a cabinet phonograph and a half dozen jazz records.

From there he went to the courthouse, where his janitor friend prevailed upon the probate office to issue a marriage license.

And, four hours later, when dark had settled gently over the city of Birmingham, Sidney Skigg presented himself at the home of Miss Maudlin Weskit.

At first she refused point-blank to grant him an audience. But finally she did, and from that moment she was lost.

Sidney did not allow the conversation to veer into personal channels. He informed the teary Maudlin that something had transpired which was epochal. There was something vitally concerning them both which she must see. He refused to go into details. And finally, by preying upon her curiosity, he induced her to accompany him.

There was little said between them as they walked down Avenue G. Rather there was a silence which was pregnant with possibility. Sidney's heart was thumping in his bosom—beneath the new lavender silk shirt purchased that afternoon. And Maudlin, sensing that something tremendous was about to transpire, was content to keep silent.

They paused before Sidney Skigg's bungalow. Maudlin gasped rapturously.

"It's elegant, Sidney!"

"You rilly think so?"

"It's as sweet as—sweet as—as home baked ham!"

"I is got the key to it," said he. "Lemme show you inside."

Nervously she waited on the porch as he stepped within and turned on the electric lights. Then he threw wide the front door and escorted her across the threshold.

At first she did not understand. And then slowly the idea penetrated her brain. There was her lounge, her center table, her dining-room suite, her ornate bric-a-brac. And in addition thereto a phonograph valiantly spurting music into the room. Sidney stopped the music and faced her. But if he expected rapture he found only consternation.

"Oh! my Gawd! Sidney—what has you went an' done?"

He explained—explained tremulously yet fluently. No lover of romance ever argued with greater force. He sketched the hopeless history of his undying passion for her, of this last heroic plunge for success—and as he talked he slipped a nervous arm about her waist and held her tight against him. And then he produced the marriage license.

Maudlin wept. She longed to cuddle in the protecting arms of this magnificent man, but lurking in the mental background was the specter of the insufferable Zekiel Binion and the fifty dollars which he had paid upon this furniture which now graced the home of Sidney Skigg.

There was stark, unmitigated horror in the vision. She knew Sidney—and she realized that if he should discover her engagement to Zekiel Binion their own affair would be forever at an end. He would then think that she was marrying him for his money. And she wasn't; it was the injustice of her position which tortured.

And suddenly she faced him. "Sidney?"

"Yes, honey?"

"You wants me to ma'y you—t'night?"

"Oh! sweetness—"

Her face flamed lavender. "Don't call me no sweetness. I hates that word!"

"I'd ruther ma'y you than—"

"Then lis'en at me." She spoke with fierce passion. "I ma'ies you t'night on jes' one condition. You gimme $50—$50 cash money. I goes home to get me my trousseau. I come back heah in two hours. You has the preacher—an' us gits ma'ied. But Sidney—you promises you ain't nev' gwine ast me what did I do with them $50 you is gwine loaned me now!"

She bent forward tensely. And quietly he reached into his pocket. Therefrom he extracted two crisp new $20 bills and a $10 note slightly torn at one end. The remainder of his cash—a single frayed dollar—he returned to his pocket.

He placed the $50 in her hand. "In two hours, Maudlin, honey," said he, "I'se gwine be heah with the preacher."

It was a woman wildly delirious with happiness who left her future home and made amazing haste to the mansion on Highland avenue where she and Zekiel Binion were fellow-servants. In the butler's pantry she found the impressive Zekiel, and into his palm she pressed the two crisp, new $20 bills and the $10 note which was slightly torn at one end.

"There's that $50 you done loant me, Zekiel. Ev'y last cent of it!"

Zekiel was not averse to accepting the money. In fact, he appeared very much relieved.

"An' now," finished Maudlin, "it gives me great pleasure to tell you that I an' you ain't engage' no mo'. Not even a lil bit!"

Zekiel Binion protested, but she only laughed. And finally he turned away angrily.

"I always knowed you was a idjit!" he growled surlily. "Any woman which has got her a chance to ma'y me an' don' do same is a fool!"

Maudlin flung out of the house. To her own room she went and began packing a frayed straw suitcase with her honeymoon garments.

And meanwhile Mr. Sidney Skigg had been busy. Arrangements for the marriage ceremony were satisfactorily made with the Reverend Plato Tubb of the First African M. E. Church on the basis of spot cash. And suddenly Mr. Skigg bethought himself of something. He delved into his pocket and produced therefrom one veteran dollar bill and a few nickels.

Clearly it would never do to get married with only that amount of cash on hand. He dived into a telephone booth and called the house where Zekiel Binion was employed. When Zekiel's voice answered Sidney Skigg spoke rather harshly.

"I wants to see you immedijit."

"'Bout which, Mistuh Skigg?"

"Nev' min' 'bout which, Brother Binion. I desiahs to make talk with you—right away. You comes down to Bud Peagiar's where I is at—an' you comes quick."

Zekiel came quick. There was something in Sidney Skigg's voice which demanded prompt action. And there Sidney Skigg cornered him and again he spoke harshly:

"One night 'bout th'ee months ago, Brother Binion, you come to me an' 'lowed you had got to have $50 by the nex' afternoon. You said you was aimin' to buy some fu'niture or sumthin'. I was completely an' entirely busted then, Brother Binion—an' you said that if'n I was willin' to sign yo' note down to Semore Mashby's place he'd leave you have the money. I done same—as you well knows; but you is fell down on yo' paht.

"Las' week, Brother Binion, Semore Mashby tol' me you ain't never paid up that note, an' he made me pay it. Fifty dollars cash. An' I is sore. Also I needs them $50 an' I needs 'em now. So I says to you if'n you wants to keep Lawyer Chew offen yo' trail—you hikes right out an' gits me them $50. An' git 'em quick!" Sidney paused and glared. "Does you go git me that money now—or does you git into trouble?"

Mr. Zekiel Binion was not even fluttered. Not for an instant did he lose his perfect poise. He even allowed a sneer to decorate his pudgy countenance.

"I ain't gwine do neither," he announced coolly. "Ise gwine pay you right heah!"

"Now?" Sidney was surprised.

"Sho'ly" drawled Zekiel grandiosely. "I always ca'ies $50 with me!"

Whereupon Mr. Zekiel Binion nonchalantly produced from his wallet two crisp $20 bills and one $10 note slightly torn at the end. These he placed in the hands of Mr. Sidney Skigg.

"Now, Mistuh Skigg, I reckon us is square."

"Uh-huh!" returned Sidney Skigg. "I reckon us is!"

A Dire Mishap to Warren's Dress Suit

Another Entertaining Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of "Helen and Warren" Characters

"DEAR, you'd better get dressed! We ought to start by eight."

"Plenty of time," growled Warren, not glancing up from the sporting page.

"Come on, dear, we don't want to be hurried," Helen was adjusting the ribbon girdle of her maize tulle. "I've your clothes all laid out."

"Fed up with these bloomin' musicales!" Warren flung down his paper. "Lot of would-be prima donnas—and long-haired freaks punishing the piano! Never a real tune from the whole bunch."

"I wouldn't ask you to go, but Mrs. Stevens's giving it for her niece. You remember—Gloria Stevens. She's been in Paris—studying for concert work."

"Concert work?" he snorted. "Have to gush over her scale-juggling, will we? She'd do better with the cook book!" as he stalked into the bedroom. "Well, of all the nerve! Just look at that cat!"

"Oh!" Helen caught up Pussy Purr Mew, dozing placidly on his dinner coat. "But she's not shedding much now."

"She's not, eh? Everything I put on's covered with cat hairs."

"Is this the right shirt, dear?"

"No, that front buckles," emptying his pockets. "Get out one of those I got in London. Here, thought I told you to have this suit pressed."

"I know, dear," guiltily. "I called up the tailor this morning, but the line was busy—and I forgot to call again."

"Looks like the devil!" holding up the trousers.

As a rule, Warren had a wholesome, masculine unconcern about his clothes. Provided his collars and shoes were comfortable, he was not over-finicky. But last Saturday, coming home from the Daltons' dinner, they had been caught in a sudden shower.

"Wait, dear, I can press them. Maybe Susie's here—she'll do it."

"Well, make it snappy!" as he strode into the bathroom.

But the dark transom over the maid's door proclaimed her devotion to the movies.

In the kitchen, hastily Helen switched on the light, connected the electric iron, and dragged out the ironing board.

"No, you've had your supper. Now stop begging!"

"Meow, meow!" persisted Pussy Purr-Mew, rubbing ingratiatingly against her 3A satin slippers.

Waiting for the iron to heat, Helen was fluffing her hair by the kitchen mirror, when Warren, in his bathrobe, swung through.

"Got 'em ready?"

"Not yet, dear. I have to wait for the iron to heat."

"Huh! That'll take all night! Give 'em here—I'll wear 'em without pressin'. I'm not dollin' up for that party. There'll be enough freaks there—won't have time to lamp my pants."

"Just a minute more," testing the iron with a moist finger. "And they do look bad around the bottom. Dear, you ought to have two pair of dress trousers. Don't most men?"

"What's that got to do with it? One pair does me all right," always intolerant of her suggested innovations regarding his clothes.

"It's hot now," running the iron over the waxed stand. "You'd better phone for the taxi. Say we want it here in fifteen minutes—they're always late."

As Warren stumped out, Pussy Purr Mew, ever alert to his bathrobe tassels, bounded gleefully after.

A damp cloth laid over the trousers, Helen proceeded to press them. But the small iron was too light for the heavy broadcloth.

She was putting her whole weight on the front crease, when, from the dining-room, came an omnious crash.

A shivering of broken china!

Darting through the pantry door, with a cry of dismay she gazed at her prized luster pitcher—shattered on the floor.

Under the table crouched the culprit, her phosphorescent eyes dilated with fright.

"What's the trouble?" Warren, in his dress shirt and undies, was at the door.

"I don't know how she knocked it off!" picking up the pieces. "She must've smelt those salted almonds. I've told Susie again and again NEVER to leave ANY food on the sideboard. But every night she's in such a rush to get off to the movies. Oh, my lovely old luster pitcher!"

"You let that darned cat get up on everything! Sleeps on my dinner coat and smashes everything in the place."

"She didn't mean to do it," Helen always excused her. "She hardly ever knocks anything off. Look, she's so frightened—she knows she's done wrong."

"What's that burning?" sniffed Warren. "Smell it?"

"Oh-oh! It can't be your—"

Helen flew back to the kitchen.

From the ironing board came the pungent odor of burnt wool. There, on Warren's dress trousers, sizzled the still-connected electric iron!

With a panicky cry she snatched it up. On the glossy black broadcloth, just below the knee, was the scorched imprint of the iron!

For a dazed moment she stood in petrified horror.

The door back of her swung open. Warren!

A second's excruciating silence. Then with an explosive oath he brushed her aside and jerked up the still-smoking trousers.

"You pin-headed idiot!" he spluttered. "You—"

Her lips trembling, Helen dropped into the kitchen chair. In her agitation her wrist had touched the iron, but she was hardly conscious of the pain.

"What were you tryin' to do?" he thundered, holding up the trousers. "Fry 'em? You know what that means? A hundred and ten for another suit."

'Oh-oh!" she sobbed. "Can't the tailor—can't he fix it someway?"

"Think I'll wear patched trousers? Look at that hole—big as a pancake!" poking through the charred cloth.

That ghastly rent and the pain in her wrist now brought hysterical tears.

"Brains of a rabbit! Plant that red-hot iron on my best breeches—and walk out! Well, you've settled that party!"

Flinging the trousers on the floor, with another profane explosion, he swung out.

A hundred and ten dollars! Dropping her head on the kitchen table, Helen gave way to another paroxysm of tears. The smarting pain in her wrist was acute, but she was too mentally wretched to minister to the burn.

A hundred and ten dollars!

All her petty household economies to save a few cents! Just that morning she had dipped a chiffon blouse in gasoline to save a dollar cleaner's bill. And now she had "burnt up" a hundred and ten dollars!

A soft bound on the table beside her. A furry nose against her cheek. But Pussy Purr-Mew's sympathetic overtures were ignored.

The kitchen clock ticked away on the shelf overhead—the loud, rasping tick of a cheap alarm clock. The lilt of the phonograph from the kitchen above—Mrs. Morgan's maid having company. The drip, drip of the hot water faucet. It needed a new washer. She must tell the superintendent.

For a moment Helen's thoughts ran on mechanically. Then, with a sickening swoop they reverted to the hundred and ten dollars.

She could feel the purring warmth of Pussy Murr-Mew, who had curled up on the table close against her.

Too wretched to move, Helen sat there, her sobs now quieted to an occasional tremor.

At last heavy steps through the dining-room. The pantry door swung open.

"What're you staying out here for?" gruffed Warren.

A stifled sniffle from Helen, and the scurhas be'n payin' the rest. One hund'd an' fifty dollars I has paid on that fu'niture—and $50 I is behime in my payments. So I reckon it's me which is buyin' it—not us!"

Sidney Skigg put out a protesting hand. "You is onfair to me, sweetness; an' that ain't the fondest thing I is of."

"What you ain't fondest of doin' intrust me none whichsoever," came the cutting retort. "I goes an' gits engage' to you an' we buys a heap of fu'niture, plannin' to pay fo' same befo' we gits it. You pays the fust fifty dollars—an' then you quits payin'."

"Man caint make no payments when he ain't got no money."

"Man ain't no man which ain't got money."

"I is got brains."

"The kin' of brains you is got ain't no good without eggs."

"But, honey," he pleaded, "ain't I plannin' to pay some mo' on our fu'niture?"

"Plannin' ain't savin' me no money. Sense you went an' quit on me, I has be'n gwine down to that fu'niture man ev'y Saddy night an' givin' him fo' dollars, ontil I has put a hund'ed an' fifty into that fu'niture which stan's in yo' name. An' now I owes fifty dollars back payments. Fust off you know, the man is gwine say we loses which we has paid—an' then I is a ruint gal."

"In th'ee months I is gwine have money, an'—"

"In th'ee months," she snapped, "I is gwine have that fu'niture."

"But 'bout our 'gagement?"

"They's on'y one thing 'bout our 'gagement, Mistah Sidney Skigg. I'se glad I had enough beforesight to make it a secrit!"

And as she flounced from the hall, disdaining his escort, he gazed after her with eyes in which true love burned brightly.

After all, he reflected, she wasn't exactly fair to him. He loved her devotedly and she knew it. Certainly she could not question his liberality when in funds, and equally certainly he wasn't responsible for his financial stringency. Didn't she realize that he was a man of parts and of excessive intellect? How could she help it—particularly on this night when he had organized The Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies and insured himself a large and steady income?

Finally the answer came to him, and miserably he buried his face in his hands.

"I begins to sispec'," he moaned, "that Maudlin don' love me no mo'!"

In which conclusion he was only part right. Maudlin did love him, loved him as passionately as she had on that memorable moonlight night when she pledged him her heart, hand and weekly wages. But Maudlin was slightly out of patience.

There was no denying the fact that Mr. Skigg was a genuine gentleman Even Florian Slappey, sartorical epic that he was, had nothing on Mr. Skigg, haberdasherily speaking. And where Florian was indifferent and languid, Mr. Skigg was, in every sense of the word, a live wire. His courtship of Maudlin had been a thing magnificent. Dynamically he had wooed and swept her from not unwilling feet. And now—

It was all the fault of that furniture. Four hundred dollars' worth they had selected at a big store on Fourth avenue; four hundred dollars' worth, deliverable when the four hundredth dollar was paid. One hundred weekly installments of four dollars each.

Their plan was glorious and sane. They were to marry when the furniture was theirs absolutely and in fee. Then they intended buying an automobile on the installment plan and so establish themselves in the forefront of colored society.

The ten dollars down had been paid cheerfully—insouciantly—by Sidney. For ten weeks thereafter he shelled out the weekly installment of four dollars. Then, finding himself forced to seek credit at Bud Peaglar's Barbecue Lunch Room and Billiard Parlor for thrice daily eatments, he informed his lady love that the financial burden was temporarily hers.

Fired by love for this superb gentleman, Maudlin went cheerfully about her task. But at the end of a couple of months she found the going very barren indeed. And she protested. Her protestations availed her nothing. Sidney didn't have the money. She worked and struggled and saved and paid, until now $200 stood to her credit on the furniture account.

But for the last several weeks she had been unable to meet the installments, and for that period her rancor against the insolvent Mr. Skigg had been growing to formidable proportions. In fact, Maudlin was becoming desperate.

It did not bother her particularly that the partly paid for furniture stood in the name of her subrosa fiance. She gave him credit for gentlemanly instincts and knew that he would cheerfully relinquish his equity to her on presentation of the proper amount of cash. But what did bother her was that the furniture man was waxing impatient and demanding past, present and future payments.

She argued, begged, pleaded and cajoled, but the furniture man was adamant. He convinced her that despite the fact that he still held the furniture, any further delinquency on her part would result in forfeiture of the money already paid to him. And the mere thought of losing Sidney's fifty, her contribution of triple that amount, and that elegant, polished furniture which they together had selected, was intolerable.

And so, after this last interview with Mr. Skigg, wherein she became convinced once and for all of his inability to help her out of the present pressing financial difficulty, she bethought herself of ways and means of escape.

And that meant that the portly figure of Mr. Zekiel Binion was uppermost in her mind.

Maudlin was not overly fond of Mr Binion. For one thing he was too fat. And too pleased with himself. But Mr. Binion spoke with great fluency upon the matter of his own pecuniary staunchness and gave the impression that money—and a sufficiency of it—was the one thing he experienced no difficulty in obtaining.

Ordinarily Mr. Binion was the last person in the world to whom Maudlin would have thought of turning. But now she was convinced of Sidney Skigg's financial defunctness, and as she entertained no great optimism regarding the future dividends of the Amalgamated Order of Laboring Ladies, she allowed her matrimonial reflections to dwell upon the big man who served as butler in the establishment where she was employed as nurse to a pair of highly obstreperous twins.

Maudlin was not fond of Zekiel, but that had nothing whatever to do with her present calculations. What did count was the fact that Mr. Binion was very fond of her. So fond, in fact, that he spoke of his own glories only 90 per cent of the time he was with her, consuming the other 10 per cent in voluminous explanation of the magnificence which would be hers should she consent to become Mrs. Zekiel Binion.

Fortunately Mr. Binion knew nothing of her secret engagement to the elegant Mr. Skigg, else he would have choked off his protestations of undying affection on the grounds that he was a man of honor and not given to poaching on the preserves of another. Therefore, Miss Weskit was glad that Mr. Binion was in ignorance.

The following morning, after a night of deep, headachy thought, Maudlin led Mr. Binion into a proposal of marriage. And then, at the psychological moment, she rebelled—and turned him down. He walked mournfully away from her, turning at the door for a lugubrious Parthian shot:

"One of these heah days, Maudlin, you is gwine fin' out what a swell man you ain't ma'ied to!"

Three weeks passed, and as each slipped swiftly away Maudlin found her back more solidly against the wall of trouble. On each of three successive Saturday nights she visited the furniture man and handed him $4 from her eight-dollar wages. Each Sunday morning she inspected with increased interest the pompous Mr. Binion. Each Sunday noon she decided that he was less impossible. And each Sunday night at church she longed to take Sidney Skigg for worse or worser—with furniture or without.

But it was on a Wednesday night that the decision was brought to her. On that particular day she was visited at her place of employment by an agent for the furniture store. That white gentleman talked gruffly, fluently and damningly. He made it very clear indeed that if she did not pay in full the overdue installments the total amount paid in would be declared forfeit and her equity gone. That in itself was sufficient to bring her to the point of surrender.

The climax was capped that night at prayer meeting. Mr. Sidney Skigg was there assisting the choir. It was his first vocal appearance in many weeks, and there was no denying the fact that he slung a wicked baritone. Not only that, but he used it once in a pathetic little ballad which was introduced to relieve an obvious tedium. It had to do with broken hearts and well-tended graves, where jilted lovers lay more or less peacefully sleeping. And after the meeting he joined her in the church, surreptitiously clasped her hand, and suggested that they be married that night. He had a friend, he explained, who worked in the courthouse, knew the probate judge, and could arrange an immediate marriage license.

And the heartwrung Maudlin almost succumbed. Almost—not quite. She emerged from the love maze dazed and gasping for breath, thankful for her narrow escape, yet vaguely regretful. She dismissed Mr. Skigg in a manner so positive that he became quite sure his heart was hopelessly smashed and his chances of her hand forever blighted.

That night Mr. Zekiel Binion escorted her home. He proposed. And she, frightened by her narrow escape from marriage to Sidney Skigg—with its consequent inevitable loss of the already partly paid for furniture—consented to become Mrs. Binion.

They were strolling up Avenue F at the time. They turned into Seventeenth street and Mr. Binion took the future Mrs. Binion in his arms for the first kiss of their betrothal. She yielded, then broke away with the question uppermost in her mind.

"Is you rilly got money saved up, Zekiel?"

"Money? Me?" He swelled with pride. "Huh! Money is the on'y thing I ain't got nothin' else but."

She sighed relievedly. Mr. Binion was not entirely convincing, but at least it was a pleasure to be engaged to a man who possessed an optimistic tongue. After Sidney Skigg—poor Sidney! An idea came to Maudlin.

"Zekiel?"

"Call me sweetness."

"Sweetness?"

"Yeh, honey?"

"I is got on'y one reques' to ast of you befo' becomin' engage.'"

"What you asts fum me is a command fo' same, my darlin'."

"I asts this, sweetness. I asts that I an' you keep our 'gagement secret fo' awhile."

"Aw."

She became impatient. "If'n you ain't willin' to keep it secret, then you needn't keep it a tal!"

"But if'n I an' you is engage' to git ma'ied?"

"I never said we was engage' to git ma'ied. I jes' on'y said we was engage'."

Mr. Binion shrugged resignedly. "Have it yo' own way, Maudlin, honey. Lovin' you like'n to what I does, they ain't nothin' I woul'n't do fo' you." He paused and looked pridefully upon her palpitant beauty. "Not nothin'."

Deliberately and with malice aforethought—her mind on the furniture—Maudlin vamped him. She flashed him an intriguing glance from beneath half-closed lids. "You honest means that, Zeikiel?"

"Call me sweetness."

"You rilly, truly means what you said, sweetness?"

"Crost my heaht an' hope to turn to a tripe."

"I wonder." Her head bowed. "Fo' a long time, sweetness, I is be'n thinkin' that mebbe some day I an' you was gwine to git ma'ied to each other."

"Hones'?"

"Hones'. And so I is be'n savin' up a s'prise fo' you."

"Hot dam! Maudlin, I jes' loves s'prises."

"This is a turrible fine one."

"Tell it to me, honey; tell it to me."

She hesitated. "I was thinkin', sweetness, that when us got ma'ied we'd go to housekeepin'." She did not notice that his face fell slightly. "An' so a long time ago when I fust off decided that I was gwine ma'y you, I went down to the fu'niture man an' bought me fo' hund'ed dollars' wuth of the swellest fu'niture which is."

"Fo' hund'ed," he choked.

"Tha's which, sweetness. Ten dollars down an' fo dollars a week—ev'y week. Us to git the fu'niture when it's all paid fo' Then us gits ma'ied. Now, honey, I is a'ready paid mo'n $200 on that fu'niture, but I is behime on them 'stallments, an' if'n I don' make up them which I is behime, us is gwine lose all that $200 which I has done paid."

Zekiel Binion gasped for air. Facts were falling too fast for his comprehension. "Wh—where I comes in at?"

She took the plunge. "Sence this fu'niture is bein' bought fo' you, Zekiel—sweetness—I wants you to loaned me them 'stallments I is behime an' lemme pay 'em all up."

"H-h-how much them 'stallments is?"

Again she hesitated. First she decided upon the truth, then determined that there was no use piking. "Fifty dollars!"

Mr. Binion's portly figure wilted visibly. "Fifty dollars!" he gasped, incredulously. "Cash!"

"Cash money. Co'se that ain't nothin' to a man which is got a heap of money like'n you is got. I would'n't ma'y no man which $50 was real money to."

"When you wants this heah $50?"

"T'morrow."

Zekiel Binion hesitated. Here was a matter demanding severe judicial thought. $50! But on the other hand it was a good investment, and he had worked mighty hard to obtain Maudlin's consent.

"'Tain't so easy gittin' fifty dollars."

"Oughtn't to be fo a fine man like'n to what you is, sweetness."

"No. Co'se not. On'y—"

She stamped her foot. "Does you git it fo' me tomorrow, or ain't we engage'?"

He slipped. He fell. "I—I gits it fo' you t'morrow. We is engage'!"

And the following afternoon he handed her ten crisp five-dollar notes. There was nothing cheerful about him as he did so. There was, in fact, a rather pathetic droop to the lips and a sagging of the ample waist line. But such a radiant girl as Maudlin, he figured, was cheap at the price.

"You pays up them back 'stallments," he said, "with them $50. But does you espec' me to keep on payin' fo' dollars ev'y week?"

She held her head pridefully high. "I mos' suttinly does not. I is a lady, an' a lady pays her own 'stallments."

Immediately upon leaving him she sped for the furniture store, where she handed over the entire $50, breathing easily upon leaving there for the first time in many weeks. Yet she was easy of mind only in so far as the furniture was concerned. The transaction was permeated with an air of inevitability. She felt that she was signed, sealed, and all but delivered to the clammy clutches of Zekiel Binion—and that was no pleasant thought.

In the weeks which passed immediately thereafter Maudlin became an excessively sad lady. She felt that she had erred—had been buffeted cruelly by circumstance. For the longer she remained engaged to Zekiel the more attractive became Sidney Skigg. Even the furniture lost some of its superb allure.

And then the three-months' period ended and a cataclysm descended upon the good housewives of Birmingham.

On that memorable day precisely 802 colored servants presented themselves before their mistresses and announced that they intended to leave. In almost every case the dialogue which ensued was the same.

"Leave!" Horrified. "Going to leave?"

"Yas'm."

"Why?"

"Jes' gwine leave; tha's all."

"Aren't you satisfied with the place?"

"Yes'm. Puffec'ly satisfried. But I reckon I'se gwine leave."

"But you can't! Don't you know that I've got company coming, and—"

"Awful sorry, ma'am. But I'se jes' sort of got a hankerin' to leave off fum wuk."

A few more than 500 prostrated housekeepers allowed the conversation to end there. Approximately 300 of them, driven to desperation, delved more deeply into the problem.

"Isn't the work easy enough?"

"Yas'm, the wuk ain't so turrible hahd."

"The hours are easy?"

"I ain't kickin' 'bouten the hours."

"Then why are you leaving?"

"Jes' leavin', ma'am. Tha's all."

"You can't leave! I refuse to allow it.

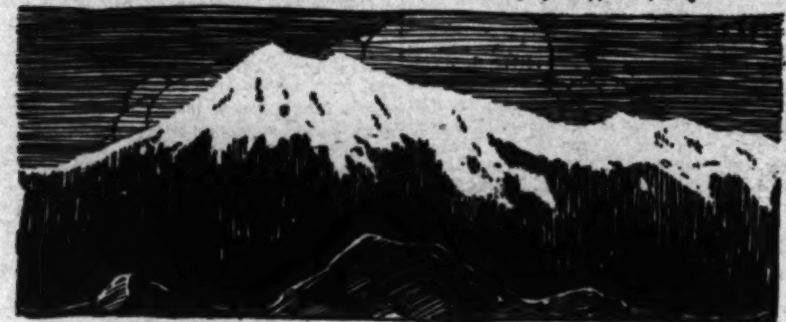
The Spirit of the West

Ode on California Admission Day

BY BELLE COOPER



I

I am the Spirit of the West,
The daughter of sea and sky,
Born of the longing of the ages,
And dimly seen in dreams of sages.
I am not the child of the Southland blest,
Nor yet the cultured East's bequest,
Nor descended from both am I;
And I'm not transported from foreign lands,
To wander in exile on lonely strands;
I'm just the child of the sea and sky,
The Spirit of the mystic West!

But in my form and in my face
There dwells more than a hidden trace
Of all the best the world has known,
Yet still I claim them as mine own.
I have Hebraic joy in God,
Teutonic love of the home-sod,
The Latin joy in childlike fun,
Germanic love of battle-fray;
The British standard of fair play;
The Swiss ideal of mountain life.
And Russian fearlessness in strife;
But still my faith's in right, not might.
I've Persia's worship of the sun;
I've Spartan courage, Greek delight
In beauty for pure beauty's sake;
I've Roman pluck whate'er the stake;
I've Irish wit, and Scottish grit,
The witching grace of France and Spain,
The charming southern lilting strain,
Norwegian strength, and eyes aye lit
By blue-eyed England's love of truth;
America's eternal youth!
I have the thrift of eastern lands,
The open heart of western strands;
But still I am—well, just myself,
Neither an angel nor an elf,
But the embodied West itself.

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze,
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze;
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West,
And I sing her endless praise!

II

I live in the blast on the mountain crest,
Or on frosty peak where weird winds speak,
Or in dewdrop on daisied lea;
In the brooding love in linnet-nest,
Or the babe at his mother's knee.
I laugh where the poppies dance in glee,
Or I flash through the open sky;
On pinions strong I am borne along
To the snows of Sierras high;
I roll o'er the plain a martial strain—
The refrain of a Viking song—
But it sinks to a crooning lullaby
When on gossamer-winged sail
I dip o'er the sheltered vale,
A drooping pansy to lift again,
Dew-drenched with the midnight rain.

I love the mountains white with snow,
And the greening vales below;
Sometimes at night
I sleep on a height
Where Alpine breezes blow.
I love the thunder's rumble,
And 'neath the lightning's flash
I see the tall pines crumble,
And hear the waterfalls dash
Down a yawning abyss
With a roar and a hiss.
Sometimes I count each frosty star
That shines in the blue afar;
Or again in a lily cradled I lie,
Fanned by a wing of a butterfly,
Or kissed by a roving bee.
I laugh as I ride by a mountain's side,
Or sweep o'er the billowy sea;
But wherever I roam,
I always come home
To the Golden Gate, my pride.

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze,
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze;
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West,
And on wondrous charms I gaze!

III

I see the mountains grim and old,
Whose hearts an Argo-treasure hold;
I see the purple shadows play
On greening hills; and far away
The silver sheen of olive tree;
The gleaming poppy fields I see;
I hear the song of the rippling wheat—
Was ever a lyric half so sweet?
The golden grain waves to and fro
Like a sea aglint with sunset glow.
On heights inured to wind and storm
I see the fir tree's giant form,
And soldier pines all gaunt and gray;
The redwoods solemn vigil keep
When twilight shadows earthward creep.
All these beauties I can spy
From my lookout in God's blue sky.
On high I fly on fairy wing,
And ever as I fly I sing:

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze;
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze:
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West,
The light of the coming days!

IV

I see the sweep of the boundless deep
Where whitecaps madly play
On the golden strand of the fairest land
That greets the new-born day;
I see a lovely land-locked bay—
The pride of men the wide State o'er
And rising nymph-like from the foam
With many a stately tower and dome
That sparkles like a jeweled crown,
The Queen of the Pacific shore,
The city of St. Francis rests—
E'en like her prototype, old Rome—
Serene upon her hilly crests.
Westward she looks across the sea
To oriental lands that wait
The spirit of the Golden Gate.
She thinks of light to be shed there—
The light to make men follow right—
And knows that light some day must come
From California, glad and free,
The home of truth and liberty.

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze;
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze;
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West,
And I send broadcast my rays!

V

Eastward she turns her loving eye
Past Alcatraz, that lies at rest
Gem-like upon the heaving breast
Of a sea as blue as the skies above;
Her heart o'erflows with tender love
As the springing lights of yonder town
Reveal the home of cap and gown,
Dear Berkeley, e'er the scholar's bride,
Worthy her lavished civic pride,
Her national renown,
And learning's laurel crown.
She stands for right, not might—
Her motto aye: "Let there be light!"
Now many for her message wait
Beside the gleaming Golden Gate;
Her light shall be dispersed broadcast
As long as light and day shall last.
A starward-pointing tower white
Is center of her culture wide,
A beacon-light in stormy gale,
Symbol of truth that shall prevail.
And ev'ry hour from Sather Tower,
Built like San Marco old,
The glad bells chime the flight of time
In this bright clime
Where all the days deep pleasures hold.
Their message is undying love
To God who lit the stars above,
And gave to man the gift of love
To lead him to the God of Love!

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze,
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze;
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West,
And God is Love always!

VI

I am the Spirit of the West,
And my memory fails me not;
Loved forms and faces are ne'er forgot;
See the rugged miners—the '49'ers—
Who came in quest of gleaming gold,
But treasure found in wealth untold
Of golden poppies and sunshine,
In golden apples, grain and win
They were heroes, stalwart, true;
I love to give them honor due
For courage, love, and steadfast grace
All obstacles bravely to face.

Today 'tis not red gold we seek,
But a people brave whose tongues shall speak
Out of a heart by truth made bold;
Who cannot be lured by greed of gold,
But upward mount, heedless of fate,
Aye in their hearts a burning hate
For aught that is short of the purest gold
That a person's character can unfold.
I see such lives in the Land of the West,
The home of the bravest and the best;
And here shall come to make their home
The young, the old, the rich, the poor,
For open stands the welcome door;
And they shall find on my golden strands
Rest—rest, in the best of all lands.
I am the Spirit of the West;
All languages I speak;
And all who seek the Golden West
Shall find sheer joy and hope divine,
And live for aye in God's sunshine.
See, countless voices swell the strain
Until the heavens ring again:

REFRAIN

Sky and mountains a-calling,
And over the valleys a haze,
And rays gold-tipped a-falling
Where the Golden Gate's ablaze;
Oh, I am the Spirit of the West—
The land beyond man's praise!

THE SECRET WORTH HALF A MILLION

Anita Marchetti had won a further 21,400 francs that afternoon, and yet another 30,000 at 8 o'clock. After that she gave a dinner to her friends at the Restaurant de Paris to celebrate her victory.

On the following afternoon I entered the crowded room and, unobserved, watched the girl sitting opposite the old Spaniard, with the young Englishman as usual standing near.

Suddenly, as I stood there, I saw the old man and the girl exchange signs, whereupon the latter placed the maximum upon number thirty-three.

In an instant dozens of hands of both sexes placed money upon the table, on the transversale, the odd number, the "column," and the noir.

For a few seconds, as usual, all were breathless in the tension of the game.

"Trente-trois! Noir!" cried the croupier in his harsh tone, which echoed through the great salon, and the gay, dark-haired Anita had won once more, while her following crowd of players had also gained.

As she left the table she passed me, and, halting, exclaimed in a low but tantalising whisper:

"Ah! M'sieur Jacquin! Do you not regret that you did not come to an arrangement rather than allow us to ruin the administration?"

"Mademoiselle, I regret nothing," was my rather stiff reply.

"Not tonight. But you will be full of regret soon, for whatever you offer us we will not now accept."

"Suppose I give orders that neither you nor your friends be admitted?" I asked.

"Then we should sell our secret to others. Believe me, there would be many eager to buy at a huge figure!"

And, laughing gaily, she followed young Grant and the old Spaniard out.

I went home to my flat down in La Condamine that night full of grave reflections. Here was a person who had actually discovered a means to insure our defeat!

Next day, and yet the next, the trio continued to win big coups at the maximum. Then in the evening all three left and went across to dine at Ciro's.

The girl and her associates had already banked £126,000! We saw that it was now high time that we bestirred ourselves.

Each day, be it remarked, they carried their winnings to the Comptoir d'Escompte, now placing them in the joint names of Signorina Marchetti and young Grant, whose address the latter had given as at "Fitzjohn's Avenue, Hampstead, London.

On the following day the trio won a further £20,000, while the winnings of those following the girl's play were prodigious, instead of our bank making any profit, it was losing heavily daily.

In desperation I spoke that night with Monsieur Destruge in Paris, begging him to come to Monte Carlo at once and personally witness the play of the weird trio.

On his arrival we had a long and very serious consultation in my room. Indeed, it lasted all the afternoon.

That night, with one of his codirectors, the Baron Despujol, we strolled into the rooms and watched the gay crowd at play. At the same table sat the young girl and the old Spaniard, with the good-looking young Englishman still an observer.

The trio did not notice us, so intent were they upon the game. They had sat there nearly six hours without hazarding a franc upon the game. They simply watched.

As I was whispering into the ear of Monsieur Destruge the bald-headed old Spaniard suddenly nodded to the girl before him.

Already the red-and-black disc had been set in motion, the croupier had declared the game to be made, and the ivory ball

WILLIS BOOTH, president of the International Chamber of Commerce: said at a luncheon in Philadelphia:

"Our prosperity is amazing. To find poverty anywhere nowadays is like finding a needle in a haystack.

"They say a rich charity organization gave an out-of-work man a four-course dinner the other day and then urged him to turn up the following evening at a supper they were offering the unemployed.

"But the man consulted his engagement book and then said:

"'Sorry, but I'm full up for tomorrow, folks; fish breakfast at the Refuge for the Homeless, lunch at the Destitutes' Assistant League, turkey dinner at the United Church Charities and midnight Bowery supper in the Screen Stars' Shelter for Homeless Hoboes.'"

TWO nights a week, the little bungalow at Hollywood and Cahuenga is deserted. Viola is taking esthetic dancing lessons—"to reduce my weight," she explained to Frank.

He was considerably upset, therefore, to stroll into the drug store one night and find Vi getting away with her third chocolate sundae.

"My goodness, how in the deuce do you expect to reduce when you eat a lot of sweet stuff like that?"

"That's just the idea," explained Vi. "If I didn't eat the sweet stuff, I might get thin, and if I got thin, I wouldn't have any excuse for taking the dancing lessons, and I enjoy them so much."

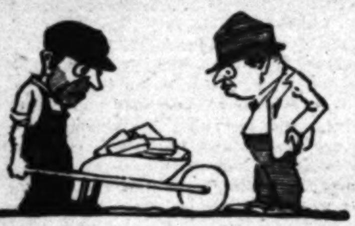
CHARLES M. SCHWAB said in the course of a Y.M.C.A. luncheon success talk:

"Then there is the antisuccess spirit. Two workmen were wheeling dirt in wheelbarrows. The boss went up to one of them and said:



"'Look here, you! Your mate's wheeling four wheelbarrowloads to your one!'

"'Well,' snarled the workman, 'don't blame me. I've told him about it half a dozen times already.'"

THE bargain ads in The Times proved too much for Mrs. Atkinson the other day and she went down town to try her luck, taking little Doris with her. It was the usual rush and jam which sends everyone home with a peeve. In addition, Doris had been fretty.

"She really ought to be spanked," Blanche concluded while her husband, the State's champion duck hunter, paid as little attention as possible.

"Aw, gee," protested Doris, "if you was like me, you'd be fretty. You could look around and see things, but I'm only a little girl and all I could see was skirts and pants."

What's the Use?

SENATOR BORAH was talking about the oil scandals. "I am not sure," he said, "that all this controversy, much of which is nothing but conversation, is doing any good. It merely gives the public a warped notion of national political life, and in the reaction, the honest public servant, who is in the majority, must suffer with the guilty.

"Sometimes I think these public scandals are just about as important as the argument indulged in by little Bobbie, and which sent him home with a black eye.

"'But if Edward hit you, why didn't you hit him back?' Bobbie's father wanted to know.

"'Aw, what's the use?' exclaimed the little fellow. 'If I had hit him back, then it would only be his turn again.'"

Culinary Notes

A GARVANZA matron sends in this one, with the understanding that her name wasn't to be used. She says:

"Friday evening I go to choir rehearsal. Last week, in one of the intervals, a friend and I were talking about our different methods of cooking. The rest made so much noise that we had to scream to make ourselves heard. So engrossed were we that we didn't notice when the conductor signed for silence. Then, much to my embarrassment, into the silence I screamed, 'I always fry mine in butter.'"

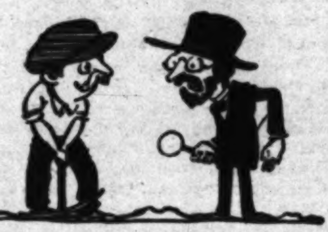
Proving His Point

THE late Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical expert, hated ignorance.

"Ignorance," he once said in a Schenectady address, "is an armor you can't pierce. A geologist one day found a laborer digging flints from chalk. Knowing the local legends and beliefs, the geologist said:



"'Do you think those flints grow?'

"'No, sir,' said the laborer, 'I don't think nothin' about it. I know they grow.'

"The geologist laughed.

"'Take one home, then,' he said, 'put it on the mantel, and see how much it grows.'

"'All right, I will,' said the laborer, 'and you do the same with a potater, and see how much it grows.'"

THE Clemens home at Hartford was next door to that of Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Mark Twain and the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" were the best of neighbors.

Mrs. Stowe was leaving for Florida one morning, and Mark Twain ran over to say good-by. On his return his wife looked at him, disapprovingly.

"Why, Youth," she said, "you haven't on any collar and tie."

He said nothing, but went up to his room, did up these items in a neat package, and sent it to Mrs. Stowe by a servant, with the note: "Herewith receive a call from the rest of me."

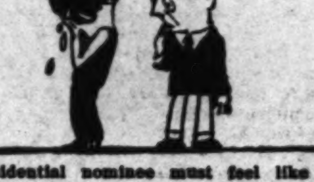
Doubtful Honor

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE was ridiculing the Democratic convention. "It seems to me," he said, "that a party is a mockery if it has no reason for existing. That is the condition of the Democratic party today. To see a body of men laboring day and night for something to call a platform and justify their existence is both laughable and pathetic.

"As for the nomination, I imagine the Presidential nominee must feel like the girl who began to cry when a young man proposed to her.



"'What are you crying for, dear?' he asked anxiously. 'Did I offend you?'

"'Oh, no, but mother always said I was such an idiot that not even a donkey would propose to me, and now one has.'"

"I'M sorry, but this bill is so dirty that I'm afraid I can't use it," said the trolley conductor on an Edendale car, passing back to the passenger a grimy piece of paper, originally intended to represent a dollar.

THE fancy prices charged for fruit in some of the Hollywood stores daze the out-of-town rancher.

Some fine red apples displayed in a vegetable stand on Hollywood Boulevard caught the eye of a man from the apple-growing State of Washington and he thought he'd buy a couple to munch as he strolled along.

"Gimme two of those," he said to the clerk, holding out a $5 bill. "How much are they?"

The clerk thought he knew a hick when he saw one.

"Two dollars apiece," he said, quickly producing the dollar change.

"Just keep the dollar, son, and we'll be square," said the stranger. "I tried a grape when you weren't looking."

"This shocking increase would seem to lend credence to the old bachelor's lying tirade.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, discoverer of the theory of relativity, may have a worldwide reputation as a mathematical genius, but he failed recently to make an impression upon a street car conductor of Berlin line number seven.

Prof. Einstein boarded the car with his wife who is a celebrated violinist. He was explaining to Mrs. Einstein his fear that the heat might harm her violin and paid little attention to the change given him by the conductor. After counting his change hurriedly, Einstein insisted that the conductor had made a mistake. The latter recounted the change deliberately, explaining to the professor that it was correct and then turned to the next passenger with a shrug of his shoulders and the remark: "His arithmetic is weak."

THERE was company for luncheon and small Elizabeth had been instructed to be as quiet as possible and not to interrupt the grownups' conversation with her remarks. She sat in dutiful silence accepting what was set before her with little apparent satisfaction, but with no audible protest, until the hot roll upon her plate threatened to grow cold unbuttered.

Something t

By G. B.

TERRY lay on the sofa, and Thyme stood at the window; and outside, the rain united the land, the fields, the ricks and the chestnut woods, into a grey monotonous soak.

"I'm in the doldrums," Terry declared. "Why does nothing ever happen to us? Nothing romantic or weird or desperate?"

"'Little did our innocent heroine think, as she spoke, what fantastic happenings were due to befall her before tea-time,'" murmured Thyme, languidly improvizing.

Her sister suddenly sat up, her brown eyes alert. "Thyme, something is going to happen—I can feel it coming nearer and nearer—"

"You can," Thyme's voice was very grim. "The gods have sent Mrs. Wormack to tea."

Terry groaned. Her groan was overheard by the stout lady just entering.

"Oh, my dear, are you feeling so bad today? I thought I'd call in to brighten you a bit, not but that your kind little sister is worth more than fifty neighbors, but still—"

"I'm the one that's been ill," Thyme firmly contradicted. "Terry's the kind little sister. You've got us mixed again."

"But—but—you—you're lying on the sofa," to Terry.

"Yes," sweetly, "I am lying on the sofa, and Thyme is the one who's been ill. Isn't life bewildering?"

"Yes," gasped Mrs. Wormack. She blinked twice, and then threw out in an off-hand manner: "I hope your recent legacy was—er—satisfactory?"

Terry replied in tones equally off-handed: "Quite, thanks: We went to see about it this morning!"

Legacy! Tantalizing, provocative word, packed with magical possibilities! Thyme sat with every nerve quivering, but she left speech to Terry, who was apparently cool as snow.

"Directly I saw it in the paper yesterday," Mrs. Wormack continued, "I said to my boy, Harold: 'There! So they are twins!'"

"And what did Harold say?" queried that demure minx, Terry Leigh-Stanton, betraying no impatience.

"Oh, Harold. He said: 'Well, mum, you've only got to look at them.'" She lapsed into silent admiration of Harold's gift of repartee. Thyme suddenly had an inspiration. "I believe it appeared in more than one paper. We happened to see it in the Daily Gazette—but you don't take the Gazette, do you?"

"No, the Messenger. Well, it's wonderful, isn't it, how the Agony Column finds people?—'Will hear of something to their advantage!' I hope the lawyer was an affable fatherly sort of man?"

"Most affable," said Thyme.

"Most fatherly," said Terry.

(Legacy—legacy—legacy — yesterday's Messenger—lawyer—"something to their advantage."—Thyme and Terry were not poor, but "legacy"—it was not always just money.)

At last Mrs. Wormack finished her tea, and started a few benevolent inquiries regarding their late grandfather; chilled by Terry's prompt: "Under the awful circumstances, it—hurts too much to speak of him. You do understand, don't you?" Mrs. Wormack did not. But Harold passed the gate, on his way from the station, and she hurried home to see that he changed out of his wet clothes.

Thyme and Terry drew a long breath.

"But we're not twins!" Thyme burst out.

"That's the catch in the whole thing. That's the little rift within the lute."

Terry thrust her hands backward through her thick, bright hair.

"We can't do anything without yesterday's Messenger; I suppose there's just a chance that they'll have one up at the paper shop?"

"But it's a bank holiday."

Thereafter, the behavior of Thyme and Terry was swift and ruthless. Throwing on their waterproof coats and caps, they dashed up the hill to the stationer's, and rang pitilessly at his private bell until he gave the reluctant audience. He had no copy of yesterday's Messenger left; but gave them a list of all his clients in the neighborhood to whom he daily delivered that paper. At the first three houses they drew a blank.

The fourth name was Mrs. Wormack; they passed her over. Only two more—Dr. Keith Roper, and a Mrs. Nash, known by repute as a dragon. Thyme and Terry prayed that their quest might end on the doctor's doorstep.

He opened to them himself; a pleasant young man, very lean about the jaw. Terry's flushed, eager prettiness seemed to appeal to him; he could not keep his eyes off her. Like one in a trance, he produced yesterday's Messenger—and then, seeing them about to rush off with it, triumphant, called out: "I say, I wonder if you'd mind returning it, if it isn't too much trouble. I mean—I'd call for it, of course. But er—there's a column on the fourth page—a new cure for toxitis. If you don't mind. Good-bye. So glad I had it. Hope you'll find what you want."

Thyme and Terry hurried home; and whipped the newspaper almost to the state of omelette before they discovered that the advertisement page was missing from it.

"Shall we go back and ask him for the missing page?"

"We can't go on being nuisances. And it's probably pipe-spills by now." Terry gloomed awhile, and then sprang upright "You stay here, Thyme; I'm going to parley with the dragon. It's our last chance."

In ten minutes she was back again, breathless, exultant.

"Here!" she gasped. "I'm an angel—I haven't looked yet! I stole it. Sitting-room empty, window open, paper-rack conspicuous. Advertisements! Here we are—yes—ah!" Her own name leapt to sight from half-way down the column.

Thyme read aloud in full round tones befitting the solemnity of the announcement:

"Leigh-Stanton. Will the twins who are the grandchildren of the late Ambrose Pickering Leigh-Stanton, Esq., kindly communicate with Messrs. Ross and Thorogood, of Middle Inn Chambers, when they will hear of something to their advantage."

"We intended at first to deceive you," Thyme explained to Mr. Witherspoon, the senior partner of the firm of Ross and Thorogood. "We meant at first to spoof you into believing we were twins. That's why we're dressed alike, and did our hair so alike—"

"And then," Terry chimed in, "it struck us that you wouldn't hand over the legacy until you'd seen our birth certificates. So I said to Thyme that we'd better make a clean breast of it from the start."

Mr. Witherspoon was not without a sense of humor.

"The fact of the noncoincidence of the dates of your respective births is very serious," he remarked. "And I'm not sure that the fact that you intended to deceive me does not constitute a tort."

Two rosy mouths drooped pathetically. Terry faltered, "You see, we never knew our grandfather. As far as I remember the story, he bored my late father so exquisitely that my late father, at the age of nineteen, walked out of the house and never came back again. I contend, Mr. Witherspoon"—and her voice was tinged with a legal roll—"I contend that the deceased, nearing the end of a misspent life, and desiring to make amends to his son, did latterly institute inquiries, and heard that he was dead, that his wife was dead, but that he had left twins—. Us, in short. No one who hadn't seen our birth certificate, or been told otherwise, frankly and honestly, as we told you, Mr. Witherspoon—"

"Because you had to, O candid child," murmured the lawyer.

"——No one would believe we were not twins," finished Terry. "And that's why my grandfather identified us as twins, in his direction about —our—legacy," firmly accentuating the last three words. "There was a quite natural error in the report received of us as we lived so much abroad until lately. You're satisfied, aren't you Mr. Witherspoon, that we are the Leigh-Stanton lost grandchildren?"

"Oh, quite, quite!" And he was tolerantly satisfied, too, that here were the unknown "twins," for whom his eccentric old client had intended his special bequest.

"Well, then,"—with sweet impatience—"produce it."

Mr. Witherspoon smiled, "I've got your address? Ah, yes. Well, the firm will think it over, and if we decide to consider your claim favorably"—he had already decided—"then your legacy will reach you tomorrow. It is rather an unconventional one, by the way, and may astonish you. Good-bye—delighted to have met you; if I can be of any service, pray consult me."

It was a Chinese lacquer cabinet, elaborately carved and painted, and it looked peculiarly exotic and out of place in the prim cretonne sitting-room rented by Thyme and Terry. It had arrived an hour ago in the charge of Mr. Witherspoon's clerk, who had rigidly put the fortunate legatees through many formalities and signings before leaving them alone with their inheritance.

They eyed it in considerable awe.

"This surely can't be all the legacy," Terry argued. "It's simply the surface of it. These things always have a secret drawer, and in the secret drawer will be the legacy proper. Probably a map of the Sacred Temple of Mazawatee. Under the Altar, and three and a half paces to the right, are hidden the jewels of the late Mandarin Li-Tu. Guided by this map, we shall easily discover their whereabouts, and—"

"We haven't discovered the whereabouts of the secret drawer yet."

"A young lady and gentleman to see you, miss," said their landlady's voice at the door.

"How do you do?" babbled Terry, sunnily; events had been sufficiently fantastic of late to kill her sense of surprise. "We're so pleased to see you; perhaps, if you've ever traveled in China, you can help us with this. By the way, we don't know you, do we?"

"Not yet," said the young lady and gentleman. And the former added casually: "But you soon will. We're the Leigh-Stanton twins."

"Awfully sorry," apologized the "young gentleman," with his eyes on Thyme's face of charming consternation.

"Do you mean—" Terry began.

"'Fraid we do. I'm Jane. This is Dudley. Not a bit alike, are we? But facts are on our side. We showed old Witherspoon our birth certificate and a few other incriminating oddments this morning."

"You're talking too much, Jane," Dudley Leigh-Stanton rebuked her. He was a good-looking young giant; whereas she was an elfish creature, small and thin, with screwed-up blue eyes.

"Are you quite sure you're not the false heirs?" suggested Terry, with perfect amiability. "Because, if you're not, we are; and that's rather a painful thought."

"We're poor, and you're fairly rich," said Jane, bluntly, "So the legacy matters more to us. Here's a letter from old Witherspoon, explaining. He said the best thing for us to do would be for us to dash down here in a hurry. Our father was the old man's favorite son, you see. They both walked out of the house at an early age, and he never bothered as to where Guy went—that's your father—or what became of him. But I suppose he relented toward Joe in his old age, and tried to pick up some trace of him, and the only news he could garner was that Joe was dead and had left twins behind him. Here we are—Jane and Dudley. Are you hating us?"

"Not if you let us share in the thrill of whatever we find in the cabinet. It's thrills we want mostly, not cash. I told Thyme that it's not likely the old curmudgeon, our sainted grandfather, would take all that trouble to bequeath an empty Chinese lacquer cabinet, so we were just hunting for the secret drawer when you so dramatically appeared on the threshold."

"Let's all hunt together," suggested Dudley Leigh-Stanton, whose captivity in the magic of Thyme's prettiness was well-nigh as clearly visible as though she had tripped him in meshes of fine gold net.

So together the cousins searched through the lacquer cabinet, pulling out the innumerable little drawers of sweet-smelling wood, and the drawers within drawers, that slid like silk, but held only emptiness; pressing each ivory knob in the carving, that might perhaps guard the invisible spring. The tiny, pig-tailed ladies and gentlemen painted so exquisitely on the inside of each cupboard door—and there were dozens of minute cupboards buried in that old Chinese cabinet—seemed to grin on their baffled impatience.

Till at last Dudley gave a great shout of joy, as Thyme's fingers, wandering over smooth polished surfaces, suddenly released an unexpected flap that fell away and showed a hollow space behind, just large enough for a folded oblong of paper.

The room was now mysterious with the twilight of a huge black-purple cloud: so the cousins eagerly carried their find over to the window and pored over the few dimly penciled lines. The old man's hand must have been shakier than he knew, and the pencil blunt, for his message was wholly worn away except for a name and address:

"Wu Fung, 216b, Pennyfields," and then: "Don't let—" the name was undecipherable, "get hold of—" and presently a word that struck richly at the imagination as though it were a jeweled sword: struck, and awoke it:—

"Treasure——"

No more.

But—treasure!

Rustlings and a stir in the shadowy corners of the room—old stories come alive again—old stories of treasure—buried treasure——hidden-treasure—where hidden? Yellow faces could tell—yellow faces from the slippery lacquered East. Treasure? Ivory then, and the gleam of sapphires, and a wise little idol a-squat upon its gleaming hoard. Cruel gods, and knives that curved the better to slay; but heap up the treasure and let no one know—Wu Fung knows, and he lives down in Pennyfields—how the lantern lights dance and flicker on the precious stones. "Don't let—an enemy—get hold of treasure!"

"Well," said Dudley, "this fellow Wu Fung is apparently the guardian of the treasure, whatever it is; or, at any rate, he can tell us all about it. Considerate of the old man to leave us his address. We'd better forthwith haul him out." He looked at Jane for approbation, and she curtly nodded:—

"Pennyfields is down Limehouse way."

"Limehouse?" cried Terry. "Oh, we may come too, mayn't we, Thyme and I? It sounds as though it were going to be exciting."

Thyme's eyes were dark and frightened.

"Limehouse—and a Chinaman—they're not our kind, are they? One can't tell beforehand. And grandfather doesn't say he's the guardian of the treasure at all, or whether we—you—must fight to get it away from him. The treacherous East, you know."

"The Yellow Peril! The bland, inscrutable oriental!" her sister teased her "You're just the victim of phrases, Thyme."

Thyme murmured, "It's all so queer—" and Jane unexpectedly backed her up.

"The infant is the most sensible of the lot of us," she snapped. "And in spite of your looking all broad-shouldered and protective, Dudley-me-lad, we haven't really any clew as to whether the atmosphere of 216b, Pennyfields, is going to be altogether friendly to us, or to our gentle request for treasure. It's probably an opium-den."

Thyme shuddered, and Terry ecstatically exclaimed: "Oh! Do let's start at once!"

Enter then the young doctor, ostensibly to fetch his newspaper. Finding not only the pseudo-twins, but also Jane and Dudley all crouching eagerly over a faded half-sheet of paper, with an old red lacquer Chinese cabinet filling up the background, he behaved in the offhand way of a small child, who, aware that there is a secret, and dying to be told the secret, pretends with all his might that no secret exists. But Terry the irrepressible speedily babbled forth the whole story to him; and the real Leigh-Stanton twins, liking the look of him, made no attempt to stop her.

"I wouldn't take any sister of mine down the docks to visit an unknown Chinaman who may possibly dislike your inquiries," was Dr. Roper's very decided advice to Dudley. "But I'll take a hand in the game, with pleasure, if you'll let me. Two males are better than one, in Limehouse."

"I'll be glad to have you with me, sir, if you can—I mean—your work—"

"Can I leave my practice for a week?" Dr. Roper quoted from his immortal confrere, Dr. Watson. "'Certainly, I can, my dear Holmes—I have an obliging neighbor, and only one case of convalescent chicken-ou know where the treasure is," Jane perissted. "We shall find out, you see, so it's no use trying to hide it from us."

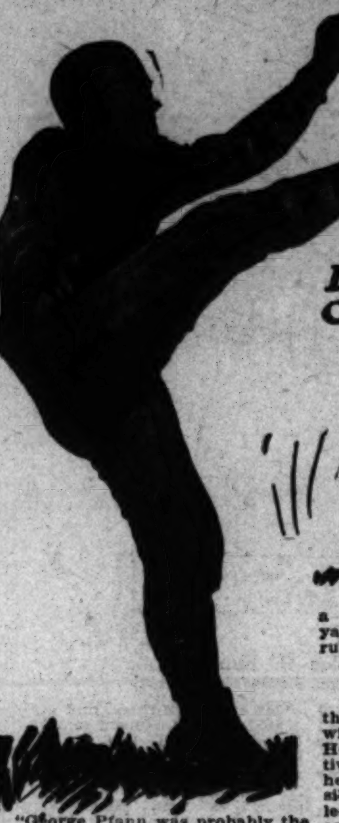
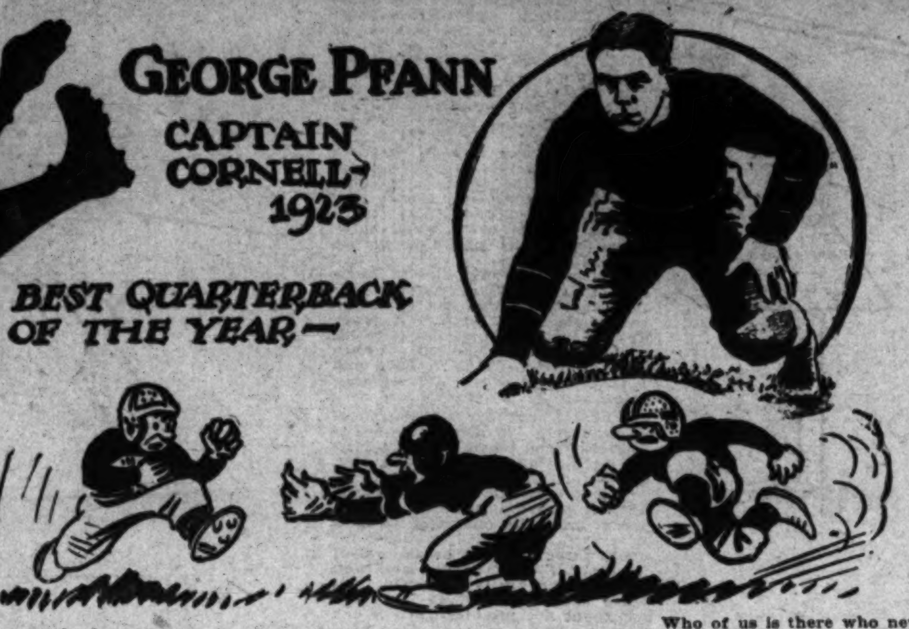
PFANN, STAR QUARTERBACK, GIVES FOOTBALL TIPS





"George Pfann was probably the greatest football player of the season and the highest scorer in the entire country."—[Athletic World.

The sensation of Eastern football last year was George Pfann, captain of the 1923 Cornell team, an All-American quarterback. He's going to answer questions about his favorite game especially for the readers of this page.

Pfann was a brilliant star of last season. Many sports writers chose him as captain of their All-American teams. Largely through his playing the Cornell team was unbeaten in 1921, 1922 and 1923.

The stocky little gridder, who comes from Marion, O., was a wonderful general on the football field. He was able to size up the strength and weaknesses of the other team right off the bat, and to make use of them. Not once during the season did he make any mistakes in directing his teammates.

Pfann can run, kick, forward-pass, catch, and, in fact, do just about everything to keep his opponents going. He is an enduring player and can stand all sorts of hard knocks without losing a bit of his famous pep.

Next year Pfann will coach at his school, Cornell, and he's telling you here some of the things he'll tell those "green" players that he'll be starting on the football grind at his university.

What Tricks Do You Use To Baffle a Tackler?

"The principle of dodging a tackler is to get him off balance or out of step by a deceptive move and then go by him before he can recover. This deception is generally a feint in one direction with a sudden move in another.

"There are several ways of doing this. A change of pace when a tackler is coming from the side is most used. Slow up and he slows up. Then start suddenly and you gain a yard or so. If you have four or five yards to go this has to be repeated. If a man is directly in front, run straight at him and twirl when about a yard away. This throws the runner out of line of the tackle if it is properly executed. Another way is to fake around one side of the tackler and then go the other.

CUT INSIDE PLAYER

"A tackler from the side may be avoided by stopping suddenly as he is about to tackle or slow up and cut inside of him before he can do the same.

"Sometimes it is possible to drag one leg and thus deceive the tackler.

"Running hard with the deliberate intention of breaking the opponent's tackle by force is always a good plan, because it means a yard or two more, even if the runner fails to get loose.

How Can a Player Be Taught To Follow the Ball?

"The player is taught to follow the ball as he becomes familiar with the possibilities of football. He realizes the number of deceptive plays that can be used, and he becomes familiar with the possibilities of fumbling. This knowledge is in the nature of a warning, and, if sufficiently impressed, will be constantly in the mind of the player.

KEEP EYE ON THE BALL

"On the defense the players must be warned continually to keep the eye on the ball from the time it leaves the center until it is downed again. Line players must keep their eyes forward on the ball. Backs must follow the ball and not the interference. If this principle is laid down and the man is not mentally lazy, practice should produce the results.

"On the offense the ambitious and mentally awake player will look around for more work after he has performed the duty assigned him. Work lies where the ball is and to help his team he must go to the ball."

Pfann started his football career when he was in the eighth grade. He was quarterback on the regular team. His second year in high school he was a substitute center. The next two years he played at Columbia Military Academy where he was quarterback and captain his senior year. Then he went to Cornell, where he played four years.

Next week Pfann will tell how he uses his well-known stiff-arm defense.

Our club motto, "Truth, Love, Courage," is a safe one to follow, for in its light thousands of successful children have marched to happiness. Casting out hate and evil thoughts, pretenses and lies, builds up a new fortification of right that is hard to equal.

Through the columns of our paper 200,000 children have felt the urge to traverse a new path, one illumined with unselfed happiness, as it is all for one and one for all in this jolly big club of ours.

Indeed, it is hard to tell the countless number of youngsters who have benefited by our many contests and self-development plans. One thing is sure, artists of true worth are being discovered daily, to say nothing of authors and poets whose manuscripts flood our mail each morning. Read Helen Hinkel's engrossing love yarn, "One in a Thousand," which will be continued next week, then judge for yourself as to whether we have cream talent or not. But if you, perchance, are an aspirant in the literary field do not overlook this opportunity, as few amateurs win recognition in the professional world easily.

So remember, if you write, compose poetry, draw pictures, sing, dance or have a neat vaudeville skit, get in touch with Aunt Dolly at once. Our Players' troupe, known the world over for the members' activities among the hospitals and orphanages, is growing larger and better as each day rolls merrily by, so if you are anxious to be listed as a Times vaudevillian, submit information and pictures at once.

Also keep in mind our Children's Exchange, another open portal to success and prosperity, for it is here that youngsters will be able to place their handiwork on sale, deriving commercial benefit from our exchange, so if you are handy with tools or a needle, get busy at once, then mail your articles to Aunt Dolly, care of the Children's Exchange, Times.

But wherever you go, take with you our message of good cheer and comfort. Tell those you meet of the benefits to be found in our club, the organization that gives you a beautiful club button free for a smile!

Nibble replied rather guiltily. "If you say I should have run away why didn't you do it yourself? I'm not wholly to blame, and if you please you can mind your own business and leave me alone, so there." He looked around the den and saw in between two rocks a hole.

"Oh! Oh! Do look, Nubble, there's a hole. Quick, get through it. I'll come right in back of you. Come on, now hurry up."

They crawled through the hole and around to see if they were safe. They didn't see anybody but the fox, and he was too intent on catching the wild goose to notice them.

So off they went as fast as their very short legs could carry them. When they came to the dam, they slid down the finished slide and disappeared.

Now I have told you the adventure of the beaver twins. Next I will write Bobby's and Betty's adventure.

Grand are thy things, Oh Land of Lands!
Truly touched by His mighty hands,
We sing to thee, we sing of thee,
Thou country of grandeur, thou land of the free.
We sing of thy waters, of azure blue,
We tell of thy kinsfolk, hearty and true.
We sing to thee, we sing to thee,
Thou country of grandeur, thou land of the free.
Who of us is there who never has paced
Down thy broad beaches, or never has raced
Through silent aisles in thy orange groves,
Or walked in thy woods, where the humming bird roves?
Let him name a place where no snowflakes e're fell,
If he knows that place, let him speak, let him tell,
Does he know of the Redwoods the size of thine own?
No, for of such things nothing is known.
So throughout the world, thou art lauded with song,
All worth-while things to thee belong;
No verse ever written, no praiseworthy line,
Can ever describe the prize which is thine.

FETCHING GOWN FOR DOLLY GREY

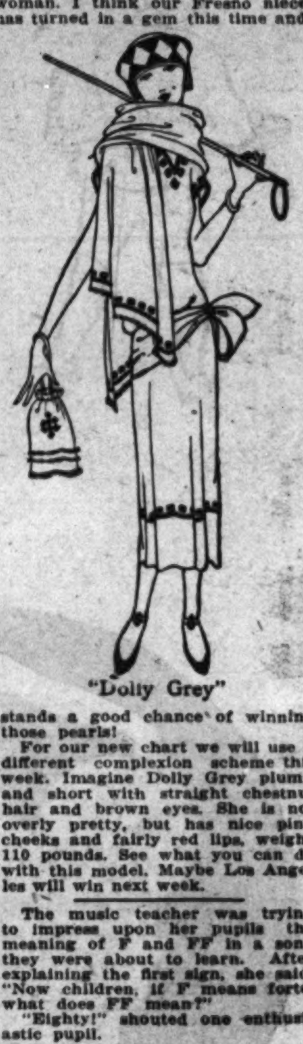
Fresno the winner of our fascinating contest, as she chose a pale linen dress with seal brown trimmings, initials in orange, sunflower in yellow and black; brown leather belt; soft crush hat of yellow to match dress, with brown pongee arranged around crown, not too wide, and ending in a tight knot, from which two frayed ends hang down left side; stockings are of cream yellow, with brown leather sport shoes; strictly tailored, not even a perforation allowed; scarf, if any, of yellow linen edged with brown and hemstitched on edges; handkerchief of orange shade, with drawnwork of lemon yellow and seal brown.

This combination, I think, merits special mention, as it illustrates the value of harmonious colors and simplicity of line. Note the instructions concerning shoes, the first one submitted so far and of the greatest importance to a well-dressed woman. I think our Fresno niece has turned in a gem this time and stands a good chance of winning those pearls!



"Dolly Grey"

For our new chart we will use a different complexion scheme this week. Imagine Dolly Grey plump and short with straight chestnut hair and brown eyes. She is not overly pretty, but has nice pink cheeks and fairly red lips, weighs 110 pounds. See what you can do with this model. Maybe Los Angeles will win next week.

The music teacher was trying to impress upon her pupils the meaning of F and FF in a song they were about to learn. After explaining the first sign, she said, "Now children, if F means forte, what does FF mean?"

"Eighty!" shouted one enthusiastic pupil.

The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

by L. Frank Baum

How the General Talked to the King

When General Guph returned to the cavern of the Nome King His Majesty asked:

"Well, what luck? Will the Whimsies join us?"

"They will," answered the General. "They will fight for us with all their strength and cunning."

"Good!" exclaimed the King. "What reward did you promise them?"

"Your Majesty is to use the Magic Belt to give each Whimsie a large, fine head, in place of the small one he is now obliged to wear."

"I agree to that," said the King. "This is good news, Guph, and it makes me feel more certain of the conquest of Oz."

"But I have other news for you," announced the General.

"Good or bad?"

"Good, Your Majesty."

"Then I will hear it," said the King, with interest.

"The Growleywogs will join us."

"No!" cried the astonished King.

"Yes, indeed," said the General. "I have their promise."

"But what reward do they demand?" inquired the King, suspiciously, for he knew how greedy the Growleywogs were.

"They are to take a few of the Oz people for their slaves," replied Guph. He did not think it necessary to tell Roquat that the Growleywogs demanded 20,000 slaves. It would be time enough for that when Oz was conquered.

"A very reasonable request, I'm sure," remarked the King. "I must congratulate you, Guph, upon the wonderful success of your journey."

"But that is not all," said the General, proudly.

The King seemed astonished.

"Speak out, sir!" he commanded.

"I have seen the First and Foremost Phanfasm of the Mountain of Phantastico, and he will bring his people to assist us."

"What!" cried the King. "The Phanfasms! You don't mean it, Guph!"

"It is true," declared the General, proudly.

The King became thoughtful, and his brows wrinkled.

"I'm afraid, Guph," he said rather anxiously, "that the First and Foremost may prove as dangerous to us as to the Oz people. If he and his terrible band come down from the mountain they may take the notion to conquer the Nomes!"

"Pah! That is a foolish idea," retorted Guph, irritably, but he knew in his heart that the King was right. "The First and Foremost is a particular friend of mine, and will do us no harm. Why, when I was there, he even invited me into his house."

The General neglected to tell the King how he had been jerked into the hut of the First and Foremost by means of the brass hoop. So Roquat the Red looked at his General admiringly and said:

"You are a wonderful Nome, Guph. I'm sorry I did not make you my General before. But what reward did the First and Foremost demand?"

"Nothing at all," answered Guph. "Even the Magic Belt itself could not add to his powers of sorcery. All the Phanfasms wish is to destroy the Oz people, who are good and happy. This pleasure will amply repay them for assisting us."

"When will they come?" asked Roquat, half fearfully.

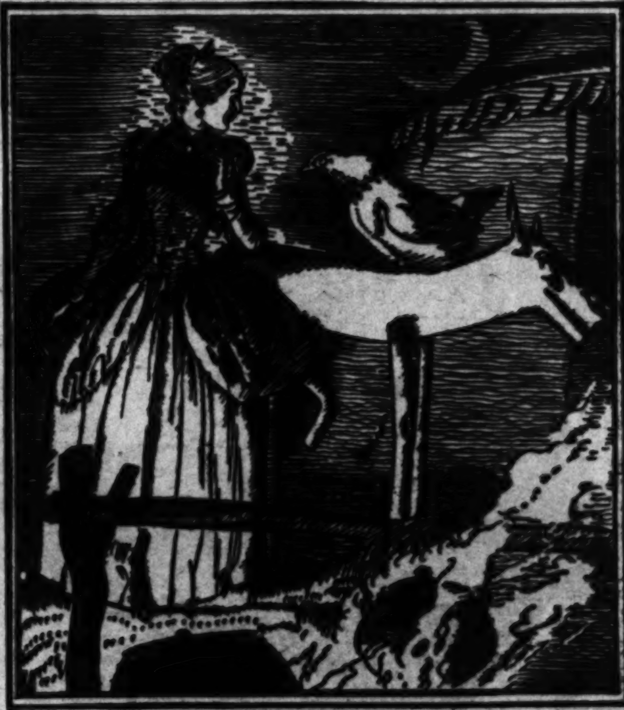
"When the tunnel is completed," said the General.

"We are nearly halfway under the desert now," announced the King; "and that is fast work, because the tunnel has to be drilled through solid rock. But after we have passed the desert it will not take us long to extend the tunnel to the walls of the Emerald City."

"Well, whenever you are ready, we shall be joined by the Whimsies, the Growleywogs and the Phanfasms," said Guph; "so the conquest of Oz is assured without a doubt."

Again the King seemed thoughtful.

"I'm almost sorry we did not undertake the conquest alone," said he. "All of these allies are dangerous people, and they may demand more than you have promised them. It might have been better to have conquered Oz without any outside assistance."



"Broilers!" exclaimed Bellina, in horror. "Broil my chickens!"

"We could not do it," said the General, positively.

"Why not, Guph?"

"You know very well. You have had one experience with the Oz people, and they defeated you."

"That was because they rolled eggs at us," replied the King, with a shudder. "My Nomes cannot stand eggs, any more than I can myself. They are poison to all who live underground."

"That is true enough," agreed Guph. "But we might have taken the Oz people by surprise, and conquered them before they had a chance to get any eggs. Our former defeat was due to the fact that the girl Dorothy had a Yellow Hen with her. I do not know what ever became of that hen, but I believe there are no hens at all in the Land of Oz, and so there could be no eggs there."

"On the contrary," said Guph, "there are now hundreds of chickens in Oz, and they lay heaps of those dangerous eggs. I met a goshawk on my way home, and the bird informed me that he had lately been to Oz to capture and devour some of the young chickens. But they are protected by magic, so the hawk did not get a single one of them."

"That is a very bad report," said the King, nervously. "Very bad, indeed. My Nomes are willing to fight, but they simply can't face hen's eggs—and I don't blame them."

"They won't need to face them," replied Guph. "I'm afraid of eggs myself, and don't propose to take any chance of being poisoned by them. My plan is to send the Whimsies through the tunnel first, and then the Growleywogs and the Phanfasms. By the time we Nomes get there the eggs will all be used up, and we may then pursue and capture the inhabitants at our leisure."

"Perhaps you are right," returned the King, with a dismal sigh. "But I want it distinctly understood that I claim Ozma and Dorothy as my own prisoners. They are rather nice girls, and I do not intend to let any of those dreadful creatures hurt them, or make them their slaves. When I have captured them I will bring them here and transform them into china ornaments to stand on my mantel. They will look very pretty—Dorothy on one end of the mantel and Ozma on the other—and I shall take great care to see they are not broken when the maids dust them."

"Very well, Your Majesty. Do what you will with the girls, for all I care. Now that our plans are arranged, and we have the three most powerful bands of evil spirits in the world to assist us, let us make haste to get the tunnel finished as soon as possible."

"It will be ready in three days," promised the King, and hurried away to inspect the work and see that the Nomes kept busy.

Let us go back to Dorothy and her followers. They are wondering what place they should now visit, for their curiosity is not yet satisfied.

"Where next?" asked the Wizard, when they had left the town of Fuddlecumjig and the Sawhorse had started back along the road.

"Why, Ozma laid out this trip," replied Dorothy, "and she 'vised us to see the Rigmaroles next, and then visit the Tin Woodman."

"That sounds good," said the Wizard. "But what road do we take to get to the Rigmaroles?"

"I don't know, 'zactly," returned the little girl; "but it must be somewhere just southwest from here."

"Then why need we go way back to the crossroads?" asked the Shaggy Man. "We might save a lot of time by branching off here."

"There isn't any path," asserted Uncle Henry.

"Then we'd better go back to the signposts, and make sure of our way," decided Dorothy.

But after they had gone a short distance farther the Sawhorse, who had overheard their conversation, stopped and said:

"Here is a path."

Sure enough, a dim path seemed to branch off from the road they were on, and it led across pretty green meadows and past leafy groves, straight toward the southwest.

"That looks like a good path," said Omby Amby. "Why not try it?"

"All right," answered Dorothy. "I'm anxious to see what the Rigmaroles are like, and this path ought to take us there the quickest way."

No one made any objection to the plan, so the Sawhorse turned into the path, which proved to be nearly as good as the one they had taken to get to the Fuddles.

At first they passed a few retired farm houses, but soon these scattered dwellings were left behind and only the meadows and the trees were before them. But they rode along in cheerful contentment, and Aunt Em got into an argument with Bellina about the proper way to raise chickens.

"I do not care to contradict you," said the Yellow Hen, with dignity, "but I have an idea I know more about chickens than human beings do."

"Pshaw!" replied Aunt Em, "I've raised chickens for nearly forty years, Billina, and I know you've got to starve 'em to make 'em lay lots of eggs; stuff 'em if you want good broilers."

"Broilers!" exclaimed Bellina, in horror. "Broil my chickens!"

"Why, that's what they're for, ain't it?" asked Aunt Em, astonished.

"No, Aunt, not in Oz," said Dorothy. "People do not eat chickens here. You see, Bellina was the first hen that was ever seen in this country, and I brought her here myself. Everybody liked her an' respected her, so the Oz people wouldn't any more eat her chickens than they would eat Bellina."

"Well, I declare," gasped Aunt Em. "How about the eggs?"

"Oh, if we have more eggs than we want to hatch, we allow people to eat them," said Bellina. "Indeed, I am very glad the Oz people folks like our eggs, for otherwise they would spoil."

"This is certainly a queer country," sighed Aunt Em.

THE SWALLOW-TAIL BUTTERFLY

By Morgan Schneider, 3354 Granada Avenue, San Diego, Cal.

Maybe you would like to hear about the swallow-tail butterfly. First the egg is laid on licorice fern. Do you know what this is? It is a thin green fern with many branching outforks in it. After the caterpillar is out it is a little black worm with a white stripe down its back. As it grows older you can see some red dots on its back.

When it eats the fern, it holds it with its three front pairs of legs. It crawls out to the end of the little branch and nibbles down. It has an enormous appetite. After it has grown too big for its skin it slips it off and now it is green with black stripes around it from head to tail, the stripes each about one-eighth of an inch apart, and orange dots around these black stripes. He is bright and shiny now, but as he grows bigger he gets dull.

Maybe you would like to know how it fights. Whenever it bumps into another caterpillar it swings the whole front half of its body around in a jerky way as if to hit the other one. Sometimes when you touch it it ducks its head and puts its front legs close together in an attitude of prayer.

When it is ready to make a cocoon it goes in some out-of-the-way sheltered place. Then it fastens up its tail and weaves a thin cradle. After it has stayed there for about two days it has shrunk. Then it sheds its skin and is a pale green, gradually changing its color to gray. After it has slept for about three weeks it breaks out of its cocoon. It is a delicate, wet, crumpled-up, little butterfly. It takes exercise flapping its wings for about five minutes, then it can fly.

Dear Aunt Dolly :

I am renewing my membership to The Junior Times Club by telling you the truth that I am sending my best love and good wishes for the club, and have the courage to write again.

I am submitting two poems, which I hope you will like.

Lots of love,

Age 11 Years

Once upon a time there was a little girl whose name was Betty and she never minded her mother. One day after a quarrel Betty ran away into the deep woods and tried to get lost. When she got where the woods were deeper she began to feel hungry so she started to look around for something to eat and after she had looked around for some time, to her great joy she saw a small hut which had a light in it.

Betty went and knocked at the door and a girl by the name of Mary came and asked her what she wanted. Then Betty told her all about her life and why she had left home.

After Betty had finished telling her story an old lady came to the door where she was standing and told her to come inside and get warm, which she did very quickly for she was tired and hungry. When she got inside the house the old lady gave her a chair by the fire and told her she would get her something to eat while Betty rested.

In about ten minutes the old lady came back with some bread and milk and while Betty was eating Mary told her she belonged to Aunt Dolly's club and she wished that Betty would join. After dinner Betty was taken to a bedroom and put to bed where she slept very well, and the first thing Betty said when she awoke was, "I will join Aunt Dolly's club," which she did that very day. When she got home she told her mother she was going to be good in the future, and she was, so they all lived happy ever after.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE BEAVER TWINS

By Marion Thomas, 5962 Chula Vista Way, Hollywood, Cal.

The sun was shining all around Beaver Dam. Mother Wacker, Grandpa Flat Tail, and the two Wacker twins, Nibble and Nubble, were there.

Mother Wacker could see nothing except an old piece of wild-cherry bark that had floated into the storehouse ages ago. As she couldn't use that, she called to Nibble and Nubble to go to the ash grove to get some bark.

Nibble and Nubble had just finished making their slide on the side of the bank when their mother called.

"Oh," said Nibble, and "Oh," said Nubble. "Won't we have fun?"

"Yes, yes, won't we have fun," the brother replied.

And off they started to get some bark. Now while they are walking through the woods, I'll have time to describe them. Nibble and Nubble are boy twins, and Nubble is apt to have a rather quick temper, which his mother is ashamed of, as he often shows it away from home.

Nibble behaves himself much better than his brother. They live in Beaver Dam.

Nibble and Nubble are very shy like all the rest of the family. They eat mostly the bark of birch and ash trees, for they like them best.

Nibble and Nubble came in sight of the ash grove and hurried to get there so that they wouldn't forget what their mother had told them, when all of a sudden they heard a snapping of branches, but forgetting they might be in danger, they stood still and stared. When out jumped a hungry fox they stared all the more.

He sprang at them, and grabbed Nubble by the neck and raced home to his den.

Then he made a return trip to where stood poor dumfounded Nibble, who had not had sense enough to run. He was soon caught and taken to the den where his twin brother was.

The fox was about to eat them when he heard some wild geese honking outside, and thinking that the beavers could not get out, he hurried to catch one.

"Why didn't you hurry and find a place to hide? Instead you were standing and staring like a silly, stupid beaver you are. Now see what you've gotten us into," raved Nubble in one of his tempers.

"I'm very sorry it happened,"

CLUB ARTISTS SURPRISE WITH FINISHED WORK; ANOTHER SPECIAL NUMBER COMING; CHILDREN'S PROBLEMS SOLVED

BY AUNT DOLLY

Club Motto—Truth, Love, Courage

It is with pride that we present the All Artists' Number of The Junior Times, an offering of the work of some of our many, many club artists and cartoonists. In fact, nothing has been more surprising that the amount of talent uncovered in connection with the work of The Times Junior Club. Lately, it seems, even our club writers and other workers in diversified fields have had to take a back seat while the artists, doubtless spurred to new endeavors by our art prizes and the wholesome competition caused thereby, have risen to new heights of artistry. The All Artists' Number is to encourage them and encourage you to try, try again, for success lies along the road of hard work. Later on there is to be another All Artists' Number, for we have many good drawings left over and more coming in every day. Also we are going to have a number soon devoted to the work of our club writers.

You've heard of the "wise guy," the man who talks more, hears more, but knows less than anyone in his community. He is a frequenter of hotel lobbies, a hanger-on at social affairs and a general nuisance to the public. But he is not hard to distinguish, for in his wake you will find colorful romances by the dozens, and dead sure tips on film happenings. As for theatrical stars, the wise guy knows 'em all.

We marvel at his empty boastings, but how does the cheap bragger "get by?" In the first place, he runs a limited time on bluff and credit. When this gives out he goes the whine route, borrowing from friends and acquaintances who tolerate him for old-time sake, but finally demand that he stand on his own feet or go down in the scuffle.

Nothing is more pitiful than a boaster, a person who conjures up lurid tales. Yet the world is full of them, for there are wise guys of many types. Their road, however, is a long one filled to overflowing with severe trials, from which experience alone can rescue them. Perhaps, after enough snubs have been administered and the bluffer has heard low chuckles follow his kingly steps, he will come down to earth.

It is only sham of the cheapest sort, and pretense never gets you anywhere, yet many of us practice it with a clear conscience. We pretend we have a larger income than our neighbors, and talk carelessly about this and that, which, although we know we never could buy, still leaves the impression we will. I know a high school girl who has exiled herself from companionship because she preferred to run a bluff in school. She was clever with her needle and managed to have many pretty clothes, so she capitalized her rich impression!

"I gave the girls at school to understand I was wealthy, while in reality I live in a small cottage in Glendale," she confided unhappily. "This leaves me alone, as I cannot accept their invitations without returning them, and it is impossible to confess how silly I have been. Worse than that, they think I'm stuck up, and I haven't a friend left."

The bluff did not work, as you can see. It stripped her of everything that was precious, because a bluff is, after all, nothing but a lie, so when old man temptation comes your way, remember you can't hold the reins too tight. Anyway, who wants to be made a fool of? We may be willing to be martyrs, but few of us wish to appear in a ludicrous light, and that is the fate of the usual wise guy.

Go slowly, never be ashamed of poverty or lack of clothes. If people do not like you for yourself, you are lucky to find it out. A rich man may have everything money can buy, but that does not always mean happiness. I have seen far more contented families in tiny cottages than I have in mansions, and if you must jeopardize your honor to gain either wealth or fame, turn your back squarely and march away, for the game isn't worth the candle!

It may be hard to do without luxuries, but you are better off in the end, for your slate is clean and you will never be subjected to the misery of feeling yourself the butt of other people's scorn.

So many cases have come to me lately of miserable youngsters who freely confessed their mistakes along this line that I thought it might be well to jot down a few words regarding the slipping habit that comes to so many of us. We start in, telling a harmless tale, enlarged just a tiny bit so it will

FRESNO GIRL WINS CONTEST

DESIGNS BEST COSTUME OF WEEK FOR DOLLY GREY; SURPRISE COMING

Letters and more letters, with an avalanche of color charts, are pouring in to us daily; some of them clipped just as they are from the paper and tinted with crayons, while more aspiring contestants draw their own Dolly Grey, using anything from paints to water colors.

This shows how eager we are for knowledge that will aid and abet us in our eternal hunt for beauty. Indeed, so many are pleading for a chance to gown Dolly Grey that we have decided to do this very thing, print a model for you to clothe in any way you see fit, using a selection of evening gowns, afternoon dresses, smart suits, sport costumes, anything that will bring your imagination into play and teach you the art of putting clothes together.

Those who win as fashion experts will have their creations printed and later colored by our own club members, giving all of us a chance to have some fun. There! How's that for a surprise? Be sure to watch for our new model of Dolly Grey, as it will appear when you least expect it.

This week, however, we pronounce Miss Geraldine Brown of

SIGNS OF SPRING

By Marcia Armstrong,
2401 Ynez avenue,
Monterey Park, Cal.

Signs of spring along the way
In rich profusion cheer the day—
The organ grinder in the street,
The smell of lilacs, fragrant, sweet,
The sky has turned to blue from gray,
The children all about me play.
A bright sun breaks through fleecy cloud,
A lark flies high and sings aloud—
All of these are signs of spring;
All are signs of life and love;
What a promise they do bring
From our Maker up above!

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I received your letter, and was very glad to get an answer from you for I could hardly wait.

We are leaving for San Francisco in the morning at 4:30 o'clock if we can get started that early.

I thought that I would send a story and my new address so you would not write to the wrong place.

I have just got through looking in The Junior Times, and I thank you very much for the badge.

I would like to know if I could still join your club in San Francisco. I would like to be in your club all the time.

I write so many stories, and I would like to send some if you would like them.

I suppose you are busy reading letters all day, as you have so many children who belong to your club.

I can dance and sing. I took dancing from the school I went to in Los Angeles.

Mother is packing while I am writing and I am always in her way it seems.

I am going to tell you of some of the things I did in school that maybe you can put in The Junior Times. I have the climate of some places, Russia, California, Mexico, Iceland, and Michigan, and also have some maps I drew.

ABBREVIATED STATES

Each of the pictures represents a word which corresponds to the abbreviated form of spelling one of the United States.

AN ENIGMA

Employed I am while others sleep,
And service leaves me in a heap.
The sick and weary come to me;
I bolster up and charge no fee.
Complete quite, in full array,
Yet I am made again each day.
What am I?

RIDDLES TO GUESS

Why is a bride a paradox?

A letter from Holland mentions a lady of title. What is her rank?

What is that which a girl looks for but does not want to find?

URABUTLN—How did a young lady decipher that one-word telegram into a compliment?

A PUZZLING EXCURSION

We motored from New York to Philadelphia at an average speed of 15 miles per hour, and returned over the same course at the rate of 20 miles per hour. What was the average number of miles per hour for the round trip?

BEHEADINGS

Behead a young girl and leave assistance.

Behead a word meaning to grate and leave a venomous serpent.

Behead forty and leave fifty.

Behead a prison and leave a pain.

Behead a cereal and leave a waterfall.

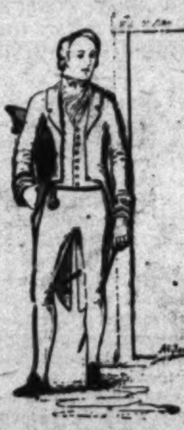
Behead a boat and leave a tool.

Twice behead a measure and leave high skill.

Behead angry and leave a tariff.

HE'S VERY HUMBLE

Take a religious ceremony, subtract a vessel, add a martial coat, subtract a pain and the resulting letters will spell WORM.



ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLES

"REBUS CAPITALS"

No. 1. Boise. No. 2. Richmond. No. 3. Annapolis. No. 4. Columbus.

"AN ENIGMA"

The word HOPE is curtailed to HOP and again curtailed to HO.

"RIDDLES TO GUESS"

1. Because he gladly gives the bit from his mounth and listens to every woe (whoa). 2. Because her nobles were swells and her peasants serfs. 3. When he strolls along his banks and braes (brays). 4. Because it represents hardware (wear).

"A GAME BIRD"

GRANT minus ANT plus TEA plus MOUSE minus TEAM leaves GROUSE.

"A PUZZLING BLOWOUT"

Our guests traveled 200 miles. They had gone 50 miles before the blowout, and traveled the remaining 150 miles at three-fifths the former speed.

They could have gone 83 1-3 miles at full speed in the same time that it required to go 50 miles at three-fifths speed. Thus, they would have saved 33 1-3 miles. If, at the same time, they saved 40 minutes, then 33 1-3 divided into 40 gives 1 1-5 minutes as their time per mile going at full speed.

"GIRLS BY THE POUND"

Mary weighed 98 pounds; Nora 99 pounds; Emma 101 pounds and Helen 104 pounds.

CALIFORNIA IN THE SPRING

By Marcia Armstrong
2401 Ynez avenue,
Monterey Park, Cal.

Come out where the purple mountains
Descend to meet the sea;
Come out where the larks are calling
In voices loud and free.

Come out where the poppies bend and blow,
Where the clouds are white and gold;
Where twilight steals through sunset's glow
And dusk does all enfold.

Come out where Nature smiles her best;
Where fairies gifts do bring;
Where everything is truly blest—
California in the spring.

If straightened out, an ounce of spiderweb would extend 350 miles.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON

CORRESPONDENTS are asked to be patient with the Garden Beautiful man if their letters have not been promptly answered. He has been away on a six-week auto trip to British Columbia, covering more than 4000 miles.

The trip was made leisurely, parks, gardens, orchards, fields and the wilds being invaded on foot and thoroughly inspected. We were glad to again reach California for only here do we find the best horticultural practice in garden and orchard and only in this State is there a great variety of native trees, plants, flowers and birds. From California north the wild species of everything grow less in variety but greater in numbers, except of birds, and these are almost unknown for hundreds of miles. Not a wing is seen or a twitter heard. The country is beautifully green and, therefore, restful to the eye, but monotonous through lack of variety of species and range of color in foliage.

Some facts are firmly fixed in our mind: Californians travel most, travel fastest, have the poorest part of the great Pacific Highway from Mexico to Canada. In one garage in Vancouver, B. C., where our auto was one of twenty-eight, there were twenty-two from California and those from the Golden State were everywhere in evidence. In the British cities we met several Angelenos, some of whom we have known for many years.

Only in California does the law allow one to run thirty-five miles an hour and nowhere else do the traffic officers allow a generous amendment to the legal speed. We met many Californians who had never been "in the toils" within their own State but who were gathered in farther north, especially in Oregon. Complaints were loudest regarding Salem and one San Franciscan told me he thought the city was settled and named by settlers from Salem, Mass., who were descendants of the old witchcraft days; they are so set on persecution of all whom they may capture.

It seems the city limits are placed out in the country, several miles from the town of Salem, and officers lurk in shadows about these outposts, to capture the luckless individual who incautiously exceeds, by ever so little, the twenty-mile-an-hour limit. Being warned by so many, we gave the territory a pretty good "once-over" as we returned, and this is what we saw: one motorcycle officer by a pile of rocks as we entered Salem from the north, one uniformed officer in a runabout patrolling the highway within the town, and two motorcycle officers at the south end of what is claimed to be the town limits. Four uniformed traffic officers on one street in one town! So beware you Californians, lest you be "burned at the stake." They will at least burn the "stake" you have saved for your vacation trip. We met two boys from Stanford University who were "soaked" $20 for a little indiscretion in passing through this somnambulistic burg with an open muffler thereby greatly disturbing the peaceful, drowsy inhabitants. Don't sall 'em in Salem.

John Bodger, seed grower of El Monte, and his dahlia-flowered strain of zinnias for which he won a gold medal at at the 1924 Flower Show of the Royal Horticultural Society, London. Mr. Bodger took an active part in the recent Society of American Florists' and Ornamental Horticulturalists' convention, Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles.

The poorest short piece of the Pacific Highway is the San Fernando Road, in the City of the Angels; the poorest stretch is between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara. The best is from the Oregon line to Vancouver, through the entire length of the State of Washington. The finest scenery viewed was that along the Columbia River Highway from Portland to The Dalles, in Oregon. The most interesting plant life, native and exotic, even the best roses, may be found in our own California.

What's the Use

Some one has sent to the University of Wisconsin a seedless muskmelon of excellent quality. If such freaks continue with any frequency in the years to come some enterprising horticulturists will be growing the plants from cuttings and if this is persisted in we shall lose all chance of growing them from seeds. Like the banana, potato, sweet potato and several other plants they will in a few generations lose all power to reproduce from seeds and we shall be dependent upon vegetable perpetuation or lose our muskmelons. Still, the outlook is seedy.

Chaulmoogra Trees

The Bureau of Plant Industry now has thousands of the tropical trees producing chaulmoogra oil, etc, that has so wonderfully acted upon leprosy. This department first noted, of all publications in the United States, the finding of the trees and the securing of seeds of same. Large plantations have been made in the Philippines, Hawaii and elsewhere. The last report on treatment of lepers says that during the last year 50 per cent of the leprosy patients treated at Honolulu have recovered and have been paroled. During the past five years, 260 patients have been discharged as cured and only forty-five of these have returned on account of a recurrence of the disease. The oil used to date came from India but it is hoped, and believed, that within a few years Hawaii will be supplying its own oil for the cure of this dread disease.

Spring Cabbages

Cabbage seeds are sown in England in August, the young plants set in the fields in October and the mature heads harvested in April and May. Few realize that cabbages are sufficiently hardy to be used in May all over the south of England, and fewer still know that in Southern Devon the temperature seldom drops lower than it does in Los Angeles. In the gardens there windmill palms, dracenas, century plants, New Zealand tree ferns and many subtropical plants known to Southern Californians flourish throughout the winter and are unharmed by frosts. It must have been a hardship, for those who left Plymouth, England to found Plymouth, Mass., to withstand the severe winters of New Eng. with none of the equipment or convenience which make life comportable.

A Live Floral Association

The San Diego Floral Association has a record of which it my justly be proud. For eighteen years, without a miss (in exhibitions) it has held two flower shows each year, very creditable shows too. More than that this association has also published a splendid little garden magazine known as The California Garden. Every issue teems with practical text from practical growers, for there the owners of the finest gardens are proud to show what they can produce through their own care of the plants, not altogether the products of paid gardeners. But then, any community that has an Alfred D. Robinson could do such things. While he has many able and willing aides, it is the example he sets that enthuses and sustains the others in their floral efforts. Any San Diego flower show is worth a journey from Los Angeles to see, for they have rare plants we have not.

The California sweet potato crop was valued at $1,138,000 in 1923.

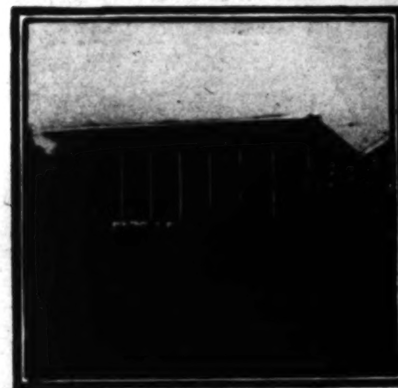
Factors Influencing Poultry House Construction

A BIG FOOTHILL POULTRY PLANT. By ROBERT T. LYANS

IN THE selection of a site and the laying out of a poultry plant there are a great many factors which must be duly considered if the poultryman expects to attain any great degree of success. Chief of these, perhaps, in the consideration of the health of the flock, and the efficiency with which the plant can be handled to show economy of production. Needless to say, the site selected should have excellent drainage as a guarantee against damp quarters. While a hilly or rolling piece of land offers good drainage conditions, fairly level land can be drained equally as well, and in addition, is more readily adaptable to growing crops under irrigation. Plenty of good soil for the growing of greens is necessary in the well-regulated plant, as it does not generally pay to buy this part of the ration.

In selecting the type of poultry house to build, the poultryman has almost as wide a variety of plans to choose from as the home-builder who is looking for the last word in modern bungalows. Therefore, to set up one style of house as the most ideal, would be like advocating one breed or perhaps one variety of poultry for everyone engaged in the industry. The builder of a poultry house, like the builder of the bungalow, almost invariably discovers after the building is completed that some improvement might be added. In other words, the construction of a poultry house, like the selection of a breed, is a matter of taste which must be decided by each individual poultryman. To be sure, the beginner should be guided to a large extent by the experience of others who have made a success in a practical way. To be practical, the house should not be too expensive if a good profit is expected. On the other hand, it is not advisable to build too cheaply, especially so if permanency is considered an asset. Many poultrymen have made a good profit in the business by building cheap and unattractive houses, centering their attention more on the selection of good stock. From a cold-blooded business standpoint, the poultryman who houses his flock at a cost of, say, 50 cents per bird, is in a better position to cash in on his investment than the poultryman who pays $4 per bird for their quarters, provided the cheaper house properly shelters the birds and is kept free from vermin. The overhead, which in each instance should be charged to the flock, would quite naturally leave more net profit to the one who has less capital invested in construction of poultry houses.



A good example of shed type, open-front house in a Glendale backyard.

There is another angle to the situation, however, that should be considered. Almost every poultryman has his home located near his poultry plant, and in the majority of cases, the owner builds his plant so that it will be in keeping with instead, of casting reflections on his own dwelling.

After all is said and written on the subject of poultry-house construction, the poultryman is the one who must decide on the cost of the plant. The main point he should consider is to see that the houses are made comfortable for the birds, and easily accessible for the attendant, which convenience will be an economy of time consumed in keeping it clean. In the ordinary commercial flock, the style of poultry house most used is the long stationary house, or the intensive system adapted to large flocks. While this centralized system offers a saving of steps, there is greater danger from fire or disease than where the colony house is used. By the colony system, where houses holding 100 hens each, and placed some distance apart, an outbreak of fire or disease in one colony can be more easily checked. In spite of these hazards, however, the average poultryman favors the long house because of its convenience.

Climate has a great deal to do with the type of house necessary. Some poultrymen even go so far as to advocate the use of trees as a substitute for poultry houses in Southern California—in Imperial Valley the "ramada" type house seems to meet all requirements—but the rank and file of Southern California poultrymen are quite unanimous in selecting the open front or semi-open front type of house as more nearly meeting the requirements of the flock.

Whether the poultry house be of the shed type, the combination, the gable, the monitor, the semimonitor or "A" shaped type, it makes little difference if the type chosen brings results, for in the last analysis results are what really count in the poultry business. Both as a matter of pride, as well as for its permanency, the poultry house should be painted, and if yards are needed, the fences also look better if the posts are given a coat of paint.

An attractive poultry plant stocked with good fowl often brings cash customers, especially so if the poultryman happens to be in the breeding business. The prospective customer likes to buy from the breeder who takes great pride in his or her establishment. The best reason for this perhaps is the fact that the poultryman who produces quality stock generally keeps them in a healthy and attractive environment.

Big Foothill Poultry Plant

Longview Ranch, located beyond Chatsworth at the extreme north end of San Fernando Valley, has an attractive setting for a modern poultry farm. The owners, R. B. and Roy I. Long, have, in this picturesque setting established a plant with a capacity for 10,000 chickens that has all of the ear marks of an "up and going" institution. The ranch consists of thirty-two acres of which nine are given over to apricots. Seven acres were put into wheat this year and fifteen and one-half tons of wheat straw was harvested and is being used as litter in the scratching pens.

The flock at present consists of 6000 White Leghorns, only 4500 of these, however, being in production. From this flock the owners are shipping from forty-three to forty-five cases of eggs a week with the production running around 5 per cent, and many birds going into a moult.

To house this big flock, the Long Brothers have coustructed a battery of laying houses, seven in number, each having a capacity for 1200 layers, in addition to which a 5500 capacity brooder house, divided into eleven sections, has been provided for the growing chicks.

While this plant has been known as a commercial egg plant since it was started three years ago, the owners have decided to start in the breeding business this fall, having selected foundation stock from leading poultrymen of this and other sections of the State who have made liberal use of the trap nest in egg production. Two thousand breeders have been mated up and already incubation has been started for the first hatching of fall chicks.

While the feed requirements of a flock of this size is enormous, the owners are taking advantage of the situation by purchasing the feed in carload lots thereby getting it cheaper. For a supply of green feed, alfalfa and sudan grass are planted for a summer feed, while barley and Swiss chard make up the ration of greens through the winter months.

Separate the cockerels early, and sell for broilers those which are not to be kept. The early broiler catches the price.

Fall Care of Berries

OF UTMOST importance in berry culture is the care given bush and vine during the months immediately after their bearing season is over. Pruning fertilization, irrigation are all in order then, and should be carefully administered, always remembering that the quality and quantity of the next year's crop is largely dependant on how well these duties are performed.

Pruning is perhaps the most exacting of these fall and winter duties. It is the most difficult to give advice on, too, for methods vary with location, kind and system of culture. There are several general rules to follow, however, and if these are clear, then it is not hard to successfully handle the shears. In pruning most blackberries and raspberries, the first point to remember is that the plants produce new canes each year and that these bear fruit and then must be removed the next. The first step in pruning them then, is to remove the old wood, or that which has borne a crop; the second is spacing and thinning the new canes so that they will be best equipped to produce good crops the following season. Strawberry plants should be cleaned out and if too rank in growth, cut back somewhat. Early pruning, when possible, is an excellent sanitary measure in preventing insect and disease injury, especially where red berry disease of blackberries is prevalent.

All sorts of berries require tremendous amounts of water during all seasons of the year, and the soil in which they are planted should not be left to dry out at any time. Applications every three to five weeks, depending on the texture of the soil, is recommended during the fall and winter.

Fertilization and irrigation go hand in hand during this season of the year. Water should be applied (with bush berries) in wide, shallow furrows taking up almost all the space between rows and then, when ready, manure should be spread evenly over the surface of the entire furrow and worked in. Modern berry growers encourage lateral rot growth so that the root area stretching out from under the shade of the vines and bush, will take best advantage of the sun's heat and make better fall and winter growth.

Educational Campaign

A VIGOROUS campaign calculated to increase the demand for American rice by producing and marketing a product of uniformly high quality is being waged by the United States Department of Agriculture. Motion pictures, colored posters and special bulletins are being employed in the campaign. The United States rice crop of 1923, according to the department, was 33,256,000 pounds of rough rice, produced chiefly in Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and California. About half of the crops of 1919-21 were exported, and while there have been some imports of rice, these have been increasingly smaller since 1917 when there was a short crop and heavy consumption.

Annual per capita consumption of rice in the United States is about 6.8 pounds, the department says, which is materially less than that of any of the other cereal grains produced here. To increase consumption it is seen that a high quality product must be produced and consumers made acquainted with the food value of the product. Considerable research work on production and marketing costs is also being done by the department in an effort to bring about increased efficiency along these lines.

PROMISING VARIETY OF OATS SHOWS HIGH YIELD IN TESTS

By F. H. ERNST, Agricultural Extension Service, Los Angeles County

SINCE the passing of the pastoral period, the growing of hay crops for feeding domestic animals during periods of natural feed scarcity has been one of our most important phases of farming. In California, horticulture has been emphasized to such an extent that one is prone to forget the importance of field crops. Cereals have a definite place in our agriculture. And as our agriculture becomes more intensive, as it must, the necessity of growing cereal varieties of the best quality and high yielding ability will become greater.

Oats have always been important in the California hay markets. In 1916, 200,000 acres were planted, but the acreage has been declining. The year 1921 shows 140,000 acres were planted with an average yield of 27 bushels per acre, equivalent to 864 pounds per acre. As our farms become smaller, due to rural and urban subdivisions, the necessity for high production on high-priced land becomes ever greater. Production may be increased by better cultural practices, and by the use of new and better-suited varieties.

Until recent years comparatively little attention has been given to the selection of new and better varieties as is evidenced by the fact that some of the present varieties were introduced by the early settlers over fifty years ago.

The Los Angeles County Agricultural Extension Service, in co-operation with Prof. W. W. Mackie of the College of Agriculture, has been testing out a large number of oat varieties in order to determine whether or not the present sorts are the most suitable here. To begin with, about thirty varieties were tested in rod rows sown in triplicate. As a result of two years of testing in Los Angeles county, Konata and Fulghum have stood out as being particularly good. In 1922 the test plot yields were: First, Kanota, 670 pounds per acre; second, Fulghum, 630 pounds per acre; third, Burt, 500 pounds per acre; fourth, Richland, 300 pounds per acre and ninth, California Red, 82 pounds per acre. In 1923, the following results were secured: First, Kanota, 1325 pounds per acre; second, Fulghum, 1274 pounds per acre; third, Burt, 1030 pounds per acre; fourth, Kherson Select, 768 pounds per acre and fourteenth, California Red, 432 pounds per acre.

During the spring of 1924 two sets of increase plots were laid out by the Agricultural Extension Service. One of these was located on the Los Angeles County Farm, near Downey on a Hanford fine sandy loam soil. Three varieties were tested: (1) Fulghum, seed of which was secured from the Agronomy Division at Davis, (2) Little White, an Eastern variety which has been grown for several years at the County Farm, and (3) California Red, grown locally. These were planted side by side on areas of one and one-half acres or more. The plots were farmed and were dependent for growth on the rainfall which has not been too plentiful during the past season. The California Red failed to mature sufficiently to warrant cutting for threshing. This variety fared very poorly under the dry-farming conditions of last spring. The Little White variety proved superior to the California Red. The Fulghum and the Little White were harvested in June and threshed on August 13. The yield data show that the Fulghum produced 69 sacks or 4990 pounds on 1.712 acres. This gives a yield of 2915 pounds per acre. The Little White produced 50 1-2 or 3420 pounds on 1.674 acres. This is equal to 2043 pounds per acre. The Fulghum has a gain in production of 872 pounds per acre compared to the Little White. Uniform soil conditions and carefully laid out plots have made these results accurate and valuable.

The second series of oats increase plots was laid out at the Johnson Rancho, on Western Avenue. Fulghum, Burt and California Red were planted side by side in long strips. The soil, a Ramona loam, was dry throughout the spring and growing conditions were severe. Although no weights were secured, Fulghum very noticeably outgrew the other two. Mr. Johnson reports that it produced about twice as much hay as the California Red. The California Red did not fare well and was hardly worth cutting. The Burt was fairly good but inferior to the Fulghum variety.

A comparison of the varieties tested is interesting. In rust resistance, there is no very much difference, although the Fulghum and the Little White seem just a little les susceptible. In smut resistance, the Fu ghum alone seems entirely immune. Th is an additional asset. The Little Whi produces an excellent light-colored hay bu has a smaller percentage of grain than th Fulghum. Fulghum undoubtedly produce the most grain and for both hay and grain is the better variety. California Red and Burt also produce good hay but lack the abiltiy to yield as heavily. The Burt oats is being generally discouraged as not desirable in this State and should be replaced by the Fulghum. Fulghum has an additional advantage since it has been accepted by Albers Bros. Milling Company as an oat which they will accept for making breakfast food. According to Prof. W. W. Mackie, of Berkeley, this will mean a higher price for it than for the common California or Texas Red variety.

The results which are being secured in the selection of a high-yielding desirable variety of oats should prove of value to adjacent coastal counties as well as for the coasta districts of Los Angeles county. Th amount of Fulghum seed available at present is small. According to all the data and observations, this variety deserves rapid expansion in plantings and there is a very strong likilhood that it will entirely replace California Red in the coastal areas at least

HEAVY VALENCIA ORANGE CROP IS OF GOOD AVERAGE QUALITY

By GEORGE LAW

FULLERTON.—In point of quantity, the Orange county Valencia orange crop is very heavy, with indications that the ultimate pack will be fully as great as last season's, which was 4,325,243 boxes. The fruit shows good average quality, with plenty of juice, but there is an unusually high percentage of small oranges. Of fruit packing 252 to the box and higher the percentage will be between 60 and 75 per cent. Precise determination is hindered by the natural tendency of the growers to pick and market the larger fruit first. It is expected that the close of the season will see a heavy run of small fruit.

The size condition shows some variation through the county,. revealing larger amounts of small fruit in the orchards which are more exposed to the winds. Where the groves are protected by the mountains or by windbreaks the fruit runs more uniformly large. Certain orchards show only about 20 per cent of small fruit, while others have practically nothing but the small sizes.

The condition is attributed by some to winds during the fall months when the oranges are about one-third developed. These winds are not necessarily of the "Santa Ana" type; nor are they hot desert winds. The damage seems to result from heavy blows off the ocean as well as from the hot dry inland. The effect, according to experts, is to close the pores of both fruit and leaves, stopping the development of the fruit and lowering the vitality of the trees through the leaves. Such, at least, is one tentative explanation of a condition which seems to have become troublesome only during recent years, or since about 1921,

Most of the growers are agreed on the nature of the effect; but some incline to attribute the cause to other things than the wind. One theory is electricity in the air, the static so familiar to radio fans. The closing of the pores might conceivable be done by an atmosphere surcharged with electricity. Radio experiments have revealed that the accumulation of motors and electrical plants of all kinds is a fertile source of the troublesome static. The increase in electrical driven pumping plants, and also in manufacturing units, has been tremendous in Orange county during the past five years. At present, however, on account of the power shortage, all sorts of oil engines are replacing the electric motors. The circumstance affords the orange investigators and growers opportunity to observe whether or not electricity has anything to do with small fruit. If there is anything to the theory next year's crop should show uniformly good sizes.

A further factor to be taken into consideration is, of course, the drouth. As a result of rain shortage, which has been more or less noticeable since the heavy rains of 1917, the vitality of all the orchards has been lowered. The effect has been most noticeable upon the deciduous fruit crop; but even the orange groves, in spite of extra care and copious irrigation, have not escaped. These several factors working together are sufficient to account for the high percentage of small fruit; but what part, if any, the static plays, and to what extent the wind is responsible, remains to be demonstrated.

As to the market condition, although it was very poor at the beginning of the season, with oranges bringing less than $2.00 a box in May, it has been steadily improving under the influence of fruit shipments of good sound quality, showing the added Valencia characteristic of keeping quality during the cleanup of the navel crop. Recently the highest grode fruit has brought up to $8.40 per box in the New York auction. Figures compiled and received by the chamber of commerce here recently that for a period of evelen years Valencias have averaged $2.81 per box.

There is the problem of disposing of the small fruit. Packing houses are offering good fruit, either too blemished or too small for packing, to customers at .25 per box. The great bulk of it passes in to the hands of peddlers for wagon and roadside marketing. The chief objection to that is that Los Angeles and the other cities of Southern California are flooded with inferior fruit, while it is next to impossible for the people there to get first-class fruit. Nothing could be better for the summer health of the people of these communities than the consumption of orange juice regularly and in great quantities. The small and blemished oranges are as good for juice extraction as any other, and Valencias are particularly juicy oranges. Hence the deluge of small fruit is a blessing to the population. But from the angle of the orange grower, the utilization of the unpackable part of the crop in by-products plants would make better direct returns, while leaving the local market open for better grade fruit. Probably an ideal marketing situation would be created by the shipping of most of the good grade to the East, the marketing of the lower grade in the cities and communities here, and the utiilzation of the bulk of the rest of the crop in by-products plants.

Anaheim is working for the establishment of a plant there, paterned after the plant at San Dimas, and there is some possibility of one being erected in the near future.

NEW BULLETIN ON POULTRY DISEASES

A new bulletin, No. 378, of the University of California, College of Agriculture Experiment Station, recently published, is entitled "Studies on a Nutritional Disease of Poultry Caused by Vitamin 'A' Deficiency," by J. R. Beach. Nutritional disease, which has existed in poultry for some time, has only comparatively recently been studied to the extent that specific recommendations can be made for its control. It is found that this nutritional disease is caused by a lack of Vitamin "A" which is found in green feed. The difficulties found on many of the poultry flocks of Southern California is due to this nutritional disease which is often times found in the flocks although the poultrymen feel they are giving their birds ample supplies of green feed.

The quality of this green feed is especially important and well grown fibrous types of green feed are not satisfactory, the bulletin says. In order to secure satisfactory results the green feed must be young and succulent and must be chopped finely enough so that the birds will consume comparatively large quantities of it. Vitamin "A" may be supplied in other feeds but can be supplied most satisfactorily with good succulent green feed.

Copies of this bulletin will be sent to all members of the Poultrymen's Department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, and may be secured by any others by writing to the Farm Advisor's Office, 3rd floor, Broadway Annex Hall of Records, Los Angeles, for it.

CROP EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS

LOMPOC.—Mustard continues to hold the center of interest among valley farming interests because those who were courageous and put their lands into this crop are reaping handsome returns. The price has usually ranged between four and six cents a pound, and the latest quotations show it is now at $7.65 per 100 pounds. The valley crop will run around 500,000 pounds, it is believed. Some farmers who planted mustard did so, it is said, with the idea that they were taking a desperate chance. In fact many, as the season showed severe drought conditions, did not expect to harvest so much as a sack of seed. On the contrary the mustard has flourished, showing growth under drought. Between the mustard, sugar beets and vegetables, Lompoc Valley will have a good year and extensive farm development plans are being carried on throughout the valley, and particularly in the Surf section, bordering the ocean.

PATENT IS GRANTED

SELMA.—Patent has been granted to a local man on a tree limb support bracket, according to B. H. Kamp of Visalia, who is handling the patent. A report of the invention was published in the August Scientific American. The affair is an improved adjustable bearclaw support which, if present plans mature, will be manufactured in Fresno.

POULTRYMEN TO MEET SOON IN POMONA

POMONA.—The Seven Southern Counties Poultrymen's Department of the Farm Bureau will hold a picnic and field day here September 17. Dr. William A. Lippincott, head of the Division of Poultry Husbandry, University of California, has been invited to make an address at this meeting, and other interesting factors of the program are being planned. The Southern California Farm Bureau egg-laying contest here will be open to visitors during the morning. There will be a basket luncheon at Ganesha Park at noon, after which the program will take place.

One of the principal things to be discussed will be the Accredited Breeders and Hatchery project which is well under way in its second year. This project in its first year of operation did much to improve the quality of baby chicks made available for poultrymen of this section, and the plans for the work of the coming year have been improved so that even better results may be looked for the coming year. Poultrymen of this section are making preparations to receive the largest delegation of poultrymen ever assembled.

nary survey indicates that Tulare county's 1924 olive crop will be only 20 to 40 per cent of that last year, the size and quality of the fruit maturing on the trees are remarkable, according to E. F. Lambert, superintendent of the California Co-operative Canneries. With J. T. Curry, field agent for the California Olive Growers' Association with headquarters in Tulare, Mr. Lambert has recently been making a survey of the olive-growing districts in the county.

POULTRY SCHOOL PLANNED

FONTANA.—Plans for the course in poultry husbandry to be conducted in the local grammar school with a large staff of teachers is now being mapped out. The exact date will be announced soon. The course is to be given under the auspices of the poultry division of the University of California and San Bernardino county. Prof. W. A. Lipencott will be in charge of the course. He will be assosted by E. J. Houser, Dr. J. R. Beach, poultry pathologist; R. B. Easson and W. A. Newlan, extension poultry specialists, University of California.

POPULAR JUDGE SECURED

POMONA.—It was announced at the recent meeting of the Associated Rabbit Breeders of Southern California that Reed V. Storms of Kansas City, who has judged rabbit shows for over a quarter of a century, will be the head judge at the big show to be held here in connection with the Los Angeles County Fair. Lewis H. Salisbury of Pasadena will also serve as a judge. Great interest is being manifested in this year's fair rabbit exhibition which, judging from the number of entries already made and the steady demand for entry blanks received by those in charge of the show, will be the largest ever held in California.

BIG DAIRY PAY ROLL

TULARE.—With production holding up remarkably well in view of the unusual season, and with the market remaining steady, the dairy pay roll of Tulare and vicinity for the month of July issued by creameries in this section surpassed that of the previous month by nearly $5000, according to local creamery men. The combined pay roll for the July product was $268,574.28 as compared with $262,645.30 for June milk and cream and $244,364.86 for the May product. —Notwithstanding the fact that the present market is considered favorable, the quotations were from 7 to 10 cents lower than for July of last year. In addition to the above totals, it is estimated that additional milk and cream to the value of $50,000 is shipped out every month, which would bring the actual total for this district to $325,000.

REPORT GOOD HONEY YIELD

TERRA BELLA.—According to reports from the Thomas Atkin apiary near here, bees in Tulare county are doing well and will net their owners a tidy sum. The last extraction from the 90 swarms at the Atkin place neted 170 gallons, cotton and eucalyptus honey. A previous extraction, which was the second for the season, netted 120 gallons of orange and wild flower honey, and the first extraction netted 170 gallons of orange blossom honey.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

HOLTVILLE.—Considerable acreage in this district is to be planted to alfalfa this fall and it is believed that when planting is completed the Holtville section will show the biggest acreage in alfalfa for several years. In addition to this, many acres are being prepared for vegetable production because of the success growers have had in this line. Many landowners are anticipating the arrival of thousands of cattle and sheep for winter pasture and it is in preparation for these that alfalfa and barley will be planted on a much larger scale than before. Much of the land has been rented for $25 an acre, which is considered a good rental for land on which alfalfa is to be grown. In the case of vegetable land the rental is around $40 to $45 an acre.

NEED BETTER STOCK

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—State Veterinarian S. E. Douglas has found that the State institutions are carrying about twice the number of cows they should have considering the average yield of milk per cow. This decision followed an expert examination of the dairy herd at the State Hospital, near here, with recommendation that better-bred animals be secured and that care be taken in provision of the proper kind of feed.

OFFICIAL RETURNS

REDLANDS.—C. P. Earley of this city, general manager of the Mutual Orange Distributors and vice-president of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers, Inc., recently returned from a meeting of the board of directors of the Federated in St. Louis. Mr Earley is a member of the executive committee. He says that the condition of the citrus fruit growers in California is an enviable one in comparison with other agricultural producers of the United States. The Federated is said to be the largest nonprofit, co-operative national marketing organization in the world and handles horticultural, viticultural and agricultural products.

ONION HARVEST STARTED

SAN SIMON (Ariz.)—Harvest has been started of the local Valencia onion crop, with expectation that 125 carloads will be shipped. The quality is declared exceptionally high. At the prevailing price of 5 cents a pound, large financial return is expected by the farmers, as the acreage yield has been enormous.

PLAN FLOWER SHOW

ONTARIO.—Flower growers of Ontario and vicinity are making arrangements for the first annual flower show of the Hotpoint Floral Society, to be held sometime this fall in the Hotpoint clubhouse at the Edison Electrical Appliance factory, following the recent announcement of prizes made by the committee in charge, of which G. P. Von Stein is the chairman. Membership in the organization is not restricted to employees of the Hotpoint plant, although they were the charter members of the society. At present there are more than seventy-five members. Professional growers will not be permitted to compete for prizes, although they will be allowed to exhibit their flowers. R. H. Robison is the chairman of the premium committee, and the judges are J. D. Meriwether and James B. Clark.

IRRIGATORS ORGANIZED

VAN NUYS.—Two meetings were held here recently of irrigators representing various sections of the San Fernando Valley. Subjects vital to the interests of water users throughout the valley were discussed. At the second meeting a permanent committee was organized for the purpose of looking after the interests of the farmers, especially those who are irrigators of the valley, and one which can represent them in all matters pertaining to the use of irrigation water and the working out of any problems which arise in its distribution. A sub-committee was also appointed which is to co-operate with the Agricultural Extension Service and any other institutions in determining if possible the water requirements of the various crops of the valley.

WATER RIGHT DISPUTED

WHITTIER.—According to R. W. George of this city, president of the San Gabriel Valley Protective Association cities of the valley are watching with interest Pasadena's claim to the right to build a dam at the mouth of Pine Canyon to impound water for the Crown City. Pasadena experts claim that the water to be impounded would otherwise run into the sea, while the cities opposing the action declare that it would sink into the water leaving gravel from which many of the cities derive their water supply, pumping the water from wells sunk into these gravel cones.

LETTUCE GROWING STARTED

SAN BERNARDINO.—Forty acres in San Bernardino county for lettuce production have been contracted for by the California Vegetable Union of Los Angeles. This lettuce acreage will be the first ever contracted for in the county on such a big scale. It is planned to grow the lettuce during the summer and fall, and thus provide a large yield for commercial use before the lettuce grown in Imperial Valley, which matures early in January, is ready for the market.

A FAVORED DISTRICT

WILCOX (Ariz.)—Though the Sulphur Springs Valley has no river and no surface flow irrigation system, it is favored in ordinary years with almost enough rainfall for maturing ordinary crops, this supplemented by pumping from a never-failing underground supply. Cotton this year has been a notable success, despite relatively droughty conditions. Many planters are reporting a crop in excess of a bale to the acre. Very little shedding has been noted.

NEW ASSOCIATION HEAD

HEMET.—Clarence Smith, who has been employed in the past as manager of the California Growers' Cannery dry shed here, has been temporarily appointed local manager of the California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association. He takes the place of E. O. Eggen, who resigned some weeks ago.

FARM BUREAU DAY

RIVERSIDE.—October 11 is to be Farm Bureau Day at the Southern California fair this year, according to announcement of John E. Wherrel, agricultural manager of the fair association. On that day, a farmers' picnic is to be held in Fairmount Park, near the fair grounds, and several hundred farmers from every part of the county are expected to be present.

GRAPES ON DISPLAY

LINDSAY.—Heavy yields of all varieties of grapes are being taken from vineyards in this district, most of them from comparatively young vines. A single Thompson seedless cluster, 18 inches in length and weighing five pounds was produced on the Chester Dowell vineyard two and one-half miles west of here. Many of the individual berries are nearly an inch in diameter. The cluster was produced on 28-month-old vines of which Mr. Dowell has 20 acres which he says will yield over 100 tons. The Dowell vineyard also has twenty acres of Emperors planted at the same time which are showing excellent quality. O four-pound cluster of Black Prince grapes from the L. E. Ingoldsby vines, several clusters of unusually large Thompsons grown by K. R. Clifford, and some showy clusters from the Waddell and Phil Baier vineyards are also on display here.

MANY POULTRY CLUBS WILL MEET AT SHOW

POMONA.—Prospects are very favorable for the largest exhibition of standard and nonstandard bred poultry ever held on the Pacific Coast, at any season of the year, in connection with the Los Angeles County Fair, here October 14 to 18, according to Paul Kennedy, superintendent of the poultry department, who recently announced the following list of the specialty clubs which will hold meetings in the poultry tent during the show: Pacific Coast Bantam Club, October 18, at 7 p. m.; Pacific Coast Cornish Club, October 16, at 3 p. m.; United Ancona Club of America and Ancona Breeders of California, will hold a joint meeting, October 18, at 11 a. m., after which a club luncheon will be held. Rhode Island Red Club of America, California State Branch, Thursday, October 16, at 1:30 p. m.; California Breeders of Rare and Fancy Fowl, October 18, at 2 p. m. and American White Plymouth Rock Club, State Meet, Oct. 17, at 2 p. m. John Brittain of San Jacinto, State secretary of this Club is offering a $25. White Plymouth Rock cockerel for the best display of White Rocks by a novice.

All the specialty clubs above noted are offering special ribbons and trophies to club members and it is expected that the membership of all these organizations will be greatly increased within the next few weeks by many prospective exhibitors at the local show wanting to compete for club specials. The Pacific Coast Bantam Club is offering $175 in cash specials.

That the Los Angeles County Fair Poultry Show, within two years, has become more than State-wide in scope is evidenced by the fact that inquires for premium lists and entry blanks are being received not only from all parts of California but from many of the Southern and Middle-Western States, as well, according to Mr. Kennedy.

URGES CARE FOR DEVELOPING PULLETS

TUCSON (Ariz.)—L. C. Boggs, extension poultryman of the University of Arizona here, in a recent article on developing pullets, says: "After the pullets have grown to be about three or four months of age any poultryman should be able to separate them into two flocks, that is the ones which are developing normally and those which need a little extra attention in regard to their feed. The extra strong birds and more developed pullets will crowd the weaker ones away from the feed, it is always the largest birds that range away from the house the farthest, thus getting more bugs, worms, and green food. The weaker birds stay closer to the house and are undernourished.

"The slow developing pullets may soon become stunted if special care is not taken of them. A great many good hens can be made from the slow developing pullts by putting them in a separate pen and giving them a good developing ration, supplemented with milk and green food. Cut the alfalfa or whatever greens is being used, and chop it up fine for them. They will eat much more of it that way, and very good results will be obtained. This point cannot be overemphasized with either growing stock or laying hens, especially in our warm summer months."

BIG ONION CROP

LAKEVIEW.—A. H. Middleton onion grower of this valley recently reported a large crop of Spanish Sweets this year. Prices of onions are said to be advancing, and Mr. Middleton expects a good profit for his year's work.

used for breeding or dairy purposes. If upon their arrival the owner desires to use them for breeding purposes, such may be done providing the tuberculin test is passed successfully.

The live-stock inspector is to be notified immediately upon the arrival of any cattle into the county and any stock that changes hands within a period of 120 days, such sales shall be reported. Any animals reacting to a test within 120 days after their arrival will be branded with a "T" in the left jaw. Animals brought in contrary to the provisions of this ordinance will be subject to quarantine, examination and test at the expense of the owner.

The pure-bred live-stock business offers a variety of choices as to breed, for the beginner to choose from, and it also offers success to anyone who will after making a choice, develop a herd or flock to the point where the live-stock fraternity as a whole will point to it with pride and heartily accept it as an asset to the community in which it is located. The failure of any breed to make good in the hands of an owner with poor managerial ability could hardly be credited to the breed represented. In fact, in too many cases, we are prone to classify certain breeders as failures because they are not overly prosperous. Success cannot always be measured in cold dollars and cents. Breeders who have unselfishly devoted much of their time in the upbuilding of the pure-bred live-stock business, by raising outstanding good individuals and distributing this seed stock to others that they too might have good herds, automatically classify themselves as successful breeders even though they fail to accumulate a big bank account. On the other hand, unscrupulous speculators sometimes step in and make a "cleanup" when prices are high, and are the first to knock the pure-bred business if they get "caught" on a waning market. Individuals of this class, when they do happen to make money, like to pose as breeders of pure-bred live stock, but are not worthy to be spoken of in the same breath with the breeder who at all times maintains his self respect, stays in the business through good and lean years largely because of his natural love for good stock. This type of man is remembered for the good he has done long after the speculator has been forgotten. After all, success in the pure-bred live-stock business is no different than in other lines of activity.

The annual report of the Stanislaus County Cow-Testing Association for the year 1923-24, which in reality represents but eight months of testing due to the foot-and-mouth disease, contains some interesting figures. During the year, 4151 cows were tested, this number coming from 118 different herds. The average milk per cow for the year is reported to be 7677 pounds, and the average fat per cow 290.74. It is interesting to note from the report that there were 107 pure-bred bulls in use by association members as against only ten grade bulls. The number of cows culled out during the year is reported to be 372, while 130 cows were placed on the honor roll with a production of 350 pounds of fat in ten months to their credit. Testing was resumed in July, and it will be known as the first month of the new cow-testing year.

The California Department of Agriculture reports the number of animals destroyed during the foot-and-mouth epidemic to be 106,783, of which number 56,552 were cattle; 28,396 sheep, 21,003 hogs, and 832 goats. A total of 207 herds, with an appraised valuation of $4,128,215, have been destroyed. The loss in Los Angeles County alone is reported to be $1,620,473.

PACKING SEASON IS CLOSING ON ORANGES

REDLANDS.—Local citrus fruit packing associations are busy now winding up their affairs for the season. While some of the houses will not finish packing for several weeks there are still quite a number of cars of Valencias to be shipped, many of the houses are now through and the office forces are busy getting out the financial reports of the growers. Practically all the houses here are co-operatives.

Indications are that the returns for the whole season will be just a fair average but that the cost of handling the big crop will cut down the returns to the grower to some extent. The large difficulty this year was small sizes as it was hard to dispose of them at good prices. But some of the houses have issued reports showing returns on navels for all pools of around $1.60 a hundred, which is considered very fair for the season.

VALLEY GRAPEFRUIT ACREAGE INCREASED

CALIPATRIA.—Much interest is being taken in the growing of grapefruit in the north end and other sections of Imperial Valley by the farmers who realize that it is a profitable industry. In the past planting season, which lasted from February 15 to June 1, a little over 2000 acres of grape fruit trees were planted in this valley and C. J. Claussen of Brawley, who planted about 400 acres and sold trees for 280 acres more, is authority for the statement that the contemplated planting for the coming spring is about [illegible] acres.

This has been a very favorable season for young orchards and the loss has been exceptionally small. Grapefruit trees make a remarkable quick growth in this valley when planted in the most favorable soil and given the proper amount of water and care.

R. M. Teague, for thirty years a successful nurseryman in Southern California, when asked recently his opinion about the grape-fruit industry in Imperial Valley, said: "I am convinced that the growing of grapefruit will assume a large place in the prosperity of Imperial Valley. There is no question as to your ability to grow good grapefruit and plenty of it. I have seen seven-year-old trees here, that are as large as eleven or twelve-year-old trees in our section, producing an average of ten packed boxes per tree and better, of fruit that I have never seen to be excelled in flavor."

Mr. Claussen recently returned from a trip to the lower Rio Grande Valley in Southern Texas, where grapefruit are grown commercially. He says that while the grapefruit grown there are sweet enough to be eaten without sugar they do not have as fine a flavor or as good appearance as Imperial Valley grown grapefruit.

REPORT ACREAGE OF COTTON IN ARIZONA

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Cotton in Arizona on August 1 was in a condition represented by 90 per cent of normal, according to reports received from growers located in various sections of the State. Even in the absence of rain, weed growth has been rapid during the past month. Farmers have been active and most fields present a good appearance.

Earlier activity of cotton aphis has about subsided in the face of active enemies and few fields show any permanent damage. Corn-ear worms have made their appearance in Maricopa county. On the Gila Bend project, sprays are in readiness, although it is generally felt that due to the lateness of the season the second generation of worms will not appear in dangerous numbers.

Shedding of squares has been generally reported. Considerable shedding is normally expected at this season of the year, due to seasonal humidity. Fruiting is reported as very satisfactory in most fields over the State. Picking commenced about August 15 and should be general by September 10.

Many inquiries have been received regarding the acreage in Arizona devoted to the production of the different varieties of cotton. Late in July, a large number of cotton growers were addressed with such a question. The result of these inquiries show the acreage to be as follows: Pima, 8000 acres; Acala, 122,780 acres; Mohave, 38,065 acres; Hartsville, 6625 acres; Lonestar, 2305 acres and Durango 1625 acres. The total acreage of all varieties for Arizona is estimated at 179,400 acres.

COMMITTEE REPORTS HEARD

TULARE.—Reports of the local Grange and Independent Tax Payers' Committee were made at a meeting held here recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lawson, John Humiston presiding. The Tulare Grange is working with the other Granges in urging the National Grange to hold its national convention in Sacramento in 1925. It was brought out in the reports of the tax reduction committee that the local grange felt itself justified in urging substantial reductions in taxes in Tulare county, inasmuch as such reductions were reported to have been made in other counties. Stanislaus county, it was said, will cut at least 25 cents on the $100 valuation, while San Luis Obispo is claimed to have effected the same if not more reduction, after a cut of $1,250,000 in 1923-24.

MUIR PEACHES TAKEN BY BIG CANNERY

VISALIA.—For the first time in several years, Muir peaches, which are usually dried, have been accepted for canning by the California Packing corporation here. The action became necessary due to shortage of other varieties of sufficient size, as local peaches are unusually small this year, though of good quality. The action of the canners in taking Muirs relieved the growers very much, as many of them, faced with financial difficulties this year, felt they could not bear the additional expense of drying and waiting for return although those who did expect to net a handsome profit. Local growers point out that the last eighth of an inch required for excellent canning peaches is the very hardest to get. Thinning to almost unlimited proportion seems to be the only way it can be done, and there are few growers who have the courage to so strip their trees, although those who did are reaping the reward of the better prices offered.

REPORT BIG GRAIN YIELD ON LAKE BED

HANFORD.—What is claimed to be the best paying grain crop in the San Joaquin Valley in this year of general drouth and short crops, is that of 480 acres of barley in the center of old Tulare lake bed, Kings county, which produced a $30,000 crop, or $65 per acre, according to its owners H. G. Stridde and W. M. Erwin, of this city, big wheat operators in the lake section. There are some interesting and unusual facts in regard to this grain. There were really two distinct groups from one sowing. The land was seeded in December, 105 pounds of barley to the acre. It lies in the center of Tulare lake bed and was part of eighteen sections of land with a fine crop of grain that "went under," during the flood in May, [illegible]. Some of the grain sprouted, in bunches, and matured, but the bulk of it did not germinate and recropping was being considered when the heavy rain produced by Rainmaker Hatfield (or at least what he was paid for producing) came and made a fine second crop—14,132 sacks averaging 105 pounds to the sack.

Last season there were some 140,000 acres of grain on the Tulare Lake bed, producing nearly $6,000,000, while this year there were only 12,000 acres seeded and the Stridde-Erwin crop was the best harvested. So far little plowing has been done this year on the lake bed, none of which is now irrigated, but a season of heavy rainfall, such as is predicted by many old timers, will again witness the big operators putting in crops by the thousand of acres.

BIG OVERSEAS SHIPMENT

VISALIA.—A California raisin for every one of the 46,000,000 inhabitants of the British Isles is aboard the Panama Pacific Line Steamer Manchuria, Captain Valentine J. Green, which sailed this week from San Francisco for New York. In the cargo holds of the big intercoastal liner are 2000 tons of raisins which amount is sufficient for every man, woman and child of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales to have a taste of the product which has helped to make California known throughout the world. In the cargo are also prunes, almonds, asparagus, spinach, peaches, figs, apricots, cherries and rice, all products which can be grown in Tulare county farms.

PEACH RETURNS HIGH

MENTONE.—The J. G. Hale peach crop from fifty acres on the Redlands Heights Ranch near here, is said to have already brought in more than $10,000. The Philips Clings will be ready soon. The Hales were sold on contract at 6 cents a pound for the choice peaches and about twelve carloads were shipped. The crop was large and the quality of the fruit unexcelled.

The Livestock Bulletin

By ROBERT T. LYANS.

Indications now seem to point to a return to normal conditions in the pure-bred live-stock industry of California. After a long period of depression during which time very few sales of breeding cattle were being made, the situation is now clearing up, and a healthy demand for breeding stock is now developing in many sections. J. W. Snodgrass, manager of Berylwood Stock Farm, Hueneme, report that many requests for breeding stock have been received from dairymen in this and other States, while quite a number of sales have been made. Among the more recent sales of pure-bred Holstein-Friesian bulls closed by this big Ventura county breeding establishment are several sons of the great Berylwood Stock Farm herd sire, Prince Aaggie of Berylwood. One of these sons, Berylwood Dekol Paul Aaggie, out of Dekol Paul of Russell Farm 2nd., with a record of 33.45 pounds of butter in seven days, has been selected by Albert Berger, Holtville, to use in his Imperial Valley pure-bred dairy herd. Berylwood King Sadie Vale Aaggie, another son of Prince Aaggie of Berylwood, and out of Queen Sadie Vale Veeman Kariray, with a record of 31.58 pounds of butter in seven days, has been sold to T. C. Beasley of Yuma, Arizona. J. D. McGrath, Oxnard, has purchased two young bulls, both out of good foundation cows in the Berylwood Stock Farm herd. In addition to these, several other high-class bulls have been sold to head herds in Ventura county.

The Berylwood Stock Farm herd now numbers approximately 200 head. Mr. Snodgrass has developed wonderful uniformity of type throughout the entire herd, this being especially true of the many fine sons and daughters of Prince Aaggie of Berylwood. This famous individual, at three years and eight months, now weighs 2400 pounds in breeding condition, and looks better today than when he was led out to the grand championship on the 1922 show circuit. He now has 52 daughters to his credit, most of them being found today in the Berylwood herd. These heifers, to a remarkable extent, are noted for their size and splendid individuality, and typically present the good qualities of their sire.

Since December, 1922, the Berylwood Stock Farm has developed nine cows with records of 1000 pounds or more of butter each in a year. Records recently completed shows 1004 pounds of butter made by Ida Johanna Belle, while her daughter, Ida Johanna Belle 2nd. finished her year with 1049 pounds as a junior 4-year-old. Another 4-year-old record, made by Surprise Zampa Muller, gives this great producer 1100 pounds of butter from 27,489 pounds of milk. Beryl Walker Pontiac Valdessa, as a 2-year-old, finished a year's production with 801 pounds of butter from over 23,000 pounds of milk. The co, Fay Tritomia Hengerveld Walker finished her year with 1018 pounds of butter, which record was practically made in nine months, as she was nearly dry during the last three months of her lactation period owing to an injury of the hip. This cow formerly held the California State record as a 3-year-old. One of her sons, sired by Prince Aaggie of Berylwood, has a remarkable production record in his pedigree. Five of his seven nearest dams average 1134 pounds butter with an average test of 4.63 per cent; his thirteen nearest dams average over 30 pounds of butter in seven days, while his fifty-one nearest dams average over 25 pounds of butter for seven days. Korndyke Canary Brightest, one of the splendid producing cows of the herd, after having completed a year's record of 1047 pounds of butter, recently dropped a fine bull calf sired by Prince Aaggie of Berylwood.

With many excellent records being completed to back up the outstanding pedigrees of the young stock which is being developed, Berylwood Stock Farm has built up a thoroughly practical herd, the output from which is meeting popular approval.

In a Ventura County Herd.

Korndyke Canary Brightest, Holstein-Fresian cow owned by Berylwood Stock Farm, Hueneme. She produced 1047 pounds butter in one year.

Mrs. B. M. Gantz of the H-G. Ranch herd of Ayrshire cattle, Buellton, recently sold a pure-bred Ayshire bull to Glen Burbridge of Adelaide. This young bull is a son of Gem's Son, the herd sire secured some time ago by Mrs. Gantz. Gem's Son is out of Auchenbrain Gem, with a senior 4-year-old record of 16,061 pounds of milk and 751.68 pounds of butter fat, showing the remarkable test of 4.68. In a recent letter to the California Ayrshire Club, Mr. Burbridge points out his reasons for choosing the Ayrshire breed, which is, in substance, as follows: "(1) I have read of a great number of milk records that were made by Ayrshires. (2) The 4 per cent butter fat test average also took my eye. (3) I like their color. The red and white cattle meet a ready sale in this vicinity both for beef and dairy purposes. (4) I like their build; they are so very straight. (5) I have often heard of the Ayrshires adaptability to the mountain regions, and it is very mountainous here. (6) They are the only breed of cattle which I know of whose grades sell for a higher price than one could get for beef. (7) Their gentle nature appeals to me. (8) Health and longevity are also major points in their favor. One does not like to sell a good cow when she is 7 years old or less. (9) From what I have heard they are quickly fattened, and make a good grade of beef. (10) Every breeder whom I have corresponded with seems so satisfied with the Ayrshires."

Advocates of other dairy breeds might take issue with Mr. Burbridge in his analysis of the many admirable qualities of this worthy breed of dairy cattle, and possibly accuse him of taking in too much territory for the "Red and Whites." Be that as it may, the point the writer wishes to make here is that Mr. Burbridge is thoroughly "sold" on his choice, and that is more than half the battle in the live-stock breeding business. No herd can be really successful, regardless of color, type, performance or breed characteristics, unless the owner be a staunch supporter of the breed he is representing.

Dr. W. L. Edwards, Tulare County Live-stock Inspector, recently reported to the Tulare County Board of Supervisors that he had only five calls to make during July, since the close of the foot-and-mouth epidemic and that the general condition of live stock in the county is excellent.

Declaring it to be an emergency measure so as to take effect immediately, the Board of Supervisors of Orange county at a meeting August 19, passed an ordinance affecting the importation of cattle into the county. The bill requires the filing with the County Live-Stock Inspector, health certificates of all cattle other than those intended for immediate slaughter or as feeders, indicating that they are free from tuberculosis, by physical examination, and approved tuberculin test performed within thirty days of the date of shipment. This test will not be required of cattle coming from fully Federal accredited herds or modified free areas. Feeders may be brought in without health certificates, providing they are not to be

DAIRYMEN DISCUSS WAREHOUSE PLANS

SAN JACINTO.—At a recent meeting of the members of District No. 1 of the local dairymen's association, those in attendance discussed the subject of erecting or buying a warehouse from which to distribute feed products to members. This warehouse would be a center for this branch of the Dairymen's Feed and Supply Company, according to the plans. This district alone is using 200 tons of grain feeds a month and milk is now going out at the rate of 4500 gallons a day.

Should the proposed plan mature, it is believed that immense purchases of grains would result in the Hemet and San Jacinto Valleys, together with the establishment of milling machinery and mixers for dairy feed. Under the plan, local ranchers should benefit materially, as most of the grain produced here could then be marketed and used here.

TO EXHIBIT TRIPLET CALVES AT FAIR

SAN DIEGO, An exhibition feature of unusual interest at the forthcoming San Diego County Fair, September 24 to 27, will be the triplet calves born recently on the dairy farm of J. L. McNeely, near this city. The calves are said to be typical Guernseys and their splendid physical condition at birth insured the survival of all three.

All of the nineteen farm centers in the county will be represented with extensive agricultural and horticultural exhibits at the county fair, presaging keen interest and competition in the various classes. A special feature this year will be the horse show which will be held nightly, with premiums to be awarded in all clases. A special section of the agricultural building in Balboa Park has been set aside for products manufactured in San Diego county.

The San Diego county exhibit, which won the sweepstakes prize at the 1924 National Orange Show at San Bernardino, will be on display. This exhibit is an exact reproduction of the famous Cabrillo bridge in Balboa Park.

Triplet Guernsey Calves.

These calves, with their mother, are owned by J. L. McNeely, San Diego dairyman, and will be featured at coming San Diego County Fair.

NO GRAIN FOR MILL

VISALIA.—The Visalia Milling Company is running mostly on cattle feed at the present time, turning out cottonseed cake for beef cattle. The mill also has an order for several car loads of dried beet pulp. The grain harvest this year in this immediate district was very short, being not over 2000 sacks against a normal yield of 150,000 sacks. Ten years ago the same territory produced over 200,000 sacks annually, but much of the grain land has now been given over to other crops.

PASTURE IS SCARCE

WOODVILLE.—The Merryman Sheep Company have about 4000 head of sheep in pasture on ranches in this district. On the Ball-Irwin ranch, the sheep will be pastured on alfalfa and on the George Ross place they will feed off a patch of honey dew melons. Sheep feed is in big demand now, and good prices are being paid for the feed. Some of the dairymen renters say that they cannot afford to pay the prices being paid by the sheepmen.

LETTUCE PLANTING STARTS IN IMPERIAL

EL CENTRO.—Thousands of acres of Imperial Valley land are being broken and disced for fall planting to lettuce and other vegetables. Hundreds of tractors can be heard working day and night in all parts of the valley plowing and discing the soil and many thousand pounds of lettuce seed have already been sold for planting within the next two or three months. In many cases, new land is being used for lettuce soil that has for several years been in alfalfa and has become overgrown with Bermuda grass. This kind of land is considered the best for vegetable growing and owners are usually anxious to rent their acreage for this purpose for a season or two in order to eliminate the Bermuda grass, after which barley and alfalfa are again planted.

Because of a strong demand for alfalfa hay, much land that has been in vegetables for several years is to be replanted to barley and alfalfa in time for the annual winter pasture. After the quarantine is lifted hundreds of carloads of cattle are expected to be brought to the valley for feeding and the profits from the sale of pasture are expected to be good.

CITRUS MEN PASS ON MARKETING PLAN

REDLANDS.—In a great mass meeting held here recently, the orange growers of this section gave unanimous approval to a tentative program offered by a committee of the growers regarding marketing. This committee has been studying marketing for some time and hopes to introduce into the citrus industry a larger spirit of co-operation among growers, packers and salesmen with an idea toward better regulated shipments. Orderly distribution of fruit, with the elimination of poor stuff which is usually marketed at a loss, is the keynote of the plan.

The committee has three things in mind to get more money for the grower for his fruit under the control of a marketing committee. These are: First, control of shipments all over the State so that no markets will be glutted while others are lean in supply; second, elimination of the sale of cull fruit on the Pacific Coast where this fruit, for which the grower gets nothing, supplies almost the whole demand for oranges; and third, control of the shipments by sizes of the fruit, so that in a year like the one just closed, the small fruit will not be shipped or as least such shipments shall be under the direction of the marketing committee.

The committee that worked out the plan consists of Leslie R. Gay, W. J. Rabe, L. W. Butterfield, George Goldier, E. D. Patterson, C. H. Clock, Thomas Sanborn, C. B. Stone, Allen Wheaton, Sherman E. Hart, George Hinckley, A. P. Crim, J. J. Prendergast, W. C. Hargraves, W. E. Howard, A. E. Harvey, R. B. Cook and Stillman Dexter.

FINDS MARKET FOR HOME-PACKED OLIVES

HEMET.—The Big Springs ranch near here, which comprises 191 acres, owned by S. F. Champion, Jr. is one of the historical spots in this region. The unique beauty of the place has attracted people from many different sections. It derives its name from two springs which furnish water for the house and during the time when the Indians occupied the valley the larger spring was famous as the only watering place for miles around.

The ranch is set mainly to olives, with ten acres to grapes, a portion being devoted to oranges, lemons and other fruits. Mr Champion has specialized in processing olives which he markets under his own label. He has established good trade for his product and has realized more profit from the place than he feels might have been accomplished by more ordinary methods.

EXPERT URGES CARE IN APPLYING WATER

SANTA ANA.—Notwithstanding the light rains of last winter, there exists the possibility of doing more harm than good to the orange groves by too heavy irrigation, according to H. E. Wahlberg, Farm Advisor of Orange county. Mr. Wahlberg believes in the soil auger and closely regulated application of water. The direct effect of too much water is to reduce the temperature of the soil, discourage bacterial activity, exclude air, and limit root development, he believes. "If tree roots are discouragd by the use of too much water," he says it will have a tendency to reduce the root system with a result that when a special demand is made on the tree during the time of the desert winds in the fall for extra moisture, the limited root system will be unable to take up the moisture required for the tree.

An exhaustive survey conducted by the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station experts in over 2000 groves in Orange county revealed that maximum production for both oranges and lemons was reached where less than the average amount of water was used. The highest yields, they found, or 20,500 pounds per acre for oranges and 26,600 pounds for lemons, were produced with 14 to 18 inches of water, or 2 to 4 inches less than the average amount used in the county. The heaviest application of water showed results very similar to the lightest, both in greatly lowered production.

Mr. Wilberg does not argue from the survey that every rancher should make his irrigation practice conform to the figures in the findings of the survey, but simply that every grower should make a close study of the moisture requirements of his particular soil by means of the soil auger. His own investigations have realed that "citrus growers on gravelly soils have been inclined to too frequent irrigation."

"The popular supposition," he says, is that a gravelly soil should receive two or three times the amount of water that a loam or heavy soil gets. As a matter of fact, many of the gravelly loams can use from one-third to one-half as much and at longer intervals than has been customary in the past. Many groves have been found to deteriorate on the gravelly loams woth excessive use of water."

In the fact of a dry year, it is deserving of note that many experienced citrus growers have expressed the belief that no amount of irrigation can altogether take the place of rain. The general effect of the rainy season upon the health of the tree and the condition of the soil cannot be duplicated by artificial means, whatever may be the system of irrigation devised they believe, the falling of the rain through the air impregnates it with properties that can be obtained in no other way, while the bathing of the foliage and the warm expansive effect of humid weather are factors for tree health which man cannot supply, experienced orange producers declare.

COTTON PEST ACTIVE IN IMPERIAL VALLEY

EL CENTRO.—Cotton growers in Imperial Valley have reported to the Imperial County Farm Adviser's office that considerable damage is being done by a cotton leaf worm, which eats the leaves of the plant and makes stalks almost bare. According to reports, several fields of cotton have been abandoned and no attempt made further to cultivate them because of the operations of this pest. Most of the cotton crop is not affected by this worm, but temporary lack of water in some districts is said to be a great assistance to the operations of the worm.

The pest doing the damage to the cotton is known as the cotton leaf perforator, according to Farm Adviser E. L. Garthwaite. The worm develops from larvae attached to the under side of the cotton leaves, the Farm Adviser declares. The amount of damage done by this pest is more severe in some years that others, but every year some damage has been reported. He says that the pest is normally kept in check by a small wasp which lays its egg in the larvae of a cotton leaf perforator, the egg hatching into a caterpillar which feeds on the inside of the cotton leaf perforator larvae and destroys it. Usually these wasps are numerous enough to keep the perforator under control, the expert says, but in some years when the wasps are not numerous due to climate conditions or because they are held down by secondary parasites, the perforator increases at a rapid rate and does heavy damage in some cotton fields. The use of arsenate of lead has been found successful in eradicating this pest, he says.

HONEY CROP REPORT

HEMET.—A subject of interest to local bee men at this time is what this year's honey crop will be. The amount produced locally this season is said to be far below the average, though there are some sections, such as the black sage country, that have produced quite heavily. Thomas Milholland, who has some bees on the range, expects about five tons of honey this year. John Spezali, a local man says that he has been offered 9 cents a pound for his honey but expects to hold for more. The low yields are attributed to the dry weather conditions. It is said that the yield in the cotton States has been above the average.

PLANT PASTURE CROPS TO CUT COST OF PORK PRODUCTION

By E. H. Hughes, Associate Professor of Animal Husbandry, University of California

FORAGE crops or pasture are valuable for all swine. They are especially valuable for young growing pigs as the crops are rich in body-building materials needed in liberal quantities by the growing animal. Alfalfa, clover, rape and other pasture crops are rich in proteins, which supplement the nutrients of barley and other grains and therefore help materially to balance common grain concentrates which are usually carbonaceous feeds. Forages are also rich in minerals, especially lime and phosphorus, which are necessary in the proper development of the frame of the young animal. Green pasture crops are also rich in all vitamins, which are apparently so necessary for the growth and health of all animals.

Alfalfa and other forage provide large quantities of nutrients, therefore the amount of grain concentrates to produce a given amount of gain is materially reduced. Because of the protein and minerals contained in a good pasture crop the amount of expensive nitrogenous concentrates such as tankage, middlings and skim milk necessary to balance the ration is lessened. Gains on pasture are cheaper than those in dry lot, the sanitary conditions are better and the possibility of loss from disease is reduced.

Alfalfa is the best forage we have because it is adaptable to our soil and climate; it yields a high per cent of essential nutrients, especially proteins, lime and phosphorus; it affords pasture for a long season; it is permanent; it stands tramping well and its leguminous characteristics are of value.

Rape, "Dwarf Essex," is a desirable annual forage that can be sown in small lots around the barn. This pasture crop can be sown in the fall (October) and pastured during the winter months when it might not be desirable to pasture alfalfa because of the wet condition of the soil. Excellent results have also been obtained when it has been sown in February. A good stand is obtained if a fine seed bed is prepared and sown at the rate of eight pounds per acre. The seed is small and can either be sown with a grass seeder or broadcast by hand. In sowing rape by hand, it is a good practice to mix the seed with sand. This makes it easier to distribute the seed uniformly.

Pigs should not be turned into this forage until it is about 10 inches in height. In some instances, this crop is sown with oats or barley. The cover crop is sown at the rate of a bushel per acre. It is possible to pasture twenty pigs on an acre of rape for a period of 100 days.

Many other forages have been successful in the Middle West as well as in our own State. Such forages as the clovers, sudan grass, harding grass, and the more common grasses such as wheat, barley, rape, oats, blue grass and other natural grasses have been pastured with favorable results. When pigs are grown or fattened on such forages, gains have been made on less concentrates and the cost of production has been reduced.

PLANS MATURING FOR RIVERSIDE CLASSIC

RIVERSIDE.—Plans for the Southern California Fair, to be held here October 7 to 11 are rapidly maturing. As there will be no live-stock exhibits, greater energy is being shown to make it an agricultural fair on a broader scale than ever before, with many new features. The cotton show is an entirely new innovation. The United States Department of Agriculture through C. B. Doyle, agronomist, will maintain a government exhibit in this department. A miniature cotton gin will be featured, growing cotton plants will be transplanted at the show and cotton picking contests are planned. Cotton equipment will be shown as well as the many by-products of cotton seed and the finished cotton products. A number of cotton textile establishments have agreed to enter exhibits and cotton growers in Riverside and Imperial counties have agreed to co-operate by making actual exhibits.

An elaborate entrance is being worked out for the date show which will have just twice the space over last year, the first for the date exposition. Every inch of space has been taken for this expedition, according to Secretary W. W. Van Pelt. He says it will be strictly an educational exposition in conformity with the plans of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Approximately $25,000 will be expended in purses for the horse races and premiums for the various exhibits.

FRUIT CAMPS MEET OFFICIAL APPROVAL

HEMET.—Both canneries in Hemet are well toward the end of their season. Manager Ernest Rickard, of the California Growers' Co-operative, says that it is too early to make an accurate estimate of the exact amount of his season's tonnage, but that it is doubtful that there is 1000 tons, as at first estimated. Superintendent Glen Brubaker, of the Hemet Packing Company, places the estimate of his plant for the season at about 800 tons. Fruit conditions are better than those of last year, but the crop is short of average and the quality of the product only fair.

Very little fruit is being wasted this year as both plants have immense dryers in operation and fruit that is hardly suitable for canning is being dried. All reports indicate that ample labor for all purposes has been available. This is said to have been insured through the placing of ads in Southern California newspapers.

The labor camps at the local canneries have been given a clean bill of health. Fred J. Rugg, State labor camp inspector for the Commission of Immigration and Housing, who came to Hemet recently to inspect the camps of the fruit workers, stated that the cannery camps were in excellent condition and complimented the managers on their care in this respect. Mr. Rugg was accompanied by Dr. Louis Bloch, statistician and chief examiner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, who is looking after the interests of children employed in canneries. Dr. Bloch pointed out that although there is no prohibition of child labor in horticultural and farming pursuits, some of the canneries of the State are not observing the letter of the law which forbids the employment in canneries of children under 16 without the consent of the parents.

The Hemet-San Jacinto Chamber of Commerce recently succeeded in getting the road between Perris and Riverside, temporarily opened for traffic to facilitate the transportation of fruit.

SEES FUTURE FOR COTTON

PERRIS.—Growth of the cotton industry in the Perris Valley is given greater impetus with the recent announcement by Riverside County Farm Adviser Miron M. Winslow that the seedling plant which he and H. G. McKeever, cotton specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, planted this year is developing a uniform type of Acala cotton apparently well adapted to the soil of the valley. The experts will distribute the seed throughout the Valley for next season's planting and expect that the new selection will make the general yield more uniform and stable. In addition to the growth of seed, the experts are making cotton irrigation tests and have been experimenting in spacing. Mr. McKeever, who has been studying the possibilities of the cotton industry in the Perris Valley, believes that at present prices, unless water costs are excessive, cotton growth in the Valley can be made highly profitable.

New Interest in Goat Breeding in San Diego County

BY GEORGE B. BOWERS.

SAN DIEGO county is to be the scene of a renewed interest and activity in an ancient industry if the plans of the San Diego County Goat Owners' Association are carried out. At a recent meeting of the association it was determined to put on an intensive membership drive, to take a goat census and to arouse public interest in goat raising. During the course of the discussion some very interesting facts were brought out, the principal ones being contributed by O. W. Porter, of East San Diego, president of the county organization.

"Goat-dairying is really a very new industry in the United States notwithstanding the fact that goats have been associated with mankind since the dawn of history," he said. "The standard milk goat of today is practically an innovation here. Three standard breeds are raised in San Diego county, as in other parts of Southern California, the Toggenberg, Nubian and Saanen.

"The Spanish, of course, brought goats to California at the time of the conquest, but none of the descendents of these have any commercial value except possibly for food, goat meat being frequently sold as mutton. Important importations of the breeds now associated with the development of the milk goat industry in the section began less than twenty years ago."

To encourage the acquisition of milk goats, it was brught out by Mr. Porter that a 5-month-old doe of selected stock of any one of the three standard breeds may be purchased for as low as $50 and an ordinary doe of good grade for as low as $35. Without pasture facilities milk goats require alfalfa hay, bran, and dairy feed or rolled barley, he pointed out, and he said that frequently the home kitchen will furnish enough vegetable waste or the lawn cuttings may furnish the little green feed required.

"There is a psychological aspect of the goat industry seldom noted in any other industry," Mr. Porter said. This will be apparent to one interviewing those raising fancy stock without regard for expense. When such persons are asked how they happened to enter the industry and to be willing to continue in it without profit, the reply always is that goat's milk has grought them from sickness to health."

Not long ago the writer visited Mrs. A. C. Kitchen, of Montezuma, who has been very successful with goats and several years ago Mrs. Kitchen, then Mrs McCullough, sick, left Los Angeles almost in dire need to take up a homestead in the high altitude of Montezuma near Warner's Hot Springs. Mr. McCullough died soon after. From the meager fund remaining to her, a single milk goat was purchased and the widow, having no other means of support, turned to goat raising, depending almost exclusively on the pasture of the highlands. She has been successful beyond her fondest dreams. She is today a picture of rugged health and has acquired independence. Her income is steady, and assured with a minimum expense. Her flock of 40 goats yields a constant supply of milk and butter products finding ready sale. Mrs. Kitchen buys little feed, the flock depending largely on the homestead pasture. She is content with a smaller yield than could be hers with more intensive feed.

Mrs. Kitchen was asked if coyotes caused her losses, her home being so near the mountains. She answered the question by pointing out her herd guardian, a doe said to be 30 years old, whose only duty is to protect the flock. No coyote has yet been able to outwit the old sentinel, Mrs. Kitchen declared.

Mrs. Kitchen's success has received considerable publicity, being cited as an example of what can be accomplished with goats from a small start when both heart and health are in the venture. She talks most interestingly of the goat, so interestingly as to instill in the mind of her hearers a most profound respect for a too frequently maligned animal.

Merced county produces very early tomatoes for shipment into all parts of the West. All tomatoes grown in this district are staked, contrary to the usual cultural practice in California. The owners of this field, comprising 130 acres and located at Planada, declare it to be the largest individual acreage of tomatoes under such culture in the United States. Kern County Dairymen's Enterprise Wins Success

By ROYAL T. JUMPER

General view of the Wasco Creamery and Construction Company plant, Wasco, an enterprise that has aided milk producers of northern Kern county in the disposal of their products.

WASCO.—When three Wasco dairymen planned a small cheese factory back in 1914, little did they realize the enterprise would grow to include a large creamery and construction company, operating many affiliated activities, incorporated and capitalized at $160,000 and doing an annual business of $500,000. This organization, considered first by H. G. Hull, C. C. Hill and N. W. Taussig, now known as the Wasco Creamery and Construction Company now operates a large creamery, ice plant, lumber yard, concrete works, contracting and construction company, box factory and a builder's supply warehouse and retail store. In addition, they have sponsored a large real estate sub-division and financed construction of many cottages and buildings on monthly payment plans. The business is located here and operates in a large portion of northern Kern county, including Wasco, Shafter, Pond, Lost Hills, Devil's Den and the westerly portions of McFarland and Delano districts.

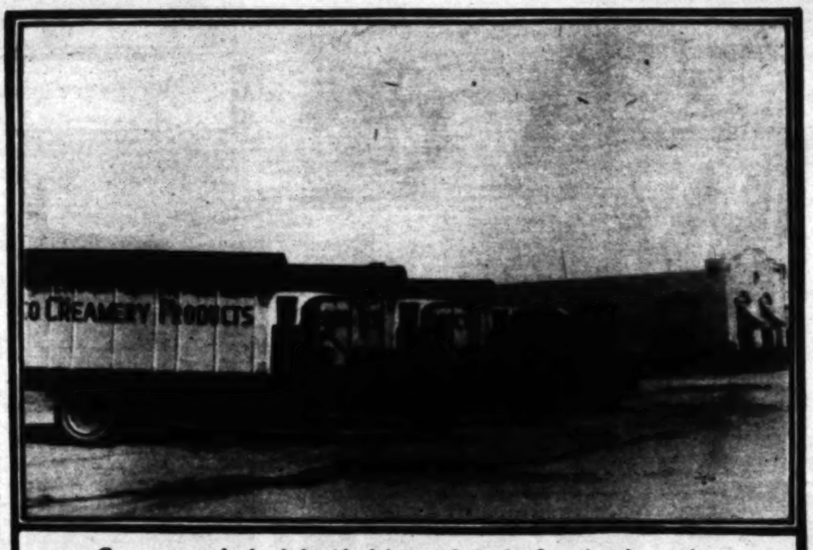
Ten years ago, the dairymen of the Wasco district were facing a losing proposition when they tried to market their product. Faced with heavy trucking costs and a weak market, they were making little profit on milk and were having a difficult time selling at all. To overcome their difficulties, the three men already referred to decided to build a small cheese factory in order that they might dispose of the surplus. Other dairymen in the district who were facing the same problems became interested and finally persuaded the three originators to build a creamery instead of a cheese factory. A testing association was organized and as soon as finances were available a stock company was formed and a small creamery constructed. Though small, the building was of reinforced concrete, built to last, and every building erected since that time has been constructed on those same principles of modernity and premanance.

Feeling that they knew nothing of running a creamery, the company leased their building to an operating company. But this arrangement resulted in such poor service to the dairymen that the stock company was finally forced to take over the management itself. Although Mr. Hull had been in close touch with the operation of the little company since the outset and has held the office of president throughout its short existance, he did not take over actual management of the business until early in 1919, when, after five years time, the business was still far from a financial success and was not aiding the dairymen as had been intended.

After reorganizing, the business and finding that the creamery by itself could never become a profit producer, Mr. Hull began to take on new enterprises. By expansion, within a limited field of endeavor, the overhead expenses were greatly reduced in proportion to the capital invested and the profits on the investment were materially increased. He always kept in mind the two cardinal principles of the enterprise: that the business must be of benefit to the dairymen and that it must pay profits to its stockholders. Those have been the only limits to the expansion program.

It must be kept in mind that while the organization is co-operative in spirit, it is not a co-operative enterprise, being purely a stock company. The stock is owned almost entirely by local men, including many dairymen. It has a large board of directors, picked because of their ability and standing in the community rather than because of large financial holdings in the company. The directors are paid $10 for every meeting they attend and meetings are well attended as a rule. This board takes final action on all changes in policy, alterations and on new expansion programs. Many important policies and plans have originated at the board meetings.

The ice-making business was inaugurated shortly after Mr. Hull took over active management of the company. The lumber yard and construction business was added to the enterprise in 1921. The creamery was greatly enlarged in 1922-1923 and the box mill was added the same year. While financed by the company, this latter activity is under separate operation and supplies the grapes, melons and fruit growers with containers for shipment of their products. The retailing of builder's supplies is a new undertaking, the reinforced concrete warehouse and sales room being under construction at this time.



Creamery trucks loaded with dairy products for Los Angeles markets.

Although the company has financed many private building undertakings in the past, is has increased this end of the business since recently opening up a new real estate subdivision. The company owns a large yard, seven reinforced concrete buildings and has its own spur siding on the main line of the Santa Fe Railroad.

In the five years since Mr. Hull took over actual management of the company it has never paid less than 10 per cent dividends on the investment, he says. Last year it did more than a $500,000 business and said 13 per cent dividends, and laid by 7 per cent for improvements, on a $160,000 investment, according to the president and manager. In addition it has been a permanent policy to pay top prices to the dairymen for their products.

Part of the J. L. Sebastian herd, Wasco. This herd won first place for 1924 in the Kern County Cow-Testing Association contest.

This year has seen a considerable falling off in returns because of the foot-and-mouth disease. April and May were very poor months, the company suffering material losses on the creamery end of the business. However, the remaining enterprises have continued to operate at a profit and the creamery is now back in a profit producing schedule. While the local business has increased over 30 per cent this year, the Los Angeles business has remained about the same as last year despite increased investment and facilities.

The creamery produces condensed milk and sweet cream for ice cream, and butter and cheese. Equipped with the most modern machinery and built of reinforced concrete throughout it is one of the finest of its kind in the State. These products are hauled to the city in a fleet of big specially built trucks, equipped with pneumatic tires and enclosed bodies and capable of hauling four tons. There are three in service now and two more are being built. These trucks leave Wasco about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and arrive in Los Angeles with their load early the next morning. After distributing their loads, the drivers get a few hours sleep and pick up a load for the return trip. The trucks are owned and operated by a separate company. In their endeavor to keep their trucks loaded on the return trip the creamery is building up their builder's supply business, buying their materials in Los Angeles and hauling them up by truck.

Mr. Hull came to Wasco seventeen years ago, entering the dairy business. He made that his chief pursuit until taking over the creamery and construction company, and still owns a large dairy, having 180 head of dairy cattle and a 160 acre ranch which is planted largely to alfalfa. It has been largely due to his ability that this non-cooperative company which serves all the purposes of a producer's association, has been successful for itself and the dairymen of northern Kern county.

COTTON CLASSER FOR SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

BAKERSFIELD.—The opening of cotton-classing offices at Fresno and this city was recently announced by the California Department of Agriculture. This action is taken in recognition of the importance of the San Joaquin Valley as a cotton producing area, local growers say.

It is believed that the issuance of official State Certificates by these offices to the quality and staple of the cotton will be an important factor in the development of the cotton industry in the San Joaquin Valley. Such a service is of benefit to the grower because it gives him definite information which, together with a proper knowledge of the marketing conditions, enables him to act intelligently in disposing of his crop.

There is nothing compulsory about this work, the department says. The service is rendered upon request and a small fee is charged, this fee necessary in order to reimburse the State for the expenses incurred.

Novel Southland Motor Trips

Conducted by Charles Owens

If your landlord proves obdurate—

But then The Times rotogravure pilot and artist had no idea at all of attempting to solve the housing situation when he started taking the photographs shown on this page.

In his wanderings up and down the Southland, and his goings to and fro in search of the novel and the unusual, Mr. Owens has found a whole galaxy of homes envolved just as the birds of the air take a mate and go to housekeeping.

At the top of the page is a bachelor's home fronting the Pacific just south of Long Beach. It is a home plucked from the waves, composed of odds and ends tossed up by the sea. Here this bachelor lives, and lives well, in a house that just grew.

Desertward, we find cave dwellings of various inexpensive kinds ranging from dugouts to dwellings reminiscent of the sod-houses of Kansas memory. The photo at the bottom of the page, at the right, shows a deserted cave home, with part of the bedroom furniture in the foreground. The modern covered wagon we all know. This one was found in an auto camp near La Jolla.

The byproduct of the American Can Company shown in the lower left-hand corner of the page has a number of rooms, having in its heyday sheltered a whole lodge brotherhood of prospectors.

Shopping Round the World

This kind of shopping is a thrilling sport—an opportunity to acquire extraordinary treasures and experiences. Egyptian hammered brass in Cairo. Intricate Indian jewelry in Bombay. Gorgeous tortoise shell combs in Ceylon. In Batavia, the genuine batik; in Peking, matchless mandarin coats and rare Siberian furs. Japan reveals lovely kimonos, geisha costumes.

Dancing Round the World

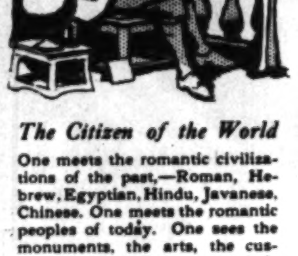
On the Empress of France, the voyagers will have their own crack orchestra. In the Gateway Ports, they will have shore dances arranged for them at famous hotels and cafés.

Hotel-ing Round the World

Look up the famous hostelries of Naples, Cairo, Bombay, Colombo, Shanghai, Hongkong, etc., hostelries celebrated wherever globe-travelers get together. All these, too, will come within the voyagers' experiences. Some, for overnight stays. Others, for luncheons, dinners, and receptions. They are a part of the shore "explorations."

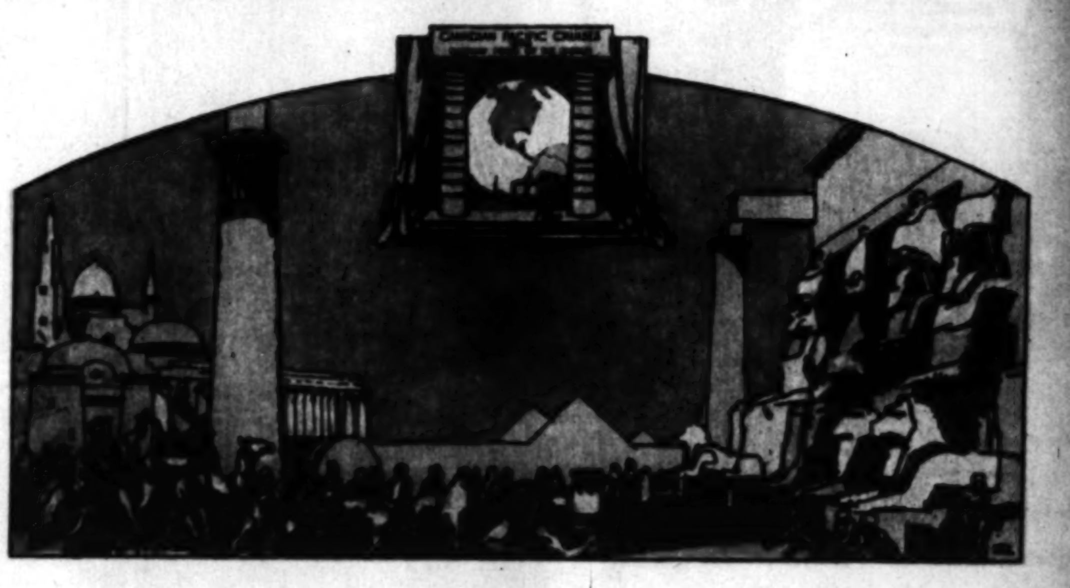
Private-Yachting Round the World

"Private-Yachting" is the entire scheme of the cruise. The atmosphere is that of a jolly cruising party. The accommodations are luxurious, loungy. The service has that personal touch, while the ship itself will poke in here, poke in there.



The Citizen of the World

One meets the romantic civilizations of the past,—Roman, Hebrew, Egyptian, Hindu, Javanese, Chinese. One meets the romantic peoples of today. One sees the monuments, the arts, the customs of African, European, Asiatic lands. It is out of such contacts that emerges the citizen of the world.



The Cruise Extraordinary

Round the World

Leaves New York January 14 ~ Returns to New York May 23

INTO the planning of this cruise, the world's greatest travel system has put its greatest effort. The result is a voyage which visits the Gateway Ports of the world and explores the Romance Lands of the earth;

—a voyage which combines the jollity of a private yacht, with the luxury of an Empress liner;

—a voyage which includes practically all the great experiences which make world travel the prized human adventure.

a Ship Extraordinary

The ship which will carry the Round the World voyagers is the Empress of France. She is famous for her cruiser lines and cruiser speed.

Her public rooms have interiors done by noted decorators; they contain many art and furniture treasures. Her cabins and suites are appointed for living in best hotel style. Her service and table are of Canadian Pacific standard, exceptional even among the best.

Her engines are oil-burning, which insures cool cleanliness. Lord Renfrew (the Prince of Wales) chose the Empress of France twice for voyages.

the Route

The route is eastward from New York. It follows springtime around the globe. The Mediterranean ports are visited at the height of the Riviera season. Palestine, before the heat and dust. Egypt, at its gayest. India, in its cool season. China, in its smiling mood. Japan, when the cherry blossoms burst. Back to America, in beautiful May. This is the route of perpetual loveliness.

the Gateway Ports

27 different Gateway Ports are visited. First Madeira. Then the Mediterranean, calling at Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, Naples, Haifa, for the Holy Land, Port Said for Egypt. Then, into the Indian Seas. Suez, Bombay, Colombo, Padang, Batavia, Singapore. Up the Orient's coast—Manila, Hongkong, Shanghai, Taku, Kobe, Yokohama. Homeward, by way of Honolulu, Hilo, Victoria, B.C., Vancouver, B. C., San Francisco, Balboa, Colon, Havana—to New York.

the Excursions Inland

Each of these Gateway Ports is truly a gateway—to some place, some people, some experience of romance. So, at every port, the voyagers will debark for sightseeing. Sometimes, for one day, as at Algiers; time enough to do the Arab quarter, and the French town, to lunch and dine at famous cafes, and to shop in the Street of the Jewelers. Again, for an entire week, as at Haifa; from here the voyagers strike inland to Jerusalem, then south to Cairo, for a trip up the Nile, to the Pyramids, etc. A port such as Hongkong is not only fascinating in itself; it also leads to Canton, city of swarming Chinese life.

For these inland excursions, the voyagers will be quartered at leading hotels—taken about in motor cars or rickshaws with best native guides.

the Days at Sea

The days on ship-board will be as pleasurable as the days on land.

Deck sports, athletic competitions in the afternoon. Then into the tank! Followed by a 100 per cent dinner for 100 per cent appetites. Dancing in the ball room to an irresistible orchestra. In between, lectures, entertainments, fancy-dress balls, bridge and mah-jong.

A Few of the Many Features Extraordinary

- 130 Days from New York to New York.
- 53 Days for Shore Explorations.
- An unexcelled Itinerary.
- A Holy Land-Egypt Exploration—Overland Haifa to Jerusalem to Cairo.
- A Delhi-Agra Excursion—Overland from Bombay to see the famous Taj Mahal.
- All passengers visit Ceylon—Colombo, Mount Lavinia and Kandy.
- A Sumatra Exploration—Overland to Padang-Pandjang.
- A Peking Exploration—that most fascinating city in China.
- A Japan Exploration—Kyoto, Nara, Tokyo, Nikko and Kamakura.
- Return via Hawaii, Victoria, B. C., Vancouver, B. C., San Francisco, Panama Canal and Havana.

And all the above, with many others, are included in the fare—No Extra Charge.

Following the ship over her entire 130 days will be the long arm of the Canadian Pacific—that vast organization which girdles the globe with steamships, railways, hotels, and offices. All its facilities exerted all the time to command the best for its guest and to free them from every care.

FASCINATING PLANNING LITERATURE

You will want to do something—go somewhere next winter. Why not make it the cruise extraordinary? It costs no more, per week, than comparable living at a shore resort or hotel.

Now is the time to look into the details. The planning literature is complete, beautiful, and fascinating. There are publications covering every phase of the cruise, all compiled by the Canadian Pacific experts. Just write—"Send me the Gateway Ports of the World Cruise series,"—addressing—

Here is the modern dye—
30 minutes to dye any fabric
SUNSET is taking the place of old-fashioned dyes everywhere

IF you haven't used SUNSET, you really don't know what a joy home-dyeing can be.

Just think of a fast dye that requires only 30 minutes and dyes evenly any fabric — silk (real or artificial), wool, cotton, linen, and mixtures! Just think of a fast dye that never stains your hands or utensils! And think of a fast dye that cleans as it dyes!

SUNSET is different from all other dyes because it rids home-dyeing of drudgery and messiness, and puts it into the class of arts and pleasures.

Yet not only does SUNSET, with all its advantages, cost but a trifle — it enables you to get unusual shades with wonderful accuracy. Take "lacquer" for example: if you want to dye a white gown this shade, you mix in the proportions of ½ cake of scarlet, ¼ cake of orange, and ¼ cake of light brown. Now you will want stockings to match that gown. Very well — either dye them in the same bath or make another mixture in exactly the same proportions, and you have a perfect match.

Ask your dealer for the folder of the Season's Colors — it is free. You'll be amazed at the ease and simplicity and beauty of SUNSET dyeing.

Lingette
Everybody thinks its silk

You can trust your very prettiest "undies" to the laundry —when they're made of Lingette!

LINGETTE is the fabric that has set women free from the drudgery of washing their own dainty lingerie! It has the exquisite lustre and caressing texture of silk but—because it is woven all of extra-strength, superfine cotton—you can entrust all your pretty Lingette undergarments to your laundress, or to the laundry, with no more worry than if they were made of plain muslin!

The only care you need give is to make sure that what you buy is Lingette. We want you to enjoy Lingette's permanent finish; its remarkable wear-resistance; and have done all in our power to protect you from the disappointments that come from poor materials. But all our care will be of no service to you unless you match it with an equal care—unless you see that the word Lingette is on the selvage, or that the Lingette label is stitched in the ready-to-wear garment.

Safeguard your health at The Danger Line

CHAMPIONS . . . their victories result from stamina. From that fine co-ordination of trained mind and sturdy muscle. From a perfect blend of "knowing how"—how to play the game, and how to keep fit for the game.

To keep fit, you must watch the little things that contribute greatly to health and stamina. Perhaps the best example is The Danger Line—that tiny V-shaped crevice where teeth meet gums. For at The Danger Line food particles collect and ferment, forming acids which attack the teeth and irritate the gums, causing Acid Decay and conditions favorable to devastating pyorrhea.

Stop Acid Decay at The Danger Line
Use Squibb's Dental Cream

Your dentist—any dentist—will approve milk of magnesia for counteracting acids in the mouth which cause decay. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. It will prevent Acid Decay, not only at The Danger Line, but every other place on your teeth where trouble may begin. It will reduce the chances of pyorrhea. It will protect for hours after use. It will soothe and strengthen tender, bleeding gums and allay sensitiveness. And it cleans and brightens thoroughly.

Standardize on Squibb's Dental Cream in your home. Enjoy better, prettier teeth. Safeguard and promote the health of all the family. Buy the large tube to-day.

The Favorite Luxury of Gentlewomen

TO step into a bath that smells like a flower garden—into water so soft and limpid, it tells you by its very feel how good it is for your skin; to step out of your tub with an indefinable almost "scentless" fragrance clinging to you—no wonder so many gentlewomen call this their favorite luxury. It is the luxury which Bathasweet has brought them for 20 years. Once you have tried it you will wonder that you ever did without it. 25c, 50c and $1 at drug and department stores.

FREE 10c. can sent free if you mail this coupon with name and address to C. S. Welch Co., Dept. [illegible]
